Will I do unto them] עשיתם âsitem. This word, so written as it is in the text, means, "thou wilt do," in the second person. The Masoretes have indeed pointed it for the first person; but the י yod in the last syllable is absolutely necessary to distinguish the first person; and so it is written in forty MSS. עשיתם âsitem.

Jarchi, Kimchi, Sal. ben Melech, &c. agree that the past time is here put for the future, עשיתי âsiti for אעשה; and indeed the context necessarily requires that interpretation. Further it is to be observed, that עשיתים âsitim, is for עשיתי להם âsiti lahem, I have done them, for, I have done for them; as עשיתני âsiteni, is for עשיתי לי âsiti li, I have made myself, for, I have made for myself, Ezek. xxix. 2. and in the celebrated passage of Jephthah's vow, Judges xi. 31. והעליתיהו עולה ve-haôlitihu ôlah, for העליתי לו עולה heâliti lo ôlah, I will offer him a burnt offering, for, I will offer unto him (that is, unto JEHOVAH,) a burnt offering; by an ellipsis of the preposition, of which Buxtorf gives many other examples, Thes. Grammat. lib. ii. 17. See also Note on chap. lxv. 5. A late happy application of this grammatical remark to that much disputed passage has perfectly cleared up a difficulty, which for two thousand years had puzzled all the translators and expositors, had given occasion to dissertations without number, and caused endless disputes among the learned, on the question, whether Jephthah sacrificed his daughter, or not: in which both parties have been equally ignorant of the meaning of the place, of the state of the fact, and of the very terms of the vow: which now at last has been cleared up beyond all doubt by my learned friend Dr. Randolph, Margaret Professor of Divinity, in the University of Oxford, in his Sermon on Jephthah's Vow, Oxford. 1766.

Verse 19. As my messenger that I sent—(As he to whom I have sent my messengers)] כמלאכי אשלח ke-malakey eshalach, ut ad quem nuncios meos misi. The Vulgate and Chaldee are almost the only interpreters who render it rightly, in consistence with the rest of the sentence, and in perfect agreement with the Hebrew idiom; according to which the ellipsis is to be thus supplied, כלאשר מלאכי אשלח ke-leasher malakey eshalach.

As he that is perfect—(As he who is perfectly instructed)] See Note on chap. xliv. 2.

And blind as the LORD's servant—(And deaf, as the servant of JEHOVAH)] For ועור ve-îvver, and blind, we must read וחרש ve-charesh, and deaf: κωφος, Symmachus, and so a MS. The mistake is palpable, and the correction self-evident; and admissible, though there had been no authority for it.

Verse 20. Seeing many things—(Thou hast seen indeed)] The Text has ראית רבית raith rabith, which the Masoretes in the marginal Keri have corrected to ראות רבות raoth raboth; as indeed one hundred and seven MSS. and five Editions now have it in the text. This was probably the reading of most of the MSS. in their time; which, though they approved of it, out of some superstition they would not admit into their standard Text. But these wretched critics, though they perceived there was some fault, yet did not know where the fault lay, nor, consequently, how to amend it; and yet it was open enough to a judicious eye: "רבות raboth, sic veteres; et tamen forte legendum, ראות reoth: vide cap. vi. 9." Secker. That is, ראית ראות raith reoth, seeing, thou shalt see. I believe no one will doubt of admitting this as the true reading.

But he heareth not—(Yet thou wilt not hear)] For ישמע yishmâ, read תשמע tishmâ, in the second person: so all the ancient Versions and forty MSS. [of Kennicott] (four of them ancient,) [and seventeen of De Rossi] and perhaps five more. Two others have תשמעו tishmêu, second person plural.

Verse 24. We have sinned—(They have sinned)] For חטאנו chetanu, first person, the Septuagint and Chaldee read חטאו chateu, in the third person.

Verse 25. The fury of his anger—(The heat of his wrath)] For חמה chamah, the Bodl. MS. has חמת chamath, in regimine, more regularly.

[It hath set him on fire round about—So thoroughly hardened are the Jewish people, that they are represented as being in a house on fire, and even scorched with the flames, without perceiving their danger, or feeling that they are hurt! What a picture of mental induration: and this is their state to the present day. But by whom shall Jacob arise! for in this sense, he is small indeed. Many efforts have been made to christianize them, but without effect: and is this to be wondered at? While we tell them how great they are, how learned, how wise, how much we owe to them, that they are still the peculiar people of God. &c. &c. If all this be true, what can they gain by becoming Christians? But a more stupid, proud, hardened, ignorant people, are scarcely to be found in the civilized world; and most grossly ignorant of their own Scriptures.]

CHAPTER XLIII.

Prediction of that blessed period when God should gather the posterity of Abraham, with tender care, from their several dispersions in every quarter under heaven, and bring them safely to their own land, 1—7. Struck with astonishment at so clear a display of an event so very remote, the Prophet again challenges all the blinded nations and their idols to produce an instance of such foreknowledge, 8, 9; and intimates that the Jews should remain (as at this day) a singular monument to witness the truth of the prediction, till it should at length be fulfilled by the irresistible power of God, 10—13. He then returns to the nearer deliverance, that from the captivity of Babylon, 14, 15; with which, however, he immediately connects another deliverance described by allusions to that from Egypt, but represented as much more wonderful than that; a character which will not at all apply to the deliverance from Babylon, and must therefore be understood of the restoration from the mystical Babylon, 16—18. On this occasion the Prophet, with peculiar elegance and by a very strong poetic figure, represents the tender care of God in comforting and refreshing His people on their way through the desert, to be so great, as to make even the wild beasts haunting those parched places so sensible of the blessing of those copious streams then provided by Him, as to join their hissing and howling notes with one consent to praise God, 19—21. This leads to a beautiful contrast of the ingratitude of the Jews, and a vindication of God's dealings with regard to them, 22—28.

NOTES ON CHAP. XLIII.

[Verse 1. I have called thee by thy name—קראתי בשמך kariti beshemeca. "So all the Versions. But it seems from the seventh verse, and from the thing itself, that we should read קראתיך בשמי karatica bishemi, I have called thee by my name: for this form of speech often occurs,—the other never. For chap. xlv. 24. concerning Cyrus, is another matter: but when God calls Jacob Israel, He calls him by the name of God. See Exod. xxxi. 2." Secker.]

Verse 3. I gave Egypt for thy ransom] This is commonly supposed to refer to the time of Sennacherib's invasion; who, when he was just ready to fall upon Jerusalem, soon after his entering Judea, was providentially diverted from that design, and turned his arms against the Egyptians, and their allies the Cushean Arabians, with their neighbours the Sabeans probably joined with them, under Tirhakah. See chap. xx. and chap. xxxvii. 9. Or, as there are some reasonable objections to this opinion, perhaps it may mean more generally, that God had often saved His people at the expense of other nations, whom He had, as it were in their stead, given up to destruction. Vitringa explains this of Shalmaneser's designs upon the kingdom of Judea, after he had destroyed that of Samaria, from which he was diverted by carrying the war against the Egyptians, Cusheans, and Sabeans: but of this I think he has no clear proof in history. It is not to be wondered at that many things of this kind should remain very obscure for want of the light of history, which in regard to these times is extremely deficient.

"Did not Cyrus overcome these nations? and might they not be given him for releasing the Jews? It seems to have been so from chap. xlv. 14." Secker.

[Kimchi refers all this to the deliverance of Jerusalem from the invasion of Sennacherib. Tirhakah, king of Ethiopia, had come the to war against the king of Assyria, who was thereupon obliged to raise the siege of Jerusalem. Thus the Ethiopians, Egyptians, and Sabeans, were delivered into the hands of the Assyrians as a ransom for Israel. Kimchi. I cannot help thinking this to be a very rational solution of the Text.

Verse 7. Every one that is called by my name—All who worship the true God, and are obedient to His laws.

I have created him—כראתיו berataiv. I have produced him out of nothing.]

For my glory] Ten MSS., (three ancient) and the Syriac and Vulgate, read לכבודי lecabody, without the conjunction ו vau, and.

[I have formed him—יצרתיו yetsertiv. I have given him that particular form and shape which are best suited to his station in life.

I have made him—עשיתיו âsitaiv, I have adapted him to the accomplishment of my counsels and designs.]

Verse 8. Bring forth the blind people that have eyes—(Bring forth the people, blind, although they have eyes)] I understand this of the Gentiles, as the verse following, not of the Jews. Their natural faculties, if they had made a proper use of them, must have led them to the knowledge of the being and attributes of the one true God; "for His eternal power and Godhead, if well attended to, are clearly seen in His works," Rom. i. 20., and would have preserved them from running into the folly and absurdity of worshipping idols. They are here challenged to produce the evidence of the power and foreknowledge of their idol gods; and the Jews are just afterwards, ver. 10. appealed to as witnesses for God in this cause: therefore these latter cannot here be meant by the people blind with eyes, and deaf with ears.

Verse 9. Who among them] Seven SS. (three ancient,) and the first Edition, 1486, with the Syriac and [Verse 10. Ye (the Israelites) are my witnesses—and my servant (the prophet) whom I have chosen, that whatever has been said before concerning Sennacherib has been literally fulfilled. The prophet had predicted it,—the Israelites saw it accomplished.

Before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me—This is a most difficult place. Was there a time when God was not? No! Yet He says before me. Will there be a time in which God will not exist? No! Yet He says, after me. Are not all these words to be referred to His creation? Before me—no god created any thing,—nor was there any thing pre-existent but myself. And after me, i. e. after my creation, such as now exists, there shall be no other class of beings formed. This mode of interpretation frees the passage from all embarrassment, and the context perfectly agrees with it. The words my servant, in this verse, the Targum understands of the Messiah.

Verse 12. I have declared, and have saved—My prophets have always predicted your deliverances before they took place; and I have fulfilled their words to the uttermost.]

Verse 14. The Chaldeans—whose cry is in the ships—(The Chaldeans exulting in their ships)] Babylon was very advantageously situated both in respect to commerce, and as a naval power. It was open to the Persian Gulf by the Euphrates, which was navigable by large vessels; and being joined to the Tigris above Babylon by the canal called Narmalca, or The Royal River, supplied the city with the produce of the whole country to the north of it, as far as the Euxine and Caspian seas, Herod. i. 194. Semiramis was the foundress of this part also of the Babylonian greatness. She improved the navigation of the Euphrates, Herod. i. 184. Strabo, lib. xvi.; and is said to have had a fleet of three thousand gallies, Huet, Hist. du Commerce, chap. xi. We are not to wonder that in later times we hear little of the commerce and naval power of Babylon; for, after the taking of the city by Cyrus, the Euphrates was not only rendered less fit for navigation by being on that occasion diverted from its course and left to spread over the whole country; but the Persian monarchs, residing in their own country, to prevent any invasion by sea on that part of their empire, purposely obstructed the navigation of both the rivers by making cataracts in them, Strabo, ib. that is, by raising dams across the channel, and making artificial falls in them, that no vessel of any size or force could possibly come up. Alexander began to restore the navigation of the rivers by demolishing the cataracts upon the Tigris as far up as Seleucia, Arrian. lib. vii. but he did not live to finish his great designs: those upon the Euphrates still continued. Ammianus, xxiv. 1. mentions them as subsisting in his time.

The prophet therefore might very justly speak of the Chaldeans as glorying in their naval power in his time; though afterward they had no foundation for making any such boast.

Verse 15. The Creator] For בורא boré, Creator, six MSS. (two ancient,) have אלהי elohi, God.

same Power shall be employed in their redemption and return from the Babylonish Captivity. This was to be a new prodigy.]

Verse 20. The beast of the field shall honour me—(The wild beast of the field shall glorify me)] The image is elegant and highly poetical. God will give such an abundant miraculous supply of water to His people traversing the dry desert in their return to their country, that even the wild beasts, the serpents, the ostriches, and other animals that, haunt those adust regions, shall be sensible of the blessing, and shall break forth into thanksgiving and praises to Him for the unusual refreshment, which they receive from His so plentifully watering the sandy wastes of Arabia Deserta, for the benefit of His people passing through them.

Verse 22. But thou hast not called upon me] The connexion is:—But thou, Israel, whom I have chosen, whom I have formed for myself to be my witness against the false gods of the nations; even thou hast revolted from me, hast neglected my worship, and hast been perpetually running after strange gods. The emphasis of this and the following parts of the sentence, on which the sense depends, seems to lie on the words ME, ON MY ACCOUNT, &c. The Jews were diligent in performing the external services of religion; in offering prayers, incense, sacrifices, oblations; but their prayers were not offered with faith; and their oblations were made more frequently to their idols than to the God of their fathers. The Hebrew idiom excludes with a general negative, in a comparative sense, one or two objects opposed to one another: thus, "I will have mercy, and not sacrifice," Hos. vi. 6. "For I spoke not to your fathers, nor commanded them,—concerniug burnt-offerings or sacrifices: but this thing I commanded them, saying, 'Obey my voice,'" Jer. vii. 22, 23. And the meaning of this place of Isaiah seems to be much the same with that of Amos; who however has explained at large both parts of the comparison, and specified the false service opposed to the true:—

"Have ye offered unto me sacrifices and offerings,
In the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel?
Nay, but you have borne the tabernacle of your Moloch,
And Chiun, your images;
The star of your god, which you made to yourselves."
Amos v. 25, 26.

But thou hast been weary of me, O Israel—(Neither on my account hast thou laboured, O Israel)] For כי יגעת ki yeguâta, the Septuagint and Vulgate read ויגעת ve-yaguâta. Houbigant. The negative is repeated, or referred to by the conjunction ו vau; as in many other places. See Note on chap. xxiii. 4.

[Verse 25. I, even I, am he] The original is extremely abrupt. אנכי אנכי הוא anoki anoki hu, "I, I, He." Is there any mystery in this form? Does it refer to a plurality of Persons in the Godhead?

For mine own sake—In the pardon of sin God can draw no reason but from His own infinite goodness.

Verse 27. Thy first father hath sinned] On this Kimchi speaks well:—"How can ye say that ye have not sinned, seeing your first father, Adam, sinned; and man hath sin impressed on him through natural generation."]

Verse 28. I have profaned the princes of the sanctuary—(Thy princes have profaned my sanctuary)] Instead of ואחלל שרי ve-echalel sarey, read ויחללו שריך va-yechalelu sareyca. So the Syriac and Septuagint, και εμιαναν οι αρχοντες τα ἁγια μου, the rulers have defiled my holy things. קדשו kedoshi, Houbigant. Οι αρχοντες σου, thy rulers, MSS. Pachom. and I. D. Syriac, and Vulgate. [And, alas! what a curse do they still bear, and what reproach do they still suffer! No national crimes have ever equalled those of the Jewish nation, for no nation ever had such privileges to neglect,—despise,—sin against. NOTES ON CHAP. XLIV.

Verse 2. Jesurun] Jeshurun means Israel. This name was given to that people by Moses, Deut. xxxii. 15.; xxxiii. 5, 26. The most probable account of it seems to be that, in which the Jewish commentators agree; namely, that it is derived from ישר yasher, and signifies upright. In the same manner, Israel, as a people, is called משלם meshalam, perfect, chap. xlii. 19. They were taught of God, and abundantly furnished with the means of rectitude and perfection in His service and worship. [Grotius thinks that ישרון yeshurun, is a diminutive of ישראל yishrael, Israel; expressing peculiar fondness and affection; Ισραηλιδιον, O little Israel.]

Verse 4. They shall spring up as among the grass—(They shall spring up as the grass among the waters)] בבין חאיר bebeyn chatsir. "They shall spring up in the midst of, or rather, in among, the grass." This cannot be right: eleven MSS. and thirteen Editions, have כבין kebeyn, or כבן keben. Twenty-four MSS. read it without the י yod, בבן beben, in the son of the grass; and so reads the Chaldee; [בבן be BEN, in the son of the grass. Twenty-four MSS. of Dr. Kennicott's thirty-three of De Rossi's, and one of my own, with six Editions, have this reading.] The Syriac, מבין mebeyn. The true reading is in all probability כבין kebeyn; and the word מים meyim, which should have followed it, is lost out of the Text: but it is happily supplied by the Septuagint; ὡς ανα μεσον ὑδατος, as among the water, "In every place where there is water, there is always grass: for water makes every thing grow in the East." phrase without any variation is not elegant. However, they seem to have understood it rightly, as an allusion to the marks, which were made by punctures rendered indelible by fire, or by staining, upon the hand or some other part of the body, signifying the state or character of the person, and to whom he belonged. The slave was marked with the name of his master; the soldier, of his commander; the idolater with the name or ensign of his god: στιγματα επιγραφομενα, δια των στρατευομενων εν ταις χερσιν. ["Punctural inscriptions made by the soldiers on their hands."] Actius apud Turnebum Advers. xxiv. 12. Victuris in cute punctis milites scripti et matriculis inserti jurare solent. ["The soldiers having indelible inscriptions on their skin, and inserted in the muster-rolls, are accustomed to make oath."] Vegetius, ii. 5. And the Christians seem to have imitated this practice by what Procopius says on this place of Isaiah: Το δε ΤΗ ΧΕΙΡΙ, δια το στιζειν ισως πολλους επι καρπων, η βραχιονων, η του σταυρου, το σημειον, η την Χριστου προσηγοριαν. "Because many marked their wrists, or their arms, with the sign of the cross, or with the name of Christ." See Rev. xx. 4. Spencer, De Leg. Hebr. lib. ii. cap. 20.

Verse 7. Let them show unto them—(Let them declare unto us)] For למו lamo, unto them, the Chaldee reads לנו lanu, unto us. The Septuagint read לכם lacem, unto you; which is preferable to the reading of the Text. But למו lamo, and לנו lanu, are frequently mistaken one for the other, see chap. x. 29. Psa. lxxx. 7; lxiv. 6.

Verse 8. Fear ye not] "הרהו tirehu, never occurs. Perhaps it should be תיראו tireu fear ye. Two MSS. read תירהו tirehu, [and one of mine תהרו teheru.]

Verses 9, 10. That they may be ashamed. Who hath formed a god—(That every one may be ashamed, that he hath formed a god)] The Bodleian MS., one of the first extant for its antiquity and authority, instead of מי mi, at the beginning of the tenth verse has כי ki, which greatly clears up the construction of a very obscure passage. [Doderlein approves of this reading.] The Septuagint likewise closely connect in construction the end of ver. 9. with the beginning of ver 10.; and wholly omit the interrogative מי mi, which embarrasses the sentence: αισχυνθησονται οι πλασσοντες Θεον, και γλυφοντες παντες ανωφελη·—["But they shall be confounded that make a god; and they who engrave unprofitable things;"] agreeably to the reading of the MS. above mentioned.

[Verse 11. His fellows—חבריו cheberaiv: but עבריו âbepaiv, his servants or worshippers, is the reading of one of De Rossi's MSS. and of the Chaldee.]

And the workmen, they are of men—(Even the workmen themselves shall blush)] I do not know, that any one has ever yet interpreted these words to any tolerably good sense: וחרשים המה מאדם vechareshim hemah meadam. The Vulgate, and our translators, have rendered them very fairly, as they are written and pointed in the Text:—Fabri enim sunt ex hominibus. "And the workmen they are of men." Out of which the commentators have not been able to extract any thing worthy of the prophet. I have given another explanation of the place; agreeable enough to the context, if it can be deduced from the words themselves. I presume, that אדם adam, rubuit, may signify erubuit, to be red through shame, as well as from any other cause; though I cannot produce any example of it in that particular sense; and the word in the text I would point מאדם meaddam; or if any one should object to the irregularity of the number, I would read מאדמים meadamim. But I rather think, that the irregularity of the construction has been the cause of the obscurity, and has given occasion to the mistaken punctuation. The singular is sometimes put for the plural, see Psa. lxviii. 31.; and the participle for the future tense, see Isa. xl. 11.

The Sacred Writers are generally large and eloquent upon the subject of idolatry: they treat it with great severity, and set forth the absurdity of it in the strongest light. But this passage of Isaiah, ver. 12—20. far exceeds any thing that ever was written upon the subject, in force of argument, energy of expression, and elegance of composition. One or two of the apocryphal writers have attempted to imitate the prophet, but with very ill success: Wisd. xiii. 11—19.; xv. 7, &c. Baruch, chap. vi. especially the latter; who, injudiciously dilating his matter, and introducing a number of minute circumstances, has very much weakened the force and effect of his invective. On the contrary, a Heathen author, in the ludicrous way, has, in a line or two, given idolatry one of the severest strokes it ever received:—

Olium truncus eram ficulnus, inutile lignum,
Cum faber incertus scamnum faceretne Priapum,
Maluit esse Deum. Deus inde ego.

["Formerly I was the stump of a fig-tree, a useless log. When the carpenter after hesitating whether to make me a god or a stool, at last determined to make me a god. Thus, I became a god!"

From the tenth to the seventeenth verse, a most beautiful strain of irony is carried on against idolatry. And we may naturally think that every idolater, who either read or heard it, must have been for ever ashamed of his own devices.]

using ineffectual means, and bestowing labour to no purpose. In the same sense Hosea says, "Ephraim feedeth on wind." Chap. xii. 1.

Verse 22. I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins—(I have made thy transgressions vanish away like a cloud, and thy sins like a vapour)] Longinus admired the sublimity of the sentiment, as well as the harmony of the numbers, in the following sentence of Demosthenes: Τουτο το ψηφισμα του τοτε τῃ πολει περιστανται κινδυνον παρελθειν εποιησεν ὡσπερ νεφος. "This decree made the danger then hanging over the city pass away like a cloud." [Probably Isaiah alludes here to the smoke rising up from the sin-offering, dispersed speedily by the wind, and rendered invisible. He who offered his sacrifice aright was as sure that the sin for which he offered it was blotted out, as that the smoke of the sacrifice was dispersed by the wind, and was no longer discernible.]

Verse 24. By myself] Thirteen MSS. (six ancient,) confirm the reading of the Keri, מאתי meittai.

Verse 27. That saith to the deep, Be dry—(Who saith to the deep, Be thou wasted)] Cyrus took Babylon by laying the bed of the Euphrates dry, and leading his army into the city by night through the empty channel of the river. This remarkable circumstance, in which the event so exactly corresponded with the prophecy, was also noted by Jeremiah, (Jer. l. 38.; li. 36.)

"A drought shall be upon her waters, and they shall be dried up:—
I will lay her sea dry;
And I will scorch up her springs."

It is proper here to give some account of the means and method by which the stratagem of Cyrus was effected.

The Euphrates in the middle of the summer, from the melting of the snows on the mountains of Armenia, like the Nile, overflows the country. In order to diminish the inundation, and to carry off the waters, two canals were made by Nebuchadnezzar a hundred miles above the city; the first on the eastern side called Naharmalca, or The Royal River, by which the Euphrates was let into the Tigris; the other on the western side, called Pallacopas, or Naharaga, (נהר אגם nahar agam, The River of the Pool,) by which the redundant waters were carried into a vast lake, forty miles square, contrived not only to lessen the inundation, but for a reservoir, with sluices, to water the barren country on the Arabian side. Cyrus, by turning the whole river into the lake by the Pallacopas, laid the channel, where it ran through the city, almost dry; so that his army entered it, both above and below, by the bed of the river, the water not reaching above the middle of the thigh. By the great quantity of water let into the lake, the sluices and dams were destroyed; and being never repaired afterward, the waters spread over the whole country below, and reduced it to a morass, in which the river is lost. Ingens modo et navigabilis, inde tenuis rivus despectus emoritur; et nusquam manifesto exitu effluit, ut alii omnes, sed deficit.—"And thus a navigable river has been totally lost, it having no exit from this morass. No wonder then that the geographical face of this country is completely changed." MELA, iii. 8. HEROD. i. 185. 190. XENOPHON, Cyrop. vii. ARRIAN. vii.

Verse 28. That saith of Cyrus, He is my shepherd—(Who saith to Cyrus, Thou art my shepherd)] Pastor meus es. Vulg. The true reading seems to be רעי אתה roĕi atah; the word אתה atah, has probably been dropt out of the Text. The same word is lost out of the Text, Psa. cxix. 57. It is supplied in the Septuagint by the word ει, thou art.

Saith to Jerusalem] For ולאמר velomer, the Septuagint, and Vulgate, read האומר haomer.

And to the temple] ולהיכל ulhikel, as לירושלם leyerushalem, before; the preposition is necessary; and the Vulgate seems to read so. Houbigant.

[That saith of CYRUS, He is, or (Thou art) my shepherd:—Saying to JERUSALEM, Thou shalt be built;—And to the TEMPLE, Thy foundation shall be laid. There is a remarkable beauty and propriety in this verse.

1. Cyrus is called God's shepherd. Shepherd was an epithet which Cyrus took to himself; and what he gave to all good kings.

2. This Cyrus should say to the Temple—Thy foundation shall be laid—Not, thou shalt be built. The fact is, only the foundation was laid in the days of Cyrus, the Ammonites having prevented the building; nor was it resumed till the second year of Darius, one of his successors. There is often a precision in the expressions of the prophets, which is as honourable to truth, as it is unnoticed by careless readers.]

NOTES ON CHAP. XLV.

Verse 1. Loose the loins of kings—(Ungird the loins of kings)] See Note on chap. v. 27. Xenophon gives the following list of the nations conquered by Cyrus: the Syrians, Assyrians, Arabians, Cappadocians, both the Phrygians, Lydians, Carians, Phœnicians, Babylonians. He moreover reigned over the Bactrians, Indians, Cilicians, the Sacæ, Paphlagones, and Mariandyni. Cyrop. lib. i. p. 4. Edit. Hutchinson, Quarto. All these kingdoms he acknowledges, in his decree for the restoration of the Jews, to have been given to him by JEHOVAH, the God of heaven. Ezra i. 2.

To open before him the two-leaved gates, &c.—(That I may open before him the valves; and the gates shall not be shut)] The gates of Babylon within the city, leading from the streets to the river, were providentially left open, when Cyrus' forces entered the city in the night through the channel of the river, in the general disorder occasioned by the great feast which was then celebrated; otherwise, says Herodotus, i. 191. the Persians would have been shut up in the bed of the river, and taken as in a net, and all destroyed. And the gates of the palace were opened imprudently by the king's orders, to enquire what was the cause of the tumult without; when the two parties under Gobrias and Gadatas rushed in, got possession of the palace, and slew the king. XENOPH. Cyrop. vii. p. 528.

Verse 2. The crooked places—(The mountains)] For הרורים hadurim, crooked places, a word not easily accounted for in this place, the Septuagint read הררים hararim, τα ορη, the mountains. Two MSS. have הרים hadarim, without the ו vau, which is hardly distinguishable from the reading of the Septuagint. The Divine protection that attended Cyrus, and rendered his expedition against Babylon easy and prosperous, is finely expressed by God's going before him, and making the mountains level. The image is highly poetical:

The gates of brass—(The valves of brass)] Abydenus, apud Euseb. Præp. Evang. ix. 41. says, that the wall of Babylon had brazen gates. And Herodotus, i. 179. more particularly: "In the wall all round there are a hundred gates, all of brass; and so in like manner are the sides and the lintels." The gates likewise within the city, opening to the river from the several streets, were of brass; as were those also of the temple of Belus. Herod. i. 180, 181.

Verse 3. I will give thee the treasures of darkness] Sardes and Babylon, when taken by Cyrus, were the wealthiest cities in the world. Crœsus, celebrated beyond all the kings of that age for his riches, gave up his treasures to Cyrus, with an exact account in writing of the whole, containing the particulars with which each wagon was loaded when they were carried away: and they were delivered to Cyrus at the palace of Babylon. Xenophon, Cyrop. lib. vii. p. 503, 515, 540.

Pliny gives the following account of the wealth taken by Cyrus in Asia. Jam Cyrus, devictâ Asiâ, pondo xxxiv. millia [auri] invenerat; præter vasa aurea, aurumque factum, et in eo folia, ac platanum, vitemque. Quâ victoriâ argenti quingenta millia talentorum reportavit; et craterem Semiramidis, cujus pondus quindecim talenta colligebat. Talentum autem Ægyptium pondo lxxx patere [l. capere] Varro tradit. Nat. Hist. xxxiii. 15. ["When Cyrus conquered Asia, he found thirty-four thousand pounds' weight of gold, besides golden vessels and articles in gold; and leaves, (folia, perhaps solia, bathing vessels, Hol.) a plane, and vine-tree, (of gold). By which victory he carried away fifty thousand talents of silver; and the cup of Semiramis, the weight of which was fifteen talents. The Egyptian talent according to Varro, was eighty pounds."]

The gold and silver, estimated by weight in this account, being converted into pounds sterling, amount to one hundred and twenty-six millions two hundred and twenty-four thousand pounds. Brerewood, De Ponderibus, cap. x.

Verse 7. I form the light and create darkness] It was the great principle of the Magian religion, which prevailed in Persia in the time of Cyrus, and in which probably he was educated, that there are two supreme, co-eternal, and independent causes, always acting in opposition one to the other; one the author of all good, the other of all evil. The good being they called LIGHT; the evil being, DARKNESS. That when LIGHT had the ascendant, then good and happiness prevailed among men; when DARKNESS had the superiority, then evil and misery abounded. An opinion that contradicts the clearest evidence of our reason, which plainly leads us to the acknowledgment of one only Supreme Being, infinitely good as well as powerful. With reference to this absurd opinion, held by the person to whom this prophecy is addressed, God by His prophet, in the most significant terms, asserts His omnipotence and absolute supremacy:

"I am JEHOVAH, and none else;
Forming light, and creating darkness;
Making peace, and creating evil:
I JEHOVAH am the Author of all these things."

Declaring that those powers whom the Persians held to be the original authors of good and evil to mankind, representing them by light and darkness, as their proper emblems, are no other than creatures of God, the instruments which He employs in His government of the world, ordained or permitted by Him in order to execute His wise and just decrees; and that there is no power, either of good or evil, independent of the one supreme God, infinite in power and in goodness.

There were, however, some among the Persians whose sentiments were more moderate as to this matter; who held the evil principle to be in some measure subordinate to the good; and that the former would at length be wholly subdued by the latter. See Hyde, De Relig. Vet. Pers. cap. xxii.

That this opinion prevailed among the Persians as early as the time of Cyrus, we may, I think, infer, not only from this passage of Isaiah, which has a manifest reference to it, but likewise from a passage in Xenophon's Cyropædia, where the same doctrine is applied to the human mind. Araspes, a noble young Persian, had fallen in love with the fair captive Panthea, committed to his charge by Cyrus. After all his boasting, that he was superior to the assaults of that passion, he yielded so far to it as even to threaten violence if she would not comply with his desires. Awed by the reproof of Cyrus, fearing his displeasure, and having by cool reflection recovered his reason; in his discourse with him on this subject, he says, "O Cyrus, I have certainly two souls; and this piece of philosophy I have learned from that wicked sophist, Love. For if I had but one soul, it would not be at the same time good and evil; it would not at the same time approve of honourable and base actions; and at once desire to do, and refuse to do, the very same things. But it is plain that I am animated by two souls; and when the good soul prevails, I do what is virtuous; and when the evil one prevails, I attempt what is vicious. But now the good soul prevails, having gotten you for her assistant, and has clearly gained the superiority." Lib. vi. p. 424.

[I make peace, and create evil—Evil is here evidently put for war and its attendant miseries. I will procure peace for the Israelites and destroy Babylon by war. I form light, and create darkness. Now, as darkness is only the privation of light,—so the evil of war is the privation of peace.]

Verse 8. Drop down, ye heavens] The eighty-fifth Psalm is a very elegant ode on the same subject with this part of Isaiah's prophecies,—the restoration of Judah from captivity; and is, in the most beautiful part of it, a manifest imitation of this passage of the prophet:—

"Verily his salvation is nigh unto them that fear him,
That glory may dwell in our land.
Mercy and truth have met together;
Righteousness and peace have kissed each other.
Truth shall spring from the earth,
And righteousness shall look down from heaven.
Even JEHOVAH will give that which is good,
And our land shall yield her produce.
Righteousness shall go before him,
And shall direct his footsteps in the way."
Psa. lxxxv. 10—14.

[See the Notes on these verses.]

These images of the dew and the rain descending from heaven, and making the earth fruitful, employed by the prophet, and some of those nearly of the same kind which are used by the Psalmist, may perhaps be primarily understood as designed to set forth in a splendid manner the happy state of God's people restored to their country, and flourishing in peace and plenty, in piety and virtue: but justice and salvation, mercy and truth, righteousness and peace, and glory dwelling in the land, cannot with any sort of propriety, in the one or the other, be interpreted as the consequences of that event; they must mean the blessings of the great redemption by Messiah.

[Let the earth open, &c.—Jonathan, in his Targum, refers this to the resurrection of the dead;—the earth shall be opened, ויתון מיתיא ve-yechon meiteiya,—and the dead shall revive. A plain proof that the ancient Jews believed in a future state, and acknowledged the resurrection of the dead.]

Let them bring forth salvation—(Let salvation produce her fruit)] For ויפרו vayiphru, the Septuagint, Vulgate, and Syriac read ויפרה vayiphrah; and one MS. has a rasure close after the latter ו vau, which probably was ה he at first.

Verse 9. Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker—(Woe unto him that contendeth with the power that formed him)] The prophet answers or prevents the objections and cavils of the unbelieving Jews, disposed to murmur against God, and to arraign the wisdom and justice of His dispensations in regard to them; in permitting them to be oppressed by their enemies, and in promising them deliverance instead of preventing their captivity. St. Paul has borrowed the image, and has applied it to the like purpose with equal force and elegance: "Nay, but, O man! who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, out of the same lump to make one vessel to honour, and another to dishonour?" Rom. ix. 20, 21. [This is spoken, says Kimchi, against the king of Babylon, who insulted the Most High, bringing forth the sacred vessels, drinking out of them, and magnifying himself against God.]

Or thy work, He hath no hands—(And to the workman, Thou hast no hands)] The Syriac renders, as if he had read, ולא היתי פעל ידיך velo haiti peâl yadeyca, neither am I the work of thy hands; the Septuagint, as if they had read, ולא פעלת ואין ידים לך velo peâlta veain yadim leca, neither hast thou made me; and thou hast no hands. But the fault seems to be in the transposition of the two pronouns:

for ופעלך upaâlca, read ופעלו upaâlo; and for לו lo, read לך leca. So Houbigant corrects it; reading also ופעלו upaâlo; which last correction seems not altogether necessary. The Septuagint, in MSS. Pachom. and 1. D. 11. have it thus,—και το εργον, ουκ εχεις χειρας, which favours the reading here proposed.

Verse 11. Ask me of things to come—(And he that formeth the things which are to come)] I read ויוצר vayotser, without the ו vau suffixed; from the Septuagint, who join it in construction with the following word, ὁ ποιησας τα επερχομενα.

(Do ye question me)] "תשאלוני tesheluni, Chald. recte: præcedit ת tau; et sic forte legerunt reliqui Intt." Secker.—[The Chaldee has more properly תשאלוני tesheluni, with a ת tau preceding; and thus the other interpreters probably read.]

[Verse 13. I have raised him up—This evidently refers to Cyrus, and to what he did for the Jews; and by whom he was excited to do it.]

Verse 14. The labour of Egypt—(The wealth of Egypt)] This seems to relate to the future admission of the Gentiles into the church of God. Compare Psa. lxviii. 32. lxxii. 10. chap. lx. 6—9. And perhaps these particular nations may be named, by a metonymy common in all poetry, for powerful and wealthy nations in general. See Note on chap. lx. 1.

The Sabeans, men of stature—(The Sabeans, tall of stature)] That the Sabeans were of a more majestic appearance than common is particularly remarked by Agatharchides, an ancient Greek historian quoted by Bochart, Phaleg. ii. 26. τα σωματα εστι των κατοικουντων αξιολογωτερα. So also the Septuagint understand it, rendering it ανδρες ὑψηλοι, tall men. And the same phrase, אנשי מדה anoshey middah, is used for persons of extraordinary stature, Numb. xiii. 32. and 1 Chron. xx. 6.

They shall make supplication unto thee—(They shall—in suppliant guise address thee)] The conjunction ו vau is supplied by the ancient Versions, and confirmed by fifteen MSS. [of Kennicott, (seven ancient) thirteen of De Rossi,] and six Editions, ואליך ve-elaic. Three MSS. (two ancient) omit the ו vau before אליך elaic, at the beginning of the line.

[Verse 15. Verily thou art a God that hidest thyself—At present, from the nations of the world.

O God of Israel, the Saviour—While Thou revealest Thyself to the Israelites, and savest them.]

Verse 16. They shall be ashamed—(They are ashamed)] The Reader cannot but observe the sudden transition from the solemn adoration of the secret and mysterious nature of God's counsels in regard to His people, to the spirited denunciation of the confusion of idolaters, and the final destruction of idolatry; contrasted with the salvation of Israel, not from temporal captivity, but the eternal salvation by Messiah, strongly marked by the repetition and augmentation of the phrase, to the ages of eternity. But there is not only a sudden change in the sentiment,—the change is equally observable in the construction of the sentences; which, from the usual short measure, runs out at once into two distichs of the longer sort of verse. See Prelim. Dissert. p. 66, &c. There is another instance of the same kind, and very like to this, of a sudden transition in regard both to the sentiment and construction in chap. xlii. 17.

(His adversaries)] This line, to the great diminution of the beauty of the distich, is imperfect in the present text; the subject of the proposition is not particularly expressed, as it is in the line following. The version of the Septuagint happily supplies the word that is lost; οἱ ἀντικείμενοι αὐτῷ his adversaries: the original word was צריו tsaraiv.

Verse 18. He formed it to be inhabited—(For he formed it to be inhabited)] An ancient MS. has כי ki, before לשבת leshebet: and so the ancient Versions.

Verse 19. I have not spoken in secret, in a dark place of the earth] In opposition to the manner in which the Heathen oracles gave their answers; which were generally delivered from some deep and obscure cavern. Such was the seat of the Cumean Sybil:

Excisum Euboïcæ latus ingens rupis in antrum.
VIRG. Æn. vi. 42

"A cave cut in the side of a huge rock."

Such was that of the famous oracle at Delphi: of which, says Strabo, Lib. ix. φασι δ' εἶναι το μαντειον αντρον κοιλον μετα βαθους, ου μαλα ευρυστομον. "The oracle is said to be a hollow cavern of considerable depth, with an opening not very wide." And Diodorus, giving an account of the origin of this oracle, says, 'that there was in that place a great chasm, or cleft, in the earth; in which very place is now situated what is called the Adytum of the temple.' Αδυτον· σπηλαιον, η το αποκρυφον μερος του ἱερου. Hesych. "Adytum means a cavern, or the hidden part of the temple."

I the LORD speak righteousness, I declare things that are right—(I am JEHOVAH, who speak truth, who give direct answers)] This also is said in opposition to the false and ambiguous answers given by the heathen oracles; of which there are many noted examples; none more so than that of the answer given to Crœsus, when he marched against Cyrus; which piece of history has some connexion with this part of Isaiah's prophecies. Let us hear Cicero's account of the Delphic answers in general, and of this in particular. Sed jam ad te venio,

O sancte Apollo, qui umbilicum certum terrarum obsides,
Unde superstitiosa primum sæva evasit vox fera.

Tuis enim oraculis Chrysippus totum volumen implevit, partim falsis, ut ego opinor; partim casu veris, ut fit in omni ora tione sæpissime; partim flexiloquis et obscuris, ut interpres egeat interprete, et sors ipsa ad sortes referenda sit; partim ambiguis, et quæ ad dialecticum deferenda sint. Crœsus Halym penetrans magnam pervertet opum vim:

hostium vim sese perversurum putavit; pervertit autem suam. Utrum igitur eorum accidisset, verum oraculum fuisset. De Divinat. ii. 56. ["Mountainous countries, and those which abounded in chasms, caves, and grottos, were the places in which oracles were most frequent. The horror and gloom inspired by such places were useful to the lying priests in their system of deception. The terms in which those oracles were conceived, (they were always ambiguous, or equivocal, or false, or illusory,) sometimes the turn of a phrase, or a peculiarity in idiom or construction which might be turned pro or con, contained the essence of the oracular declaration. Sometimes, in the multitude of guesses, one turned out to be true; at other times, so equivocal was the oracle, that, however the thing fell out, the declaration could be interpreted in that way, as in the above to Crœsus, from the oracle at Delphi, which was,—If Crœsus march against Cyrus, he shall overthrow a great empire: he, supposing that this promised him success, fought, and lost his own, while he expected to destroy that of his enemy. Here the quack dæmon took refuge in his designed ambiguity. He predicted the destruction of a great empire, but did not say which it was; and therefore he was safe, howsoever the case fell out. Not one of the predictions of God's prophets is conceived in this way."]

Verse 21. Bring them near; yea, let them take counsel together] For יועצו yoêtsu or yivaêtsu, let them consult, the Septuagint read ידעו yedâu, let them know: but an ancient MS. has יועדו yoêdu, let them come together by appointment; which may probably be the true reading.

[Verse 22. Look unto me, and be ye saved, &c.—This verse and the following contain a plain prediction of the universal spread of the knowledge of God through Christ,

Verse 23. I have sworn by myself—במימרי be-meymri, by my WORD: and the word—בתגם pithgam, or saying, to distinguish it from the personal substantial WORD meymra, mentioned before. See the Targum.]

The word is gone out of my mouth—(Truth is gone forth from my mouth, the word)] So the Septuagint distinguish the members of the sentence; preserving the elegance of the construction, and the clearness of the sense.

Verse 24. Surely, shall one say, In the LORD have I righteousness and strength—(Saying, Only to JEHOVAH belongeth salvation and power)] A MS. omits לי li, unto me; and instead of לי אמר li amar, he said or shall say, unto me, the Septuagint read, in the copy which they used, לאמר lomer, saying. For יבא yabo, HE shall come, in the singular, twelve MSS. (three ancient,) read יבאו yabeu, plural; and a letter is erased at the end of the word in two others: and so the Alexandrine copy of the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate read it. For צדקות tsidekoth, plural, two MSS. read צדקת tsidketh, singular; and so the Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldee.

[Probably these are the words of Cyrus, who acknowledged that all his success came from Jehovah. And this sentiment is in effect contained in his decree or proclamation, Ezra i. 2. Thus saith Cyrus, king of Persia, The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth, &c.]

But themselves—(Even they themselves)] For ונפשם venaphsham, an ancient MS. has כי נפשם ki nephsham, with more force.

Verse 3. Which are borne by me from the belly—(Ye that have been borne by me from the birth)] The prophet very ingeniously, and with great force, contrasts the power of God, and His tender goodness effectually exerted towards His people, with the inability of the false gods of the heathen. He like an indulgent father had carried His people in His arms, "as a man carrieth his son," Deut. i. 31. He had protected them, and delivered them from their distresses: whereas the idols of the heathen are forced to be carried about themselves, and removed from place to place, with great labour and fatigue, by their worshippers; nor can they answer, or deliver their votaries, when they cry unto them.

Moses, expostulating with God on the weight of the charge laid upon him as leader of His people, expresses that charge (under the same image of a parent's carrying his children) in very strong terms: "Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them? that thou shouldest say unto me, Carry them in thy bosom, as a nursing father beareth the sucking child, unto the land which thou swarest unto their fathers." Numb. xi. 12.

Pindar has treated with a just and very elegant ridicule the work of the statuary even in comparison with his own poetry, from this circumstance of its being fixed to a certain station. "The friends of Pytheas," says the Scholiast, "came to the poet, desiring him to write an ode on his victory. Pindar demanded three drachms (minæ, I suppose is should be,) for the ode. No, say they, we can have a brazen statue for that money, which will be better than a poem. However, changing their minds afterwards, they came and offered him what he had demanded." This gave him the hint of the following ingenious exordium of his ode:—

Ουκ ανδριαντοποιος ειμ'
'Ωστ' ελινυσοντα μ' εργαζεσ-θαι αγαλματ' επ' αυτας βαθμιδος
Εσταοτ'. Αλλ' επι πασας
'Ολκαδος ευ τ' ακατῳ, γλυκει' αοιδα, Στειχ' απ' Αιγινα διαγγελλοισ' ὁτι Λαμπωνος ὑιος
Πυθεας συνυσθενης
Νικῃ Νεμειοις παγκρατιου στεφανον. Nem. v.

Thus elegantly translated by Mr. Francis in a note to Hor. Carm. iv. 2. 19.

"It is not mine with forming hand
To bid a lifeless image stand
For ever on its base:
But fly, my verses, and proclaim
To distant realms, with deathless fame,
That Pytheas conquered in the rapid race."

Jeremiah, chap. x. 3—5. seems to be indebted to Isaiah for most of the following passage:—

"The practices of the people are altogether vanity:
For they cut down a tree from the forest;
The work of the artificer's hand with the axe:
With silver and with gold it is adorned;
With nails and with hammers it is fastened, that it may not totter.
Like the palm-tree they stand stiff, and cannot speak;
They are carried about, for they cannot go:
Fear them not, for they cannot do harm;
Neither is it in them to do good."

Verse 8. Show yourselves men] התאשש hithasheshu. This word is rather of doubtful derivation and signification. It occurs only in this place: and some of the ancient interpreters seem to have had something different in their copies. The Vulgate read התבששו hithbosheshu, take shame to your-

CHAPTER XLVII.

The destruction of Babylon is denounced by a beautiful selection of circumstances, in which her prosperous is contrasted with her adverse condition. She is represented as a tender and delicate female reduced to the work and abject condition of a slave, and bereaved of every consolation, 1—4. And that on account of her cruelty, (particularly to God's people,) her pride, voluptuousness, sorceries, and incantations, 5—11. The folly of these last practices elegantly exposed by the Prophet, 12—15. It is worthy of observation that almost all the imagery of this Chapter is applied in the book of the Revelation (in nearly the same words) to the antitype of the illustrious capital of the Chaldean empire, viz. Babylon the Great.

Verse 2. Take the millstones, and grind meal—(Take the mill, and grind the corn)] It was the work of slaves to grind the corn. They used hand-mills: water-mills were not invented till a little before the time of Augustus; (see the Greek epigram of Antipater, which seems to celebrate it as a new invention, Anthol. Cephalæ, 653.) wind-mills, long after. It was not only the work of slaves, but the hardest work; and often inflicted upon them as a severe punishment.

To grind in the mill—to be scourged—to be put in the stocks—were punishments for slaves. Hence a delinquent was said to be a man worthy of the mill. The tread-mill now in use in England, is a revival of this ancient usage. But in the East grinding was the work of the female slaves. See Exod. xi. 5. xii. 29. (in the version of the Septuagint) Matt. xxiv. 41. Homer, Odyss. xx. 105—108. And it is the same to this day. "Women alone are employed to grind their corn." Shaw's Algiers and Tunis, p. 297. "They are the female slaves, that are generally employed in the East at those hand-mills [for grinding corn;] it is extremely laborious, and esteemed the lowest employment in the house." Sir J. Chardin, Harmer's Observ. i. p. 153. [The words denote that state of captivity to which the Babylonians should be reduced.]

Verse 3. I will not meet thee as a man—(Neither will I suffer man to intercede with me)] The verb should be pointed, or written, אפגיע aphgiâ, in Hiphil.

Verse 4. Our Redeemer—(Our Avenger)] Here a chorus breaks in upon the midst of the subject; with a change of construction, as well as sentiment, from the longer to the shorter kind of verse, for one distich only: after which the former subject and style are resumed. See Note on chap. xlv. 16.

Verse 6. I was wroth with my people] God, in the course of His providence, makes use of great conquerors and tyrants, as His instruments to execute His judgments in the earth: He employs one wicked nation to scourge another. The inflicter of the punishment may perhaps be as culpable as the sufferer; and may add to his guilt by indulging his cruelty in executing God's justice. When he has fulfilled the work to which the Divine vengeance has ordained him, he will become himself the object of it. See chap. x. 5—12. God charges the Babylonians, though employed by Himself to chastise His people, with cruelty in regard to them. They exceeded the bounds of justice and humanity in oppressing and destroying them; and though they were really executing the righteous decree of God, yet, as far as it regarded themselves, they were only indulging their own ambition and violence. The prophet Zechariah sets this matter in the same light: "I was but a little angry, and they helped forward the affliction." Chap. i. 15.

Verse 7. So that thou didst not—(Because thou didst not)] For עד âd, read על âl; so two MSS. and one Edition. And for אחריתה acharithah, "the latter end of it," read אחריתך acharitheca, "thy latter end:" so thirteen MSS. and two Editions, and Vulgate. [Both the sixth and seventh verses are wanting in one of my oldest MSS.]

Verse 9. These two things shall come to thee in a moment—That is, suddenly. Belshazzar was slain: thus the city became metaphorically a widow, the husband, the governor of it, being slain. In the time in which the king was slain, the Medes and Persians took the city, and slew many of its inhabitants, see Dan. v. 30, 31. When Darius took the city, he is said to have crucified three thousand of its principal inhabitants.]

In their perfection—(On a sudden)] Instead of בתמם betummam, in their perfection, as our Translation renders it, the Septuagint and Syriac read in the copies, from which they translated, פתאם pitom, suddenly; parallel to רגע regâ, in a moment, in the preceding alternate member of the sentence. The concurrent testimony of the Septuagint and Syriac, favoured by the context, may be safely opposed to the authority of the present Text.

For the multitude—(Notwithstanding the multitude)] ברב barab. For this sense of the particle ב beth, see Numb. xiv. 11.

Videtur in fine [hujus commatis] deesse verbum, ut hoc membrum prioribus respondeat. ["A word appears to be wanting at the end of this clause to connect it properly with the two preceding."] SECKER.

In order to set in a proper light this judicious remark, it is necessary to give the Reader an exact verbal translation of the whole verse:—

"And evil shall come upon thee, thou shalt not know how to deprecate it;
And mischief shall fall upon thee, thou shalt not be able to expiate it;
And destruction shall come suddenly upon thee, thou shalt not know"——

What? how to escape, to avoid it, to be delivered from it; (perhaps צאת ממנה tsaath mimennah, "they could not go out from it," Jer. xi. 11.) I am persuaded that a phrase is here lost out of the Text. But as the ancient Versions retain no traces of it, and a wide field lies open to uncertain conjecture, I have not attempted to fill up the chasm: but have in the translation, as others have done before me, palliated and disguised the effect, which I cannot with any assurance pretend to supply.

Verse 13. From these things—(What are the events)] For מאשר measher, read מה אשר mah asher, so the Septuagint, what is to happen to thee.

Verse 15. To his quarter—(To his own business)] לעברו leâbero. Expositors give no very good account of this word in this place. In a MS. it was at first לעבדו lebâdo, to his servant, or, work, which is probably the true reading. The sense however is pretty much the same with the common interpretation.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The Jews reproved for their obstinate attachment to idols, notwithstanding their experience of the Divine Providence over them; and of the Divine prescience that revealed by the prophets the most remarkable events which concerned them, that they should not have the least pretext for ascribing any portion of their success to their idols 1—8. The Almighty, after bringing them to the furnace for their perverseness, asserts His glorious sovereignty, and repeats His gracious promises of deliverance and consolation, 9—11. Prophecy concerning that individual (Cyrus) who shall be an instrument in the hand of God of executing His will on Babylon, and His power on the Chaldeans; and the idols of the people are again challenged to give a like proof of their foreknowledge, 12—16. Tender and passionate exclamation of Jehovah respecting the hardened condition of the Jewish nation, to which the very pathetic exclamation of the Divine Saviour when He wept over Jerusalem, may be considered a striking parallel, 17—19. Notwithstanding the repeated provocations of the house of Israel, Jehovah will again be merciful to them. They are commanded to escape from Babylon; and God's gracious favour towards them is beautifully represented by images borrowed from the Exodus from Egypt, 20, 21. Certain perdition of the finally impenitent, 22. It will be proper here to remark that many passages in this Chapter, and indeed the general strain of these prophecies, have a plain aspect to a restoration of the church in the latter days upon a scale much greater than the world has yet witnessed, when the very violent fall of Babylon the Great mentioned in the Revelation, of which the Chaldean capital was an expressive type, shall introduce by a most tremendous political convulsion (Rev. xvi. 17—21.) that glorious epoch of the gospel, which forms so conspicuous a part of the prophecies of the Old Testament, and has been a subject of the prayers of all saints in all ages.

Verse 9. And for my praise—(And for the sake of my praise)] I read ולמען תחלתי u-lemaân tehillati. The word למען lemaân, though not absolutely necessary here, for it may be understood as supplied from the preceding member, yet seems to have been removed from hence to ver. 11; where it is redundant, and where it is not repeated, in the Septuagint, Syriac, and a MS. I have therefore omitted it in the latter place, and added it here.

Verse 10. I have chosen thee—(I have tried thee)] For בחרתיך bechartica, "I have chosen thee," a MS. has בחנתיך bechantica, "I have tried thee." And so perhaps read the Syriac and Chaldee interpreters: they retain the same word, בחרתך becharteca; but in those languages it signifies, I have tried thee. ככסף ke-keseph, quasi argentum, "as silver." Vulgate.

[I cannot think בכסף be-keseph, WITH silver, is the true reading. ככסף ke-keseph, LIKE silver, as the Vulgate evidently read it, I suppose to have been the original reading, though no MS. yet found supports this word; the similarity of the two letters ב beth, and כ caph, might have easily led to the mistake in the first instance; and it has been but too faithfully copied ever since. כור kur, which we translate furnace, should be rendered crucible, the vessel in which the silver is melted. The meaning of the verse seems to be this:—I have purified you, but not as silver is purified; for when it is purified, no dross of any kind is left behind. Had I done this with you, I should have consumed you altogether: but I have put you in the crucible of affliction, in captivity, that you may acknowledge your sins, and turn unto me.]

Verse 11. For how should my name be polluted—(For how would my name be blasphemed)] The word שמי shemi, my name, is dropped out of the Text: it is supplied by a MS. which has שמי shemi; and by the Septuagint, ὁτι το εμον ονομα βεβηλουται. The Syriac and Vulgate get over the difficulty, by making the verb in the first person; that I may not be blasphemed.

Verse 12. O Jacob—(O Jacob, my servant)] After יעקב yaâkob, a MS. [of Kennicott, two of De Rossi,] and the two old Editions of 1486 and 1488, add the word עבדי âbdi, my servant, which is lost out of the present Text; and there is a rasure in its place in another ancient MS. The Jerusalem Talmud has the same word.

I also am the last—(I am the last)] For אף אני aph ani, even I, two ancient MSS., and the ancient Versions, read ואני ve-ani, and I; more properly.

Verse 14. Which among them hath declared these things—(Who among you hath predicted these things)] For בהם bahem, "among them," twenty-one MSS. (nine ancient) and two Editions, (one of them that of the year 1488,) [fourteen of De Rossi's, and one ancient of my own,] have בכם bacem, "among you;" and so the Syriac.

The LORD hath loved him: he will do his pleasure on Babylon—(He, whom JEHOVAH hath loved, will execute his will on Babylon)] That is, Cyrus; so Symmachus has well rendered it: Ὁν ὁ Κυριος ηγαπησε, ποιησει το θελημα αυτου, ["He whom the Lord hath loved will perform his will."]

On the Chaldeans] The preposition is lost; it is supplied in the Edition of 1486, which has בכשדים be-casadim, and so the Chaldee and Vulgate.

Verse 16. Come ye near unto me] After the word קרבו kerebu, draw near, a MS. adds גוים goyim, O ye nations; which, as this and the two preceding verses are plainly addressed to the idolatrous nations, reproaching their gods, as unable to predict future events, is probably genuine.

Hear ye this—(And hear ye this)] A MS. adds the conjunction, ושמע va-shamêu; and so the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate.

I have not spoken in secret] The Alexandrine copy of the Septuagint adds here, ουδε εν τοπῳ γης σκοτεινῳ, nor in a dark place of the earth, as in chap. xlv. 19. That it stands rightly, or at least stood very early, in this place of the Version of the Septuagint, is highly probable; because it is acknowledged by the Arabic Version, and by the Coptic MS. St. Germain de Prez, Paris, translated likewise from the Septuagint. But whether it should be inserted, as of right belonging to the Hebrew Text, may be doubted; for a transcriber of the Greek Version might easily add it by memory from the parallel place; and it is not necessary to the sense.

From the time that it was—(Before the time when it began to exist)] An ancient MS. has היותם hayotham, "they began to exist:" and so another had it at first. [From the time that the expedition of Cyrus was planned, there was God managing the whole by the œconomy of His providence.]

Verse 16. There am I—(I had decreed it)] I take שם sham, for a verb, not an adverb.

And now the Lord God, and His Spirit hath sent me—(And now the Lord Jehovah hath sent me, and His Spirit)] Τις εστιν ὁ εν τῳ Ησαιᾳ λεγων; Και νυν Κυριος απεστειλε με και το Πνευμα αυτου· εν ᾧ, αμφιβολου οντος του ρητου, πoτερον ὁ Πατηρ και το Αγιον Πνευμα απεστειλαν τον Ιησουν, ἡ ὁ Πατηρ απεστειλε τον τε Χριστον και το Αγιον Πνευμα· το δευτερον εστιν αληθες. "Who is it, that saith in Isaiah, And now the Lord hath sent me and His Spirit? in which, as the expression is ambiguous, is it the Father and the Holy Spirit who have sent Jesus; or the Father, who hath sent both Christ and the Holy Spirit? The latter is the true interpretation." Origen cont. Cels. lib. i. I have kept to the order of the words of the Original, on purpose that the ambiguity, which Origen remarks in the Version of the Septuagint, and which is the same in the Hebrew, might still remain; and the sense, which he gives to it, be offered to the Reader's judgment; which is wholly excluded in our Vulgar Translation.

Verse 18. As a river—(Like the river)] That is, the Euphrates.

Verse 19. Like the gravel thereof—(Like that of the bowels thereof)] בצאצאי מעי חים והם הרגים betsatsai mêi chayam veham hadagim. "As the issue of the bowels of the sea; that is, the fishes." Salom. ben Melec. And so likewise Aben Ezra, Jarchi, Kimchi, &c.

His name—(Thy name)] For שמו shemo, "his name," the Septuagint had in the copy from which they translated שמך shemca, "thy name."

Verse 20. Tell this—(Make it heard)] Twenty-seven MSS. [of Kennicott, (ten ancient,) many of De Rossi's, and two ancient, of my own, with the Septuagint, Syriac, Chaldee, and Arabic,] and one Edition, prefix to the verb the conjunction ו vau, והשמיעו ve-hashmiéu.

Verse 21. They thirsted not—through the deserts] Kimchi has a surprising observation upon this place:—"If the prophecy," says he, "relates to the return from the Babylonish captivity, as it seems to do, it is to be wondered, how it comes to pass, that in the Book of Ezra, in which he gives an account of their return, no mention is made, that such miracles were wrought for them; as for instance, that God clave the rock for them in the desert." It is really much to be wondered, that one of the most learned and judicious of the Jewish expositors of the Old Testament, having advanced so far in a large Comment on Isaiah, should appear to be totally ignorant of the Prophet's manner of writing; of the parabolic style, which prevails in the writings of all the prophets, and more particularly in the prophecy of Isaiah; which abounds throughout in parabolical images from the beginning to the end; from "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth," to "the worm and the fire" in the last verse. And how came he to keep his wonderment to himself so long? Why did he not expect, that the historian should have related, how, as they passed through the desert, cedars, pines, and olive-trees shot up at once on the side of the way to shade them; and that instead of briers and brambles the acacia and the myrtle sprung up under their feet, according to God's promises, chap. xli. 19. and lv. 13.? These and a multitude of the like parabolical or poetical images, were never intended to be understood literally. All that the prophet designed in this place, and which he has executed in the most elegant manner, was an amplification and illustration of the gracious care and protection of God, vouchsafed to His people in their return from Babylon, by an allusion to the miraculous Exodus from Egypt. See De S. Poesi, Hebr. Præl. ix.

Verse 22. There is no peace, saith the LORD, unto the wicked.] See below note on chap. lvii. 21. [As the destruction of Babylon was determined, God commands His people to hasten out of it: for saith the Lord, there is no peace (prosperity) to the wicked; ουκ εστι χαιρειν τοις ασεβεσιν, λεγει Κυριος. Sept. "There is no rejoicing or prosperity to the wicked, saith the Lord." Their is not pese to unpytous men seith the Lord. Old MS. Bible.]

CHAPTER XLIX.

In this Chapter the Messiah is introduced, declaring the full extent of His commission, which is not only to be Saviour to the Jews, but also to the Gentiles. The power and efficacy of His word is represented by apt images; the ill success of His ministry among the Jews is intimated, and the great success of the gospel among the Gentiles, 1—12. But the prophet, casting then his eye on the happy, though distant, period of Israel's restoration, makes a beautiful apostrophe to the whole creation to shout forth the praises of God on the prospect of this remarkable favour, 13. The tender mercies of God to His people, with the prosperity of the church in general, and the final overthrow of all its enemies, make the subject of the remaining verses, 14—26.

NOTES ON CHAP. XLIX.

Verse 1. Listen, O isles, unto me—(Hearken unto me, O ye distant lands)] Hitherto the subject of the prophecy has been chiefly confined to the redemption from the captivity of Babylon; with strong intimations of a more important deliverance sometimes thrown in; to the refutation of idolatry; and the demonstration of the infinite power, wisdom, and foreknowledge of God. The character and office of the Messiah was exhibited in general terms at the beginning of chap. xlii.: but here He is introduced in Person, declaring the full extent of His commission; which is not only to restore the Israelites, and reconcile them to their Lord and Father, from whom they had so often revolted; but to be a light to lighten the Gentiles, to call them to the knowledge and obedience of the true God, and to bring them to be one church together with the Israelites, and to partake with them of the same common salvation procured for all by the great Redeemer and Reconciler of man to God.

Verse 2. And he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword—(And he hath made my mouth a sharp sword)] The Servant of God, who speaks in the former part of this Chapter, must be the Messiah. If any part of this character can, in any sense, belong to the prophet; yet in some parts it must belong exclusively to Christ; and in all parts, to Him in a much fuller and more proper sense. Isaiah's mission was to the Jews; not to the distant nations, to whom the speaker in this place addresses himself. "He hath made my mouth a sharp sword:" "to reprove the wicked and to denounce unto them punishment," says Jarchi, understanding it of Isaiah. But how much better does it suit Him, who is represented as having "a sharp two-edged sword going out of His mouth," Rev. i. 16. who is Himself the Word of God; which "Word is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and a Discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Heb. iv. 12. This mighty Agent and Instrument of God, "long laid up in store with Him, and sealed up among His treasures," is at last revealed, and produced by His power, and under His protection, to execute His great and holy purposes. He is compared to a polished shaft stored in His quiver for use in His due time. The polished shaft denotes the same efficacious Word, which is before represented by the sharp sword. The doctrine of the gospel pierced the hearts of its hearers, "bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." The metaphor of the sword and the arrow, applied to powerful speech, is bold, yet just. It has been employed by the most ingenious Heathen writers, if with equal elegance, not with equal force. It is said of Pericles by Aristophanes, (see Cicero Epist. ad Atticum, xii. 6.)

Ουτως εκηλει, και μονος των ῥητορων
Το κεντρον εγκατελειπε ταις ακροωμενοις.
Apud Diod. lib. xii.

His powerful speech
Pierced the hearer's soul, and left behind
Deep in his bosom its keen point infixt.

Pindar is particularly fond of this metaphor, and frequently applies it to his own poetry:

Επεχε νυν σκοπῳ τοξον,
Αγε, Θυμε. τινα βαλλομεν
Εκ μαλθακας αυτε φρε-νος ευκλεας οϊστους
Ιεντες—; Olymp. ii. 160.

"Come on! thy brighest shafts prepare,
And bend, O Muse, thy sounding bow;
Say, through what paths of liquid air
Our arrows shall we throw?" WEST.

See also ver. 149. of the same ode, and Olymp. ix. 17. on the former of which places the Scholiast says, τροπικος ὁ λογος· Βελη δε τους λογους ειρηκε, διὰ το οξυ και καιριον των εγκωμιων. "He calls his verses shafts, by a metaphor, signifying the acuteness and the apposite application of his panegyric."

This person who is, ver. 3. called Israel, cannot in any sense be Isaiah. That name, in its original design and full import, can only belong to Him, who contended powerfully with God in behalf of mankind, and prevailed, Gen. xxxii. 28. [After all that Vitringa, Bp. Lowth, and others, have said in proof of this Chapter speaking of the Messiah, and of Him alone; I have my doubts whether sometimes Isaiah, sometimes Cyrus, and sometimes the Messiah, be not intended; the former shadowing out the latter; of whom, in certain respects, they may be considered the types. The literal sense should be sought out first; this is of the utmost importance both in reading and interpreting the oracles of God.]

Verse 5. And now, saith the LORD—(And now thus saith JEHOVAH)] The word כה coh, before אמר amar, is dropped out of the text: it is supplied by eight MSS. (two ancient) [of Dr. Kennicott, two of De Rossi] and the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate.

Though Israel be not gathered—(And that Israel unto him might be gathered)] Five MSS. (two ancient,) confirm the Keri, or marginal correction of the Masoretes, לו lo, unto him, instead of לא lo, not, in the text; and so read Aquila; and the Chaldee, Septuagint, and Arabic omit the negative. But the Septuagint, MSS. Pachom, and I. D. II. express also the Keri לו lo, by προς αυτον, to him.

Verse 6. And to restore the preserved of Israel—(And to restore the branches of Israel)] נצירי netsirey; or נצורי netsorey, as the Masoretes correct it in the marginal reading. This word has been matter of great doubt with interpreters: the Syriac renders it the branch, taking it for the same with נצר netser, chap. xi. i. See Michaelis Epim. in Prælect. xix.

Verse 7. The Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One—(The Redeemer of Israel, His Holy One)] "Perhaps we should read לקדושו lekedosho," SECKER: that is, to His Holy One. The preceding word ends with a ל lamed, which might

To him whom man despiseth—(To him whose person is despised)] "Perhaps we should read נבזה nebazeh." SECKER; or בזוי bezoi, Le Clerc; that is, instead of the active, the passive form, which seems here to be required.

Verse 9. To them that are in darkness—(And to those that are in darkness)] Fifteen MSS. (five ancient) [of Dr. Kennicott's, eleven of De Rossi, and one ancient of my own] and the two old editions of 1486, and 1488, three others, add the conjunction ו vau, at the beginning of this member. Another MS. had it so at first; and two others have a rasure at the place: and it is expressed by the Septuagint, Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate.

Verse 12. Behold, these shall come from afar] "Babylon was far, and east, ממזרח mimzerach; (non sic Vett.) Sinim, Pelusians, to the south." SECKER.

The land of Sinim] Prof. Doederlein thought of Syene, the southern limit of Egypt: but does not abide by it. Michaelis thinks it is right; and promises to give his reasons for so thinking in the second part of his Spicilegium Geographiæ Hebræorum Exteræ. See Biblioth. Oriental. Part xi. p. 176.

[סין sin signifies a bush, and סינים sinim, bushes, woods, &c. Probably this means that the land where several of the lost Jews dwell is a woodland. The ten tribes are gone, no one knows whither. On the slave coast in Africa, some Jewish rites appear among the people; and all the males are circumcised. The whole of this land, as it appears from the coast, may be emphatically called ארץ סינים arets sinnim, the land of bushes, as it is all covered with woods, as far as the eye can reach. Many of the Indians in North America, which is also a woodland, have a great profusion of rites, apparently in their basis Jewish. It is not possible that the descendants of the ten lost tribes are among those in America, or among those in Africa, whom European nations think they have a right to enslave? It is of those lost tribes that the twenty-first verse speaks: "And these, where had they been?"]

Verse 13. Break forth into singing, O mountains—(Ye mountains, burst forth into song)] Three ancient MSS. are without either the י yod, or the conjunction ו vau, before the verb: and so the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate.

[Verse 14. The LORD (JEHOVAH, יהוה) hath forsaken me, and my Lord (אדני adonai,) hath forgotten me—But a multitude of MSS. and several ancient editions read יהוה Jehovah, in both places.]

Verse 16. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands—(Behold, on the palms of my hands have I delineated thee)] This is certainly an allusion to some practice, common among the Jews at that time, of making marks on their hands or arms by punctures on the skin, with some sort of sign or representation of the city or temple, to show their affection and zeal for it. They had a method of making such punctures indelible by fire, or by staining. See note on chap. xliv. 5. It is well known, that the pilgrims at the holy sepulchre get themselves marked in this manner with what are called the ensigns of Jerusalem. Maundrell, p. 75., where he tells us how it is performed: and this art is practised by travelling Jews all over the world at this day.

Verse 17. Thy children shall make haste—(They, that destroyed thee, shall soon become thy builders)] "Auctor

19 For thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction, [c] shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants, and they that swallowed thee up shall be far away.

20 [d] The children which thou shalt have, [e] after thou hast lost the other, shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me: give place to me that I may dwell.

21 Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? and who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?

Shall go forth of thee—(Shall become thine offspring)] ממך יצאו mimec yetseu, shall proceed, spring, issue, from thee; as thy children. The phrase is frequently used in this sense: see chap. xi. 1. Micah v. 2. Nahum i. 11. The accession of the Gentiles to the church of God is considered as an addition made to the number of the family and children of Sion: see ver. 21, 22. and chap. lx. 4. The common rendering, "shall go forth of thee, or depart from thee," is very flat, after their zeal had been expressed by "shall become thy builders:" and as the opposition is kept up in one part of the sentence, one has reason to expect it in the other, which should be parallel to it.

Verse 18. Bind them on thee as a bride doeth—(Bind them about thee, as a bride her jewels)] The end of the sentence is manifestly imperfect. Does a bride bind her children, or her new subjects, about her? Sion clothes herself with her children, as a bride clothes herself,—with what? some other thing certainly. The Septuagint help us out in this difficulty, and supply the lost word: ὡς κοσμον νυμφη· as a bride her ornaments. ככליה כלה kekeliyah kelah, or ככלה כליה kekillah keleyah. The great similitude of the two words has occasioned the omission of one of them. See chap. lxi. 10.

Verse 21. These, where had they been—(These then, where were they)] The conjunction is added before אלה elleh, that is, ואלה ve-elleh, in thirty-two MSS. (nine ancient) [of Klnnicott's, and fifty-four of De Rossi's] and so the Septuagint, Chaldee, and Vulgate. See on ver. 12.

[Verse 22. Thus saith the Lord GOD—אדני יהוה adonai yehovah. Adonai is wanting in one MS. in the Alexandrine copy of the Septuagint, and in the Arabic.]

Verse 23. With their face toward the earth—(With their faces to the earth)] It is well known, that expressions of submission, homage, and reverence, always have been, and are still, carried to a great degree of extravagance in the eastern countries. When Joseph's brethren were introduced to him, "they bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth," Gen. xlii. 6. The kings of Persia never admitted any one to their presence without exacting this act of adoration; for that was the proper term for it. "Necesse est, says the Persian courtier to Conon, si in conspectum veneris, venerari te regem; quod προσκυνειν illi vocant. ["It is necessary, if thou shouldst come into sight, to venerate thee as king; which they call worshipping."] NEPOS in Conone. Alexander intoxicated with success, affected this piece of oriental pride: Itaque more Persarum Macedonas venerabundos ipsum salutare, prosternentes humi corpora. ["The Macedonians, after the manner of the Persians, saluted their monarch with the ceremony of prostration."] CURTIUS, lib. viii. The insolence of eastern monarchs to conquered princes, and the submission of the latter, is astonishing. Mr. Harmer, Observ. ii. 43. gives the following instance of it from D'Herbelot: "This prince threw himself one day on the ground, and kissed the prints that his victorious enemy's horse had made there; reciting some verses in Persian, which he had composed, to this effect:—

'The mark that the foot of your horse has left upon the dust, serves me now for a crown.

'The ring which I wear as the badge of my slavery, is become my richest ornament.

'While I shall have the happiness to kiss the dust of your feet, I shall think that fortune favours me with its tenderest caresses, and its sweetest kisses.'"

These expressions therefore of the prophet are only general poetical images, taken from the manners of the country, to denote great respect and reverence: and such splendid poetical images, which frequently occur in the poetical writings, were intended only as general amplifications of the subject, not as predictions to be understood and fulfilled precisely according to the letter. [For the different kinds of adoration in the East, see the Note on chap. xlv. 17.]

Verse 24. Shall the prey be taken from the mighty—(Shall the prey seized by the terrible be rescued)] For צדיק tsadik, read עריץ âritz. A palpable mistake, like that in chap. xlii. 19. The correction is self-evident from the very terms of the sentence; from the necessity of the strict correspondence in the expressions between the question and the answer made to it;—and it is apparent to the blindest and most prejudiced eye. However, if authority is also necessary, there is that of the Syriac and Vulgate for it; who plainly read עריץ âritz, in ver. 24. as well as in ver. 25., rendering it in the former place by the same word as in the latter.

[These two last verses contain a glorious promise of deliverance to the persecuted church of Christ from the terrible one, Satan, and all his representatives and vicegerents,—persecuting antichristian rulers. They shall at last cease from destroying the church of God, and destroy one another.]

CHAPTER L.

In this Chapter God vindicates His dealings with His people, whose alienation is owing to themselves, 1. And, by allusions to the temporal deliverances connected with the drying up of the Red Sea and the Euphrates, asserts His power to save, 2, 3; namely, by the obedience and sufferings of Messiah, 4—6; who was at length to prove victorious over all His enemies, 7—9. The two last verses exhort to faith and trust in God in the most disconsolate circumstances; with a denunciation of vengeance on those who should trust to their own devices, 10, 11.

NOTES ON CHAP. L.

[Verse 1. Thus saith the LORD—This Chapter has been understood of the prophet himself: but it certainly speaks more clearly about Jesus of Nazareth than of Isaiah, the son of Amos.]

Where is the bill—(Where is this bill)] Husbands, through moroseness or levity of temper, often sent bills of divorcement to their wives on slight occasions, as they were permitted to do by the law of Moses, Deut. xxiv. 1. And fathers, being oppressed with debt, often sold their children, which they might do, for a time, till the year of release, Exod. xxi. 7. That this was frequently practised appears from many passages of Scripture; and that the persons and the liberty of the children were answerable for the debts of the father. The widow, 2 Kings iv. 1. complains, "that the creditor is come to take unto him her two sons to be bondmen." And in the parable, Matt. xviii. 25. "the lord, forasmuch as his servant had not to pay, commands him to be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made." Sir John Chardin's MS. note on this place of Isaiah is as follows:—En Orient on paye ses dettes avec ses esclaves, car ils sont des principaux meubles; et en plusieurs lieux on les paye aussi de ses enfans. ["In the East they pay their debts by giving up their slaves, for these are their chief property of a disposable kind; and in many places they give their children to their creditors."] But this, saith God, cannot be my case: I am not governed by any such motives; neither am I urged by any such necessity. Your captivity therefore and your afflictions are to be imputed to yourselves, and to your own folly and wickedness.

Verse 2. Their fish stinketh—(Their fish is dried up)] For תבאש tibaosh, stinketh, read תיבש tibesh, is dried up: so it stands in the Bodl. MS.; and it is confirmed by the Septuagint, ξηραν θησονται, they shall be dried up.

Verse 5. Neither turned away back—(Neither did I withdraw myself backward)] Eleven MSS. and the oldest Edition prefix the conjunction ו vau; and so also the Septuagint and Syriac.

Verse 6. And my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair] The greatest indignity that could possibly be offered. See the Note on chap. vii. 20.

I hid not my face from shame and spitting.] Another instance of the utmost contempt and detestation. It was ordered by the law of Moses as a severe punishment, carrying with it a lasting disgrace, Deut. xxv. 9. Among the Medes it was highly offensive to spit in any one's presence, Herod. i. 99.; and so likewise among the Persians, Xenophon, Cyrop. Lib. i. p. 18.

"They abhor me; they flee far from me;
They forbear not to spit in my face."

Job. xxx. 10.

"And JEHOVAH said unto Moses, If her father had but spit in her face, should she not be ashamed seven days?" Numb. xii. 14. On which place Sir John Chardin remarks, that "spitting before any one, or spitting upon the ground in speaking of any one's actions, is through the East an expression of extreme detestation." Harmer's Observ. ii. 509. See also, of the same notions of the Arabs in this respect, Niebuhr, Description de l'Arabie, p. 26. It so evidently appears, that in those countries spitting has ever been an expression of the utmost detestation, that the learned doubt, whether in the passages of Scripture above quoted any thing more is meant than spitting (not in the face, which perhaps the words do not necessarily imply,) but only in the presence of the person affronted. But in this place it certainly means spitting in the face: so it is understood in St. Luke, where our Lord plainly refers to this prophecy:—"All things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of Man shall be accomplished; for He shall be delivered to the Gentiles, and shall be mocked and spitefully entreated, and spitted on, εμπτυσθησεται," xviii. 31, 32. which was in fact fulfilled; και ηρξαντο τινες εμπτυειν αυτῳ, and some began to spit on him, Mark xiv. 65.; xv. 19. If spitting in a person's presence was such an indignity,—how much more spitting in his face?

9 Behold, the Lord God will help me; who is he that shall condemn me? [d] lo, they all shall wax old as a garment; [e] the moth shall eat them up.

Verse 7. Therefore have I set my face like a flint] The prophet Ezekiel (chap. iii. 8, 9.) has expressed this with great force, in his bold and vehement manner:—

"Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces,
And thy forehead strong against their foreheads:
As an adamant, harder than a rock, have I made thy forehead;
Fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks,
Though they be a rebellious house."

Verse 8. Who will contend with me] The Bodleian MS. and another add the word הוא hu; מי הוא יריב mi hu yarib, as in the like phrase in the next verse: in the very same phrase, Job xiii. 19. and so likewise in many other places, Job xvii. 3.; xli. 1. Sometimes, on the like occasions, it is מי זה mi zeh, and מי הוא זה mi hu zeh, Who is this one? The word has been probably lost out of the present text; and the reading of the MSS. above mentioned seems to be genuine.

[Verse 10. Who is among you that feareth the Lord—I believe this passage has been generally, if not dangerously, misunderstood. It has been quoted, and preached upon, to prove that "a man might conscientiously fear God, and be obedient to the words of the Law and the Prophets; obey the voice of His servant,—of Jesus Christ Himself,—that is, be sincerely and regularly obedient to the moral law and the commands of our blessed Lord,—and yet walk in darkness and have no light,—no sense of God's approbation, and no evidence of the safety of his state." This is utterly impossible: for Jesus hath said, He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. If there be some religious persons who, under the influence of morbid melancholy, are continually writing bitter things against themselves, the word of God should not be bent down to their state. There are other modes of spiritual and scriptural comfort.—But does not the Text speak of such a case? And are not the words precise in reference to it? I think not: and Bishop Lowth's translation has set the whole in the clearest light,—though he does not appear to have been apprehensive that the bad use I mention had been made of the Text as it stands in our common Version. The Text contains two questions,—to each of which a particular answer is given:—

Q. 1. "Who is there among you that feareth Jehovah?
Ans. Let him hearken unto the voice of his servant.
Q. 2. Who that walketh in darkness and hath no light?
Ans. Let him trust in the name of Jehovah;
And lean himself (prop himself) upon his God."

Now, a man awakened to a sense of his sin and misery, may have a dread of Jehovah, and tremble at his word:—and what should such a person do? Why, he should hear what God's Servant saith,—Come unto me, all ye who labour and are heavy laden; and I will give you rest. There may be a sincere penitent, walking in darkness, having no light of salvation,—for this is the case of all when they first begin to turn to God. What should such do? They should trust, believe on the Lord Jesus who died for them; and lean upon His all-sufficient merits for the light of salvation which God has promised. Thus acting, they will soon have a sure trust and confidence that God for Christ's sake has forgiven them their sin; and thus they shall have the light of life.]

Verse 10. That obeyeth the voice of his servant—(Let him hearken unto the voice of his servant)] For שמע shomeâ, pointed as the participle, the Septuagint and Syriac read ישמע yishmâ, future or imperative. This gives a much more elegant turn and distribution to the sentence.

Verse 11. Ye that kindle a fire] The fire of their own kindling, by the light of which they walk with security and satisfaction, is an image designed to express, in general, human devices and mere worldly policy, exclusive of faith and trust in God; which, though they flatter them for a while with pleasing expectations and some appearance of success, shall in the end turn to the confusion of the authors. Or, more particularly, as Vitringa explains it, it may mean the designs of the turbulent and factious Jews in the times succeeding those of Christ; who, in pursuit of their own desperate schemes, stirred up the war against the Romans, and kindled a fire which consumed their city and nation.

That compass yourselves about with sparks—(Who heap the fuel round about)] "מגוקלי megozeli, accendentes, Syr. forte legerunt [pro מאזרי mazeri] מאירי mairi; nam sequitur אור aōr." Secker. Lud. Capellus, in his critical notes on this place, thinks it should be מעזרי mâzeri, from the Septuagint, κατισχυοντες.

[There are others who are widely different from those already described. Without faith, repentance, or a holy life, they are bold in their professed confidence in God,—presumptive in their trust in the mercy of God: and while destitute of all preparation for, and right to, the kingdom of heaven, would think it criminal to doubt of their final salvation! Living in this way, what can they have at the hand of God but an endless bed of sorrow! Ye shall lie down in sorrow.

But there is a general sense, and accordant to the design of the prophecy, in which these words may be understood and paraphrased:—Behold, all ye that kindle a fire,—provoke war and contention; compass yourselves about with sparks,—stirring up seditions and rebellions. Walk in the light of your fire;—go on in your lust of power and restless ambition. Ye shall lie down in sorrow;—it will turn to your own perdition. See the Targum. This seems to refer to the restless spirit of the Jews; always stirring up confusion and strife; rebelling against, and provoking the Romans, till at last their city was taken, their temple burnt to the ground, and upwards of a million of themselves destroyed, and the rest led into captivity!]

CHAPTER LI.

The Prophet exhorts the children of Abraham to trust in the Lord; and briefly, but beautifully, describes the great blessedness which should be the consequence, 1—3. Then, turning to the Gentiles, encourages them to look for a portion in the same salvation, 4, 5; the everlasting duration of which is majestically described, 6. And as it is everlasting, so is it sure to the righteous, notwithstanding all the machinations of their enemies, 7, 8. The faithful, then, with exultation and joy, lift up their voices, reminding God of His woundrous works of old, which encourage them to look now for the like glorious accomplishment of these promises, 9—11. In answer to this the Divinity is introduced comforting them under their trials, and telling them that the Deliverer was already on His way to save and to establish them, 12—16. On this the Prophet turns to Jerusalem to comfort and congratulate her on so joyful a prospect. She is represented, by a bold image, as a person lying in the streets, under the intoxicating effects of the cup of the Divine wrath, without a single person from among her own people appointed to give her consolation, and trodden under the feet of her enemies: but, in the time allotted by the Divine Providence, the cup of trembling shall be taken out of her hand, and put into that of her oppressors; and she shall drink it no more again for ever. 17—22.

Verse 4. My people—O my nation—(O ye peoples—O ye nations)] For עמי âmmi, my people, the Bodley MS. and another read עמים âmmim, ye peoples; and for לאומי leumi, my nation, the Bodley MS. and eight others, (two of them ancient,) [and four of De Rossi] read לאמים leumim, ye nations: and so the Syriac in both words. The difference is very material: for in this case the address is made, not to the Jews, but to the Gentiles, as in all reason it ought to be; for this and the two following verses express the call of the Gentiles, the islands, or the distant lands on the coasts of the Mediterranean and other seas. It is also to be observed, that God in no other place calls His people לאמי leumi, my nation. It has been before remarked, that transcribers frequently omitted the final ם mem of nouns plural; and supplied it, for brevity's sake, and sometimes for want of room at the end of a line, by a small stroke thus עמי׳; which mark, being effaced or overlooked, has been the occasion of many mistakes of this kind.

[A law shall proceed from me—The new Law, the Gospel of our Lord Jesus. Kimchi says, "After the war with Gog and Magog the King Messiah will teach the people to walk in the ways of the Lord."]

Verse 5. My righteousness is near] The word צדק tsedek, righteousness, is used in such a great latitude of signification, for justice, truth, faithfulness, goodness, mercy, deliverance, salvation, &c. that it is not easy sometimes to give the precise meaning of it without much circumlocution; it means here the faithful completion of God's promises to deliver His people.

[Verse 6. My salvation shall be for ever.—Aben Ezra says, From this verse divines have learnt the immortality of the soul. Men shall perish as the earth does, because they are formed from it: but they who are filled with the salvation of God shall remain for ever. See Kimchi.]

Verse 11. They shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away] Nineteen MSS. and the two oldest Editions have ישיגו yasigu; and forty-six MSS. [of Kennicott and ten of De Rossi] and the same two Editions, and agreeably to them the Chaldee and Syriac, have ונסו vinasu: and so both words are expressed chap. xxxv. 10., of which place this is a repetition. And from comparing both together, it appears that the ו vau in this place is become by mistake in the present text the final ן nun of the preceding word.

there, because it was here. That it was there, the Septuagint show by rendering המציק ha metsicak, τοῦ θλίβοντος σε, of him that oppressed thee. And so they render this word in both its places in this verse. The Vulgate also has the pronoun in the first instance: furoris ejus qui te tribulabat." Dr. Jubb. The correction seems well founded: I have not conformed the translation to it because it makes little difference in the sense.

Verse 14. The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed—(He marcheth on with speed, who cometh to set free the captive)] Cyrus, if understood of the temporal redemption from the captivity of Babylon; in the spiritual sense, the Messiah.

Verse 16. That I may plant the heavens—(To stretch out the heavens)] In the present Text it is לנטע lenetoâ, "to plant the heavens:" the phrase is certainly very obscure; and in all probability is a mistake for לנטות lenetoth. This latter is the word used in ver. 13. just before, in the very same sentence; and this phrase occurs very frequently in Isaiah, chap. xl. 22.; xlii. 5.; xliv. 24.; xlv. 12.; the former in no other place. It is also very remarkable, that in the Samaritan Text, Numb. xxiv. 6. these two words are twice changed, by mistake, one for the other, in the same verse.

See the Note on Heb. ii. 9.; and see also Bishop Lowth's Note on ver. 21.]

Verse 19. These two things—desolation, and destruction, and the famine, and the sword] That is, desolation by famine, and destruction by the sword; taking the terms alternately: of which form of construction see other examples, De S. Poesi, Heb. Præl. xix. and Prelim. Dissert. p. xxx. The Chaldee paraphrast, not rightly understanding this, has had recourse to the following expedient: "Two afflictions are come upon thee, and when four shall come upon thee, depredation, and destruction, and the famine, and the sword—" Five MSS. have הרעב heraâb, without the conjunction ו vau; and so the Septuagint and Syriac.

By whom shall I comfort thee—(Who shall comfort thee)] A MS., the Septuagint, Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate, have it in the third person, ינחמך yenachmak, which is evidently right.

The bold image of the cup of God's wrath, often employed by the Sacred Writers, (see Note on chap. i. 22.) is no where handled with greater force and sublimity than in this passage of Isaiah, ver. 17—23. Jerusalem is represented in person as staggering under the effects of it, destitute of that assistance which she might expect from her children; not one of them being able to support or to lead her. They, abject and amazed, lie at the head of every street, overwhelmed with the greatness of their distress; like the oryx entangled in a net, in vain struggling to rend it, and extricate himself. This is poetry of the first order, sublimity of the highest proof.

Plato had an idea something like this: "Suppose," says he, "God had given to men a medicating potion inducing fear; so that the more any one should drink of it, so much the more miserable he should find himself at every draught, and become fearful of every thing both present and future; and at last, though the most courageous of men, should be totally possessed by fear: and afterward having slept off the effects of it, should become himself again." De Leg. i. near the end. He pursues at large this hypothesis, applying it to his own purpose, which has no relation to the present subject. Homer places two vessels at the threshold of Jupiter, one of good the other of evil. He gives to some a potion mixed of both, to others from the evil vessel only: these are completely miserable. Iliad. xxiv. 527—533.

Verse 23. Them that afflict thee—(Them who oppress thee)] "The Septuagint, Chaldee, Syriac, and Vulgate, appear to have read מונין monaic, as in chap. xl. 26." SECKER.

Which have said to thy soul, Bow down—(Who say to thee, Bow down thy body)] A very strong and most expressive description of the insolent pride of Eastern conquerors; which though it may seem greatly exaggerated, yet hardly exceeds the strict truth. An example has already been given of it in Note to chap. xlix. 23. I will here add one or two more. "Joshua called for all the men of Israel; and said unto the captains of the men of war that went with him, Come near, put your feet upon the necks of these kings," Josh. x. 24. "Adonibezek said, Threescore and ten kings, having their thumbs and their great toes cut off, gathered their meat under my table: as I have done, so hath God requited me," Judg. i. 7. The emperor Valerianus being through treachery taken prisoner by Sapor king of Persia, was treated by him as the basest and most abject slave: for the Persian monarch commanded the unhappy Roman to bow himself down, and offer him his back, on which he set his foot, in order to mount his chariot or his horse, whenever he had occasion. LACTANTIUS, De Mort. Persec. cap. v. AURELIUS VICTOR. Epitome, cap. xxxii.

CHAPTER LII.

Jerusalem, in manifest allusion to the strong figure employed in the close of the preceding Chapter, is represented as fallen asleep in the dust, and in that helpless state bound by her enemies. The Prophet, with all the ardour natural to one who had such joyful news to communicate, bids her awake, arise, put on her best attire, (holiness to the Lord) and ascend her lofty seat; and then he delivers the message he had in charge, a very consolatory part of which was that "no more should enter into her the uncircumcised and the polluted," 1—6. Awaking from her stupefaction, Jerusalem sees the messenger of such joyful tidings on the eminence from which he spied the coming deliverance. She expresses, in beautiful terms, her joy at the news, repeating with peculiar elegance the words of the crier, 7. The rapturous intelligence that Jehovah was returning to resume His residence on His holy mountain immediately spreads to others on the watch, who all join in the glad acclamation, 8; and, in the ardour of their joy, they call to the very ruins of Jerusalem to sing along with them, because Jehovah maketh bare His holy arm in the sight of all the nations, and all the ends of the earth are about to see the salvation of Israel's God, 9, 10. To complete the deliverance, they are commanded to march in triumph out of Babylon, earnestly exhorted to have nothing to do with any of her abominations, and assured that Jehovah will guide them in all their way, 11, 12. The Prophet then passes to the procuring cause of this great blessedness to the house of Israel in particular, and to the world in general, viz. the humiliation, sufferings, death, burial, resurrection, and ascension, of Jesus Christ; a very celebrated and clear prophecy, which takes up the remainder of this and the whole of the following Chapter.

NOTES ON CHAP. LII.

[Verse 1. There shall no more come unto thee—For יבא yabo, shall come, לבא lebo, to come, is the reading of five of Kennicott's, and two of De Rossi's MSS. This is the better reading, כי לא יוסיף לבא ki lo yosiph lebo, There shall not add to come.

The uncircumcised and the unclean] Christians have turned many passages of the Prophets against the Jews: and it is not to be wondered at, that in support of their obstinate and hopeless cause, they should press a prophecy into their service, and make it speak against the Christians. This Kimchi does in this place; for he says, by the uncircumcised, the Christians are meant;—and by the unclean, the Turks. The Christians are uncircumcised;—and the Turks, though circumcised, and using many ablutions, are unclean in their works.]

Verse 2. Sit down, O Jerusalem—(Ascend thy lofty seat, O Jerusalem)] The literal rendering here is, according to our English translation, "arise, sit;" on which a very learned person remarks: "So the old Versions. But sitting is an expression of mourning in Scripture and the ancients; and doth not well agree with the rising just before." It doth not indeed agree, according to our ideas: but, considered in an oriental light, it is perfectly consistent. The common manner of sitting in the eastern countries is upon the ground, or floor, with the legs crossed. The people of better condition have the floors of their chambers, or divans, covered with carpets for this purpose; and round the chamber broad couches, raised a little above the floor, spread with mattresses handsomely covered, which are called sofas. When sitting is spoken of as a posture of more than ordinary state, it is quite of a different kind; and means sitting on high, on a chair of state or throne; for which a footstool was necessary, both in order that the person might raise himself up to it, and for supporting the legs when he was placed in it. "Chairs," saith Sir John Chardin, "are never used in Persia, but at the coronation of their kings. The king is seated in a chair of gold set with jewels, three feet high.—The chairs which are used by the people in the East are always so high, as to make a footstool necessary. And this proves the propriety of the style of Scripture, which always joins the footstool to the throne." (Isa. lxvi. 1. Psa. cx. 1.) Voyages, tom. ix. p. 85. 12mo. Besides the six steps to Solomon's throne, there was a footstool of gold fastened to the seat, 2 Chron. ix. 18. which would otherwise have been too high for the king to reach, or to sit on conveniently.

When Thetis comes to wait on Vulcan to request armour for her son, she is received with great respect, and seated on a silver-studded throne, a chair of ceremony, with a footstool:

Την μεν επειτα καθεισεν επι θρονου αργυροηλου,

[Verse 4. Thus saith the Lord GOD] ארני יהוה adonai yehovah: but adonai is wanting in twelve of Kennicott's, five of De Rossi's, and two of my own MSS.; and by the Septuagint and Arabic. Some MSS. have יהוה צבאות yehovah tsebaoth, Lord of hosts; and others have יהוה אלהים yehovah elohim, Lord God.]

Verse 5. They that rule over them—(They that are lords over them)] For משלו mashelo, singular, in the text, more than a hundred and twenty MSS. [De Rossi says, codices innumeri, numberless copies,] have משליו maysheleyv, plural, according to the Masoretical correction in the margin: which shows that the Masoretes often superstitiously retained apparent mistakes in the text, even when they had sufficient evidence to authorize the introduction of the true reading.

Make them to howl—(Make their boast of it)] For יהלילו yehilelu, "make them to howl," five MSS. (two ancient,) have יהללו yehalelu, "make their boast;" which is confirmed by the Chaldee paraphrast, who renders it משתבחין mishtabechin. [Ulaloo is not only the cry itself, but also the name of the funeral song of the Irish. The Arabs have a cry very much resembling this.]

Verse 6. Therefore my people shall know] The word לכן lacen, occurring the second time in this verse, seems to be repeated by mistake. It has no force nor emphasis as a repetition; it only embarrasses the construction and the sense. It was not in the copies, from which the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate, were translated: it was not in the copy of the Septuagint from which the Arabic was translated: but in the Aldine and Complutensian Edition δια τουτο is repeated; probably so corrected, in order to make it conformable with the Hebrew text.

I am he that doth speak—(I am he, JEHOVAH, that promised)] For הוא hu, the Bodley MS. and another, have יהוה yehovah; "For I am JEHOVAH that promised:" and another ancient MS. adds יהוה yehovah after הוא hu. The addition of JEHOVAH seems to be right in consequence of what was said in the preceding line, "My people shall know my name."

Verse 7. How beautiful] The watchmen discover afar off, on the mountains, the messenger bringing the expected and much wished for news of the deliverance from the Babylonish captivity. They immediately spread the joyful tidings, ver. 8. and with a loud voice proclaim that JEHOVAH is returning to Sion, to resume His residence on His holy mountain, which for some time He seemed to have deserted. This is the literal sense of the place.

"How beautiful on the mountains are the feet of the joyful messenger," is an expression highly poetical; for, how welcome is his arrival! how agreeable are the tidings which he brings!

Nahum, (chap. i. 15.) who is generally supposed to have lived after Isaiah, has manifestly taken from him this very pleasing image: but the imitation does not equal the beauty of the original:—

"Behold upon the mountain the feet of the joyful messenger,
Of him that announceth peace.
Celebrate, O Judah, thy festivals; perform thy vows:
For no more shall pass through thee the wicked one;
He is utterly cut off."

But it must at the same time be observed that Isaiah's subject is infinitely more interesting, and more sublime, than that of Nahum: the latter denounces the destruction of the capital of the Assyrian empire, the most formidable enemy of Judah; the ideas of the former are in their full extent evangelical; and accordingly St. Paul has, with the utmost propriety, applied this passage to the preaching of the gospel, Rom. x. 15. The joyful tidings here to be proclaimed, "Thy God, O Sion, reigneth," are the same that John the Baptist the messenger of Christ, and that Christ Himself published, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

[From the use made of this by our Lord, and the apostles, we may rest assured that the preachers of the gospel are particularly intended. Mountains are put for the whole land of Judea where the gospel was first preached. There seems to be an allusion to a battle fought, and the messengers coming to announce the victory which was so decisive that a peace was the consequence, and the king's throne established in the land.

There appear to have been two sorts of messengers among the Jews: one sort always employed to bring evil tidings; the other, to bring good. The names also and persons of these different messengers appear to have been well known; so, that at a distance, they could tell from seeing the messenger, what sort of tidings he was bringing. See a case in point, 2 Sam. xviii. 19—27. Ahimaaz and Cushi running to bring tidings of the defeat of Absalom and his rebel army. Ahimaaz is a GOOD man, and bringeth GOOD tidings.]

Verse 8. Thy watchmen lift up the voice—(All thy watchmen lift up their voice)] There is a difficulty in the construction of this place, which, I think, none of the ancient Versions or modern interpreters have cleared up to satisfaction. Rendered word for word it stands thus: "The voice of thy watchmen: they lift up their voice." The sense of the first member, considered as elliptical, is variously supplied by various expositors; by none, as it seems to me, in any way, that is easy and natural. I am persuaded there is a mistake in the present text, and that the true reading is כל צפיך col tsepheyca, all thy watchmen; instead of קול צפיך kol tsepheyca, the voice of thy watchmen. The mistake was easy from the similitude in the sound of the two letters כ caph and ק koph. And in one MS. the ק koph is upon a rasure. This correction perfectly rectifies the sense and the construction.

[They shall see eye to eye—May not this be applied to the prophets and apostles; the one predicting, and the other discovering in the prediction, the truth of the prophecy. The meaning of both Testaments is best understood by bringing them face to face.]

When the Lord shall bring again Zion—(When JEHOVAH returneth to Sion)] So the Chaldee: כד יתיב שכנתיה לציון cad yethib shecenateih letsion, when he shall place the shekinah in Zion. God is considered as having deserted His people during the captivity; and at the restoration, as returning Himself with them to Sion, His former habitation. See Psa. lx. 1. chap. xl. 9. and note.

Verse 9. He hath redeemed Jerusalem—(He hath redeemed Israel)] For the word ירושלם yerushalem, which occurs the second time in this verse, MS. Bodley, and another, read ישראל yishrael. It is upon a rasure in a third; and left unpointed at first, as suspected, in a fourth. It was an easy mistake, by the transcriber's casting his eye on the line above: and the propriety of the correction, both in regard to sense and elegance, is evident.

Verse 11. Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence] The prophet Jeremiah seems to have had his eye on this passage of Isaiah, and to have applied it to a subject directly opposite. It is here addressed by the prophet in the way of encouragement and exhortation to the Jews coming out of Babylon. Jeremiah has given it a different turn, and has thrown it out, as a reproach of the heathen upon the Jews, when they were driven from Jerusalem into captivity:

"Depart; ye are polluted, depart; depart ye, forbear to touch.
Yea, they are fled, they are removed: they shall dwell here no more." Lam. iv. 15.

Of the metrical distribution of these lines, see the Prelim. Dissertation, p. lviii. note.

[Verse 13. My servant shall deal prudently—ישכיל yashkil, shall prosper, or act prosperously.] The subject of Isaiah's prophecy, from the fortieth chapter inclusive, has hitherto been, in general, the deliverance of the people of God. This includes in it three distinct parts; which, however, have a close connexion withone an other: that is, 1. The deliverance of the Jews from the captivity of Babylon; 2. The deliverance of the Gentiles from their miserable state of ignorance and idolatry; and, 3. The deliverance of mankind from the captivity of sin and death. These three subjects are subordinate to one another; and the two latter are shadowed out under the image of the former. They are covered by it as by a veil; which however is transparent, and suffers them to appear through it. Cyrus is expressly named as the immediate agent of God in effecting the first deliverance. A greater person is spoken of as the Agent, who is to effect the two latter deliverances; called the Servant, the Elect of God, in whom His soul delighteth; Israel, in whom God will be glorified. Now these three subjects have a very near relation to one another; for, as the Agent, who was to effect the two latter deliverances, that is, the Messiah, was to be born a Jew, with particular limitations of time, family, and other circumstances; the first deliverance was necessary in the order of providence, and according to the determinate counsel of God, to the accomplishment of the two latter deliverances; and the second deliverance was necessary to the third, or rather, was involved in it, and made an essential part of it. This being the case, Isaiah has not treated the three subjects as quite distinct and separate in a methodical and orderly manner, like a philosopher or a logician, but has taken them in their connective view. He has handled them as a prophet and a poet; he hath allegorized the former, and under the image of it has shadowed out the two latter; he has thrown them all together, has mixed one with another, has passed from this to that with rapid transitions, and has painted the whole with the strongest and boldest imagery. The restoration of the Jews from captivity, the call of the Gentiles, the redemption by Messiah, have hitherto been handled interchangeably and alternately. Babylon has hitherto been kept pretty much in sight; at the same time, that strong intimations of something much greater have frequently been thrown in. But here Babylon is at once dropped; and I think hardly ever comes in sight again: unless perhaps in chap. lv. 12. and lvii. 14. The prophet's views are almost wholly engrossed by the superior part of his subject. He introduces the Messiah as appearing at first in the lowest state of humiliation, which he had just touched upon before, (chap. l. 5. 6.) and obviates the offence, which would be occasioned by it, by declaring the important and necessary cause of it, and foreshowing the glory which should follow it.

This seems to me to be the nature and the true design of this part of Isaiah's prophecies; and this view of them seems to afford the best method of resolving difficulties, in which expositors are frequently engaged, being much divided between what is called the literal and the mystical sense, not very properly; for the mystical or spiritual sense is very often the most literal sense of all.

Abarbanel seems to have had an idea of this kind, as he is quoted by Vitringa on chap. xlix. 1. who thus represents his sentiments: "Censet Abarbanel phrophetam hic transitum facere a liberatione ex exilio Babylonico ad liberationem ex exilio Romano; et, quod hic animadversu dignum est, observat liberationem ex exilio Babylonico esse אות ויראיה oth vereiah, signum et argumentum liberationis futuræ; atque adeo orationem prophetæ de duabus hisce liberationibus in superioribus concionibus sæpe inter se permisceri. Verba ejus: 'Et propterea verba, sive res, in prophetiâ superiore inter se permixtæ occurrunt; modo de liberatione Babylonicâ, modo de liberatione extremâ accipiendæ, ut orationis necessitas exigit.' Nullum hic vitium, nisi quod redemptionem veram et spiritualem a Messiâ vero Jesu adductam, non agnoscat." ["Abarbanel supposes that the prophet here makes a transition from the deliverance from the Babylonish captivity to the deliverance from the Roman captivity; and (which is worthy of particular note) he observes that the deliverance from the Babylonish captivity is a sign and pledge of the future redemption; and that on this account it is we find in the preceding prophecies the circumstances of the two captivities intimately blended together. His words are the following:—'And, therefore, the words, or subjects, in the foregoing prophecy are very much intermixed; in one passage the redemption from the Babylonish captivity being treated of, in another the redemption from the general dispersion, as may be collected from the obvious import of the words.' No fault can be found with the above remark, except that the true and spiritual redemption procured by Jesus the Messiah is not acknowledged."]

Verse 14. As many were astonished at thee—(As many were astonished at him)] For עליך âleica read עליו âlaiv. So the Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate in a MS.; and so likewise two ancient MSS.

[His visage was so marred more than any man—Most interpreters understand this of the indignities offered to our blessed Lord: but Kimchi gives it another turn, and says,—"It means the Jewish people who are considered by most nations as having an appearance different from all the people of the earth." Poor Jews! they have, in general, a very disagreeable look, partly affected, and partly through neglect of neatness and cleanliness. Most Christians think they carry the impress of their reprobation on every feature of their face. However this may be, it should never be forgotten, that the greatest men that ever flourished as kings, judges, magistrates, lawgivers, heroes, and poets, were of Jewish extraction. Isaiah was a Jew; so was Paul, and so was Jesus of Nazareth.]

Verse 15. So shall he sprinkle many nations]. I retain the common rendering, though I am by no means satisfied with it. "יזה yazzeh, frequent in the law, means only to sprinkle: but the water sprinkled is the accusative case: the thing, on which, has על âl or אל el. Θαυμασονται, ὁ, makes the best apodosis. ינהג yenahag, would do. ינהרו yenaharo, is used ii. 2. Jer. xxxi. 12. chap. li. 14. but is unlike. Kings shall shut, &c. is good: but seems to want a first part." Secker. Munster translates it, faciet loqui (de se;) and in his note thus explains it: יזה yazzeh, proprie significat spargere et stillas disseminare; hic vero capitur pro loqui, et verbum disseminare. ["יזה yazzeh, properly signifies to sprinkle, and to scatter about drops: but it here means to speak, and to disseminate the word."] This is pretty much as the Rabbins, Kimchi and Salomo ben Melec, explain it, referring to the expression of "dropping the word." But the same objection lies to this as to the common rendering; it ought to be יזה (דבר) על גוים yezzeh (debar) âl goyim. Bishop Chandler, Defence, p. 148. says, "that to sprinkle, is used for to surprise and astonish, as people are that have much water thrown upon them. And this sense is followed by the Septuagint." This is ingenious, but rather too refined. Dr. Durell conjectures, that the true reading may be יחזו yechezzu, they shall regard, which comes near to the Θαυμασονται of the Septuagint, who seems to give the best sense of any to the place.

"I find in my papers the same conjecture, which Dr. Durell made from Θαυμασονται in the Septuagint. And it may be added, that חזה chazah, is used to express looking on any thing with admiration," Psa. xi. 7. and xvii. 15. and xxvii. 4. and lxiii. 2. Cant. vi. 13. It is particularly applied to 'looking on God,' Exod. xxiv. 11. and Job xix. 26. Gisbert Cuper, in Observ. lib. ii. 1., though treating on another subject, has some observations which show how nearly ὁραω and θαυμαζω are allied, which (with the peculiar sense of the verb חזה chazeh, above noted) add to the probability of Θαυμασονται being the version of יחזו yechazo, in the text: ὁι δε νυ λαοι Παντες εϛ αυτον ὁρωσι. Hesiod. id est, cum veneratione quâdam admirantur. 'Hinc ὁραω et θαυμαζω junxit Themistius Or. i. Ειτα παυσονται ὁι ανθρωποι προϛ σε μονον ὁρωντες, και σε μονον θαυμαζοντες. Theophrastus in Charact. c. 3. Ενθυμη ὡϛ αποβλεψουσιν εἰϛ σε ὁι ανθρωποι. Hence the rendering of this verse seems to be;

> "So many nations shall look on him with admiration; > Kings shall stop their mouths—" Dr. Jubb.

[Does not sprinkling the nations, refer to the conversion and baptism of the Gentiles?

Kings shall shut their mouths at him—His gospel shall so prevail, that all opposition shall be finally overcome; and kings and potentates shall be overwhelmed with confusion, and become speechless before the doctrines of His truth. When they hear these declared, they shall attentively consider them; and their conviction of their truth shall be the consequence.

For that which had not been told them—The mystery of the gospel so long concealed. See Rom. xv. 21.; xvi. 25.

Shall they see—With the eyes of their faith: God enlightening both organ and object.

And that which they had not heard—The redemption of the world by Jesus Christ—the conversion of the Gentiles, and making them one flock with the converted Jews. Trapp.]

CHAPTER LIII.

This Chapter foretels the sufferings of the Messiah, the End for which he was to die, and the advantages resulting to mankind from that illustrious event. It begins with a complaint of the infidelity of the Jews, 1. The offence they took at His mean and humble appearance, 2. And the contempt with which they treated Him, 3. The Prophet then shows that Messiah was to suffer for sins not his own; but that our iniquities were laid on Him, and the punishment of them exacted of Him, which is the meritorious cause of our obtaining pardon and salvation, 4—6. He shows the meekness and placid submission with which He suffered a violent and unjust death, with the circumstances of His dying with the wicked, and being buried with the great, 7—9; and that, in consequence of His atonement, death, resurrection, and intercession, He should procure pardon and salvation to the multitudes, ensure increasing prosperity to His church, and ultimately triumph over all his foes, 10, 11. This Chapter contains a beautiful summary of the most peculiar and distinguishing doctrines of Christianity.

NOTES ON CHAP. LIII.

[That this Chapter speaks of none but JESUS, must be evident to every unprejudiced reader who has ever heard the history of His sufferings and death. The Jews have endeavoured to apply it to their sufferings in captivity: but, alas! for their cause, they can make nothing out in this way. Allowing that it belongs to our blessed Lord, and the best men and the best scholars agree in this, then who can read verses 4, 5, 6, 8, 10. without being convinced that His death was a vicarious sacrifice for the sins of mankind? On the first and second verses of this Chapter, I have received the following remarks from an unknown hand.

"Verse 1. Who hath believed our report—The report of the prophets, of John the Baptist, and Christ's own report of Himself. The Jews did not receive the report, and for this reason, He was not manifested to them as the promised Messiah. 'He came unto his own, but His own received Him not.' Before the FATHER he grew up as a tender plant: but to the JEWS, He was as a root out of a dry ground. He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see Him there is no beauty that we should desire Him.

"Verse 2. For he shall grow up—Supposes something to have preceded; as it might be asked, what or who shall 'grow up before him,' &c. As the translation now stands no correct answer can be given to this question. The translation then is wrong, the connexion broken, and the sense obscured. זרוע zeroâ, translated the arm, from the root זרע zarâ. 1. To sow, or plant; also seed, &c. 2. The limb which reaches from the shoulder to the hand called the arm; or more properly beginning at the shoulder, and ending at the elbow. The translator has given the wrong sense of the word. It would be very improper to say that the arm of the Lord should grow up before him: but, by taking the word in its former sense, the connexion and metaphor would be restored, and the true sense given to the text. זרע zerâ, signifies not only the seed of herbs, but also children, offspring, or posterity. The same word we find Gen. iii. 15. where CHRIST is the Seed promised. See also Gen. xxii. 17, 18. xxvi. 4. xxviii. 14. Hence the SEED of the woman, the SEED promised to the patriarchs, is according to Isaiah, the Seed of the Lord, the Child born, and the Son given; and, according to St. John, 'the Son of God, the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.' זרוע zeroâ, then in this place should be understood to mean JESUS CHRIST, and Him alone. To speak here of the manifestation of the arm or power of God would be irregular: but to suppose the text to speak of the manifestation of Jesus Christ, would be very proper; as the whole of the Chapter is written concerning Him; particularly His humiliation and sufferings, and the reception He should meet with from the Jewish nation.

"The first verse of this Chapter is quoted, John xii. 38. and the former part of the same verse, Rom. x. 16. But no objection of importance can be brought forward from either of these quotations against the above explanation, as they are quoted to show the unbelief of the Jews in not receiving Christ as the promised Messiah."]

He hath no form nor comeliness—(He hath no form nor any beauty)] Ουκ ειδος αυτῳ, ουδε αξιωμα, ινα ειδωμεν αυτον· ουδε θεαμα, ινα επιθυμωμεν αυτου. These fiery rays, which should have fallen on all mankind, diverged from Divine justice to the east, west, north, and south, were deflected from them, and converged in Him. So the Lord hath caused to meet in Him the punishment due to the iniquities of ALL.]

Verse 8. And who shall declare his generation—(And his manner of life who would declare)] My learned friend Dr. Kennicott has communicated to me the following passages from the Mishna, and the Gemara of Babylon, as leading to a satisfactory explication of this difficult place. It is said in the former, that before any one was punished for a capital crime, proclamation was made before the prisoner by the public crier, in these words:—כל מי שיודע לו זכות יבא וילמד עליו col mi shiodâ lo zacoth yabo vayilmad âlaiv, whosoever knows any thing of this man's innocence, let him come and declare it. Tract. Sanhedrim. Surenhus. Part iv. p. 233. On which passage the Gemara of Babylon adds, that "before the death of Jesus this proclamation was made for forty days: but no defence could be found." On which words Lardner observes, "It is truly surprising to see such falsities, contrary to well-known facts." Testimonies, Vol. I. p. 198. The report is certainly false: but this false report is founded on the supposition that there was such a custom, and so far confirms the account above given from the Mishna. The Mishna was composed in the middle of the second century according to Prideaux; Lardner ascribes it to the year of Christ 180.

Casaubon has a quotation from Maimonides which further confirms this account:—Exercitat. in Baronii Annales, Art. lxxvi. Ann. 34. Num. 119. "Auctor est Maimonides in Perek xiii. ejus libri ex opere Jad, solitum fieri, ut cum Reus, sententiam mortis passus, a loco judicii exibat ducendus ad supplicium, præcederet ipsum הכרוז κηρυξ, præco; et hæc verba diceret: Ille exit occidendus morte illa, quia transgressus est transgressione illâ, in loco illo, tempore illo, et sunt ejus rei testes ille et ille. Qui noverit aliquid ad ejus innocentiam probandam, veniat, et loquatur pro eo." ["It was customary when sentence of death was passed upon a criminal, and he was led out from the seat of judgment to the place of punishment, a crier went before, and spoke as follows:—'This man is going out to suffer death by —— because he has transgressed by —— such a transgression, in such a place—in such a time;—and the witnesses against him are ——. He who may know any thing relative to his innocence, let him come and speak in his behalf.'"

Now it is plain from the history of the four Evangelists that in the trial and condemnation of Jesus no such rule was observed; (though, according to the account of the Mishna, it must have been in practice at that time,) no proclamation was made for any person to bear witness to the innocence and character of Jesus; nor did any one voluntarily step forth to give his attestation to it. And our Saviour seems to refer to such a custom, and to claim the benefit of it, by His answer to the high priest, when he asked Him of His disciples and of His doctrine: "I spoke openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing. Why askest thou me? ask them who heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said." John xviii. 20, 21. This, therefore, was one remarkable instance of hardship and injustice, among others predicted by the prophet, which our Saviour underwent in His trial and sufferings.

St. Paul likewise, in similar circumstances, standing before the judgment seat of Festus, seems to complain of the same unjust treatment; that no one was called, or would appear, to vindicate his character. "My manner of life (την βιωσιν μου, דורי dori, my generation) from my youth, which was at the first among my own nation at Jerusalem, know all the Jews, who knew me from the beginning, if they would testify; that after the straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee," Acts xxvi. 4, 5.

דור dor signifies age, duration, the time, which one man or many together, pass in this world;—in this place, the course, tenor, or manner of life. The verb דור dor signifies, according to Castell, ordinatam vitam sive ætatem egit, ordinavit, ordine constituit. "He passed a certain course of life, he ordained," &c. In Arabic, curavit, administravit, "he took care of, administered to."

Was he stricken—(He was smitten to death)] The Septuagint read למות lemot, εις θανατον, to death. And so the Coptic and Sahidic Versions, from Septuagint: MSS. St. Germain de Prez.

"Origen, (Contra Celsum, Lib. i. p. 370, edit. 1733.) after having quoted at large this prophecy concerning the Messiah, tells us, that having once made use of this passage in a dispute against some that were accounted wise among the Jews, one of them replied, that the words did not mean one man, but one people, the Jews, who were smitten of God and dispersed among the Gentiles for their conversion: that he then urged many parts of this prophecy to show the absurdity of this interpretation, and that he seemed to press them the hardest by this sentence, απο των ανομιων του λαου μου ηχθη εις θανατον, for the iniquity of my people was he smitten to death. Now as Origen, the author of the Hexapla, must have understood Hebrew, we cannot suppose that he would have urged this last quotation as so decisive if the Greek version had not agreed here with the Hebrew Text; nor that these wise Jews would have been at all distressed by this quotation, unless their Hebrew text had read agreeably to εις θανατον, to death, on which the argument principally depended: for, by quoting it immediately, they would have triumphed over him, and reprobated his Greek version. This, whenever they could do it, was their constant practice in their disputes with the Christians. Jerom, in his Preface to the Psalms, says, Nuper cum Hebræo disputans, quædam pro Domino Salvatore de Psalmis testimonia protulisti: volensque ille te illudere, per sermones fere singulos asserebat, non ita haberi in Hebræo, ut tu de LXX. opponebas. ["Lately disputing with a Hebrew,—thou advancedst certain passages out of the Psalms which bear testimony to the Lord the Saviour: but he, to elude thy reasoning asserted that almost all thy quotations have an import in the Hebrew Text different from what they have in the Greek."] And Origen himself, who laboriously compared the Hebrew text with the Septuagint, has recorded the necessity of arguing with the Jews from such passages only as were in the Septuagint agreeable to the Hebrew:—ινα προς Ιουδαιους διαλεγομενοι μη προφερωμεν αυτοι τα μη κειμενα εν τοις αντιγραφοις αυτων, και ινα συγχρησωμεθα τοις φερομενοις παρ' εκεινοις. See Epist. ad African. p. 15, 17. Wherefore as Origen had carefully compared the Greek version of the Septuagint with the Hebrew Text, and speaks of the contempt with which the Jews treated all appeals to the Greek Version where it differed from their Hebrew Text; and as he puzzled and confounded the learned Jews by urging upon them the reading εις θανατον, unto death, in this place; it seems almost impossible not to conclude both from Origen's argument and the silence of his Jewish adversaries, that the Hebrew Text at that time actually had למות lemot, to death, agreeably to the version of the Septuagint." Dr. Kennicott.

Verse 9. With the rich in his death—(With the rich man was his tomb)] [It may be necessary to introduce Bishop Lowth's translation of this verse before we come to his very satisfactory criticisms:—

> And his grave was appointed with the wicked;
> But with the rich man was his tomb.]

Among the various opinions which have been given on this passage, I have no doubt in giving my assent to that which makes the ב beth in במותיו bemotaiv radical, and renders it excelsa sua. This is mentioned by Aben Ezra as received by some in his time; and has been long since approved by Sheindler, Drusius, and many other learned Christian interpreters.

The most simple tombs or monuments of old consisted of hillocks of earth heaped up over the grave; of which we have numerous examples in our own country, generally allowed to be of very high antiquity. The Romans called a monument of this sort very properly tumulus; and the Hebrews as properly במות bamoth, high place, for that is the form of the noun in the singular number; and sixteen MSS. and the two oldest Editions express the word fully in this place, במותיו bamotaiv. Tumulus et collem et sepul- chrum fuisse significat. Potest enim tumulus sine sepulchro interpretatione collis interdum accipi. Nam et terræ congestio super ossa tumulus dicitur. ["Tumulus signifies a sepulchre with a hillock of earth raised over it. The word is sometimes restrained to the bank of earth; for the heaping up of the earth over the bones is named the tumulus."] Servius, Æn. iii. 22. And to make the tumulus still more elevated and conspicuous, a pillar or some other ornament was often erected upon it:—

Τυμβον χευαντες, και επι στηλην ερυσαντες;
Πηξαμεν ακροτατῳ τυμβῳ ευηρες ερετμον.
Odyss. xii. 14.

"A rising tomb, the silent dead to grace,
Fast by the roarings of the main we place;
The rising tomb a lofty column bore,
And high above it rose the tapering oar." POPE.

The tomb therefore might with great propriety be called the high place. The Hebrews might also call such a tomb במות bamoth, from the situation; for they generally chose to erect them on eminences. The sepulchre of Joseph of Arimathea, in which the body of Christ was laid, was upon a hill, Mount Calvary. See chap. xxii. 16., and the Note there.

"It should be observed that the word במותיו bamotaiv is not formed from במות bamoth, the plural of במה bamah, the feminine noun; but from במותים bamotim, the plural of a masculine noun, במות bamoth. This is noted because these two nouns have been negligently confounded with one another, and absurdly reduced to one by very learned men. So Buxtorf, Lex. in voc. במה bamah, represents, במותי bamotey, though plainly without any pronoun suffixed, as it governs the word ארץ arets following it, as only another form of במות bamoth: whereas the truth is, that במות bamoth and במותים bamotim are different words, and have through the whole Bible very different significations; במה bamah, whether occurring in the singular or plural number, always signifying 'a place, or places, of worship;' and במותים bamotim always signifying 'heights.' Thus in Deut. xxxii. 13., Isa. lviii. 14., Amos iv. 13., and Mic. i. 3., במותי ארץ bamotey arets signifies 'the heights of the earth.' Isa. xiv. 14. במותי עב bamotey âb, 'the heights of the clouds;' and in Job ix. 8., במותי ים bamotey yam, 'the heights of the sea,' i. e. the high waves of the sea, as Virgil calls a wave præruptus aquæ mons, ['a broken mountain of water.'] These being all the places where this word occurs without a suffix, the sense of it seems nearly determined by them. It occurs in other instances with a pronoun suffixed, which confirm this signification. Unluckily, our English Bible has not distinguished the feminine noun במה bamah, from the masculine singular noun במות bamoth; and has consequently always given the signification of the latter to the former, always rendering it 'a high place:' whereas the true sense of the word appears plainly to be, in the very numerous passages in which it occurs, 'a place of worship,' or, 'a sacred court,' or 'a sacred inclosure;' whether appropriated to the worship of idols, or to that of the true God; for it is used of both, passim. Now as the Jewish graves are shown from 2 Chron. xxxii. 33. and Isa. xxii. 16. to have been in high situations, to which may be added the custom of another Eastern nation from Osbeck's Travels, who says, vol. i. p. 339., 'The Chinese graves are made on the side of hills:' 'his heights' becomes a very easy metaphor to express 'his sepulchre.'" Dr. JUBB.

The exact completion of this prophecy will be fully shown by adding here the several circumstances of the burial of Jesus, collected from the accounts of the Evangelists:—

"There was a rich man of Arimathea, named Joseph, a member of the Sanhedrim, and of a respectable character, who had not consented to their counsel and act: he went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus; and he laid it in his own new tomb, which had been hewn out of the rock, near to the place where Jesus was crucified; having first wound it in fine linen with spices, as the manner of the Jews was to bury the rich and great."

[It has been supposed that קברו kibero, his grave, and במתיו bemotaiv, in his death, may have been transposed; as also the prefix ב be originally placed before רשעים reshâyim, the wicked. Thus—

ויתן ברשעים את מתיו
metiv et be-reshâyim vayitten ואת עשיר קברו
kibro âsir ve-et

Yea, his death was appointed among the wicked;
And with a rich man, his tomb.

By these alterations it is supposed the Text would be freed from all embarrassment. But see the preceding notes of Bishop Lowth, and the various readings of De Rossi, in loc.]

inelegant in this place, the Vulgate reads בהלי beheli, in infirmitate, "with infirmity."

When thou shalt make his soul—(If his soul shall make)] For תשים tashim, a MS. has תשם tasem, which may be taken passively. "If his soul shall be made—" agreeably to some copies of the Septuagint, which have δωται. So likewise the Syriac.

[When thou shalt make his soul an offering.—The word נפש nephesh, soul, is frequently used in Hebrew, to signify life. Throughout the New Testament, the salvation of men is uniformly attributed to the death of Christ.

He shall see his seed—True converts—genuine Christians.

He shall prolong his days—or this spiritual progeny shall prolong their days, i. e. Christianity shall endure to the end of time.

And the pleasure of the LORD—To have all men saved, and brought to the knowledge of the truth.

Shall prosper in his hand—Shall go on in a state of progressive prosperity; and so completely has this been thus far accomplished, that every succeeding century has witnessed more Christianity in the world than the preceding, or any former one.]

Verse 11. Shall be satisfied—(And be satisfied)] The Septuagint, Vulgate, Syriac, and a MS., add the conjunction to the verb; וישבע vayisbâ.

Shall my righteous servant justify—(Shall my servant justify)] Three MSS. (two of them ancient,) omit the word צדיק tsadik; it seems to be only an imperfect repetition, by mistake, of the preceding word. It makes a solecism in this place: for according to the constant usage of the Hebrew language, the adjective, in a phrase of this kind, ought to follow the substantive; and צדיק עבדי tsadik âbdi, in Hebrew, would be as absurd as "shall my servant righteous justify," in English. Add to this, that it makes the hemistich too long.

[Verse 12. He bare the sin of many] רבים rabbim, the multitudes—the many that were made sinners by the offences of one; i. e. the whole human race: for all have sinned—all have fallen; and for all that have sinned, and for all that have fallen, Jesus Christ died. The רבים rabbim, of the Prophet answers to the οι πολλοι of the apostle, Rom. v. 15, 19. As the πολλοι of the apostle means all that have sinned: so the רבים rabbim of the Prophet means, those for whom Christ died; i. e. all that have sinned.]

And made intercession for the transgressors] For יפגיע yaphgiâ, in the future, a MS. has הפגיע hiphgiâ, preterit; rather better, as agreeable with the other verbs immediately preceding in the sentence.

[He made intercession for the transgressors—was literally fulfilled at His death—Father, forgive them; they know not what they do! Luke xxiii. 34. And to make intercession for transgressors is one part of His mediatorial office. Heb. vii. 25. and ix. 24.

In this Chapter, the incarnation, preaching, humiliation, rejection, sufferings, death, atonement, resurrection, and mediation, of Jesus Christ, are all predicted; together with the prevalence of His gospel, and the extension of His kingdom through all ages.]

CHAPTER LIV.

Some suppose this Chapter to have been addressed to the Gentiles, some to the Jewish church, and some to the Christian, in its first stage. On comparing the different parts of it, particularly the seventh and eighth verses with the remainder, the most obvious import of the prophecy will be that which refers it to the future conversion of the Jews, and to the increase and prosperity of that nation, when reconciled to God after their long rejection, when their glory and security will far surpass what they were formerly in their most favoured state, 1—17.

NOTES ON CHAP. LIV.

Verse 1. Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear—(Shout for joy, O thou barren, that didst not bear)] The church of God, under the Old Testament, confined within the narrow bounds of the Jewish nation, and still more so in respect of the very small number of true believers, and which sometimes seemed to be deserted of God her Husband; is the barren woman, that did not bear, and was desolate. She is exhorted to rejoice, and to express her joy in the strongest manner, on the reconciliation of her husband, see ver. 6. and on the accession of the Gentiles to her family. The converted Gentiles are all along considered by the Prophet as a new accession of adopted children, admitted into the original church of God, and united with it. See chap. xlix. 20, 21.

Verse 4. For thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth] "i. e. The bondage of Egypt: widowhood, the captivity of Babylon." Secker.

Verse 7. For a small moment—(In a little anger)] So the Chaldee and Syriac, either reading רגז ragaz, for רגע regâ; or understanding the latter word as meaning the same with the former, which they both make use of. See Psa. xxx. 5.; xxxv. 20. in the Septuagint, where they render רגע regâ, by, ὀργὴ anger.

Verse 8. I hid my face from thee, for a moment] The word רגע regâ, is omitted by the Septuagint, Syriac, and two MSS. of Kennicott, and two of De Rossi's. It seems to embarrass rather than to help the sentence. Forte reponi debet pro שצף shetseph, quod potest a קצף ketseph, errore scribæ originem duxisse.—["Perhaps it ought to be substituted for שצף shetseph, an error probably made by some scribe from its similarity to קצף ketseph."] Secker.

Verse 9. For this is as the waters of Noah unto me—(The same will I do now, as in the days of Noah)] כימי keyemey, in one word, in a MS. and some Editions; and so the Syriac, Chaldee, Vulgate, Symmachus, Theodotion, Abarbanel, Salomo ben Melec, and Kimchi, acknowledge, that their copies vary in this place.

[It is certain that these two words כי מי ki mey, were written formerly as one. Taken as two כי מי ki mey, they signify for as the waters—when as one, כימי keyemey, they signify as the days. This latter reading is found in about four of Kennicott's and De Rossi's MSS. In one of my own it appears to have been intended as one word: but he who added the points, which are by a much later hand than the MS. itself, has pointed the letters so as to make the two words which are commonly found in the Text. For, the waters,—Symmachus, Theodotion, the Syriac, Vulgate, and Arabic, have days instead of waters. The former seems to make the best sense; and the ancient Versions, except the Septuagint, support it.]

Verse 11. Behold, I will lay thy stones—(Behold, I lay thy stones)] These seem to be general images to express beauty, magnificence, purity, strength, and solidity, agreeably to the ideas of the eastern nations; and to have never been intended to be strictly scrutinized, or minutely and particularly explained, as if they had each of them some precise, moral, or spiritual meaning. Tobit, in his prophecy of the final restoration of Israel, describes the New Jerusalem in the same oriental manner: "For Jerusalem shall be built up with sapphires, and emeralds, and precious stones; thy walls, and towers, and battlements, with pure gold. And the streets of Jerusalem shall be paved with beryl, and carbuncle, and stones of ophir." Tob. xiii. 16, 17. Compare also Rev. xxi. 18—21.

Verse 15. Shall fall for thy sake—(Shall come over to thy side)] For יפול yipol, twenty-eight MSS. (eight ancient,) have יפל yipal, in its more common form. For the meaning of the word in this place, see Jer. xxxvii. 13.

CHAPTER LV.

This Chapter first displays the fulness, freeness, excellence, and everlasting nature, of the blessings of the gospel, and foretels again the enlargement of Messiah's kingdom, 1—5. This view leads the Prophet to exhort all to seize the precious opportunity of sharing in such blessings, which were not, however, to be expected without repentance and reformation, 6, 7. And as the things now and formerly predicted were so great as to appear incredible, the Prophet points to the omnipotence of God, who would infallibly accomplish His word, and bring about those glorious deliverances which He had promised; the happy effects of which are again set forth by images beautiful and poetical in the highest degree, 8—13.

as it is written, The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; Psa. xix. 8. It is compared also to milk, because milk is the subsistence of the child; so are the words of the law the nourishment of his soul who walks in the Divine teaching, and grows up under it."

Come, buy wine and milk—In ancient times, our forefathers used what is now called the old third person singular, ending in eth, for the imperative mood. We have a fine example of this in the first verses of this chapter. I shall present them as they stand in my Old MS. Bible.—Alle gee thirstinge cummeth to waterig: and gee that han not sylver, goth forth and bieth, and etith. Cummeth, bieth without silver, and without eny chaungyng, wyn and mylc.—Heerith gee, heering me and etith gode thinge, and deliten schal in fattnesse your soule. Bowith in your eie and cummeth to mee, heerith and liven schal your soule. And I schal smyten with you, everlastynge covenant, the faithful mercies of David.

Verse 2. Wherefore do ye spend—Why should ye be so zealously attached to a doctrine from which your souls derive neither comfort nor nourishment?

Verse 3. I will make an everlasting covenant—Heb. אכרתה לכם ברית עולם ekretah lacem berith ôlam, I will cut the old or everlasting covenant sacrifice with you. That covenant sacrifice which was pointed out of old from the very beginning; and which is to last to the consummation of ages.

The sure mercies of David—That is, says Kimchi, "The MESSIAH, called here David; as it is written, 'David my Servant shall be a Prince over you.' "

Verse 6. Seek ye the LORD while he may be found—Rab. David Kimchi gives the true sense of this passage:—"Seek ye the Lord, because He may be found: call upon Him, because He is near. Repent before ye die, for after death there is no conversion of the soul."]

Verse 9. For as the heavens are higher] I am persuaded, that כ caph, the particle of comparison, is lost in this place, from the likeness of the particle כי ki, immediately preceding it. So Houbigant, and Secker. And their remark is confirmed by all the ancient Versions, which express it; and by the following passage of Psalm ciii. 11. which is almost the same:

haarets âl shamim kigebah ki גבר חסדו על יראיו
yereaiv âl chasdo gabar

"For as the heavens are high above the earth,
So high is His goodness over them that fear Him."

Where, by the nature of the sentence, the verb in the second line ought to be the same with that in the first: גבה gebah, not גבר gebar: so Archbishop Secker conjectured: referring however to Psa. cxvii. 2.

Verse 12. The mountains and the hills] These are highly poetical images, to express a happy state attended with joy and exultation.

The lowly shrubs partake of human voice."

Verse 13. Instead of the thorn—(Instead of the thorny bushes)] These likewise (see note on the preceding verse, and on chap. liv. 11.) are general poetical images, expressing a great and happy change for the better. The wilderness turned into a paradise, Lebanon into Carmel: the desert of the Gentiles watered with the heavenly snow and rain, which fail not to have their due effect, and becoming fruitful in piety and righteousness: or as the Chaldee gives the moral sense of the emblem, "instead of the wicked shall arise the just; and instead of sinners, such as fear to sin." Compare chap. xxxv. 1, 2.; xli. 19.

And instead of] The conjunction ו vau, is added, ותחת vetachath, in forty-five MSS. [of Kennicott, several of De Rossi's,] and five Editions; and it is acknowledged by all the ancient Versions. The Masoretes therefore might have safely received it into the text, and not have referred us for it to the margin. But this is no uncommon case with them. Even in our own Version the best reading is very often found in the margin.

CHAPTER LVI.

Whoever would partake of the blessings of the gospel is required to be holy in all manner of life and conversation. And he that will be so is declared to be accepted according to this gracious dispensation, the blessings of which are large as the human race, without any respect to persons or to nations, 1—8. At the ninth verse begins a different subject, or new section of prophecy. It opens with calling on the enemies of the Jews (the Chaldeans, or perhaps the Romans,) as beasts of prey against them, for the sins of their rulers, teachers, and other profane people among them, whose guilt drew down judgments on the nation, 9—12.

Verse 5. I will give them an everlasting name] For לו lo, him, in the singular, it is evident that we ought to read למו lamo, them, in the plural: so read the Septuagint, Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate.

[Verse 6. The sons of the stranger—The Gentiles.

That join themselves to the LORD] Who shall enter into the Christian covenant by baptism and faith in Christ, as the Jews and proselytes did by circumcision.

To serve him] To live according to the gospel, and ever do that which is right in the sight of the Lord.

To be his servants] To worship no other God, but JEHOVAH, and to trust in none for salvation but His CHRIST.

That keepeth the sabbath] That observes that as a type of the rest that remains for the people of God.

And taketh hold of my covenant] בבריתי be-beberiti, "of my covenant sacrifice"—as without this he can do nothing good; and, without it, nothing can be acceptable to the infinite Majesty of the Most High.]

Verse 7. Shall be accepted] A word is here lost out of the Text: it is supplied from the Septuagint, יהיו yehiu, εσονται "they shall be." Houbigant.

Verse 9. All ye beasts of the field] Here manifestly begins a new section. The Prophet in the foregoing Chapters, having comforted the faithful Jews with many great promises of God's favour to be extended to them, in the restoration of their ruined state, and of the enlargement of His church by the admission of the Gentiles; here, on a sudden, makes a transition to the more disagreeable part of the prospect; and to a sharp reproof of the wicked and unbelievers, and especially of the negligent and faithless governors and teachers, of the idolaters and hypocrites, who would still draw down His judgments upon the nation. Probably having in view the destruction of their city and polity by the Chaldeans, and perhaps by the Romans. The same subject is continued in the next Chapter; in which the charge of corruption and apostasy becomes more general against the whole Jewish church. Some expositors have made great difficulties in the 9th verse of this Chapter, where there seems to be none. It is perfectly well explained by Jeremiah, chap. xii. 7, 9. where having introduced God declaring His purpose of punishing His people, by giving them up as a prey to their enemies the Chaldeans, a charge to these His agents is given in words very nearly the same with those of Isaiah in this place;—

"I have forsaken my house; I have deserted my heritage;
I have given up the beloved of my soul into the hands of her enemies.—
Come away, be gathered together, all ye beasts of the field;
Come away to devour."

All ye beasts in the forest—(All ye beasts of the forest)] Instead of ביער be-yaîr, three MSS. have יער yâr, without the preposition; which seems to be right, and is confirmed by all the ancient Versions

[Verse 10. His watchmen are blind—Kimchi observes, "The flock is intrusted to the care of these watchmen. The wild beasts come. These dogs bark not! and the wild beasts devour the flock. Thus they do not profit the flock. Yea, they injure it; for the owner trusts in them, that they will watch and be faithful; but they are not. These are the false teachers, and careless shepherds.]

Sleeping—(Dreamers)] חוזים hozim, ενυπνιαζομενοι,. Septuagint. This seems to be the best authority for the meaning of this word, which occurs only in this place: but it is to be observed, that eleven MSS. [of Kennicott, and De Rossi,] and four Editions, have חזים chazim; "seers," or, "those who see;" and so the Vulgate seems to have read; videntes vana, "seeing vain things."

[Loving to slumber—לנום lanum: but six of Kennicott's and seven of De Rossi's MSS. read לגום lanus, to fly, "to change their residence:" but what connexion such reading can have with the sense of the passage, I cannot discern. What is taken for ס samech here is, I have no doubt, a narrow formed final ם mem, which has been mistaken for the above. Many instances occur in my own MSS. Where the final ם mem is similar to the samech; and yet no such change was intended by the scribe.

Verse 11. Greedy dogs—Insatiably feeding themselves with the fat, and clothing themselves with the wool while the flock is scattered, ravaged, and starved! O, what an abundance of these dumb dogs and greedy dogs are there found hanging on, and prowling about, the flock of Christ. How can any careless, avaricious, hireling minister read this without agitation and dismay!]

Verse 12. I will fetch wine—(Let us provide wine)] For אקחה ekacheh, first person singular, an ancient MS. has נקחה nekacheh, first person plural; and another ancient MS. has אק ak upon a rasure. So the Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate, render it. The spirit of this epicurean sentiment is this: Let us indulge ourselves in the present time to the utmost, and instead of any gloomy forebodings of the future, let us expect nothing but increasing hilarity for every day we shall live. Thus they,—

"Counting on long years of pleasure here,
Are quite unfurnished for the world to come."

CHAPTER LVII.

After mentioning the removal of righteous persons as an awful symptom of the approach of Divine judgments, 1, 2 the Prophet goes on to charge the nation in general with idolatry, and with courting the unprofitable alliance of idolatrous kings, 3—12. In opposition to such vain confidence the Prophet enjoins trust in God, with whom the penitent and humble are sure to find acceptance, and from whom they should obtain temporal and spiritual deliverances, 13—19. Awful condition of the wicked and finally impenitent, 20, 21.

[b] Ch. 1. 4.

Ver. 1. The righteous man perisheth, and no one considereth;
And pious men are taken away, and no one understandeth,
That the righteous man is taken away, because of the evil.
2. He shall go in peace: he shall rest in his bed;
Even the perfect man: he that walketh in the straight path.

Verse 1. The righteous perisheth—הצדק אבר ha-tsadik abad. There is an emphasis here which seems intended to point out a particular person. See below. Perisheth—As the root אבר abad, signifies the straying of cattle, their passing away from one pasture to another, I feel inclined to follow the grammatical meaning of the word "perish," pereo. So the Vulgate, justus periit, from per, BY OR THROUGH, and eo, to GO. In his death the righteous man may be said to have passed through life, and to have passed by men, i. e. gone past or before them into the eternal word. A similar mode of speech is used by our Saxon ancestors to express death: ȝeꝼoꝛon ꝓihte, he went out of sight; and ȝeꝼoꝛ, he went away; and ꝼoꝛðꝼaꝛen, to fare forth, to die.

There are very few places in Isaiah where Jesus Christ is not intended; and I am inclined to think that He is intended here, THAT Just One; and perhaps Stephen had this place in view, when he thus charged the Jews, "Ye denied τον ἁγιον και δικαιον, THAT HOLY and JUST One," Acts iii. 14. That his death was not laid to heart by the wicked Jewish people needs no proof.

Merciful men—If the first refer to Christ, this may well refer to the apostles, and to others of the primitive Christians, who were taken away, some by death and martyrdom, and others by a providential escape from a city that they knew was devoted to destruction.

The evil to come—That destruction which was to come upon this disobedient people by the Romans.]

Verse 2. He shall enter into peace—(He shall go in peace)] יבוא שלום yabo shalom; the expression is elliptical, such as the prophet frequently uses. The same sense is expressed at large and in full terms, Gen. xv. 15. ואתה תבוא אל אבותיך בשלום veattah tibbo al abotheyca beshalom, and thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace.

They shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness—(He shall rest in his bed; even the perfect man)] This obscure sentence is reduced to a perfectly good sense, and easy construction, by an ingenious remark of Dr. Durell. He reads ינוח על משכבו תם yanuach âl mishkebo tam, "the perfect man shall rest in his bed." Two MSS. (one of them ancient,) have ינוח yanuach, singular; and so the Vulgate renders it, requiescat, "he shall rest." The verb was probably altered to make it plural, and so consistent with what follows, after the mistake had been made in the following words, by uniting משכבו mishkebo and תם tam, into one word. See Merrick's Annotations on the Psalms, Addenda; where the reader will find, that J. S. Moerlius by the same sort of correction, and by rescuing the adjective תם tam, which had been swallowed up in another word in the same manner, has restored to a clear sense a passage before absolutely unintelligible:

lemo charetsuccoth ein ki תם ובריא אולם:
ulam ubaria tham

"For no distresses happen to them;
Perfect and firm is their strength." Psa. lxxiii. 4.

[To follow on my application of this to our Lord:—HE the JUST ONE shall enter into peace; the peaceable prosperous possession of the glorious mediatorial kingdom. They shall rest upon their beds; the hand of wrong and oppression can reach these persecuted followers of Christ no more, (but see below.) The perfect man walking in his uprightness—This may be considered as a general declaration. The separated spirit though disunited from its body, walking in conscious existence in the Paradise of God, reaping the fruit of righteousness. The word which we render their beds, משכבותם mishkebotham, the learned Bishop supposes to be two words; and to be compounded of משכבו mishkebo, his bed, and תם tam, the upright, or perfect man. This is the reading both of the Syriac and Vulgate, and it is favoured by the Chaldee; and one of De Rossi's MS. has משכבו mishkebo, his bed, without the word תם tam, which has been added by a later hand. Bishop Lowth, as we have seen, adopts this separation of the word; and for ינוחו yanuchu, they shall rest, reads ינוח yanuach, he shall rest, which is supported by two of Dr. Kennicott's MSS., and by the Vulgate, Septuagint, and Arabic. The word תם tam, taken from משכבו תם miskebo-tam, should begin the latter clause of the verse; and then the interpolated words each one, which our translators supplied, may be very well spared. The verse may be then read and paraphrased thus:

He shall enter into peace: he shall rest upon his bed;
The perfect man walking in his uprightness.

The bed must signify the grave; the walking in uprightness after death, the conscious existence of the happy spirit, and its eternal progression in happiness and perfection: נכחו nekocho, straight before him; proceeding into the unlimited extent of eternal glory, increasing in happiness, and increasing in perfection.

My Old MS. Bible translates very nervously:

> The rightwise man perishith,
> And there is not that he thinke in his herte.
> And men of mercy ben gedrid,
> For there is not that understonde:
> From the face forsoth of malice,
> Gedrid is the rigtwise.
> Cumm pese: reste it in his bed
> That geede in his rigt rewlinge.

It has been often remarked that, previously to the execution of God's judgments upon a wicked place, He has removed good men from it, that they might not suffer with the wicked. When great and good men are removed by death, or otherwise, from any place, the remaining inhabitants have much cause to tremble.]

Verse 6. Among the smooth stones of the stream—Among the smooth stones of the valley)] The Jews were extremely addicted to the practice of many superstitious and idolatrous rites, which the Prophet here inveighs against with great vehemence. Of the worship of rude stones consecrated there are many testimonies of the ancients. They were called Βαιτυλοι and Βαιτυλια; probably from the stone which Jacob erected at Bethel, pouring oil upon the top of it. The practice was very common in different ages and places, Arnobius, lib. i. gives an account of his own practice in this respect, before he became a Christian: Si quando conspexeram lubricatum lapidem, et ex olivi unguine sordidatum; tanquam inesset vis præsens, adulabar, affabar, et beneficia poscebam nihil sentiente de trunco.—"When I have met with a smooth stone, smeared with oil, supposing a spiritual power to be connected with it, I worshipped it, paid my addresses to it, and requested blessings, &c." Clemens Alex. Strom. lib. vii. speaks of a worshipper of every smooth stone in a proverbial way, to denote one given up to superstition. And accordingly Thophrastus has marked this as one strong feature in the character of the superstitious man: Και των λιπαρων λιθων των εν ταις τριοδοις παριων, εκ της ληκυθου ελαιου καταχειν, και επι γονατω πεσων και προσκυνησας απαλλαττεσθαι. "Passing by the anointed stones in the streets, he takes out his phial of oil, and pours it on them; and having fallen on his knees, and made his adorations, he departs." [Kimchi says: "When they found a beautiful polished stone in a brook or river, they paid divine adoration to it." This idolatry is still prevalent among the Hindoos. The stone which is the object of their adoration is called salgram. They are found about eighty miles from the source of the river Sown, in the viceroyalty of Bahar, on the coast of Bengal. Ayin Akbery, Vol. ii. p. 29.]

Verse 8. Behind the doors also and the posts hast thou set up thy remembrance—(Behind the door, and the door-posts, hast thou set up thy memorial)] That is, the image of their tutelary gods, or something dedicated to them; in direct opposition to the law of God, which commanded them to write upon the door-posts of their house, and upon their gates, the words of God's law. Deut. vi. 9.; xi. 20. If they chose for them such a situation as more private, it was in defiance of a particular curse denounced in the law against the man, who should make a graven or a molten image, and put it in a secret place. Deut. xxvii. 15. An ancient MS., with another, has אחר achar, without the conjunction ו vau, and.

Verse 9. And thou wentest to the king with ointment—(And thou hast visited the king with a present of oil)] That is, the king of Assyria, or Egypt. Hosea, chap. xii. 1. reproaches the Israelites for the same practice:

> "They make a covenant with Assyria,
> And oil is carried to Egypt."

It is well known, that in all parts of the East, whoever visits a great person must carry him a present. "It is counted uncivil," says Maundrell, p. 26. "to visit in this country without an offering in hand. All great men expect it as a tribute due to their character and authority; and look upon themselves as affronted, and indeed defrauded, when the compliment is omitted." Hence שור shur, to visit a person, is equivalent to making him a present; and תשורה teshureh, Verse 10. Yet saidst thou not, There is no hope—(Thou hast said, There is no hope)] In one of the MSS. at Koningsberg, collated by Lilienthal, the words לא אמרת lo-amarta, are left in the text unpointed as suspected; and in the margin the corrector has written ותאמרי ve-tomari. Now if we compare Jer. ii. 25. and xviii. 12. we shall find, that the subject is in both places quite the same with this of Isaiah; and the sentiment expressed, that of a desperate resolution to continue at all hazard in their idolatrous practices; the very thing that in all reason we might expect here. Probably, therefore, the latter is the true reading in this place.

Verse 11. Nor laid it to thy heart—(Nor revolved it in thy mind)] Eight MSS. (four ancient,) and the two oldest editions, with another, add the conjunction ו vau, ולא velo: which is confirmed by all the ancient Versions.

Even of old—(And winked)] For ומעולם umeôlam, which makes no good sense or construction in this place, twenty-three MSS. (seven ancient,) and three editions, have מעלם (to be thus pointed מעלם maelim;) Παροραω, Septuagint; quasi non videns, "as if not seeing." Vulgate. See Psa. x. 1. The truth of this reading, so confirmed, admits of no doubt. [In one of my own MSS. the ו vau, has been written, but afterwards struck out. It is not because I was silent, and winked.]

Verse 12. Thy righteousness—(My righteousness)] For צדקתך tsedikatecha, THY righteousness, the Syriac, Septuagint, MSS. Alex. and Pachom. and 1. D. 11. and Marchal. and ol Γ, and the Arabic, read צדקי tsedeki, MY righteousness.

Verse 13. Let thy companies deliver thee—(Let thine associates deliver thee)] Thirty-nine MSS. (ten ancient) [of Dr. Kennicott, and two of my own,] and the two oldest editions, have יצילוך yetsiluc, plural.

Verse 14. And shall say—(Then will I say)] ואמר vaemor, to be pointed as the first person future. They are the words of God, as it is plain from the conclusion of the verse; my people, עמי âmmi.

Verse 15. For thus saith the high and lofty One—(For thus saith JEHOVAH, the high and the lofty)] A MS. adds יהוה yehovah, after אמר amar, and edition Prag. 1518. So the Septuagint, Alex. and Arabic. An ancient MS. adds יה yah.

With him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit] Twelve MSS. have את et, without the conjunction ו vau. "Pro ואת veeth, forte legendum ואראה vearah: confer Psa. cxiii. 5. et cxxxviii. 6." SECKER. ["We should perhaps read ואראה veareh, instead of ואת veeth. See Psa. cxiii. 5. and cxxxviii. 6."

Verse 16. For I will not contend for ever] The learned have taken a great deal of pains to little purpose on the latter part of this verse, which they suppose to be very obscure. After all their labours upon it, I think the best and easiest explication of it is given in the two following elegant passages of the Psalms, which I presume are exactly parallel to it, and very clearly express the same sentiment.

"But He in His tender mercy will forgive their sin,
And will not destroy them;
Yea, oftentimes will He turn away His wrath,
And will not rouse up His indignation:

For He remembereth that they are but flesh,
A breath that passeth, and returneth not."

Psa. lxxviii. 38, 39.

"He will not always contend,
Neither will He for ever hold His wrath:
As a father yearneth towards his children,
So is JEHOVAH tenderly compassionate towards them that fear Him:
For He knoweth our frame;
He remembereth that we are but dust."

Psa. ciii. 9, 13, 14.

In the former of these two passages the second line seems to be defective both in measure and sense. I suppose the word אותם otham, them, is lost at the end; which seems to be acknowledged by the Chaldee and Vulgate, who render as if they had read, ולא ישחית איתם velo yishchith otham.

[For the spirit—רוח ruach, the animal life.

And the souls—נשמות nishamoth, the immortal spirits. The Targum understands this of the resurrection. I will restore the souls of the dead, i. e. to their bodies.]

Verse 17. For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth—(Because of his iniquity for a short time was I wroth)] For בצעו batsâo, I read בצע batsâ, a little while, from בצע batsâ, he cut off; as the Septuagint read and render it, βραχυ τι, "a certain short space." Propter iniquitatem avaritiæ ejus, "because of the iniquity of his avarice," the rendering of the Vulgate, which our translators, and I believe all others follow, is surely quite beside the purpose.

Verse 19. I create the fruit of the lips] "The sacrifice of praise," saith St. Paul, Heb. xiii. 15. "is the fruit of the lips." God creates this fruit of the lips, by giving new subject and cause of thanksgiving by His mercies conferred on those among His people, who acknowledge and bewail their transgressions, and return to Him. The great subject of thanksgiving is peace; reconciliation and pardon offered to them that are nigh, and to them that are afar off; not only to the Jew, but also to the Gentile, as St. Paul more than once applies those terms, Eph. ii. 13, 17. see also Acts ii. 39.

[Peace to him that is far off—"That is, to the penitent; and to him that is near, i. e. the righteous." Kimchi.]

Verse 22. There is no peace, saith my God] For אלהי elohai, twenty-two MSS. (five ancient) [of Kennicott, thirty of De Rossi, and one ancient of my own] read יהוה yehovah; the Vulgate, Septuagint, Alex. and Arabic, and three MSS., have both. This verse has reference to the nineteenth. The perseveringly wicked and impenitent are excluded from all share in that peace above-mentioned; that reconcilement and pardon, which is promised to the penitent only. The forty-eighth chapter ends with the same declaration; to express the exclusion of the unbelievers and impenitent from the benefit of the foregoing promises.

CHAPTER LVIII.

This elegant Chapter contains a severe reproof of the Jews on account of their vices, particularly their hypocrisy in practising and relying on outward ceremonies, such as fasting and bodily humiliation without true repentance, 1—5. It then lays down a clear and comprehensive summary of the duties they owed to their fellow-creatures, 6, 7. Large promises of happiness and prosperity are likewise annexed to the performance of these duties in a variety of the most beautiful and striking images, 8—12. Great temporal and spiritual blessedness of those who keep holy the sabbath-day, 13, 14.

NOTES ON CHAP. LVIII.

[Verse 1. Cry aloud, spare not—Never was a louder cry against the hypocrisy, nor a more cutting reproof of the wickedness of a people professing a national established religion, having all the forms of godliness without a particle of its power. This Chapter has been often appointed to be read on political fast days for the success of wars carried on for—God knows what purposes; and originating in—God knows what motives. Politically speaking, was ever any thing more injudicious!]

Verse 3. Have we afflicted our soul—(Have we afflicted our souls)] Twenty-seven MSS. (six ancient [of Dr. Kennicott, thirty-six of De Rossi, and two of my own,)] and the old edition of 1488, have the noun in the plural number, נפשינו naphesheynu: and so the Septuagint, Chaldee, and Vulgate. [This reading is undoubtedly genuine.]

[In the day of your fast ye find pleasure—Fast days are generally called holidays; and holidays are days of idleness and pleasure. In numberless cases, the fast is turned into a feast.

And exact all your labours—Some disregard the most sacred fast, and will oblige their servant to work all day long: others use fast days for the purpose of settling their accounts, posting up their books, and drawing out their bills to be ready to collect their debts. These are sneaking hypocrites: the others are daringly irreligious.

Verse 4. Ye fast for strife and debate—How often is this the case! A whole nation are called to fast to implore God's blessing on wars carried on for the purposes of wrath and ambition.]

To smite with the fist of wickedness: ye shall not fast as ye do this day—(To smite with the fist the poor. Wherefore fast ye unto me in this manner)] I follow the version of the Septuagint, which gives a much better sense than the present reading of the Hebrew. Instead of לא רשע rashâ lo, they seem to have read in their copy רש על מה לי rash âl mah li. The four first letters are the same, but otherwise divided in regard to the words; the four last are lost, and א aleph added in their place, in order to make some sort of sense with רשע. The version of the Septuagint is και τυπτετε πυγμαις ταπεινον· ινα τι μοι νηστευετε—— as above.

[Verse 6. Let the oppressed go free—How can any nation pretend to fast or worship God at all, or dare to profess that they believe in the existence of such a Being, while they carry on what is called the Slave Trade; and traffic in the souls, blood, and bodies, of men! O ye most flagitious of knaves, and worst of hypocrites, cast off at once the mask of religion; and deepen not your endless perdition by professing the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, while ye continue in this traffic!

Verse 7. Deal thy bread to the hungry—But this thou canst not do, if thou eat it thyself. When a man fasts, suppose he do it through a religious motive, he should give the food of that day from which he abstains, to the poor and hungry, who, in the course of Providence, are called to sustain many involuntary fasts, besides suffering general privations. Woe to him who saves a day's victuals by his religious fast! He should either give them or their value in money, to the poor. See ver. 6.]

That thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house—(To bring the wandering poor into thy house)] πτωχους αστεγους, Septuagint; egenos vagosque, Vulgate; and מטלטלין metaltalin, Chaldee. They read, instead of מרודים merudim, הנודים hanudim. מר mer, is upon a rasure in the Bodleian MS. The same MS. reads ביתה beitah, in domum, "into the house."

The glory—(And the glory)] Sixteen MSS. (five ancient) [of Dr. Kennicott] and the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate add the conjunction ו vau, וכבוד ve-cabod.

Verse 10. And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry—(If thou bring forth thy bread to the hungry)] "To draw out thy soul to the hungry," as our translators rightly enough express the present Hebrew text, is an obscure phrase, and without example in any other place. But instead of נפשך naphsheca, thy soul, eight MSS. (three ancient) [of Kennicott, and three of De Rossi,] read לחמך lechmeca, thy bread, and so the Syriac renders it. The Septuagint express both words, τον αρτον εκ της ψυχης σου, thy bread from thy soul. [I cannot help thinking, however, that this reading is a gloss, and should not be adopted. To draw out the soul in relieving the poor, is to do it not of constraint, or necessity,—but cheerfully; and is both nervous and elegant, his soul pities, and his hand gives.]

Verse 11. And make fat thy bones—(And he shall renew thy strength)] "Chaldæus forte legit יחלוץ עצמתך yechaliph âtsematheca; confer cap. xl. 29, 31. et xli. 1." SECKER. ["The Chaldee perhaps read יחליף עצמתך yechaliph âtsemateca."] The Chaldee has וגופך יחיי בחיי עלמא vegopheca yechaii bechaii âlma, and he will vivify thy body in life eternal. The rest of the ancients seem not to know what to make of יחלץ yachalits; and the rendering of the Vulgate, which seems to be the only proper one, ossa tua liberabit, "he will deliver thy bones," makes no sense. I follow this excellent emendation: to favour which it is still further to be observed, that three MSS., instead of עצמתיך êtsmateyca, have עצמתך êtsmateca, singular.

Verse 12. The restorer of paths to dwell in—(The restorer of paths to be frequented by inhabitants)] To this purpose it is rendered by the Syriac, Symmachus, and Theodotion.

[Verse 13. If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath—The meaning of this seems to be,—that they should be careful not to take their pleasure on the sabbath day, by paying visits, and taking country jaunts; not going, as Kimchi interprets it, more than a sabbath day's journey, which was only two thousand cubits beyond the city's suburbs. How vilely is this rule transgressed by the inhabitants of this land! They seem to think that the sabbath was made only for their recreation!]

From doing thy pleasure] The Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldee, for עשית âsoth, manifestly express מעשית meâsoth So likewise a MS. has it, but with the omission of the words שבת רגליך shabath regaleyca.

The holy of the LORD—(And the holy feast of JEHOVAH)] Twenty-eight MSS. (seven ancient,) add the conjunction ו vau, ילקדוש ulkadosh: and so the Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate. [One of mine has the same reading.]

Nor speaking thine own words—(From speaking vain words)] It is necessary to add some epithet to make out the sense: the Septuagint say angry words; the Chaldee, words of violence. If any such epithet is lost here, the safest way is to supply it by the prophet's own expression, ver. 9. ודבר און ve-dabar aven, vain words; that is, profane, impious, injurious, &c.

"The additional epithet seems unnecessary; the Vulgate and Syriac have it not; and the sense is good without it: two ways, first by taking ודבר vedabar for a noun, and דבר dabur for the participle pahul, and rendering,— doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words:

'From pursuing thy pleasure, and the thing resolved on.'

Or, secondly, by supposing the force of the preposition מ mem to have been continued from the verb ממצוא mematso to the verb ודבר vedabber immediately following, and rendering,—

'From executing thy pleasure, and from speaking words concerning it.'

But the first seems the easier rendering." Dr. JUBB.

[Verse 14. Then shalt thou delight thyself—If all fasts and religious observations be carried on in the spirit and manner recommended above, God's blessing will attend every ordinance. But in public fasts, prescribed not in the Book of God, but by the rulers of nations in general, (very unfit persons,) care should be taken that the cause is good, and that God's blessing may be safely implored in it.

France has lately fasted and prayed that they might be able to subjugate Spain,—restore and establish the horrible inquisition,—and utterly destroy all the liberties of the people! Is this such a fast as God hath chosen?—A. D. 1823.]

CHAPTER LIX.

This Chapter contains a more general reproof of the wickedness of the Jews, 1—8. After this they are represented confessing their sins, and deploring the unhappy consequences of them, 9—15. On this act of humiliation God, ever ready to pardon the penitent, promises that He will have mercy on them; that the Redeemer will come, mighty to save; and that He will deliver His people, subdue His enemies, and establish a new and everlasting covenant, 16—21.

[a] Numb. 11. 23. Ch. 50. 2.

[b] Or, have made him hide.

The foregoing elegant Chapter contained a severe reproof of the Jews, in particular for their hypocrisy in pretending to make themselves accepted with God by fasting and outward humiliation without true repentance; while they still continued to oppress the poor, and indulge their own passions and vices: with great promises however of God's favour, on condition of their reformation. This Chapter contains a more general reproof of their wickedness, bloodshed, violence, falsehood, injustice. At ver. 9. they are introduced as making themselves an ample confession of their sins, and deploring their wretched state in consequence of them. On this act of humiliation a promise is given that God, in His mercy and zeal for His people, will rescue them from this miserable condition; that the Redeemer will come like a mighty Hero to deliver them: He will destroy His enemies, convert both Jews and Gentiles to Himself, and give them a new covenant, and a law which shall never be abolished.

As this Chapter is remarkable for the beauty, strength, and variety, of the images with which it abounds; so is it peculiarly distinguished by the elegance of the composition, and the exact construction of the sentences. From the first verse to the two last it falls regularly into stanzas of four lines, (see Prelim. Dissert. p. xxi.) which I have endeavoured to express as nearly as possible in the form of the original.

NOTES ON CHAP. LIX.

Verse 2. His face] For פניכם panim, faces, I read פניו panaiv, his face. So the Syriac, Septuagint, Alexandrian,

3 For [a] your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness.

4 None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; [b] they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity.

5 They hatch [c] cockatrice' eggs, and weave the spider's web: he that eateth of their eggs dieth, and [d] that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper.

6 [e] Their webs shall not become garments, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: their works are works of iniquity, and the act of violence is in their hands.

7 [f] Their feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood: their thoughts are thoughts of iniquity; wasting and [g] destruction are in their paths.

8 The way of peace they know not; and there is no [h] judgment in their goings: [i] they have made them crooked paths: whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace.

9 Therefore is judgment far from us, neither doth justice overtake us: [k] we wait for light, but behold obscurity; for brightness, but we walk in darkness.

10 [l] We grope for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if we had no eyes: we stumble at noon day as in the night; we are in desolate places as dead men.

11 We roar all like bears, and [m] mourn sore like doves: we look for judgment, but there is none; for salvation, but it is far off from us.

12 For our transgressions are multiplied before thee, and our sins testify against us: for our transgressions are with us; and as for our iniquities, we know them;

13 In transgressing and lying against the LORD, and departing away from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering [n] from the heart words of falsehood.

14 And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter.

15 Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil [o] maketh himself a prey: and the LORD saw it, and [p] it displeased him that there was no judgment.

I rather think that the speech of God was closed with the last Chapter, and that this Chapter is delivered in the person of the prophet.

Verse 3. Your tongue—(And your tongue)] An ancient MS. and the Septuagint and Vulgate, add the conjunction.

[Verse 4. They conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity—There is a curious propriety in this mode of expression:—a thought or purpose is compared to conception;—a word, or act, which is the consequence of it, to the birth of a child. From the third to the fifteenth verse inclusive, may be considered a true statement of the then moral state of the Jewish people; and that they were, in the most proper sense of the word, guilty of the iniquities with which they are charged.]

Verse 8. Whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace—(Whoever goeth in them knoweth not peace)] For בה bah, singular, read בם bam, plural, with the Septuagint, Syriac, Vulgate, and Chaldee. The ה he is upon a rasure in one MS. Or, for נתיבתיהם natiboteyhem, plural, we must read נתיבתם natibotam, singular, as it is in an ancient MS., to preserve the grammatical concord.

Verse 10. We stumble at noonday as in the night—(We stumble at midday, as in the twilight)] I adopt here an emendation of Houbigant, נשגגה neshagageh, instead of the second, נגששה negoshashah, the repetition of which has a poverty and inelegance extremely unworthy of the prophet, and unlike his manner. The mistake is of long standing, being prior to all the ancient Versions. It was a very easy and obvious mistake, and I have little doubt of our having recovered the true reading in this ingenious correction.

Verse 11. But it is far off from us—(And it is far distant from us)] The conjunction ו vau must necessarily be prefixed to the verb, as the Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate, found it in their copies; ורחקה verachakah, and far off.

[Verse 14. Justice standeth afar off—צדקה tsedekah, righteousness,—put here, says Kimchi, for alms to the poor. This casts some light on Matt. vi. 1. Take heed that you do not your alms, ελεημοσυνην· but the best copies have δικαιοσυνην, righteousness; the former having been inserted in the Text at first merely as the explanation of the genuine and original word.]

it——)] This third line of the stanza appears manifestly to me to be imperfect by the loss of a phrase. The Reader will perhaps more perfectly conceive my idea of the matter if I endeavour to supply the supposed defect. I imagine it might have stood orignally in this manner:—

וירא יהוה [ויחר לו]
lo veyachar yehovah vayara וירע בעיניו כי אין משפט mishphat ein ki beênaiv veyarâ

"And JEHOVAH saw it, [and He was wroth;]
And it displeased Him, that there was no judgment."

We have had already many examples of mistakes of omission; this, if it be such, is very ancient, being prior to all the Versions.

[Verse 16. And wondered that there was no intercessor—This and the following verses some of the most eminent Rabbins understand as spoken of the Messiah. Kimchi says that Rabbi Joshua ben Levi proposes this objection:—"It is written, Behold, he will come in the clouds of heaven as the son of man, Dan. vii. 13.; and elsewhere it is written, He cometh lowly, and riding upon an ass, Zech. ix. 9. How can these texts be reconciled? Thus,—If the Jews have merits, He will come unto them in the clouds of heaven: but if they be destitute of merits, He will come unto them riding upon an ass." Now, out of their own mouth they may be condemned. They were truly destitute of all merits when Jesus Christ came into Jerusalem riding upon an ass, according to the letter of the above prophecy;—and they neither acknowledged nor received Him. And that they were destitute of merit their destruction by the Romans, which shortly followed their rejection of Him, sufficiently proves.]

Verse 17. For clothing—(For his clothing)] תלבשת tilabosheth. "I cannot but think that this word, תלבשת tilabosheth, is an interpolation. 1. It is in no one ancient Version. 2. It is redundant in the sense, as it is before expressed in בגדי begedey. 3. It makes the hemistich just so much longer than it ought to be, if it is compared with the others adjoining. 4. It makes a form of construction in this clause less elegant than that in the others. 5. It might probably be in some margin a various reading for בגדי begedey, and thence taken into the text. This is the more probable, as its form is such as it would be if it were in regimine, as it must be before נקם nakam." Dr. JUBB. [Two sorts of armour are mentioned,—a breast-plate and a helmet, to bring righteousness and salvation to those who fear Him: and the garments of vengeance and the cloak of zeal, for the destruction of all those who finally oppose Him, and reject His gospel.]

Verse 18. According to their deeds, accordingly he will repay—(He is mighty to recompense; he that is mighty to recompense will requite)] The former part of this verse, as it stands at present in the Hebrew text, seems to me to be very imperfect, and absolutely unintelligible. The learned Vitringa has taken a great deal of pains upon it, after Cocceius; who, he says, is the only one of all the interpreters, ancient or modern, who has at all understood it, and has opened the way for him. He thinks that both of them together have clearly made out the sense: I do not expect that any third person will ever be of that opinion. He says Videtur sententia ad verbum sonare: quasi propter facta [adversariorum] quasi propter rependet; excandescentiam, &c. et sic reddidit Pagninus. "According to the height of their demerits, He will repay them to the height:—fury to His adversaries, recompence to His enemies," &c. Waterland. This he converts, by a process which will not much edify my Reader, into Secundum summa merita, secundum summe (merita) rependet; which is his translation. They that hold the present Hebrew text to be absolutely infallible must make their way through it as they can: but they ought surely to give us somewhat that has at least the appearance of sense. However, I hope the case here is not quite desperate: the Chaldee leads us very fairly to the correction of the text, which is both corrupted and defective. The paraphrase runs thus:—מרי גמליא הוא גמלא ישלם meri gemelia hu gemela yeshellem, The Lord of retribution, he will render recompence. He manifestly read בעל baâl, instead of כעל keâl. מרי גמליא meri gemelia is בעל גמלות beâl gemuloth; as מרי מרירותא meri merirutha is בעל אף beâl aph. Prov. xxii. 24. And so in the same Chaldee paraphrase on Isa. xxxv. 4. מרי גמליא יי הוא יתגלי meri gemelia yeya hu yithgelu, The Lord of retribution, Jehovah Himself, shall be revealed: words very near to those of the prophet in this place. The second כעל keâl, which the Chaldee has omitted, must be read בעל baâl likewise; with this only addition to the Chaldee, which the Hebrew text justifies, we are supplied with the following clear reading of the passage:—

21 [e] As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the LORD; My Spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the LORD, from henceforth and for ever.

The Lord of retributions, He
The Lord of retributions, shall repay.

The כ caph in כעל keâl twice seems to have been at first ב beth, in MS. This verse in the Septuagint is very imperfect. In the first part of it they give us no assistance: the last part is wholly omitted in the printed copies: but it is thus supplied in MSS. Pachom. and I. D. II.—Τοις υπεναντιοις αυτου· αμυναν τοις εχθροις αυτου· ταις νησοις αποδομα αποτισει.

[Verse 19. When the enemy shall come in like a flood—This all the Rabbins refer to the coming of the Messiah. If ye see a generation which endures much tribulation, then (say they) expect Him according to what is written,—When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him.

Kimchi says, he that was the standard bearer always began the battle by first smiting at the enemy. Here, then, the Spirit of the Lord is the Standard-bearer, and strikes the first blow. They who go against Sin and Satan with the Holy Spirit at their head, are sure to win the day.]

The Spirit of the LORD shall lift up a standard against him—(Which a strong wind driveth along)] Quam spiritus Domini cogit, "which the Spirit of the Lord drives on." Vulg. נוססה noseseh, pihel à נוס nus, fugit. Kimchi says, his father thus explained this word: נוססה noseseh, interpretatur in significatione fugæ, et ait, spiritus Domini fugabit hostem;—nam secundum eum נוססה noseseh, est ex conjugatione quadrata, ejusque radix est נוס nus: "noseseh he interpreted in the signification of flight;—The Spirit of the Lord shall put the enemy to flight: for, according to him, the root of the word is נוס nus, he put to flight." The object of this action I explain otherwise. The conjunction ו vau, prefixed to רוח ruach, seems necessary to the sense: it is added by the corrector in one of the Koningsberg MSS. collated by Lilienthal. [It is added also in one of my own.]

Verse 20. Unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob—(And shall turn away iniquity from Jacob)] So the Septuagint and St. Paul, Rom. xi. 26., reading, instead of לשבי lashabey and ביעקב beyaâcob, והשיב veheshib and מיעקב meyaâcob. The Syriac likewise reads והשיב vaheshib; and the Chaldee, to the same sense, ולהשיב veleheshib. Our translators have expressed the sense of the present reading of the Hebrew Text:—And unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob.

Verse 21. This is my covenant with them—(This is the covenant which I make with them)] For אותם otam, them, twenty-four MSS. (four ancient,) and nine Editions, have אתם ittem, with them.

[My Spirit that is upon thee—This seems to be an address to the Messiah: Kimchi says it is to the prophet, informing him that the spirit of prophecy should be given to all Israelites in the days of the Messiah, as it was then given to him, i. e. to the Prophet.

And my words which I have put in thy mouth—Whatsoever Jesus spoke, was the word and mind of God Himself; and must, as such, be implicitly received.

Nor out of the mouth of thy seed—The same doctrines which Jesus preached, all His faithful ministers preach;—and His seed,—genuine Christians, who are all born of God, believe: and they shall continue, and the doctrines remain in the seed's seed through all generations—for ever and ever. This is God's covenant, ordered in all things, and sure.]

CHAPTER LX.

The glorious prospect displayed in this Chapter seems to have elevated the Prophet even above his usual majesty. The subject is the very flourishing condition of the church of Jesus Christ at that period of the Gospel dispensation when both Jews and Gentiles shall become one fold under one Shepherd. The imagery employed is of the most consolatory and magnificent description. This blessed state of the world shall follow a time of gross darkness, 1, 2. The universal diffusion of vital godliness beautifully set forth by a great variety of images, 3—14. The everlasting duration and spotless purity of this kingdom of Christ, 15—21. A time appointed in the counsels of Jehovah for the commencement of this happy period; and, when this time arrives, the particulars of the prophecy shall have a speedy accomplishment, 22.

The subject of this Chapter is the great increase and flourishing state of the church of God by the conversion and accession to the Heathen nations to it; which is set forth in such ample and exalted terms, as plainly show that the full completion of this prophecy is reserved for future times. This subject is displayed in the most splendid colours under a great variety of images highly poetical, designed to give a general idea of the glories of that perfect state of the church of God which we are taught to expect in the latter times; when the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and the Jews shall be converted and gathered from their dispersions; and the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ.

Of the use in prophecy of general or common poetical images, in setting forth the greatness and importance of a future event universally, without descending to particulars, or too minutely explaining circumstances, I have already pretty largely treated in the twentieth prelection on the Hebrew poetry; and have more than once observed in these Notes that such images are not always to be applied particularly to persons and things, and were never intended to be minutely explained. I shall add here the opinion of a very learned and judicious person upon this subject:—"It is, I think, a mark of right understanding in the language of prophecy, and in the design of prophecy too, to keep to what appears the design and meaning of the prophecy in general, and what the whole of it, laid together, points out to us; and not to suffer a warm imagination to mislead us from the real intention of the spirit of prophecy, by following uncertain applications of the parts of it." Lowman on the Revelation, Note on chap. xix. 21. [To this testimony I must add my own. This is one of the most glorious chapters in the whole of the Old Testament. The splendour, glory, and excellence, of the Church of Christ are here pointed out in language which the Spirit of God alone is capable of using. But when shall this state of blessedness take place? Lord, Thou only knowest.

NOTES ON CHAP. LX.

Verse 1. Arise—Call upon God, through Christ, for His salvation,—and Shine—אורי ori, be illuminated,—for till thou arise and call upon God, thou wilt never receive true light.

For thy light is come—כי בא אורך ki ba oreca, for thy light cometh. The Messiah is at the door; who, while He is a light to lighten the Gentiles, will be the glory, the effulgence, of His people Israel.

Verse 2. Darkness shall cover the earth—This is the state of the Gentile people.

Verse 3. And the Gentiles shall come—This has been in some sort already fulfilled. The Gentiles have received the light of the gospel from the land of Judea, and the Gentile kings have embraced that gospel; so that many nations of the earth are full of the doctrine of Christ.]

Verse 4. Shall be nursed at thy side—(Shall be carried at the side)] For תאמנה teamanah, shall be nursed, the Septuagint and Chaldee read תנשאנה tenashanah, shall be carried. A MS. has על כתף תנשאנה âl cataph teneshaanah, shall be carried on the shoulder, instead of על צד תאמנה âl tsad teamenah, shall be nursed on the side. Another MS. has both כתף cataph and צד tsad. Another MS. has it thus:—תאמנה : תנשאנה teneshaanah: teamenah, with a line drawn over the first word. Sir John Chardin says that it is the general custom in the East to carry their children astride upon the hip, with the arm round their body. His MS. note on this place is as follows:—Coutume en Orient de porter les enfans sur le coste à califourchon sur la hanche: cette façon est generale aux Indes; les enfans se tiennent comme cela, et la personne qui les porte les embrasse et serre par le corps; parceque sont [ni] emmaillottès, ni en robes

5 Then thou shalt see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because [a] the [b] abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the [c] forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee.

6 The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and [d] Ephah; all they from [e] Sheba shall come: they shall bring [f] gold and incense; and they shall show forth the praises of the LORD.

7 All the flocks of [g] Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and [h] I will glorify the house of my glory.

The children support themselves in this way, and the arm of the nurse goes round the body and presses the child close to the side; and this they can easily do, as the children are not swathed, nor encumbered with clothes."] Non brachiis occidentalium more, sed humeris, divaricatis tibiis, impositos circumferunt. ["They carry them about not in their arms after the manner of the western nations, but on their shoulders; the children being placed astride."] Cotovic. Iter. Syr. cap. xiv. This last quotation seems to favour the reading על כתף âl cataph, on the shoulder, as the Septuagint likewise do: but upon the whole I think that על צד תנשאנה âl tsad teneshaanah is the true reading, which the Chaldee favours; and I have accordingly followed it. See chap. lxvi. 12.

Verse 5. Then thou shalt see—(Then shalt thou fear)] For תרא terai, thou shalt see, as ours and much the greater number of the translators, ancient and modern, render it, forty MSS. (ten ancient,) [of Kennicott, and twenty-eight of De Rossi, with one ancient of my own,] and the old Edition of 1488, have תיראי tirai, thou shalt fear; the true reading, confirmed by the perfect prallelism of the sentences: the heart ruffled and dilated in the second line answering to the fear and joy expressed in the first. The prophet Jeremiah, chap. xxxiii. 9., has the same natural and elegant sentiment:—

"And [this city] shall become to me a name of joy;
A praise and an honour for all the nations of the earth;
Which shall hear all the good that I do unto them:
And they shall fear, and they shall tremble, at all the goodness,
And at all the prosperity, that I procure unto her."

And David:—

"I will praise thee, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made."
Psa. cxxxix. 14.

His tibi me rebus quædam divina voluptas
Percipit atque horror." LUCRET. iii. 28.

Recenti mens trepidat metu,
Plenoque Bacchi pectore turbidum
Lætatur." HOR. Carm. ii. 19. 1. 5

Verse 6. The praises of the LORD—(And the praise of JEHOVAH)] Thirty-three MSS. and three Editions have ותחלת utchillet, in the singular number; and so read the ancient Versions [and one of my own MSS.]

Verse 7. The rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee] Vitringa (on the place) understands their ministering, and ascending, or going up, on the altar, as offering themselves voluntarily:—ipsi se, non expectato sacerdote alio, gloriæ et sanctificationi Divini nominis ultro ac libenter oblaturi. ["They, waiting for no priest, go and freely offer themselves to the glory and sanctification of the sacred name."] This gives a very elegant and poetical turn to the image. It was a general notion that prevailed with sacrificers among the Heathen, that the victim's being brought without reluctance to the altar was a good omen; and the contrary a bad one. Sabinos petit aliquanto tristior; quod sacrificanti hostia aufugerat. Sueton. Titus, cap. x. Accessit dirum omen, profugus altaribus taurus. ["It was an omen of dreadful portent when the victim fled away from the altar."] Tacit. Hist. iii. 56.

Verse 8. And as the doves to their windows—(And like doves upon the wing)] Instead of אל al, to, forty-two MSS. [of Kennicott, and one of mine] have על âl, upon. For ארבתיהם arubateyhem, their windows, read אברתיהם abrateyhem, their wings, transposing a letter. Houbigant. The Septuagint render it συν νεοσσοις, with their young; they read אפרחיהם apharchihem,—nearer to the latter than to the present reading.

Verse 13. And I will make the place of my feet glorious—(And that I may glorify the place whereon I rest my feet)] The temple of Jerusalem was called the house of God, and the place of His rest, or residence. The visible symbolical appearance of God, called by the Jews the Shechinah, was in the most holy place, between the wings of the cherubim, above the ark. This is considered as the throne of God, presiding as King over the Jewish state; and as a footstool is a necessary appendage of a throne, (see Note on chap. lii. 2.) the ark is considered as the footstool of God, and is so called, Psa. xcix. 5. 1 Chron. xxviii. 2.

Verse 19. Neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee—(Nor by night shall the brightness of the moon enlighten thee)] This line, as it stands in the present text, seems to be defective. The Septuagint and Chaldee both express the night, which is almost necessary to answer to day in the preceding line, as well as to perfect the sense here. I therefore think that we ought, upon the authority of the Septuagint and Chaldee, to read either ולילה velaylah, and by night, instead of ולנגה ulenogah, and for brightness; or ולנגה בלילה ulenogah balaylah, adding the word בלילה balaylah, by night.

CHAPTER LXI.

The subject of the preceding Chapter is continued in this; and, to give it the greater solemnity, the Messiah is introduced describing His character and office, and confirming the large promises made before, 1—9. In consequence of this the Jewish church is introduced praising God for the honour done her by her restoration to favour, and by the accession of the Gentiles, which is beautifully described by allusions to the rich pontifical dress of the high priest; a happy similitude to express the ornaments of a restored nation and of a renewed mind, 10. Certainty of the prophecy illustrated by a figure drawn from the vegetable kingdom, 11.

NOTES ON CHAP. LXI.

Verse 1. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me—(The Spirit of Jehovah is upon me)] The Septuagint, Vulgate, and St. Luke (chap. iv. 18.) and a MS., and two old Editions, omit the word אדני adonai, the Lord, which was probably added to the Text through the superstition of the Jews, to prevent the pronunciation of the word יהוה yehovah, following. See Kennicott on the State of the Printed Hebrew Text. Vol. i. p. 510.

[In most of Isaiah's prophecies there is a primary and secondary sense; or a remote subject illustrated by one that is near. The deliverance of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon is constantly used to shadow forth the salvation of men by Jesus Christ. Even the prophet himself is a typical person; and is sometimes intended to represent the great Saviour. It is evident from Luke iv. 18. that this is a prophecy of our blessed Lord and His preaching; and yet it is as evident that it primarily refers to Isaiah preaching the glad tidings of deliverance to the Jews.]

The opening of the prison—(Perfect liberty)] פקח קוח pakach coach. Ten MSS. [of Kennicott, several of De Rossi, and one of my own, with the Complutensian,] have פקחקוח pekachcoach, in one word; and so the Septuagint and Vulgate appear to have taken it: [not merely opening of prisons, but every kind of liberty; complete redemption.]

The proclaiming of perfect liberty to the bound, and the year of acceptance with Jehovah, is a manifest allusion to the proclaiming of the year of jubilee by sound of trumpet. See Lev. xxv. 9, &c. This was a year of general release, of debts and obligations,—of bond men and women,—of lands and possessions, which had been sold from the families and tribes to which they belonged. Our Saviour, by applying this text to Himself, (Luke iv. 18, 19.) a text so manifestly relating to the institution above-mentioned, plainly declares the typical design of that institution.

Verse 3. To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion—(To impart gladness to the mourners of Sion)] A word necessary to the sense is certainly lost in this place, of which the ancient Versions have preserved no traces. Houbigant, by conjecture, inserts the word ששון sason, gladness, taken from the line next but one below, where it stands opposed to אבל abal, sorrow, or mourning, as the word lost here was to אבלי abeley, mourners; I follow him.

Beauty for ashes—(A beautiful crown instead of ashes)] In times of mourning the Jews put on sackcloth, or coarse and sordid raiment, and spread dust and ashes on their heads; on the contrary, splendid clothing and ointment poured on the head were the signs of joy. "Feign thyself to be a mourner," says Joab to the woman of Tekoah, "and put on now mourning apparel, and anoint not thyself with oil," 2 Sam. xiv. 2. These customs are at large expressed in the Book of Judith: "She pulled off the sackcloth which she had on, and put off the garments of her widowhood, and washed her body all over with water, and anointed herself with precious ointment, and braided the hair of her head, and put on a tire [mitre, marg.] upon it; and put on her garments of gladness." Chap. x. 3.

פאר תחת אפר phear tachat apher, glory for ashes; a paronomasia which the prophet often uses: a chaplet, crown, or other ornament of the head, (for so the Vulgate renders the word here and in the 10th verse; in which last place the

4 And they shall [c] build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations.

5 And [d] strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your ploughmen and your vinedressers.

Septuagint agree in the same rendering,) instead of dust and ashes, which before covered it; and the costly ointments used on occasions of festivity, instead of the ensigns of sorrow.

Trees of righteousness—(Trees approved)] Heb. oaks of righteousness, or truth; that is, such as by their flourishing condition should show that they were indeed "the scion of God's planting, and the work of His hands:" under which images, in the preceding Chapter, ver. 21. the true servants of God, in a highly improved state of the church, were represented; that is, says Vitringa on that place, "commendable for the strength of their faith, their durability, and firmness."

Verse 4. (And they that spring from thee)] A word is lost here likewise. After ובנו ubanu, they shall build, add ממך mimeca, they that spring from thee. Four MSS. have it so, (two of them ancient,) [and one of mine has it in the margin] and it is confirmed by chap. lviii. 12. where the sentence is the very same, this word being here added. Kimchi makes the same remark:—"the word ממך mimeca is omitted here: but is found in chap. lviii. 12."

[The desolations of many generations—It seems that these words cannot refer to the Jews in the Babylonish captivity, for they were not there many generations: but it may refer to their dispersions and state of ruin since the advent of our Lord; and consequently this may be a promise of the restoration of the Jewish people.

Verse 5. Strangers shall—feed your flocks—Gentiles shall first preach to you the salvation of Christ, and feed with Divine knowledge the Jewish congregations.]

Verse 7. For your shame (Instead of your shame)] The translation of this verse, which is very confused, and probably corrupted in the Hebrew, is taken from the Syriac Version; except that the latter has not expressed the word משנה mishneh, double, in the first place. Five MSS. add the conjunction ו vau, to שמחת shimchath. The Syriac reads תרנו tirenu, and תירשו tirashu, in the second person, "ye shall rejoice, ye shall inherit." And for להם lahem, to them, two MSS. (one of them ancient,) three of De Rossi's, and the Syriac, read לכם lacem, to you, in the second person likewise.

The Version of the Septuagint is imperfect in this place: the first half of the verse is entirely omitted in all the printed copies. It is supplied by MSS. Pachom. and 1. D. 11. in the following manner:—

> Αντι της αισχυνης υμων της διπλης,
> Και αντι της εντροπης αγαλλιασεται ἡ μερις αυτων·
> Δια τουτο την γην αυτων εκ δευτερου——

Instead of your shame ye shall have double,
And instead of your confusion their portion shall rejoice;
Therefore, they shall possess their land a second time.

In which the two MSS. agree, except that 1. D. 11. has by mistake ἡμερας day, for ἡ μερις, the part. And Cod. Marchal. in the margin, has pretty nearly the same supplement as from Theodotion.

Verse 8. I hate robbery for burnt offering—(Who hate rapine and iniquity)] The Syriac and Chaldee prefix the conjunction ו vau, instead of the preposition ב beth, to עולה âvelah, which they render iniquity or oppression: and so the Septuagint, αδικιας. [The difference lies in the punctuation; בעולה beôlah, in a burnt offering, בעולה be-âvelah, in iniquity. The letters are the same in both words. Five of De Rossi's MSS. confirm this reading.

Verse 9. Their seed shall be known among the Gentiles—Both Jews and Gentiles are to make but one fold under one Shepherd, Christ Jesus. But still, notwithstanding this, they may retain their peculiarity and national distinction,—so that though they are known to be Christians, yet

Verse 10. I will greatly rejoice in the LORD—These may be the words of the Jews now converted, and brought into the church of Christ, and with the Gentiles made fellow-heirs of the blessings of the New Covenant.]

As a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments—(As the bridegroom decketh himself with a priestly crown)] An allusion to the magnificent dress of the high priest, when performing his functions; and particularly to the mitre, and crown, or plate of gold, on the front of it, Exod. xxix. 6. The bonnet or mitre of the priests also was made, as Moses expresses it, "for glory and for beauty," Exod. xxviii. 40. It is difficult to give its full force to the Prophet's metaphor in another language. The Version of Aquila and Symmachus come nearest to it: ὡς νυμφιον ἱερατευομενον στεφανῳ. ["as a bridegroom decked with a priestly crown."]

Verse 11. The Lord GOD—(The Lord JEHOVAH)] "אדני adonai, the Lord, makes the line longer than the preceding and following; and the Septuagint Alexandrian, (and MSS. Pachom. and 1. D. 11.) and Arabic, do not render it. Hence it seems to be interpolated." Dr. JUBB. Three MSS. have it not. See on ver. 1. of this Chapter. [Both words אדני יהוה adonai yehovah, are wanting in one of my MSS.: but are supplied in the margin by a later hand.]

CHAPTER LXII.

The Prophet opens this Chapter with ardent prayers that the happy period of reconciliation just now promised, and here again foretold, may be hastened, 1—5. He then calls upon the faithful, particularly the priests and Levites, to join him, urging the promises, and even the oath, of Jehovah as the foundation of their request, 6—9. And, relying on this oath, he goes on to speak of the general restoration promised, as already performing; and calls to the people to march forth, and to the various nations among whom they are dispersed to prepare the way for them, as God had caused the order for their return to be universally proclaimed, 10—12.

Verse 4. Thy land Beulah—בעולה bêulah, married. In the prophets, a desolate land is represented under the notion of a widow;—an inhabited land under that of a married woman, who has both a husband and children.]

Verse 5. For as a young man—so—The particles of comparison are not at present in the Hebrew Text: but the Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldee, seem to have read in their copies כ caph prefixed to the verb, כי כיבעל ki keyebôel, which seems to have been omitted by mistake of a transcriber, occasioned by the repetition of the same two letters. And before the verb in the second line a MS. adds כן ken, so; which the Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldee, seem also to have had in their copies. In the third line of this verse the same MS. has in like manner וכמשוש ve-kemasos, and two MSS. and the Babylonish Talmud כמשוש kemasos, adding the כ caph; and in the fourth line, the Babylonish Talmud likewise adds כן ken, so, before the verb.

Sir John Chardin, in his Note on this place, tells us, "that it is the custom in the East for youths, that were never married, always to marry virgins; and widowers, however young, to marry widows." HARMER, Observ. ii. p. 482.

[So shall thy sons marry thee.—For בניך baniac, thy sons, Bishop Lowth reads, restorer, or builder—as he does not consider the word as the plural of בן ben, a son; but the participle benoni of the verb בנה banah, he built. I do not see that we gain much by this translation. Thy sons shall dwell in thee, Vulgate; and so the Septuagint and Chaldee.

Verse 6. Ye that make mention of the Lord keep not silence] The faithful, and in particular the priests and Levites, are exhorted by the Prophet to beseech God with unremitted importunity, (compare Luke xviii. 1, &c.) to hasten the redemption of Sion. The image in this place is taken from the temple service; in which there was appointed a constant watch, day and night, by the Levites: and among them this seems to have belonged particularly to the singers, see 1 Chron. ix. 33. Now the watches in the East, even to this day, are performed by a loud cry from time to time of the watchmen, to mark the time, and that very frequently, and in order to show that they themselves are constantly attentive to their duty. Hence the watchmen are said by the Prophet, chap. lii. 8. to lift up their voice; and here they are commanded, not to keep silence; and the greatest reproach to them is, that they are dumb dogs; they cannot bark; dreamers, sluggards loving to slumber, chap. lvi. 10. "The watchmen in the camp of the caravans go their rounds crying one after another, 'God is One, He is merciful:' and often add, 'Take heed to yourselves.'" TAVERNIER, Voyage de Perse, Liv. i. chap. x. The hundred and thirty-fourth Psalm gives us an example of the temple watch. The whole Psalm is nothing more than the alternate cry of two different divisions of the watch. The first watch addresses the second, reminding them of their duty; the second answers by a solemn blessing. The address and the answer seem both to be a set form, which each division proclaimed, or sung aloud, at stated intervals, to notify the time of the night:—

FIRST CHORUS.

"Come on now, bless ye JEHOVAH, all ye servants of JEHOVAH;
Ye that stand in the house of JEHOVAH in the nights;
Lift up your hands toward the sanctuary,
And bless ye JEHOVAH."]

SECOND CHORUS.

"JEHOVAH bless thee out of Sion;
He that made heaven and earth."

["Ye who stand in the place of the watch, in the house of the sanctuary of the Lord; and ye praise through the nights:"]—says the Chaldee paraphrase on the second line. And this explains what is here particularly meant by proclaiming, or making remembrance of, the name of JEHOVAH: the form, which the watch made use of on these occasions, was always a short sentence, expressing some pious sentiment, of which JEHOVAH was the subject; and it is remarkable, that the custom in the East in this respect also still continues the very same; as it appears by the example above given from Tavernier.

And this observation leads to the explanation of an obscure passage in the prophet Malachi, chap. ii. 12.

"JEHOVAH will cut off the man that doeth this;
The watchman and the answerer, from the tabernacles of Jacob;
And him that presenteth an offering to JEHOVAH God of hosts."

עֵר וְעֹנֶה ʽêr ve-ânah, the master and the scholar, says our translation after the Vulgate: the son and the grandson, says the Syriac and Chaldee as little to the purpose: Arias Montanus has given it, vigilantem et respondentem, "the watchman and the answerer;" that is, the Levite: and "him that presenteth an offering to JEHOVAH;" that is, the priest. [Ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence—Is not this clause an address to the ministers of Christ, to continue in supplication for the conversion of the Jewish people? Kimchi seems to think that the watchmen are the interceding angels!]

Verse 9. But they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the LORD] This and the following line have reference to the law of Moses: "Thou mayest not eat within thy gates the tithe of thy corn, or of thy wine, or of thy oil;—but thou must eat them before the Lord thy God, in the place which the Lord thy God shall choose,—" Deut. xii. 17, 18. "And when ye shall come into the land, and shall have planted all manner of trees for food, then ye shall count the fruit thereof as uncircumcised: three years it shall be as uncircumcised unto you; it shall not be eaten of. But in the fourth year all the fruit thereof shall be holy to praise the Lord withal. And in the fifth year ye shall eat the fruit thereof," Lev. xix 23—25. This clearly explains the force of the expressions, "shall praise JEHOVAH," and "shall drink it in my sacred courts."

Five MSS. (one ancient) have יאכלוהו yeakaluhu, they shall eat it, fully expressed: and so likewise ישתוהו yishituhu, they shall drink it, is found in nineteen MSS., three of them ancient.

Verse 10. Of the people—(For the people)] Before the word העם haûm, the people, two MSS. insert יהוה yehovah, Jehovah; one MS. adds the same word after; and eight MSS. (three ancient,) instead of העם haûm, have יהוה yehovah, and so likewise one Edition. But though it makes a good sense either way, I believe it to be an interpolation, as the ancient Versions do not favour it. The Septuagint indeed read עמי âmmi, my people.

[Verse 11. Unto the end of the world—אל קצה הארץ al ketsah haarets—Instead of אל al, to, עד âd, UNTO, is the reading of two of Kennicott's MSS.; and one of mine has מקצה miketseh, "FROM the end of the earth."]

Behold, thy salvation cometh—(Lo, thy Saviour cometh)] So all the ancient Versions render the word ישׁע yishûac.

Behold, his reward] See Note on chap. xl. 10, 11. [This reward He carries as it were in His hand. His work is before Him—He perfectly knows what is to be done; and is perfectly able to do it. He will do what God should do, and what man cannot do; and men should be workers with Him. Let no man fear that the promise shall not be fulfilled on account of its difficulty, its greatness, the hinderances in the way, or the unworthiness of the person to whom it is made. It is God's work; He is able to do it, and as willing as He is able.

Verse 12. They shall call them—These characteristics seem to be put in their inverted order.—1. God will not forsake them. 2. They shall be sought out. 3. They shall be redeemed. And, 4. Be in consequence, a holy people. 1. When God calls, it is a proof that He has not forsaken. 2. When He seeks, it is a proof He is waiting to be gracious. 3. When the atonement is exhibited, all things are then ready. 4. And when that is received, holiness of heart and life is then to be kept continually in view, as this is the genuine work of God's spirit; and without holiness none shall see the Lord.]

CHAPTER LXIII.

The Prophet, (or rather the church he represents) sees the great Deliverer, long promised and expected, making His appearance, after having crushed His enemies, like grapes in the wine-vat. The comparison suggests a lively idea of the wrath of Omnipotence, which its unhappy objects can no more resist than the grapes can resist the treader. Indeed there is so much pathos, energy, and sublimity, in this remarkable passage, as hardly any thing can be conceived to exceed. The period to which it refers must be the same with that predicted in the nineteenth chapter of the Revelation, some parts of which are expressed in the same terms with this, and plainly enough refer to the very sudden and fatal overthrow of Antichrist, and of all his adherents and auxiliaries, of which the destruction of Babylon, the capital of Chaldea, and of Bozra, the chief city of the Edomites, was the prototype, 1—6. At the seventh verse commences a penitential confession and supplication of the Jews, as uttered in their present dispersion, 7—19.

The very remarkable passage with which this Chapter begins, seems to me to be in a manner detached from the rest, and to stand singly by itself; having no immediate connexion with what goes before, or with what follows; otherwise than as it may pursue the general design, and stand in its proper place in the order of prophecy. It is by many learned interpreters supposed that Judas Maccabeus and his victories make the subject of it. What claim Judas can have to so great an honour will, I think, be very difficult to make out; or how the attributes of the great person introduced can possibly suit him. Could Judas call himself the announcer of righteousness, mighty to save? Could he talk of the day of vengeance being in his heart, and the year of his redeemed being come? or that his own arm wrought salvation for him? Besides, what were the great exploits of Judas in regard to the Idumeans? he overcame them in battle and slew twenty thousand of them. And John Hyrcanus, his brother Simon's son and successor, who is called in to help out the accomplishment of the prophecy, gave them another defeat sometime afterward, and compelled them by force to become proselytes to the Jewish religion, and to submit to circumcision: after which they were incorporated with the Jews, and became one people with them. Are these events adequate to the prophet's lofty prediction? Was it so great an action to win a battle with considerable slaughter of the enemy; or to force a whole nation by dint of the sword into Judaism? or was the conversion of the Idumeans, however effected, and their admission into the church of God, equivalent to a most grievous judgment and destruction threatened in the severest terms? But here is another very material circumstance to be considered, which, I presume, entirely excludes Judas Maccabeus, and even the Idumeans, properly so called. For the Idumea of the prophet's time was quite a different country from that which Judas conquered. For during the Babylonish captivity the Nabatheans had driven the Edomites out of their country; who upon that took possession of the southern parts of Judea, and settled themselves there; that is, in the country of the whole tribe of Simeon, and in half of that of Judah. See Prideaux, ad An. 740, and 165. And the metropolis of the Edomites, and of the country thence called Idumea, which Judas took, was Hebron, 1 Macc. v. 65. not Botsra.

I conclude, therefore, that this prophecy has not the least relation to Judas Maccabeus. It may be asked, to whom, and to what event does it relate? I can only answer, that I know of no event in history to which from its importance and circumstances it can be applied: unless perhaps to the destruction of Jerusalem, and the Jewish polity; which in the gospel is called the coming of Christ, and the days o vengeance, Matt. xvi. 28. Luke xxi. 22. But, though this prophecy must have its accomplishment, there is no necessity of supposing that it has been already accomplished. There are prophecies, which intimate a great slaughter of the enemies of God and His people, which remain to be fulfilled; these in Ezekiel, chap. xxxviii. and in the Revelation of St. John, chap. xx. are called Gog and Magog. This propheey of Isaiah may possibly refer to the same or the like event. We need not be at a loss to determine the Person who is

NOTES ON CHAP. LXIII.

[Verse 1. Who is this that cometh from Edom—Probably both Edom and Bozrah are only figurative expressions to point out the place in which God should discomfit His enemies. Edom signifies red; and Bozrah, a vintage. Kimchi interprets the whole, of the destruction of Rome.]

I that speak in righteousness—(I who publish righteousness)] A MS. has המדבר ha-medabber, with the demonstrative article added, with greater force and emphasis; The announcer of righteousness. A MS. has צדקה tsedekah, without ב be, prefixed; and so the Septuagint and Vulgate. And thirty-eight MSS. (seven ancient) [of Dr. Kennicott, and many of De Rossi, and one of my own,] add the conjunction ו vau to רב rab, and mighty; which the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate, confirm.

Verse 2. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel] For ללבושך lilebusheca, twenty-nine MSS. (nine ancient) [of Kennicott, and thirty of De Rossi,] and one edition, have ללבושיך lilebusheyca, in the plural; so the Septuagint and Syriac. And all the ancient Versions read it with מ mem, instead of the first ל lamed. But the true reading is probably מלבושך melebusheca, in the singular, as in ver. 3.

[Verse 3. And of the people there was none with me—I was wholly abandoned by them: but a good meaning is, No man has had any part in making the atonement; it is entirely the work of the Messiah alone. No created being could have any part in a sacrifice that was to be of infinite merit.]

And I will stain—(And I have stained)] For אגאלתי egaleti, a verb of very irregular formation, compounded, as they say, of the two forms of the preterit and future, a MS. has אגאלהו egalehu, the regular future with a pleonastic pronoun added to it, according to the Hebrew idiom. "And all my raiment, I have stained it." The necessity of the verb's being in the past time seems to have given occasion to the alteration made in the end of the word. The conversive ו vau, at the beginning of the sentence affects the verb, though not joined to it; of which there are many examples:

âniteni remim umikerney

"And thou wilt hear me, (or hear thou me) from among the horns of the unicorns." Psa. xxii. 21.

[Instead of על בגדי âl begadai, upon my garments; one of my ancient MSS. has לארץ בגדי laarets begadai, to the earth: but this word is partly effaced, and על âl written in the margin by a later hand.]

Verse 5. And my fury—(And mine indignation)] For וחמתי vachamati, nineteen MSS. (three ancient) [of Kennicott, nine of De Rossi, and one of mine,] and four editions, have וצדקתי vetsedekati, and my righteousness: from chap. lix. 16. which, I suppose, the transcriber retained in his memory. [It is true that the Versions are in favour of the common reading: but that noticed above seems to stand on good authority, and is a reading both pleasing and impressive. Opposite in the margin, my MS. has the common reading by a later hand.]

Verse 6. And make them drunk in my fury—(And I crushed them in mine indignation)] For ואשכרם veeshekrem, and I made them drunken, twenty-seven MSS. (three ancient) [twelve of De Rossi] and the old edition of 1488, have ואשברם veeshabarem, and I crushed them: and so the Syriac and Chaldee. The Septuagint have omitted this whole line.

[Verse 7. I will mention the loving-kindnesses of the LORD—The Prophet connects the preceding mercies of God to the Jews with the present prospect he has of their redemption by the Messiah: thus making a circle in which eternal goodness revolves.] The remaining part of this Chapter, with the whole Chapter following, contains a penitential confession and supplication of the Israelites in their present state of his mercies, and according to the multitude of his loving-kindnesses.

8 For he said, Surely they are my people, children that will not lie: so he was their Saviour.

9 [a] In all their affliction he was afflicted, [b] and the angel of his presence saved them: [c] in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and [d] he bare them, and carried them all the days of old.

10 But they [e] rebelled, and [f] vexed his holy Spirit: [g] therefore he was turned to be their enemy, and he fought against them.

dispersion, in which they have so long marvellously subsisted, and still continue to subsist, as a people; cast out of their country; without any proper form of civil polity, or religious worship; their temple destroyed, their city desolated and lost to them; and their whole nation scattered over the face of the earth; apparently deserted and cast off by the God of their fathers, as no longer His peculiar people.

They begin with acknowledging God's great mercies and favours to their nation; and the ungrateful returns made to them on their part; that by their disobedience they had forfeited the protection of God, and had caused Him to become their Adversary. And now the prophet represents them, induced by the memory of the great things that God had done for them, as addressing their humble supplication for the renewal of His mercies. They beseech Him to regard them in consideration of His former loving-kindness; they acknowledge Him for their Father and Creator; they confess their wickedness and hardness of heart; they entreat His forgiveness: and deplore their present miserable condition under which they have so long suffered. It seems designed as a formulary of humiliation for the Israelites, in order to their conversion.

The whole passage is in the elegiac form, pathetic and elegant: but it has suffered much in our present copy by the mistakes of transcribers.

The praises of the LORD—(The praise of JEHOVAH)] For תהלות tehilloth, plural, twenty-nine MSS. (three ancient) and two editions, have תהלת tehilleth, in the singular number: and so the Vulgate renders it; and one of the Greek versions, in the margin of Cod. Marchal, and in the text of MSS. Pachom. and I. D. II. την αινεσιν Κυριου, "the praise of the Lord."

Verses 8, 9. So he was their Saviour. In all their affliction—(And he became their Saviour in all their distress)] I have followed the translation of the Septuagint in the latter part of the eighth, and the former part of the ninth verse; which agrees with the present text, a little differently divided, as to the members of the sentence. They read מכל micol, out of all, instead of בכל becol, in all, which makes no difference in the sense; and צר tsar, they understand as צִיר tsir. Και εγενετο αυτοις εις σωτηριαν εκ πασης θλιψεως αυτων· ου πρεσβυς, ουδε αγγελος. "And he was salvation to them in all their tribulation; neither an ambassador nor an angel, but Himself, saved them." An angel of His presence means an angel of superior order, in immediate attendance upon God. So the angel of the Lord says to Zacharias, "I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God." Luke i. 19. The presence of JEHOVAH, Exod. xxxiii. 14, 15. and the Angel, Exod. xxxiii. 20, 21. is JEHOVAH Himself: here an angel of His presence is opposed to JEHOVAH Himself; as an angel is in the following passages of the same book of Exodus. After their idolatrous worshipping of the golden calf, "when God had said to Moses, I will send an angel before thee—I will not go up in the midst of thee—the people mourned," Exod. xxxiii. 2—4. God afterwards comforts Moses, by saying, "My presence" (that is, I Myself in Person, and not by an angel,) "will go with thee," ver. 14. Αυτος προπορευσομαι σου, "I Myself will go before thee," as the Septuagint render it.

The MSS. and editions are much divided between the two readings of the text and margin in the common copies, לא lo, not, and לו, lo, to him. All the ancient Versions express the chetib, reading לא lo, not.

And he bare them and carried them all the days of old—(And he took them up, and he bore them, all the days of old)] See the note on chap. xlvi. 3.

Verse 10. And he fought against them] Twenty-six MSS (ten ancient,) and the first edition, with another, add the conjunction ו vau, והוא vehu, and he.

Verse 11. Moses, and his people—(Moses his servant)] For עמו âmmo, his people, two MSS. (one of them ancient) [and one of my own ancient, and one of De Rossi,] and the old edition of 1488, and the Syriac, read עבדו âbedo, his servant. These two words have been mistaken one for the other in other places: lxxviii. 71. and lxxx. 5. for עמו âmmo, "his people," and עמך âmmeca, "thy people," the Septuagint read עבדו âbdo, "his servant," and עבדך âbdeca, "thy servant."

shepherd of his flock? where, &c.—(How he brought them up from the sea, with the shepherd of his flock; how, &c.)] For איה eieh, how, interrogative, twice, the Syriac version reads אין eic, how, without interrogation; as that particle is used in the Syriac language, and sometimes in the Hebrew. See Ruth iii. 18. Eccles. ii. 16.

The shepherd of his flock] That is, Moses. The MSS. and editions vary in this word: some have it רעה rôeh, in the singular number; so the Septuagint, Syriac, and Chaldee. Others רעי roey, plural, the shepherds.

[Verses 13, 14. That led them through the deep—as a beast goeth down into the valley—In both these verses there is an allusion to the Israelites going through the Red Sea, in the bottom of which they found no more inconvenience than a horse would in running in the desert, where there was neither stone nor mud; nor a beast in the valley, where all was plain and smooth.]

Verse 14. The Spirit of the LORD caused him to rest—(The Spirit of JEHOVAH conducted them)] For תניחנו tenichenu, caused him to rest, the Septuagint have ὡδηγησεν αυτους, conducted them; they read תנחם tenechem. The Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate, read תנחנו tenechino, conducted him. Two MSS. have the word without the י yod in the middle.

Verse 15. And thy strength—(And thy mighty power)] For גבורתיך gebureteyca, plural, thirty-two MSS. (seven ancient) [and twenty-one of De Rossi,] and seven editions, have גבורתך geburteca, singular.

Are they restrained from us] For אלי ali, from, (or in regard to,) me, the Septuagint and Syriac read אלינו alinu, from us.

Verse 16. Our Redeemer; thy name is from everlasting—(O deliver us for the sake of thy name)] The present text reads, as our translation has rendered it, "Our Redeemer, thy name is from everlasting. But instead of מעולם meôlam, from everlasting, an ancient MS. has למען lemâan, for the sake of, which gives a much better sense. To show the impropriety of the present reading, it is sufficient to observe, that the Septuagint and Syriac translators thought it necessary to add עלינו âleynu, upon us, to make out the sense; that is, "Thy name is upon us, or we are called by thy name, from of old." And the Septuagint have rendered גאלנו goâlenu, in the imperative mood, ῥυσαι ἡμας, "deliver us."

[Verse 17. Why hast thou made us to err—A mere Hebraism, for, why hast thou permitted us to err. So, lead us not into temptation: do not suffer us to fall into that to which we are tempted.]

Verse 18. The people of thy holiness have possessed it but a little while—(It is little that they have taken possession of thy holy mountain)] The difficulty of the construction in this place is acknowledged on all hands. Vitringa prefers that sense as the least exceptionable, which our translation has expressed: in which, however, there seems to me to be a great defect; that is, the want of what in the speaker's view must have been the principal part of the proposition, the object of the verb, the land, or it, as our translators supply it; which surely ought to have been expressed, and not to have been left to be supplied by the reader. In a word, I believe, there is some mistake in the text; and here the Septuagint help us out; they had in their copy הר har, mountain, instead of עם âm, people, τον ορους τον ἁγιον σου, the mountain of thy Holy One. "Not only our enemies have taken possession of mount Sion, and trodden down Thy sanctuary; even far worse than this has befallen us: Thou hast long since utterly cast us off; and dost not consider us as Thy peculiar people."

CHAPTER LXIV.

The whole of this Chapter, which is very highly pathetic and tender, may be considered as a formulary of prayer and humiliation intended for the Jews in order to their conversion, 1—12.

NOTES ON CHAP. LXIV.

[Verse 1. O that thou wouldest rend the heavens—This seems to allude to the wonderful manifestation of God upon Mount Sinai.]

Verse 2. As when the melting fire burneth—(As the fire kindleth the dry fuel)] המסים hamasim. "It means dry stubble, and the root is המס hamas," says Rabbi Jonah, apud Sal. ben Melec in loc. Which is approved by Schultens, Orig. Hebr. p. 30.

"The fire kindling the stubble does not seem like enough to the melting of the mountains to be brought as a simile to it. What if thus?—

'That the mountains might flow down at Thy presence!
As the fire of things smelted, burneth,
As the fire causeth the waters to boil—'

There is no doubt of the Hebrew words of the second line bearing that version." Dr. Jubb.

I submit these different interpretations to the Reader's judgment. For my own part, I am inclined to think, that the Text is much corrupted in this place. The ancient Versions have not the least traces of either of the above interpretations. The Septuagint, and Syriac agree exactly together in rendering this line by, "As the wax melteth before the fire," which can by no means be reconciled with the present Text. The Vulgate, for המסים hamasim, read ימסו yemasu.

That the nations] For גוים goyim, the nations, four MSS. (one of them ancient,) have הרים harim, the mountains.

Verse 4. For since the beginning of the world men have not heard—(For never have men heard)] St. Paul is generally supposed to have quoted this passage of Isaiah, 1 Cor. ii. 9.; and Clemens Romanus in his First Epistle has made the same quotation, very nearly in the same words with the apostle. But the citation is so very different both from the Hebrew Text and the version of the Septuagint, that it seems very difficult, if not impossible, to reconcile them by any literal emendation, without going beyond the bounds of temperate criticism. One clause, "neither hath it entered into the heart of man," (which, by the way, is a phrase purely Hebrew, עלה על לב âlah âl leb, and should seem to belong to the prophet,) is wholly left out; and another is repeated without force or propriety; viz. "nor perceived by the ear," after, "never have heard:" and the sense and expression of the apostle is far preferable to that of the Hebrew text. Under these difficulties I am at a loss what to do better, than to offer to the Reader this, perhaps disagreeable, alternative: either to consider the Hebrew text and Septuagint in this place as wilfully disguised and corrupted by the Jews; of which practice, in regard to other quotations in the New Testament from the Old, they lie under strong suspicions; see Dr. Owen on the Version of the Septuagint, sect. vi—ix.; or to look upon St. Paul's quotation as not made from Isaiah, but from one or other of the two apocryphal books, intituled The Ascension of Esaiah, and the Apocalypse of Elias, in both of which this passage was found; and the apostle is by some supposed in other places to have quoted such apocryphal writings. As the first of these conclusions will perhaps not easily be admitted by many; so I must fairly warn my Readers, that the second is treated by Jerom as little better than heresy. See his Comment on this place of Isaiah.

[I would read the whole verse thus:—"Yea, from the time of old they have not heard, they have not hearkened to, an eye hath not seen a God besides thee. He shall work for that one that waiteth for Him." This, I really think on the whole, to be the best translation of the original.]

The variations on this place are as follows:—for שמעי shimêu, they have heard, a MS. and the Septuagint read שמענו shimenu, we have heard: for the second לא lo, not, sixty-nine MSS. and four Editions have ולא velo, and not; and the Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate. And so ועין veâin, and eye, Septuagint and Syriac. את et, the, (emphatic) is added before אלהים elohim, God, in MS. Bodl. למחכי lemichakey, to them that wait, plural, two MSS. and all the ancient Versions.

Verse 5. Thou meetest him that rejoiceth and worketh righteousness—(Thou meetest with joy those who work righteousness)] The Syraic, reads—פוגע אתה שש בעשי pogâ attah shesh baâshi, as above.

In those is continuance, and we shall be saved—(Because of our deeds; for we have been rebellious)] בהם עולם ונושע bahem ôlam ve-nusheâ. I am fully persuaded that these words, as they stand in the present Hebrew Text, are utterly unintelligible; there is no doubt of the meaning of each word separately; but put together they make no sense at all. I conclude, therefore, that the copy has suffered by mistakes of transcribers in this place. The corruption is of long standing; for the ancient interpreters were as much at a loss for the meaning as the moderns, and give nothing satisfactory. The Septuagint render these words by διὰ τουτο ἐπλανηθημεν, therefore we have erred: they seem to have read עליהם נפשע âleyhem nepheshâ, without helping the sense. In this difficulty what remains, but to have recourse to conjecture. Archbishop Secker was dissatisfied with the present reading: he proposed חבט עלינו ונושע hebet âlinu venoshâ; "look upon us, and we shall, or that we may, be saved:" which gives a very good sense, but seems to have no sufficient foundation. Besides, the word ינושע venosheâ, which is attended with great difficulties, seems to be corrupted, as well as the two preceding; and the true reading of it is, I think, given by the Septuagint, ונפשע venephshâ, ἐπλανηθημεν, we have erred, (so they render the verb פשע pashâ, chap. xlvi. 8. and Ezek. xxiii. 12.) parallel to ונחטא venachata, ἡμαρτομεν, we have sinned. For בהם עולם bahem ôlam, which mean nothing, I would propose המעלינו hamaâleleynu, because of our deeds; which I presume was first altered to במעלליהם bemeâleleyhem, an easy and common mistake of the third person plural of the pronoun for the first, (see Note on chap. xxxiii. 2.) and then with some further alteration to בהם עולם behem ôlam. The עליהם âlihem, which the Septuagint probably found in their copy, seems to be a remnant of במעלליהם bemeâleleyhem.

This, it may be said, is imposing your sense upon the Prophet. It may be so; for perhaps these may not be the very words of the Prophet: but however it is better than to impose upon him what makes no sense at all; as they generally do, who pretend to render such corrupted passages. For instance, our own translators: "in those is continuance, and we shall be saved:" in those—in whom, or what? There is no antecedent to the relative. In the ways of God, say some: with our fathers, says Vitringa, joining it in construction with the verb קצפת katsephath, "thou hast been angry with them, our fathers;" and putting ונחטא venechata, for we have sinned, in a parenthesis. But there has not been any mention of our fathers; and the whole sentence, thus disposed, is utterly discordant from the Hebrew idiom and construction. In those is continuance: עולם ôlam, means a destined, but hidden and unknown, portion of time; but cannot mean continuation of time, or continuance, as it is here rendered. Such forced interpretations are equally conjectural with the boldest critical emendation; and generally have this further disadvantage, that they are altogether unworthy of the Sacred Writers.

[Coverdale renders the passage thus:—But lo, thou art angrie, for we offende, and have been ever in synne; and there is not one whole. This is, I am afraid, making a sense.

After all that this very learned prelate has done to reduce these words to sense and meaning, I am afraid we are still far from the Prophet's mind. Probably בהם bahem, in them, refers to דרכיך darkeyca, thy ways, above. עולם ôlam, may be rendered of old, or during the whole of the Jewish œconomy; and ונושע venosheâ, "and shall we be saved?" Thus—Thou art wroth, for we have sinned in them (thy ways) of old; and can we be saved? For, we are all as an unclean thing, &c.

Verse 6. As filthy rags—עדים îddim. Rab. Mosheh ben Maimon interpretatur עדים îddim, vestes quibus mulier se abstergit post congressum cum marito suo. Alii pannus menstruatus. Alii panni mulieris parientis.—And we ben made as unclene alle we: and as the cloth of the woman rooten blode flowing, all our rigtwisnesses. Old MS. Bible. If preachers knew properly the meaning of this word,—would they make such a liberal use of it in their public ministry?—And why should any use a word, the meaning of which he does not understand? CHAPTER LXV.

We have here a vindication of God's dealings with the Jews, 1, 2. To this end the Prophet points out their great hypocrisy, and gives a particular enumeration of their dreadful abominations, many of which were committed under the specious guise of sanctity, 3—5. For their horrid impieties (recorded in writing before Jehovah) the wrath of God shall certainly come upon them to the uttermost; a prediction which was exactly fulfilled in the first and second centuries in the reigns of the Roman emperors Vespasian, Titus, and Hadrian, when the whole Jewish polity was dissolved, and the people dispersed all over the world, 6, 7. Though God had rejected the Jews, and called the Gentiles, who sought Him not, (Rom. ix. 24—26,) yet a remnant from among the former shall be preserved to whom He will in due time make good all His promises, 8—10. Denunciation of Divine vengeance against those idolaters who set in order a table for Gad, and fill out a libation to Meni, ancient idolatries, which, from the context, and from the chronological order of the events predicted, have a plain reference to the idolatries practised by Antichrist under the guise of Christianity, 11, 12. Dreadful fate which awaits these gross idolaters beautifully contrasted with the great blessedness reserved for the righteous, 13—16. Future restoration of the posterity of Jacob, and the happy state of the world in general from that most glorious epoch, represented by the strong figure of the creation of NEW heavens and a NEW earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, and into which no distress shall be permitted to enter, 17—19. In this new state of things the term of human life shall be greatly protracted, and shall possess none of that uncertainty which attaches to it in "the heavens and the earth which are now." This is elegantly illustrated by the longevity of a tree; manifestly alluding to the oak or cedar of Lebanon, some individuals of which are known to have lived from seven to ten centuries, 20—23. Beautiful figures shadowing forth the profound peace and harmony of the church of Jesus Christ, which shall immediately follow the total overthrow of Antichrist; with a most gracious promise that the great chain of Omnipotence shall be put upon every adversary, so that none will be able any longer to hurt and destroy in all God's holy mountain, 24, 25.

This Chapter contains a defence of God's proceedings in regard to the Jews, with reference to their complaint in the Chapter preceding. God is introduced declaring, that He had called the Gentiles, though they had not sought Him; and had rejected His own people, for their refusal to attend to His repeated call; for their obstinate disobedience, their idolatrous practices, and detestable hypocrisy. That nevertheless he would not destroy them all; but would preserve a remnant, to whom He would make good His ancient promises. Severe punishments are threatened to the apostates; and great rewards are promised to the obedient in a future flourishing state of the church.

NOTES ON CHAP. LXV.

Verse 1. I am sought of them that asked not for me—(I am made known to those that asked not for me)] נדרשתי nedrashti, εμφανης εγενομην, the Septuagint, Alexandrian, and St. Paul, Rom. x. 20.; who has however inverted the order of the phrases, εμφανης εγενομην, I was made manifest, and ευρεθην, I was found, from that which they have in the Septuagint. נדרשתי nedrashti means, "I am sought so as to be found." Vitringa. If this be the true meaning of the word, then שאלו shaalu, that asked, which follows, should seem defective, the verb wanting its object: but two MSS. (one of them ancient,) have שאלוני shaaluni, "asked me;" and another MS. שאלו לי shaalu li, "asked for me;" one or other of which seems to be right. But Cocceius, in Lex. and Vitringa in his translation, render נדרשתי nedrashti, by "I have answered;" and so the verb is rendered by all the ancient Versions in Ezek. xx. 3, 31. If this be right, the translation will be, "I have answered those that asked not." I leave this to the Reader's judgment: but have followed in my translation the Septuagint and St. Paul, and the MSS. abovementioned. בקשני bekesheni, is written regularly and fully in above a hundred MSS. and in the oldest Edition בקשוני bekeshuni.

Verse 3. That sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick—(Sacrificing in the gardens, and burning incense on the tiles)] These are instances of heathenish superstition, and idolatrous practices, to which the Jews were immoderately addicted before the Babylonish captivity. The Heathen worshipped their idols in groves; whereas God, in opposition to this species of idolatry, commanded His people, when they should come into the Promised Land, to destroy all the places wherein the Canaanites had served their gods, and in particular to burn their groves with fire, Deut. xii. 2, 3. These apostate Jews sacrificed upon altars built of bricks; in opposition to the command of God in regard to His altar, which was to be of unhewn stone, Exod. xx. 25.—Et pro uno altari, quod impolitis lapidibus Dei erat lege constructum, coctos lateres et agrorum cespites hostiarum sanguine cruentabant. ["And instead of one altar which, according to the law of God, was to be constructed of unhewn stones, they stained the bricks and turfs of the fields with the blood of their victims."] Hieron. in loc. Or it means, perhaps, that they sacrificed upon the roofs of their houses, which were always flat, and paved with brick, or tile, or plaster of terrace. An instance of this idolatrous practice we find in 2 Kings xxiii. 12. where it is said that Josiah "beat down the altars that were on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made." See also Zeph. i. 5. Sir John Chardin's MS. Note on this place of Isaiah is as follows:—"Ainsi font tous les Gentiles, sur les lieux elevés, et sur les terrasses, appellez lateres, parceque sont faits de briques."—"Who dwell in the sepulchres, and lodge in the caverns," for the purposes of necromancy and divination; to obtain dreams and revelations. Another instance of Heathenish superstition:

There was a practice exactly like this which prevailed among the Highlanders of Scotland: an authentic account of this is given by Sir Walter Scott, in a note on his Poem called The Lady of the Lake. It is as follows:

"The Highlanders, like all rude people, had various superstitious modes of inquiring into futurity. One of the most noted was the Taghairm, mentioned in the text. A person was wrapped up in the skin of a newly-slain bullock; and deposited beside a water-fall, or at the bottom of a precipice, or in some other strange, wild, and unusual situation, where the scenery around him suggested nothing but objects of horror. In this situation he revolved in his mind the question proposed; and whatever was impressed upon him by his exalted imagination passed for the inspiration of the disembodied spirits, who haunt these desolate recesses. In some of the Hebrides, they attributed the same oracular power to a large black stone by the sea-shore, which they approached with certain solemnities; and considered the first fancy which came into their own minds, after they did so, to be the undoubted dictate of the tutelar deity of the stone; and as such to be, if possible, punctually complied with. Martin has recorded the following curious modes of Highland augury, in which the Taghairm, and its effects upon the person who was subjected to it, may serve to illustrate the text.

"It was an ordinary thing among the over-curious to consult an invisible oracle, concerning the fate of families and battles, &c. This was performed three different ways: the first was by a company of men, one of whom being detached by lot, was afterwards carried to a river, which was the boundary between two villages. Four of the company laid hold on him; and having shut his eyes, they took him by the legs and arms, and then, tossing him to and again, struck his hips with force against the bank. One of them cried out, What is it you have got here? Another answers, A log of birch-wood. The other cries again, Let his invisible friends appear from all quarters, and let them relieve him by giving an answer to our present demands; and in a few minutes after, a number of little creatures came from the sea, who answered the question, and disappeared suddenly. The man was then set at liberty; and they all returned home, to take their measures according to the prediction of their false prophets: but the poor deluded fools were abused; for the answer was still ambiguous. This was always practised in the night, and may literally be called the works of darkness.

"I had an account from the most intelligent and judicious men in the Isle of Skie, that, about sixty-two years ago, the oracle was thus consulted only once, and that was in the parish of Kilmartin, on the east side, by a wicked and mischievous race of people, who are now extinguished, both root and branch.

"The second way of consulting the oracle was by a party of men, who first retired to solitary places, remote from any house; and there they singled out one of their number, and wrapt him in a big cow's hide, which they folded about him. His whole body was covered with it, except his head, and so left in this posture all night, until his invisible friends relieved him, by giving a proper answer to the question in hand; which he received, as he fancied, from several persons that he found about him all that time. His consorts returned to him at the break of day, and then he communicated his news to them; which often proved fatal to those concerned in such unwarrantable enquiries.

"There was a third way of consulting, which was a confirmation of the second above mentioned. The same company who put the man into the hide took a live cat, and put him on a spit. One of the number was employed to turn the spit; and one of his consorts enquired of him, What are you doing? He answered, I roast this cat, until his friends answer the question; which must be the same that was proposed by the man shut up in the hide. And afterwards, a very big cat (in allusion to the story of 'the King of the Cats,' in Lord Lyttleton's Letters, and well known in the Highlands as a nursery tale,) comes, attended by a number of lesser cats, desiring to relieve the cat turned upon the spit, and then answers the question. If this answer proved the same that was given to the man in the hide, then it was taken as a confirmation of the other, which, in this case, was believed infallible.

The impression it made on him was such as could never go off; and he said for a thousand worlds he would never again be concerned in the like performance, for this had disordered him to a high degree. He confessed it ingenuously, and with an air of great remorse; and seemed to be very penitent under a just sense of so great a crime. He declared this about five years since, and is still living in the Lewis for any thing I know."—Description of the Western Isles, p. 110. See also PENNANT's Scottish Tour, Vol. ii. p. 361.

In the monuments—(In the caverns)] בנצורים banetsurim, a word of doubtful signification. An ancient MS. has בצורים betsurim, another בצרים betserim, in the rocks: and Le Clerc thinks the Septuagint had it so in their copy. They render it by ἐν τοῖς σπηλαίοις, "in the caves."

"Who eat swine's flesh"—which was expressly forbidden by the law, Lev. xi. 7. but among the heathen was in principal request in their sacrifices and feasts. Antiochus Epiphanes compelled the Jews to eat swine's flesh, as a full proof of their renouncing their religion, 2 Mac. vi. 18. and vii. 1. "And the broth of abominable meats,"—for lustrations, magical arts, and other superstitious and abominable practices.

In their vessels] For כליהם keleyhem, a MS. had at first בכליהם bekeleyhem. So the Vulgate and Chaldee, and the preposition seems necessary to the sense.

Verse 5. For I am holier than thou] So the Chaldee renders it. קדשתין kedashtica, is the same with קדשתי ממך kadashti mimeca. In the same manner חזקתני chazektani, Jer. xx. 7. is used for חזקת ממני chazacta mimeni, thou art stronger than I.

[Verse 6. Behold, it is written before me—Their sin is registered in heaven, calling aloud for the punishment due to it.

Into their bosom] For על âl, ten MSS. and five editions have אל al. So again at the end of this verse, seventeen MSS. and four editions have אל al.

Now as the cluster must not be destroyed because there is a blessing, a nutritive part in it; so Israel shall not be destroyed, because there are righteous persons in it. But as the bark and kernels are thrown away, when the wine is pressed out, so shall the sinners be purged away from among the just, and on their return from exile, shall not be permitted to enter into the land of Israel. Ezek. xx. 38."]

For my servants' sakes—(For the sake of my servant)] It is to be observed, that one of the Koningsburg MSS. collated by Lilienthal points the word עבדי âbdi, singular; that is, my servant, meaning the Messiah; and so read the Septuagint, which gives a very good sense. [In two of my old MSS. it is pointed עבדי âbadai, and עבדי âbdi, my servant, this confirms the above reading.]

most fertile parts of Judea; famous for their rich pastures; the former to the west, not far from Joppa; the latter north of Jericho, near Gilgal.

Verse 11. That prepare a table for that troop—(Who set in order a table for Gad)] The disquisitions and conjectures of the learned concerning Gad and Meni are infinite and uncertain: perhaps the most probable may be, that Gad means good fortune, and Meni the moon. "But why should we be solicitous about it?" says Schmidius. "It appears sufficiently, from the circumstances, that they were false gods; either stars, or some natural object; or a mere fiction. The holy Scriptures did not deign to explain more clearly what these objects of idolatrous worship were; but chose rather, that the memory of the knowledge of them should be utterly abolished. And God be praised, that they are so totally abolished, that we are now quite at a loss to know what and what sort of things they were." Schmidius on the place, and on Jud. ii. 13. Bibl. Hallensia.

Jerom, on the place, gives an account of this idolatrous practice of the apostate Jews, of making a feast, or a lectisternium, as the Romans called it, for these pretended deities. Est in cunctis urbibus, et maximè in Ægypto, et in Alexandriâ, idololatriæ vetus consuetudo, ut ultimo die anni, et mensis ejus qui extremus est, ponant mensam refertam varii generis epulis, et poculum mulso mixtum; vel præteriti anni vel futuri fertilitatem auspicantes. Hoc autem faciebant et Israelitæ, omnium simulachrorum portenta venerantes; et nequaquam altari victimas, sed hujusmodi mensæ liba fundebant.—"In all cities, and especially in Egypt and Alexandria, it was an ancient idolatrous custom on the last day of the year, to spread a table covered with various kinds of viands, and a goblet mixed with new wine, referring to the fertility either of the past or coming year. The Israelites did the same, worshipping all kinds of images, and pouring out libations on such tables," &c. See also Le Clerc on the place; and on lxvi. 17. and Dav. Millii Dissert. v.

The allusion to Meni, which signifies number, is obvious. If there had been the like allusion to Gad, which might have been expected, it might perhaps have helped to let us into the meaning of that word. It appears from Jerom's version of this place, that the words τῳ δαιμονιῳ, to a dæmon, (or δαιμονι, as some copies have it.) and τῃ τυχῃ, to fortune, stood in his time in the Greek version in an inverted order from that which they have in the present copies; the latter then answering to גד gad, the former to מני meni: by which some difficulty would be avoided; for it is commonly supposed, that גד gad signifies τυχη, fortune. See Gen. xxx. 11. apud. Sept. This matter is so far well cleared up by MSS. Pachom. and I. D. II. which agree in placing these two words in that order, which Jerom's version supposes.

[My Old MS. Bible translates:—That putten the borde of fortune; and offreden licours upon it; and so the Vulgate.

Verse 12. Therefore will I number you—Referring to Meni, which signifies number. "Rabbi Eliezar said to his disciples, Turn to God one day before you die. His disciples said, How can a man know the day of his death? He answered, Therefore it is necessary that you should turn to God to-day, for possibly ye may die to-morrow."

Verse 13. My servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry—Rabbi Joachan ben Zachai said in a parable: There was a king who invited his servants, but set them no time to come to the feast. The prudent and wary who were among them adorned themselves; and, standing at the gate of the king's house, said, Is there any thing lacking in the king's house? i. e. Is there any work to be done in it? But the foolish which were among them went, and mocking said, When shall the feast be, in which there is no labour? Suddenly, the king sought out his servants: they who were adorned entered in, and they who were still polluted entered in also. The king was glad when he met the prudent: but he was angry when he met the foolish. Therefore he said, Let those sit down, and let them eat: but let these stand and look on.

This parable is very like that of the wise and foolish virgins, Matt. xxv. and that of the marriage of the king's son, Matt. xxii.]

For as the days of a tree] It is commonly supposed that the oak, one of the most long-lived of the trees, lasts about a thousand years; being five hundred years growing to full perfection, and as many decaying: which seems to be a moderate and probable computation. See Evelyn, Sylva, B. III. chap. iii. The present emperor of China, in his very ingenious and sensible poem, intituled, Eloge de Moukden, a translation of which in French was published at Paris, 1770, speaks of a tree in his country, which lives more than a hundred ages; and of another, which after fourscore ages is only in its prime, p. 37, 38. But his imperial majesty's commentators, in their note on the place, carry the matter much further; and quote authority, which affirms, that the tree last mentioned by the emperor, the immortal tree, after having lived ten thousand years, is still only in its prime. I suspect that the Chinese enlarge somewhat in their national chronology, as well as in that of their trees. See Chou King, Preface, by Mons. de Guignes. The prophet's idea seems to be, that they shall live to the age of the antediluvians; which seems to be very justly expressed by the days of a tree, according to our notions. [The Rabbins have said that this refers to the tree of life, which endures five hundred years.]

CHAPTER LXVI.

This Chapter treats of the same subject with the foregoing. God, by His Prophet, tells the Jews, who valued themselves much on their Temple and pompous worship, that the Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; and that no outward rites of worship, while the worshippers are idolatrous and impure, can please Him who looketh at the heart, 1—3. This leads to a threatening of vengeance for their guilt, alluding to their making void the law of God by their abominable traditions, their rejection of Christ, persecution of His followers, and consequent destruction by the Romans. But as the Jewish ritual and people shadow forth the system of Christianity and its professors; so, in the prophetical writings, the idolatries of the Jews are frequently put for the idolatries afterward practised by those bearing the Christian name. Consequently, if we would have the plenitude of meaning in this section of prophecy, which the very context requires, we must look through the type into the antitype, viz. the very gross idolatries practised by the members of Antichrist, the pompous heap of human inventions and traditions with which they have encumbered the Christian system, their most dreadful persecution of Christ's spiritual and true worshippers, and the awful judgments which shall overtake them in the great and terrible day of the Lord, 4—6. The mighty and sudden increase of the church of Jesus Christ at the period of Antichrist's fall represented by the very strong figure of Sion being delivered of a manchild before the time of her travail, the meaning of which symbol the Prophet immediately subjoins in a series of interrogations for the sake of greater force and emphasis,

7—9. Wonderful prosperity and unspeakable blessedness of the world when the posterity of Jacob, with the fulness of the Gentiles, shall be assembled to Messiah's standard, 10—14. All the wicked of the earth shall be gathered together to the battle of that great day of God Almighty, and the slain of Jehovah shall be many, 15—18. Manner of the future restoration of the Israelites from their several dispersions throughout the habitable globe, 19—21. Perpetuity of this new œconomy of grace to the house of Israel, 22. Righteousness shall be universally diffused in the earth; and the memory of those who have transgressed against the Lord shall be had in continued abhorrence, 23, 24. Thus this great Prophet, after tracing the principal events of time, seems at length to have terminated his views in eternity, where all revolutions cease, where the blessedness of the righteous shall be unchangeable as the new heavens, and the misery of the wicked as the fire that shall not be quenched.

NOTES ON CHAP. LXVI.

This Chapter is a continuation of the subject of the foregoing. The Jews valued themselves much upon their Temple, and the pompous system of services performed in it, which they supposed were to be of perpetual duration; and they assumed great confidence and merit to themselves for their strict observance of all the externals of their religion. And at the very time, when the judgments, denounced in ver. 6. and 12. of the preceding Chapter, were hanging over their heads, they were rebuilding, by Herod's munificence, the Temple in a most magnificent manner. God admonishes them, that "the Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands;" and that a mere external worship, how diligently soever attended, when accompanied with wicked and idolatrous practices in the worshippers, would never be accepted by Him. This their hypocrisy is set forth in strong colours: which brings the prophet again to the subject of the former Chapter; and he pursues it in a different manner, with more express declaration of the new œconomy, and of the flourishing state of the church under it. The increase of the church is to be sudden and astonishing. They that escape of the Jews, that is, that become converts to the Christian faith, are to be employed in the Divine mission to the Gentiles, and are to act as priests in presenting the Gentiles as an offering to God, see Rom. xv. 16. And both, now collected into one body, shall be witnesses of the final perdition of the obstinate and irreclaimable.

These two Chapters manifestly relate to the calling of the Gentiles, the establishment of the Christian dispensation, and the reprobation of the apostate Jews, and their destruction executed by the Romans.

Verse 2. And all those things have been—(And all these things are mine)] A word absolutely necessary to the sense is here lost out of the text: לי li, mine. It is preserved by the Septuagint and Syriac.

Verse 3. He that killeth an ox is as if he slew a man—(He that slayeth an ox, killeth a man)] These are instances of wickedness joined with hypocrisy; of the most flagitious crimes committed by those, who at the same time affected great strictness in the performance of all the external services of religion. God, by the prophet Ezekiel, upbraids the Jews with the same practices. "When they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it," chap. xxiii. 30. Of the same kind was the hypocrisy of the Pharisees in our Saviour's time; "who devoured widows' houses, and for a pretence made long prayers," Matt. xxiii. 14.

The generality of interpreters, by departing from the literal rendering of the Text, have totally lost the true sense of it; and have substituted in its place what makes no good sense at all: for it is not easy to show, how in any circumstances sacrifice and murder, the presenting of legal offerings and idolatrous worship, can possibly be of the same account in the sight of God.

He that offereth an oblation as if he offered swine's blood—(That maketh an oblation offereth swine's blood)] A word here likewise, necessary to complete the sense, is perhaps irrecoverably lost out of the Text. The Vulgate and Chaldee add the word offereth, to make out the sense; not, as I imagine, from any different reading, (for the word wanted seems to have been lost before the time of the oldest of them, as the Septuagint had it not in their copy;) but from mere necessity

6 A voice of noise from the city, a voice from the temple, a voice of the LORD that rendereth recompence to his enemies.

8 Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things; shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day; or shall a nation be born at once? for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children.

9 Shall I bring to the birth, and not [f] cause to bring forth? saith the LORD: shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God.

10 Rejoice ye with Jerusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that love her: rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her:

11 That ye may suck, and be satisfied with the breasts of her consolations; that ye may milk out, and be delighted with the [g] abundance of her glory.

Le Clerc thinks, that מעלה meâleh, is to be repeated from the beginning of this member: but that is not the case in the parallel members, which have another and a different verb in the second place. "רם dam, sic Versiones: putarem tamen legendum participium aliquod, et quidem זבח zabach, cum sequatur ח cheth, nisi jam præcesserat." SECKER. Houbigant supplies אכל acal, eateth. After all I think the most probable word is that which the Chaldee and Vulgate seem to have designed to represent; that is, מקריב mekrib.

[Verse 3. In their abominations—ובשקוציהם u-be-she kutseyhem, and in their abominations; two copies of the Machazor, and one of Kennicott's MSS., have ובגיוליהם u-be-giloleyhem, and in their idols. So the Vulgate and Syriac.]

Verse 5. Your brethren that hated you—said—(Say ye to your brethren that hate you)] The Syriac reads אמרו לאחיכם amru leacheycem; and so the Septuagint, Edit. Comp. ειπατε αδελφοις υμων· and MS. Marchal. has αδελφοις· and so Cyrill and Procopius read and explain it. It is not easy to make sense of the reading of the Septuagint in the other Editions: ειπατε αδελφοι ημων τοις μισουσιν υμας—but for ημων, our, MS. I. D. II. also has υμων, your.

[Verse 6. A voice of noise from the city, a voice from the temple, a voice from the LORD—It is very remarkable that similar words were spoken by Jesus, son of Ananias, previously to the destruction of Jerusalem. See his very affecting history related by Josephus, WAR, B. vi. ch. 5.]

Verse 8. Who hath seen—(And who hath seen)] Twenty MSS. (four ancient) [of Kennicott's, and twenty-nine of De Rossi's, and two ancient of my own,] and the two oldest Editions, with two others, have ומי u-mi, adding the conjunction ו vau; and so read all the ancient Versions. AND who hath seen?

[Verse 9. Shall I bring to the birth—האני אשביר haani ashebbir, num ego matricem frangam, MONTANUS. The word means that which immediately precedes the appearance of the fœtus—the breaking forth of the liquor amnii. This also is an expression that should be studiously avoided in prayers and preachings.]

Verse 11. With the abundance of her glory—(From her abundant stores)] For מזו miziz, from the splendour, two MSS. and the old Edition of 1488, have מזיו mizeyo; and the latter ז zain, is upon a rasure in three other MSS. It is remarkable that Kimchi and Sal. ben Melech, not being able to make any thing of the word as it stands in the Text, say it means the same with מזיו mizeyo; that is, in effect, they admit of a various reading, or an error in the Text. But, as Vitringa observes, what sense is there in sucking nourishment from the splendour of her glory? He therefore endeavours to deduce another sense of the word זו ziz: but, as far as it appears to me, without any authority. I am more inclined to accede to the opinion of those learned Rabbins, and to think that there is some mistake in the word; for that in truth is their opinion, though they disguise it, by saying, that the corrupted word means the very same with that which they believe to be genuine. So in chap. xli. 24. they say, that אפע aphâ a viper, means the same with אפס aphas, nothing; instead of acknowledging that one is written by mistake instead of the other. I would propose to read in this place מזן mezin, or מזן mezen, [which is the reading of one of De Rossi's MSS.] (instead of מזו meziz,) from the stores, from זון zun, to nourish, to feed, see Gen. xlv. 23. 2 Chron. xi. 23. Psa. cxliv. 13. And this perhaps may be meant by Aquila, who renders the word by απο πανσοδαπιας· with which that of the Vulgate, ab omnimoda gloriâ, and of Symmachus and Theodotion, nearly agree.

13 As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem.

14 And when ye see this, your heart shall rejoice, and [d] your bones shall flourish like an herb: and the hand of the LORD shall be known toward his servants, and his indignation toward his enemies.

[e] Ch. 9. 5. 2 Thess. 1. 8.—[f] Ch. 27. 1.—[g] Ch. 65. 3, 4.—[h] Or, one after another.

The Chaldee follows a different reading, without improving the sense; מיין meyin, from the wine.

Verse 12. Like a river, and—like a flowing stream—(Like the great river, and like the overflowing stream)] That is, the Euphrates; (it ought to have been pointed כנהר kenahar, ut fluvius ille, "as the river;") and the Nile.

Then shall ye suck—(And ye shall suck at the breast)] These two words שד על âl shad, at the breast, seem to have been omitted in the present text, from their likeness to the two words following; צד על âl tsad, at the side. A very probable conjecture of Houbigant. The Chaldee and Vulgate have omitted the two latter words instead of the two former. See Note on chap. lx. 4.

Verse 15. The Lord will come with fire—(JEHOVAH shall come as a fire)] For באש baesh, in fire, the Septuagint had in their copy כאש ke-esh, as a fire; ὡς πυρ.

To render his anger with fury—(To breathe forth his anger in a burning heat)] Instead of להשב lehashib, as pointed by the Masoretes, to render, I understand it as להשב lehashshib, to breathe, from נשב nashab.

Verse 17. Behind one tree—(After the rites of Achad)] The Syrians worshipped a god called Adad. Plin. Nat. Hist. xxxvii. 11. Macrob. Sat. i. 23. They held him to be the highest and greatest of the gods, and to be the same with Jupiter and the sun: and the name Adad, says Macrobius, signifies one; as likewise does the word Achad in Isaiah. Many learned men therefore have supposed, and with some probability, that the Prophet means the same pretended deity. אחד achad, in the Syrian and Chaldean dialects is חד chad; and perhaps by reduplication of the last letter, to express perfect unity, it may have become חדד chadad, not improperly expressed in Latin by Macrobius Adad, without the aspirate. It was also pronounced by the Syrians themselves, with a weaker aspirate, הדד hadad; as in Benhadad, Hadadezer, names of their kings, which were certainly taken from their chief object of worship. This seems to me to be a probable account of this name.

But the Masoretes correct the Text in this place. Their marginal reading is אחת achath, which is the same word only in the feminine form: and so read thirty MSS. (six ancient,) and the two oldest Editions. This Le Clerc approves, and supposes it to mean Hecate, or the moon; and he supports his hypothesis by arguments not at all improbable. See his Note on the place.

Whatever the particular mode of idolatry, which the Prophet refers to, might be, the general sense of the place is perfectly clear. But the Chaldee and Syriac, and after them Symmachus and Theodotion, cut off at once all these difficulties, by taking the word אחר achad in its common meaning, not as a proper name; the two latter rendering the sentence thus: οπισω αλληλων εν μεσῳ εσθιοντων το χοιρειον· one after another, in the midst of those that eat swine's flesh. I suppose, they all read in their copies אחר אחר achad achad, one by one, or perhaps אחר אחר אחד achad achar achad, one after another. See a large dissertation on this subject in Davidis Millii Dissertationes Selectæ, Dissert. VI.

[I know not what to make of this place; it is certain that our translation makes no sense,—and that of the learned prelate seems to me too refined. Kimchi interprets this of the Turks, who are remarkable for ablutions.—"Behind one in the midst" he understands of a large fish pond placed in the middle of their gardens. Others make אחר achad, a deity, as above:—and a deity of various names it is supposed to be; for it is Achad, and Chad, and Hadad, and Achath, and Hecat, an Assyrian idol. Behynd the fyrst tree or the gate withinne forth. Old MS. Bible.]

Verse 18. For I know their works] A word is here lost out of the present Text, leaving the Text quite imperfect. The word is ידע yodeâ, knowing, supplied from the Syriac,

A. M. cir. 3292. B. C. cir. 712. Ol. XVII. 1. Cir. ann. Numæ Pompilii, R. Roman. 4.

20 And they shall bring all your brethren [c] for an offering unto the LORD out of all nations, upon horses, and in chariots, and in [d] litters, and upon mules, and upon swift beasts, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel into the house of the LORD.

The Chaldee had the same word in the copy before him, which he paraphrases by קדמי גלן kedemi gelon, their deeds are manifest before me; and the Aldine and Complutensian Editions of the Septuagint acknowledge the same word ἐπίσταμαι; which is verified by MSS. Pachom, and the Arabic Version. I think there can be little doubt of its being genuine. [The concluding verses of this Chapter refer to the complete restoration of the Jews, and to the destruction of all the enemies of the gospel of Christ, so that the earth shall be filled with the knowledge and glory of the Lord. Talia sæcla currite! Lord hasten the time!]

It shall come—(And I come)] For באה baah, which will not accord with any thing in the sentence, I read בא bo, with a MS.; the participle answering to יודע yodeâ, with which agree the Septuagint, Syriac, and Vulgate. Perhaps it ought to be ובא vebo, Syr. when I shall come: and so the Septuagint, according to Edit. Ald. and Complut. and Cod. Marchal.

Verse 19. That draw the bow] I much suspect that the words משכי קשת mishekey kasheth, who draw the bow, are a corruption of the word משך meshek, Moschi, the name of a nation situated between the Euxine and Caspian seas; and properly joined with תבל tubal, the Tibareni. See Bochart. Phaleg. iii. 12. The Septuagint have μοσοχ, without any thing of the drawers of the bow; the word being once taken for a participle, the bow was added to make sense of it. קשת kasheth, the bow, is omitted in a MS. [and by the Septuagint.]

That have not heard my fame—(Who never heard my name)] For שמעי shamêi, my fame, I read with the Septuagint and Syriac, שמי shemi, my name.

Verse 20. And in chariots—(And in counes)] There is a sort of vehicle much used in the East, consisting of a pair of hampers, or cradles, thrown across a camel's back, one on each side; in each of which a person is carried. They have a covering to defend them from the rain and the sun. Thevenot calls them counes, i. p. 356. Maillet describes them as covered cages, hanging on both sides of a camel. "At Aleppo," says Dr. Russel, "women of inferior condition in longer journeys are commonly stowed, one on each side of a mule, in a sort of covered cradles." Nat. Hist. of Aleppo, p. 89. These seem to be what the Prophet means by the word צביים tsebbim. Harmer's Observations, i. page 445.

Verse 21. And for Levites] For ללוים lelevim, fifty-nine MSS. (eight ancient,) have וללוים u-lelevim, adding the conjunction ו vau, as the sense seems necessarily to require: and so read all the ancient Versions. See Josh. iii. 3. and the various readings on that place in Kennicott's Bible.

Verse 24. For their worm shall not die] These words of the Prophet are applied by our blessed Saviour, Mark ix. 44. to express the everlasting punishment of the wicked in Gehenna, or in hell. Gehenna, or the valley of Hinnom, was very near to Jerusalem to the south-east: it was the place where the idolatrous Jews celebrated that horrible rite of making their children pass through the fire, that is, of burning them in sacrifice to Moloch. To put a stop to this abominable practice, Josiah defiled, or desecrated, the place, by filling it with human bones, 2 Kings xxiii. 10, 14.; and probably it was the custom afterwards to throw out the carcases of animals there; and it became the common burying-place for the poorer people of Jerusalem. Our Saviour expressed the state of the blessed by sensible images; such as paradise, Abraham's bosom, or, which is the same thing, a place to recline next to Abraham at table in the kingdom of heaven. See Matt. viii. 11. ("Cœnabat Nerva cum paucis.

Veiento proximus, atque etiam in sinu recumbebat."—[" The emperor Nerva supped with few. Veiento was the first in his estimation, and even reclined in his bosom." Plin. Epist. iv 22. Compare John xiii. 23.) for we could not possibly have any conception of it, but by analogy from worldly objects. In like manner He expressed the place of torment under the image of Gehenna; and the punishment of the wicked, by the worm which there preyed on the carcasses and the fire which consumed the wretched victims. Marking however, in the strongest manner, the difference between Gehenna and the invisible place of torment; namely, that in the former the suffering is transient: the worm itself, that preys on the body, dies; and the fire which totally consumes it, is soon extinguished; whereas in the figurative Gehenna the instruments of punishment shall be everlasting, and the suffering without end. "For there the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched."

These emblematical images, expressing heaven and hell, were in use among the Jews before our Saviour's time; and in using them He complied with their notions. "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God," says the Jew to our Saviour, Luke xiv. 15. And in regard to Gehenna, the Chaldee paraphrast, as I observed before on chap. xxx. 33., renders everlasting, or continual burnings, by "the Gehenna of everlasting fire." And before his time the son of Sirach, chap. vii. 17. had said, "The vengeance of the ungodly is fire and worms." So likewise the author of the Book of Judith, chap. xvi. 17.:—"Wo to the nations rising up against my kindred: the Lord Almighty will take vengeance of them in the day of judgment, in putting fire and worms in their flesh;" manifestly referring to the same emblem.

[Kimchi's conclusion of his notes on this Book is remarkable:—

"Blessed be God who hath created the mountains and the hills,
And hath endued me with strength to finish the Book of Salvation:
He shall rejoice us with good tidings and reports.
He shall show us a token for good;—
And the end of his miracles he shall cause to approach us."

Several of the Versions have a peculiarity in their terminations:

And they shall be to a satiety of sight to all flesh. VULG.
And thei schul ben into fulling of sigt to all flesche.
Old MS. BIBLE.
And they shall be for a vision to all flesh. SEPTUAGINT.
And the wicked shall be punished in hell till the righteous shall say,—It is enough. CHALDEE.
They shall be an astonishment to all flesh;
So that they shall be a spectacle to all beings. SYRIAC.
The end of the prophecy of Isaiah the prophet. Praise to God, who is truly praiseworthy. ARABIC.

One of my old Hebrew MSS. after the twenty-fifth verse repeats the twenty-third:—"And it shall come to pass that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord."

MASORETIC NOTES.

Number of verses in this Book, 1295.
Middle verse,—Chap. xxxiii. 21.
Masoretic sections, 26.
חזק chazek, Be strong.

In the course of these Notes the Reader will have often observed two MSS. of the Septuagint referred to by Bp. Lowth, and marked 1 B. II., 1 D. II. They are both in the British Museum. The former contains the Prophets, and was written about the tenth or eleventh century; and because it once belonged to Pachomius, patriarch of Constantinople, in the beginning of the sixteenth century, the Bishop quotes often by the title MS. Pachom. The other contains many of the historical books, beginning with Ruth, and ending with Ezra; and has also the prophet Isaiah. This MS. consists of two parts,—one apparently written in the eleventh or twelfth century,—the other in the beginning of the fourteenth. Dr. Grabe and Dr. Woide, as well as Bishop Lowth, considered these MSS. of great value and authority.

It may be necessary to say something of the Hebrew MSS. which I have also frequently quoted. The Collations of Kennicott and De Rossi have been long before the public; and to describe them would be useless. The collections of the latter, Bp. Lowth had never seen; else he could have strengthened his authorities: these, for the first time, I have in the preceding Notes incorporated with Bishop Lowth's references, and thus added double strength to the learned prelate's authorities. But of my own I should say something, as they form no part of the above collections;—and yet are among the oldest MSS. known to exist. Independently of rolls, which contain only the Magillah Esther they are ten in number, and formerly belonged to the Rev. Cornelius Schulting, a Protestant minister of Amsterdam. After his death, in 1726, they were sold by public auction, and came into the possession of the Rev. John Van der Hagen, a reformed minister of the same place.

In 1733, Jo. Christ. Wolf described these MSS. in the fourth volume of his Bibliotheca Hebræa, p. 79. A few years ago I had the singular good fortune to purchase the whole of these at Utrecht:—a collection of MSS., of which Dr. Kennicott complains that he could not by any entreaties obtain the privilege of collating. These are his own words,—"Wolfius (Bib. Heb. iv. 79—82.) memorat codices 10. olim penes Schultingium; quorum plurimi postea erant penes Rev. Joh. Van der Hagen. Usum Codd. Hagenianorum obtinere nulla potuit à me precatio." Dissert. Gener. p. 78. sub Cod. 84. Dr. Kennicott supposed that three of those MSS. had been collated for him: but in this I believe he was mistaken; as he was also in supposing that only the greater part of the ten MSS. of Schulting had fallen into the hands of Mr. Van der Hagen; for the fact is, the whole ten were purchased by Van der Hagen, and the same ten are now in my library, being precisely those described by Wolfius, as above. I have collated the Prophet Isaiah throughout, in two of the most ancient of these MSS.; and have added their testimony in many places to the various readings collected by Kennicott and De Rossi. The very bad state of my health, and particularly of my eyes, prevented a more extensive collation of these very ancient and invaluable MSS. Some of the oldest are without any date. They are marked with the ten first letters of the alphabet. Cod. C. was written A. D. 1076,—D. in 1286,—G. in 1215,—H. in 1309,—I. in 1136. In most of these there is an ample harvest of important various readings.

Bishop Lowth, in giving an account of his labours on this Prophet, takes a general view of the difficulties and helps he met with in his work. This being of considerable importance, I shall lay an abstract of it before the Reader, as a proper supplement to the preceding sheets. He observes,] —The Masoretic punctuation, by which the pronunciation of the language is given, the forms of the several parts of speech,—the construction of the words,—the distribution and limits of the sentences,—and the connexion of the several members, are fixed,—is in effect an interpretation of the Hebrew text made by the Jews of late ages, probably not earlier than the eighth century; and may be considered as their translation of the Old Testament. Where the words unpointed are capable of various meanings, according as they may be variously pronounced and constructed, the Jews by their pointing have determined them to one meaning and construction; and the sense which they thus give, is their sense of the passage: just as the rendering of a translator into another language is his sense. The points have been considered as part of the Hebrew text, and as giving the meaning of it on no less than Divine authority. Accordingly our public translations in the modern tongues for the use of the church among Protestants, and so likewise the modern Latin translations, are for the most part close copies of the Hebrew pointed text, and are in reality only versions at second hand, translations of the Jews' interpretation of the Old Testament.

To what a length an opinion lightly taken up, and embraced with a full assent without due examination, may be carried, we may see in another example of much the same kind. The learned of the Church of Rome, who have taken the liberty of giving translations of Scripture in the modern languages, have for the most part subjected and devoted themselves to a prejudice equally groundless and absurd. The Council of Trent declared the Latin translation of the Scriptures, called the Vulgate, which had been for many ages in use in their church, to be authentic;—a very ambiguous term, which ought to have been more precisely defined than the fathers of this Council chose to define it. Upon this ground many contended that the Vulgate version was dictated by the Holy Spirit;—at least was providentially guarded against all error,—was consequently of Divine authority, and more to be regarded than even the original Hebrew and Greek texts.

But a very fruitful source of error proceeded from the Jewish copyists consulting more the fair appearance of their copy than the correctness of it, by wilfully leaving mistakes uncorrected, lest by erasing they should diminish the beauty and the value of the transcript; (for instance, when they had written a word, or part of a word, wrong, and immediately saw their mistake, they left the mistake uncorrected, and wrote the word anew after it,) their scrupulous regard to the evenness and fulness of their lines, which induced them to cut off from the ends of lines a letter or letters for which there was not sufficient room, (for they never divided a word so that the parts of it should belong to two lines,) and to add to the ends of lines letters wholly insignificant, by way of expletives to fill up a vacant space: their custom of writing part of a word at the end of a line, where there was not room for the whole, and then giving the whole word at the beginning of the next line.

These circumstances considered, it would be the most astonishing of all miracles, if the Hebrew writings of the Old Testament had come down to us through their hands absolutely pure, and free from all mistakes whatsoever.

The ancient VERSIONS, as the principal sources of emendation, and highly useful in rectifying as well as in explaining, the Hebrew text, are contained in the London Polyglott.

The Greek Version, commonly called the Septuagint, or of the seventy interpreters, probably made by different hands, (the number of them uncertain,) and at different times, as the exigence of the Jewish church at Alexandria and in other parts of Egypt required, is of the first authority, and of the greatest use in correcting the Hebrew text, as being the most ancient of all; and as the copy from which it was translated appears to have been free from many errors which afterwards by degrees got into the text. But the Greek version of Isaiah is not so old as that of the Pentateuch by a hundred years and more, having been made in all probability after the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, when the reading of the prophets in the Jewish synagogues began to be practised; and even after the building of Onias' temple, to favour which there seems to have been some artifice employed in a certain passage of Isaiah (chap. xix. 18.) in this version. And it unfortunately happens that Isaiah has had the hard fate to meet with a Greek translator very unworthy of him, there being hardly any book of the Old Testament so ill rendered in that version as this of Isaiah.

The Arabic version is sometimes referred to as verifying the reading of the Septuagint, being, for the most part at least, taken from that version.

The Chaldee paraphrase of Jonathan ben Uzziel, made about or before the time of our Saviour, though it often wanders from the text in a wordy allegorical explanation, yet very frequently adheres to it closely, and gives a verbal rendering of it; and accordingly is sometimes of great use in ascertaining the true reading of the Hebrew text.

The Syriac version stands next in order of time: but is superior to the Chaldee in usefulness and authority, as well in ascertaining as in explaining the Hebrew text. It is a close translation of the Hebrew into a language of near affinity to it. It is supposed to have been made as early as the first century.

The fragments of the three Greek versions of Aquila Symmachus, and Theodotion, all made in the second century, which are collected in the Hexapla of Mountfaucon, are of considerable use for the same purpose.

The Vulgate, being for the most part the translation of Jerome, made in the fourth century, is of service in the same way, in proportion to its antiquity.

In referring to Dr. Kennicott's and De Rossi's Collections I have given the whole number of manuscripts or editions which concur in any particular reading: what proportion that number bears to the whole number of collated copies which contain the Book of Isaiah, may be seen by comparing it with the catalogue of copies collated, which is given at the end of that book in the Doctor's edition of the Hebrew Bible.

Among the manuscripts which have been collated I consider those of the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth centuries as ancient, comparatively and in respect of the rest. Therefore in quoting a number of manuscripts, where the variation is of some importance, I have added, that so many of that number are ancient, that is, are of the centuries above mentioned.

The design of the Notes is to give the reasons and authorities on which the translation is founded; to rectify or to explain the words of the text; to illustrate the ideas, the images, and the allusions, of the prophet, by referring to objects, notions, and customs which peculiarly belong to his age and his country; and to point out the beauties of particular passages. If the Reader would go deeper into the mystical sense, into theological, historical, and chronological disquisitions, there are many learned expositors to whom he may have recourse, who have written full commentaries on this prophet, to which title the present work has no pretensions. The sublime and spiritual uses to be made of this peculiarly evangelical prophet, must be all founded on a faithful representation of the literal sense which his words contain. This is what I have endeavoured closely and exactly to express.

[In conclusion, it may be necessary to give some account of what I have ventured to superadd to the labours of this very learned prelate. After consulting the various Commentators, who have spent much time and labour in their endeavours to illustrate this Prophet, I found their interpretations of many of the most important prophecies strangely different, and often at variance. The former commentators have taken especial care to bring forth in the most prominent point of view all those passages which have been generally understood to refer to our blessed Lord, and the Christian dispensation. Later critics, especially those on the continent, have adopted the Jewish plan of interpretation, referring the parts belonging to the Messiah in His sufferings, &c. to the prophet himself, or to the children of the captivity in their state of suffering;—and those passages which speak of the redemption of the world, and the glorious state of the Christian Church, they apply to the deliverance of the Israelites from the Babylonish captivity. It is really painful to see what labour and learning these critics spend to rob the prophet of his title of evangelical; and to show that even the sacred writers of the New Testament, in their application of select passages to our Lord, only followed the popular custom of accommodating passages of the Sacred Writings to occurrences and events to which their leading circumstances bore some kind of resemblance, the application being only intended to convey the idea of similitude, and not of identity.

While I have cautiously handled those passages, the application of which was dubious, I have taken care to give my opinion with firmness on those which seem to have no other meaning than what they derive from their application to the great work of redemption by Jesus Christ, and the glory that should follow the outpouring of His Spirit. Many readers will no doubt suppose that I should have dwelt more on the spiritual parts of this inimitable book:—but to this there would be scarcely any end. Who could exhaust the stores of this prophet! and if any thing were left unsaid some would still be unsatisfied, to say nothing of the volume being thereby swollen beyond all reasonable bounds. I have marked enough for the reader's meditation; and have thrown out a sufficient number of hints to be improved by ministers of the word of God. To another class it may appear too critical: but this chiefly applies to the learned Bishop whose plan, as by far the best in my judgment, I have followed;—and whose collection of various readings I felt it my duty to complete, a thing that none of his Editors have attempted before.

In representing the Hebrew words by Roman letters, I perceive that there are some inaccuracies in reference to the vowel points: but as due care has been taken to represent the consonants, this will be of no consequence in the sight of any scholar. I may add, that a continual state of bad health, both while preparing the Notes and while passing the Work through the press, has prevented me from giving it that further degree of comparative perfection which I ardently desired, and which in other circumstances might have taken place. Such as it is, I recommend it to the Almighty's blessing, and the Reader's candour. A. C.]

END OF THE NOTES ON THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET ISAIAH.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE BOOK OF

THE PROPHET JEREMIAH.

THE Prophet Jeremiah, son of Hilkiah, was of the sacerdotal race; and a native of Anathoth, a village in the tribe of Benjamin, within a few miles of Jerusalem, which had been appointed for the use of the priests, the descendants of Aaron, Josh. xxi, 18. He was called to the prophetic office when very young; probably when he was fourteen years of age; and in the thirteenth of the reign of Josiah, A. M. 3375, B. C. 629. He continued to prophesy till after the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, which took place A. M. 3416; and it is supposed that about two years after he died in Egypt. Thus it appears that he discharged the arduous duties of the prophetic office for upwards of forty years.

Being very young when called to the prophetic office, he endeavoured to excuse himself on account of his youth and incapacity for the work: but, being overruled by the Divine authority, he undertook the task, and performed it with matchless zeal and fidelity in the midst of a most crooked and perverse people, by whom he was continually persecuted; and whom he boldly reproved, often at the hazard of his life.

His attachment to his country was strong and fervent;—he foresaw by the light of prophecy the ruin that was coming upon it. He might have made terms with the enemy; and not only saved his life, but have gained ease and plenty: but he chose rather to continue with his people, and take his part in all the disasters that befell them.

After the destruction of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar having made Gedaliah governor of Judea, the fractious Jews rose up against him, and put him to death: they then escaped to Tahpanhes in Egypt, carrying Jeremiah with them; who, continuing to testify against their wickedness and idolatry, they filled up the measure of their iniquity, as tradition reports, by stoning the Prophet to death. God marked this murderous outrage by his peculiar displeasure; for in a few years after they were almost all miserably destroyed by the Chaldean armies which had invaded Egypt; and even this destruction had been foretold by the Prophet himself, chap. xliv, They were consumed by the sword and by the famine until there was an end of them, a small remnant only escaping, ver. 14, 27, 28.

The pitch of desperate wickedness to which the Jews had arrived previously to their captivity, was truly astonishing. They had exhausted all the means that infinite mercy, associated with infinite justice, should employ for the salvation of sinners; and they became in consequence desperately wicked: no wonder, therefore, that wrath fell upon them to the uttermost. It seems that their hardness and darkness had proceeded to such lengths that they abandoned themselves to all the abominations of idolatry to avenge themselves on God, because he would not bear with their continual profligacy. Were ever people more highly favoured,—more desperately ungrateful,—or more signally punished! What a lesson is their history to the nations of the earth, and especially to those who have been favoured with the light of Revelation!

I should have entered into a particular discussion relative to the history of those times mentioned by this Prophet, had they not passed already in review in the Books of Kings and Chronicles; in which much of the historical parts of this Prophet has been anticipated; and to which, in order to avoid repetition, I must refer my Readers. What is further necessary to be added will be found in the following Notes.

As a writer, the character of Jeremiah has been well drawn by Bishop Lowth. On comparing him with Isaiah, the learned prelate says :—"Jeremiah is by no means wanting either in elegance or sublimity ; although, generally speaking, inferior to Isaiah in both. St. Jerom has objected to him a certain rusticity in his diction ; of which, I must confess, I do not discover the smallest trace. His thoughts, indeed, are somewhat less elevated, and he is commonly more large and diffuse in his sentences : but the reason of this may be, that he is mostly taken up with the gentler passions of grief and pity, for the expressing of which he has a peculiar talent. This is most evident in the Lamentations, where those passions altogether predominate : but it is often visible also in his Prophecies ; in the former part of the Book more especially, which is principally poetical. The middle parts are for the most part historical : but the last part, consisting of six Chapters, is entirely poetical ; and contains several oracles distinctly marked, in which this Prophet falls very little short of the loftiest style of Isaiah."

It has often been remarked, that although several of the prophecies in this Book have their dates distinctly noted, and most of the rest may be ascertained from collateral evidence ; yet there is a strange disorder in the arrangement. "There is," says Dr. Blayney, "a preposterous jumbling together of the prophecies of the reigns of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah in the seventeen Chapters which follow the twentieth, according to the Hebrew copies ; so that, without any apparent reason, many of the latter reign precede those of the former ; and in the same reign, the last delivered are put first, and the first, last." In order to prevent the confusion arising from this, Dr. Blayney has transposed the Chapters where he thought it needful, without altering the numerals as they stand in our common Bibles.

This defect has been noticed, and attempts made to remedy it by others. Dr. John George Dahler, Professor of Theology in the Protestant seminary of Strasburg, has just now published the first volume of a work, intituled —JEREMIE, traduit sur le Texte original, accompagné de Notes Explicatives, Historiques, et Critiques, 8*vo*. (antedated) Strasbourg, 1825. After a Preface, and very judicious historical Introduction, consisting, the first of twenty-two, the second of thirty-six pages, the Text and Notes follow. The poetical parts of the Text are translated in the hemistich manner, as the original appears in the best copies ; and the whole is divided into Sections ; each of which is introduced with judicious observations relative to time, place, circumstances, and the matter contained in that Section. The Discourses, or Prophecies, delivered under a particular reign, are all produced under that reign in their chronological order. A Table of this arrangement I shall here introduce, and refer to the use of it afterwards :—

lii, 1—34.

The kings under whom Jeremiah prophesied succeeded each other in the following order:—
1. Josiah;—2. Jehoahaz;—3. Jehoiachin, or Jeconiah;—4. Jehoiakim;—5. Zedekiah.

To render the transpositions evident which have taken place in these prophetical Discourses, we have only to look at those which bear the date of their delivery.

TABLE II.

Chap.
i,	1.	Delivered the thirteenth year of Josiah.
iii,	6.	Under Josiah.
xxi,	1.	Under Zedekiah.
xxiv,	1.	After the carrying away of Jeconiah, son of Jehoiakim.
xxv,	1.	The fourth year of Jehoiakim.
xxvi,	1.	The beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim.
xxviii,	1.	The beginning of the reign of Zedekiah.
xxix,	1.	After the carrying away of Jeconiah.
xxxii,	1.	The tenth year of Zedekiah.
xxxiv,	1.	(Under Zedekiah) during the siege of Jerusalem.
xxxiv,	8.	(Under Zedekiah) when he had obliged his subjects to give liberty to the Israelites whom they had reduced to slavery.
xxxv,	1.	Under Jehoiakim.
xxxvi,	1.	Under Jehoiakim.
xxxvii,	1.	Under Zedekiah during the siege of Jerusalem.
xxxvii,	11.	Under Zedekiah.
xxxviii,	1.	Under Zedekiah.
xxxix,	15.	Under Zedekiah, while Jeremiah was in prison.
xlv,	1.	The fourth year of Jehoiakim,
xlvi,	2.	The fourth year of Jehoiakim.
xlix,	34.	In the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah.
li,	59.	The fourth year of Zedekiah.

Taking into consideration the order of the reigns, a child may perceive that the above prophecies are not in the order of the times of their delivery; and that the sheets or skins on which the text of that MS. was written, from which the present copies have derived their origin, have been pitifully interchanged, huddled, and tacked together, without connexion or arrangement.

To remedy this defect, Dr. Blayney has arranged the Chapters in the following order, which he terms a new arrangement of the Chapters in Jeremiah, from chap. xx, to chap. xlvi, inclusive:—xx; xxii; xxiii; xxv; xxvi; xxxv; xxxvi; xlv; xxiv; xxix; xxx; xxxi; xxvii; xxviii; xxi; xxxiv; xxxvii; xxxii; xxxiii; xxxviii; xxxix, 15—18; xxxix, 1—14; xl; xli; xlii; xliii; xliv; xlvi, &c.

The preceding and subsequent Chapters Dr. Blayney thought sufficiently correct for all the general purposes of chronology; and it is according to this order that he prints the Text in his edition and translation of this Prophet.

Dr. Dahler, as we have seen, is more circumstantial. Where he has dates, as are shown in the preceding Table, he produces the Text in that order; where there are not positive dates, he ascertains several by circumstantial intimations, which bear great evidence of accuracy: but there is a numerous class of Discourses which he is obliged to insert in his work by critical conjecture. In such a case as this, when the arrangement of the common Text is so evidently defective, and in many respects absurd, this procedure is quite allowable; for, although the present Text as to its arrangement has the sanction of antiquity; yet, when a remedy is found, it would be absurd, if not sinful, to follow an order which we may rest satisfied never did proceed from the inspired Writer.

I hope none will suppose that these observations detract any thing from the Divine Inspiration of the Book. The Prophet delivered his discourses at particular times, in select portions, during forty or forty-three years: these were afterwards gathered together and stitched up without any attention to chronological arrangement. Though the Spirit of the Lord directed the Prophet, yet it would be absurd to suppose that it guided the hand of every collector or scribe into whose custody these several parcels might come. Suppose a man buy a copy of the Bible in sheets, and not knowing how to collate them, stitches the whole confusedly together, so that in many places the sense cannot be made out from a preceding to a following sheet,—would it not be singularly foolish for any person to say,—"As God is the Fountain of wisdom, and Author of reason, such incongruities cannot proceed from Him, therefore this Book was not given by Divine Revelation."—A child in a printer's office might reply,—"Cut the stitching asunder, that is man's work; collate the sheets and put them in their proper order; and you will soon see that every paragraph is in harmony with the rest, and contains the words of Divine Wisdom."

Many an ancient MS., which appeared mutilated and imperfect, I have restored to order and perfection by cutting the binding asunder, and restoring the sheets and leaves to those places from which the ignorance and unskilfulness of the binder had detached them. May we not be allowed to treat the dislocations in the writings of a Prophet in the same way, when it is evident that in the lapse of time his work has suffered by the hand of the careless and ignorant.

But it may be asked, "after all the evidence I have, and the concessions I have made, why I have not transposed those disjointed Chapters, and produced them in the order in which I think they should be read?" I answer, were I to give a new Translation with Notes of this Prophet by himself, as Drs. Blayney and Dahler have done, I should feel it my duty to do what the objection states: but as my province as a general Commentator requires me to take up all the Books of the Sacred Volume in the order in which I find them in the present Authorized Version, though convinced that this arrangement is neither correct nor convenient; so I take up the parts of each, however transposed, in the same manner, directing the Reader by Tables and Notes to regulate his use of the Work so as to produce general edification with as little embarassment as possible.

For general purposes, Dr. Blayney's Chronological Arrangement may be sufficient: but for greater accuracy Table I may be preferred. These may at least be considered in the light of helps to a better understanding of these several Prophecies: but no man is bound to follow either, farther than he is convinced that it follows what is specifically set down by the Prophet himself, or fairly deducible from strong circumstantial evidence.

In my Notes on this Prophet, I have availed myself, as far as my plan would permit, of the best helps within my reach. The various readings of Kennicott and De Rossi I have carefully consulted; and occasionally strengthened the evidence in behalf of those readings, more particularly recommended by collations from my own MSS. I regret that I have not been able (for the reasons mentioned at the conclusion of the Notes on Isaiah) to produce all the various readings of importance found in these ancient MSS., and especially in the Book of Lamentations, which is contained in five of them: but, like the woman in the Gospels, I have done what I could; and must leave the rest to those who, with better abilities, may possess the greater advantages of youth and strength, with unimpaired sight.

Reader! God designs thee a blessing by every portion of His word: in thy reading seek for this; and if these Notes be helpful to thee, give Him the glory.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1—3. The words of Jeremiah] These three verses are the title of the Book; and were probably added by Ezra when he collected and arranged the Sacred Books, and put them in that order in which they are found in Hebrew Bibles in general. Eleventh year of Zedekiah] That is, the last year of his reign; for he was made prisoner by the Chaldeans in the fourth month of that year, and the carrying away of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, was in the fifth month of the same year.

Verse 4. The word of the LORD came unto me] Then I first felt the inspiring influence of the Divine Spirit; not only revealing to me the subjects which he would have me to declare to the people, but also the words which I should use in these declarations.

Verse 5. Before I formed thee] I had destined thee to the prophetic office before thou wert born: I had formed my plan, and appointed thee to be my envoy to this people. St. Paul speaks of his own call to preach the gospel to the Gentiles in similar terms, Gal. i, 15, 16.

Verse 6. I cannot speak] Being very young, and wholly inexperienced, I am utterly incapable of conceiving aright, or of clothing these Divine subjects in suitable language. Those who are really called of God to the sacred ministry are such as have been brought to a deep acquaintance with themselves, feel their own ignorance, and know their own weakness. They know also the awful responsibility that attaches to the work; and nothing but the authority of God can induce such to undertake it. They whom God never called run, because of worldly honour and emolument: the others hear the call with fear and trembling, and can go only in the strength of Jehovah.

How ready is the man to go,
Whom God hath never sent!
How tim'rous, diffident, and slow,
God's chosen instrument!

Verse 7. Whatsoever I command thee] It is my words and message, not thine own, that thou shalt deliver. I shall teach thee; therefore, thy youth and inexperience can be no hinderance.

Verse 8. Be not afraid of their faces] That is, the Jews, whom he knew would persecute him because of the message which he brought. To be fore-warned is to be half-armed. He knew what he was to expect from the disobedient and the rebellious; and must now be prepared to meet it.

Verse 10. I have—set thee over the nations] God represents His messengers the prophets as doing, what He commanded them to declare should be done. In this sense they rooted up, pulled down, and destroyed;—declared God's judgments:—they builded up, and planted;—declared the promises of His mercy. Thus God says to Isaiah, (chap. vi. 10,) Make the heart of this people fat—and shut their eyes.—Show them that they are stupid and blind; and that, because they have shut their eyes and hardened their hearts, God will in His judgments leave them to their hardness and darkness.

Verse 11. A rod of an almond tree.] שקד shaked, from שקד shakad,—to be ready, to hasten, to watch for an opportunity to do a thing, to awake; because the almond tree is the first to flower and bring forth fruit. Pliny says, Floret prima omnium amygdala mense Januario; Martio verò pomum maturat. It blossoms in January, when other trees are locked up in their winter's repose; and it bears fruit in March, just at the commencement of spring, when other trees only begin to bud. It was here the symbol of that promptitude with which God was about to fulfil his promises and threatenings. As a rod, says Dahler, is an instrument of punishment, the rod of the almond may be intended here as the symbol of that punishment which the prophet was about to announce.

Verse 12. I will hasten my word] Here is a paranomasia.

A. M. 3375. B. C. 629. Ol. XXXVII. 4. Anci Martii, R. Rom. an. 12.

well seen: for I will hasten my word to perform it.

13 And the word of the Lord came unto me the second time, saying, What seest thou? And I said, I see [a] a seething pot; and the face thereof is [b] toward the north.

14 Then the Lord said unto me, Out of the [c] north an evil [d] shall break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land.

15 For, lo, I will [e] call all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the Lord; and they shall come, and they shall [f] set every one his throne at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem, and against all the walls thereof round about, and against all the cities of Judah.

16 And I will utter my judgments against them touching all their wickedness, [g] who have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, and worshipped the works of their own hands.

18 For, behold, I have made thee this day [l] a defenced city, and an iron pillar, and brasen walls against the whole land, against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof, against the priests thereof, and against the people of the land.

19 And they shall fight against thee; but they shall not prevail against thee; [m] for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee.

What dost thou see? I see, שקד shaked, an almond, the hastening tree; that which first awakes. Thou hast well seen, for (שקד sheked) I will hasten my word. I will awake, or watch over my word for the first opportunity to inflict the judgments which I threaten. The judgment shall come speedily; it shall soon flourish, and come to maturity.

Verse 13. A seething pot—toward the north.] We find from Ezekiel xxiv, 3, &c. that a boiling pot was an emblem of war, and the desolations it produces. Some have thought that by the seething pot Judea is intended, agitated by the invasion of the Chaldeans, whose land lay north of Judea. But Dr. Blayney contends that מִפְּנֵי צְפוֹנָה mipeney tsephonah should be translated, From the face of the north, as it is in the margin; for, from the next verse, it appears that the evil was to come from the north; and therefore the steam, which was designed as an emblem of that evil, must have arisen from that quarter also. The pot denotes the empire of the Babylonians and Chaldeans lying to the north of Judea, and pouring forth its multitudes like a thick vapour, to overspread the land. Either of these interpretations will suit the Text.

Verse 14. Shall break forth] תִּפָּתַח tippatach, shall be opened. The door shall be thrown abroad, that these calamities may pass out freely.

Verse 15. Shall set every one his throne at the entering of the gates] As the gates of the cities were the ordinary places where justice was administered,—so the enemies of Jerusalem are here represented as conquering the whole land, assuming the reins of government, and laying the whole country under their own laws; so that the Jews should no longer possess any political power: they should be wholly subjugated by their enemies.

Verse 16. I will utter my judgments] God denounced His judgments: the conquests of their cities, and the destruction of the realm, were the facts to which these judgments referred; and these facts prove that the threatening was fulfilled.

Worshipped the works of their own hands.] Idolatry was the source of all their wickedness, and was the cause of their desolations. For למעשי le-maâsey, the works, more than a hundred MSS. of Kennicott, De Rossi, with many editions, have למעשה le-maâseh, the work. Idolatry was their ONE great WORK,—the business of their life,—their trade.

Verse 17. Gird up thy loins] Take courage, and be ready, lest I confound thee; take courage and be resolute, פֶּן pen, lest by their opposition thou be terrified and confounded. God is often represented as doing or causing to be done, what He only permits or suffers to be done. Or, Do not fear them, I will not suffer thee to be confounded. So Dahler, Ne crains pas que je te confonde a leurs yeux, "Do not fear that I shall confound thee before them." It is well known that the phrase, gird up thy reins, is a metaphor taken from the long robes of the Asiatics; which, on going a journey or performing their ordinary work, they were obliged to truss up under their girdles, that the motions of the body might not be impeded.

Verse 18. I have made thee this day a defenced city, and an iron pillar, and brasen walls] Though thou shalt be exposed to persecutions and various indignities, they shall not prevail against thee. To their attacks thou shalt be as an impregnable city; as unshaken as an iron pillar; and as imperishable as a wall of brass. None, therefore, can have less cause to apprehend danger than thou hast. The issue proved the truth of this promise: he outlived all their insults; and saw Jerusalem destroyed, and his enemies, and the enemies of his Lord, carried into captivity. Instead of חמות chomoth, walls, many MSS. and editions read חמת chomath, a wall, which corresponds with the singular nouns preceding.

Verse 19. They shall not prevail against thee] Because I am determined to defend and support thee against all thy enemies. "Trust in the Lord," said one of the ancients; "and though thou sail in the ocean upon a straw, thou shalt be safe."

CHAPTER II.

God expresses His continued regard for His people long since chosen, 1—3. He then expostulates with them on their ungrateful and worse than heathen return to His regard, 4—11; at which even the inanimate creation must be astonished, 12, 13. After this their guilt is declared to be the sole cause of the calamities which their enemies had power to inflict on them, 14—17. They are upbraided for their alliances with idolatrous countries, 18, 19; and for their strong propensity to idolatry, notwithstanding all the care and tender mercy of God, 20—29. Even the chastenings of the Almighty have produced in this people no repentance, 30. The Chapter concludes with compassionately remonstrating against their folly and ingratitude in revolting so deeply from God, and with warning them of the fearful consequences, 31—37.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verse 2. I remember thee] The youth here refers to their infant political state when they came out of Egypt; they just then began to be a people. Their espousals refer to their receiving the Law at Mount Sinai, which they solemnly accepted, Exod. xxiv, 6—8, and which acceptance was compared to a betrothing or espousal. Previously to this they were no people, for they had no constitution nor form of government. When they received the Law, and an establishment in the Promised Land, then they became a people and a nation.

Wentest after me] Receivedst my Law, and wert obedient to it; confiding thyself wholly to my guidance, and being conscientiously attached to my worship. The kindness was that which God showed them by taking them to be His people, not their kindness to Him.

Verse 3. Israel was holiness unto the Lord] Fully consecrated to His service.

The first-fruits of his increase] They were as wholly the Lord's, as the first-fruits were the property of the priests according to the Law, Numb. xviii, 13. These the priests alone had a right to devote to their own use.

All that devour him shall offend] As they were betrothed to the Lord, they were considered His especial property; they therefore who injured them, were considered as laying violent hands on the property of God. They who persecute God's children have a grievous burthen to bear; an awful account to give.

Verse 5. What iniquity have your fathers found in me] Have they ever discovered any thing cruel, unjust, or oppressive, in my laws? Any thing unkind or tyrannical in my government? Why then have they become idolaters?

Verse 6. Through the wilderness] Egypt was the house of their bondage: the desert through which they passed after they came out of Egypt, was a place where the means of life were not to be found; where no one family could subsist, much less a company of 600,000 men. God mentions these things to show that it was by the bounty of an especial Providence that they were fed and preserved alive. Previously to this, it was a land through which no man passed,

[a] brought us up out of the land of Egypt, that led us through [b] the wilderness, through a land of deserts and of pits, through a land of drought, and of the shadow of death, through a land that no man passed through, and where no man dwelt?

7 And I brought you into [c] a [d] plentiful country, to eat the fruit thereof and the goodness thereof; but when ye entered, ye [e] defiled my land, and made mine heritage an abomination.

8 The priests said not, Where is the LORD? and they that handle the [f] law knew me not: the pastors also transgressed against me, [g] and the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things that [h] do not profit.

and in which no man dwelt. And why? because it did not produce the means of life; it was the shadow of death in its appearance, and the grave to those who committed themselves to it.

Verse 7. And I brought you into a plentiful country] The land of Canaan.

My land] The particular property of God, which he gave to them as an inheritance, they being His peculiar people.

Verse 8. They that handle the law] ותפשי ve-tophishey, they that draw out the law; they whose office it is to explain it, draw out its spiritual meanings, and show to what its testimonies refer.

The pastors also] Kings, political and civil rulers.

Prophesied by Baal] Became his prophets, and became inspired with the words of lying spirits.

Verse 9. I will yet plead with you] אריב arib, I will maintain my process, vindicate my own conduct, and prove the wickedness of yours.

Verse 10. The isles of Chittim] This is the island of Cyprus, according to Josephus. In 1 Maccab. chap. viii, 5, it is taken for Macedonia. Besides this, how they (the Romans) had discomfited in battle Philip and Perseus, king of the Citims. Chittim was the grandson of Japhet; and Bochart has made it appear that the countries inhabited by the Chittim was Italy, and the adjacent provinces of Europe, lying along the coast of the Mediterranean sea; and probably this is the prophet's meaning.

Send unto Kedar] The name of an Arabian tribe. See, if nations, either near or remote, cultivated or stupid, have acted with such fickleness and ingratitude as you have done! They have retained their gods, to whom they had no obligation; ye have abandoned your God, to whom ye owe your life, breath, and all things!

Verse 12. Be astonished, O ye heavens] Or, the heavens are astonished. The original will admit either sense. The conduct of this people was so altogether bad, that among all the iniquities of mankind, neither heaven nor earth had witnessed any thing so excessively sinful and profligate.

Verse 13. Two evils] First, they forsook God, the Fountain of life, light, prosperity, and happiness. Secondly, they hewed out broken cisterns; they joined themselves to idols, from whom they could receive neither temporal nor spiritual good! Their conduct was the excess of folly and blindness. What we call here broken cisterns means, more properly, such vessels as were ill made, not staunch, ill put together, so that the water leaked through them.

Verse 14. Is Israel a servant?] Is he a slave purchased with money, or a servant born in the family? He is a son himself. If so, then why is he spoiled? Not because God has not shown him love and kindness; but because he forsook God, turned to, and is joined with idols.

Verse 15. The young lions roared upon him] The Assyrians who have sacked and destroyed the kingdom of Israel, with a fierceness like that of young lions pouncing upon their prey.

19 Thine own [f] wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee: know therefore and see that it is an evil thing and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the LORD thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord GOD of hosts.

and Tahapanes were two cities of Egypt, otherwise called Memphis and Daphni. It is well known that the good king Josiah was defeated by the Egyptians, and slain in battle. Thus was the crown of Judah's head broken.

Verse 18. What hast thou to do in the way of Egypt?] Why dost thou make alliances with Egypt.

To drink the waters of Sihor?] This means the Nile. See on Isa. xxiii, 3.

The way of Assyria] Why make alliances with the Assyrians? All such connexions will only expedite thy ruin.

To drink the waters of the river?] The Euphrates; as נהר nahar, or הנהר ha-nahar, always means Euphrates, the country between the Tigris and Euphrates is termed to this day Maver al-nahar, "the country beyond the river," i. e. Mesopotamia.

Instead of cleaving to the Lord, they joined affinity, and made alliances with those two nations, who were ever jealous of them, and sought their ruin. Egypt was to them a broken reed instead of a staff; Assyria was a leaky cistern, from which they could derive no help.

Verse 20. Of old time I have broken thy yoke] It is thought by able critics that the verbs should be read in the second person singular, THOU hast broken thy yoke; THOU hast burst thy bonds; and thus the Septuagint, συνετριψας τον ζυγον σου, "thou hast broken thy yoke." And the Vulgate, Confregisti jugum meum, rupisti vincula mea; "thou hast broken my yoke; thou hast burst my bonds;" and so the Arabic. But the Chaldee gives it a meaning which removes the difficulty. I have broken the yoke of the people from thy neck; I have cut your bonds asunder. And when this was done they did promise fair; for thou saidst, I will not transgress; but still they played the harlot, committed idolatrous acts in the high places, where the heathen had built their altars, pretending that elevation of this kind assisted their devotion.

Verse 21. I had planted thee a noble vine] I gave thee the fullest instruction, the purest ordinances, the highest privileges; and reason would that I should expect thee to live suitably to such advantages: but instead of this, thou art become degenerate; the tree is deteriorated, and the fruit is bad. Instead of being true worshippers, and of a holy life and conversation, ye are become idolaters of the most corrupt and profligate kind. See Isa. v, 1, &c. where the same image is used.

Verse 22. For though thou wash thee with nitre] It should be rendered natar or natron, a substance totally different from our nitre. It comes from the root נתר natar, to dissolve, loosen; because a solution of it in water is abstersive, taking out spots, &c. from clothes. It is still used in the East for the purpose of washing. If vinegar be poured on it, Dr. Shaw says, a strong effervescence is the immediate consequence; which illustrates Prov. xxv, 20, "The singing of songs to a heavy heart is like vinegar upon natron;" that is, there is no affinity between them; opposition and strife are occasioned by any attempt to unite them.

Thine iniquity is marked before me] No washing will take out thy spots; the marks of thy idolatry and corruption are too deeply rooted to be extracted by any human means.

Verse 23. See thy way in the valley] The valley of Hinnom, where they offered their own children to Moloch, an idol of the Ammonites.

Dr. Dahler rather paraphrases, viz.—

Semblable a une dromedaire en chaleur,
Qui court d'une cote a l'autre.

"Like to a dromedary in her desire for the male,
Which runs hither and thither."

This is an energetic comparison; and shows the unbridled attachment of those bad people to idolatry, and the abominable practices by which it was usually accompanied.

Verse 24. A wild ass used to the wilderness] Another comparison to express the same thing.

Snuffeth up the wind] In a high fever from the inward heat, felt at such times, these animals open their mouths and nostrils as wide as possible, to take in large draughts of fresh air, in order to cool them.

In her month they shall find her.] The meaning is, that although such animals are exceedingly fierce and dangerous when they are in this state; yet, as soon as they have found the male the desire is satisfied, and they become quiet and governable as before. But it was not so with this idolatrous people: their desires were ever fierce and furious; they were never satiated, one indulgence always leading to another. The brute beasts had only a short season in which this appetite prevailed: but they acted without restraint or limit.

Verse 25. Withhold thy foot from being unshod] When it was said to them, "Cease from discovering thy feet; prostitute thyself no more to thy idols."

And thy throat from thirst] Drink no more of their libations, nor use those potions which tend only to increase thy appetite for pollution. Thou didst say, There is no hope: it is useless to advise me thus; I am determined; I have loved these strange gods, and to them will I cleave.

Verse 26. As the thief is ashamed] As the pilferer is confounded when he is caught in the fact; so shalt thou, thy kings, princes, priests, and prophets, be confounded, when God shall arrest thee in thy idolatries, and deliver thee into the hands of thine enemies.

Verse 27. Thou art my father] By thee we have been produced, and by thee we are sustained. This was the property of the true God; for He is the Author and Supporter of being. How deeply fallen and brutishly ignorant must they be, when they could attribute this to the stock of a tree!

Verse 28. According to the number of thy cities are thy gods] Among heathen nations every city had its tutelary deity. Judah, far sunk in idolatry, had adopted this custom. The Church of Rome has refined it a little: every city has its tutelary saint, and this saint has a procession and worship peculiar to himself. So here; not much of the old idolatry is lost.

Verse 31. Have I been a wilderness unto Israel?] Have I ever withheld from you any of the blessings necessary for your support?

A land of darkness] Have you since you passed through the wilderness, and came out of the darkness of Egypt, ever been brought into similar circumstances? You have had food and all the necessaries of life for your bodies; and my ordinances and word to enlighten and cheer your souls. I have neither been a wilderness nor a land of darkness to you.

neither brook religious nor civil restraint; we will regard no laws human or divine. It was this disposition that caused them to fall in so fully with the whole system of idolatry.

Verse 32. Can a maid forget her ornaments] This people has not so much attachment to me as young females have to their dress and ornaments. They never forget them; and even when arrived at old age, look with pleasure on the dress and ornaments which they have worn in their youth.

Days without number.] That is, for many years; during the whole reign of Manasses, which was fifty-five years, the land was deluged with idolatry, from which the reform by good king Josiah his grandson had not yet purified it.

Verse 33. Why trimmest thou thy way] Ye have used a multitude of artifices to gain alliances with the neighbouring idolatrous nations.

Thou also taught the wicked ones thy ways.] Ye have made even those idolaters worse than they were before. Dr. Blayney translates, "Therefore have I taught calamity thy ways." A prosopopœia: "I have instructed Calamity where to find thee." Thou shalt not escape punishment.

Verse 34. The blood of the souls of the poor innocents] We find from the Sacred History, that Manasseh had filled Jerusalem with innocent blood. See 2 Kings xxi, 16, and Ezek. xxxiv, 10.

I have not found it by secret search, but upon all these.] Such deeds of darkness and profligacy are found only in Israel. Dr. Blayney translates, "I have not found it in a digged hole, but upon every oak." Others cover the blood that it may not appear; but ye have shed it openly, and sprinkled it upon your consecrated oaks, and gloried in it.

Verse 35. Because I am innocent] They continued to assert their innocence, and therefore expected that God's judgments would be speedily removed!

I will plead with thee] I will maintain my process, follow it up to conviction, and inflict the deserved punishment.

Verse 36. Why gaddest thou about] When they had departed from the Lord, they sought foreign alliances for support. 1. The Assyrians, 2 Chron. xxviii, 10—21: but they injured, instead of helping them. 2. The Egyptians:—but in this they were utterly disappointed, and were ashamed of their confidence. See chap. xxxvii, 7, 8, for the fulfilment of this prediction.

Verse 37. Thou shalt go forth from him, and thine hands upon thine head] Thou shalt find all thy confidence vain,—thy hope disappointed,—and thy state reduced to desperation. The hand being placed on the head was the evidence of deep sorrow, occasioned by utter desolation. See the case of Tamar, when ruined and abandoned by her brother Amnon, 2 Sam. xiii, 19.

Thou shalt not prosper in them.] They shall all turn to thy disadvantage: and this, as we shall see in the history of this people, was literally fulfilled. O what a grievous and bitter thing it is to sin against the Lord, and have Him for an Enemy!

CHAPTER III.

The first five verses of this Chapter allude to the subject of the last; and contain earnest exhortations to repentance, with gracious promises of pardon, notwithstanding every aggravation of guilt, 1—5. At the sixth verse a new section of prophecy commences, opening with a complaint against Judah for having exceeded in guilt her sister Israel, already cast off for her idolatry, 6—11. She is cast off, but not for ever; for to this same Israel, whose place of captivity (Assyria) lay to the north of Judea, pardon is promised on her repentance, together with a restoration to the church of God, along with her sister Judah, in the latter days, 12—20. The Prophet foretels the sorrow and repentance of the children of Israel under the Gospel dispensation, 21. God renews his gracious promises, 22; and they again confess their sins. In this confession their not deigning to name the idol Baal, the source of their calamities, but calling him in the abstract shame, or a thing of shame, is a nice touch of the pencil, extremely beautiful and natural, 22—25.

NOTES ON CHAP. III.

Verse 1. If a man put away his wife] It was ever understood by the law and practice of the country, that if a woman were divorced by her husband, and became the wife of another man, the first husband could never take her again. Now Israel had been married unto the Lord; joined in solemn covenant to Him, to worship and serve Him only. Israel turned from following Him, and became idolatrous. On this ground, considering idolatry as a spiritual whoredom, and the precept and practice of the law to illustrate this case, Israel could never more be restored to the Divine favour: but God, this first Husband, in the plenitude of His mercy is willing to receive this adulterous spouse, if she will abandon her idolatries and return unto Him. And this and the following Chapters are spent in affectionate remonstrances and loving exhortations addressed to these sinful people, to make them sensible of their own sin and God's tender mercy in offering to receive them again into favour.

Verse 2. As the Arabian in the wilderness] They were as fully intent on the practice of their idolatry as the Arab in the desert is in lying in wait to plunder the caravans. Where they have not cover to lie in ambush, they scatter themselves about, and run hither and thither, raising themselves up in their saddles to see if they can discover, by smoke, dust, or other token, the approach of any travellers.

Verse 3. There hath been no latter rain] The former rain, which prepared the earth for tillage, fell in the beginning of November, or a little sooner; and the latter rain fell in the middle of April, after which there was scarcely any rain during the summer.

Verse 4. Wilt thou not—cry unto me, My father] Wilt thou not allow me to be thy Creator and Preserver, and cease thus to acknowledge idols? See on chap. ii, 27.

Verse 5. Will he reserve his anger for ever?] Why should not wrath be continued against thee, as thou continuest transgression against the Lord?

Verse 6. The LORD said unto me in the days of Josiah the king] This is a new discourse, and is supposed to have been delivered after the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah. Here the prophet shows the people of Judah the transgressions, idolatry, obstinacy, and punishment, of their brethren, the ten tribes, whom he calls to return to the Lord; with the most gracious promises of restoration to their own country, their reunion with their brethren of Judah, and every degree of prosperity in consequence. He takes occasion also to show the Jews how much more culpable they were than the Israelites, because they practised the same iniquities while they had the punishment and ruin of the others before their eyes. He therefore exhorts them to return to God with all their hearts, that they might not fall into the same condemnation. See the following verses.

Verse 7. And I said] By the prophets Elijah, Elisha, Hosea, Amos, &c.: for all these prophesied to that rebellious people, and exhorted them to return to the Lord.

8 And I saw, when [a] for all the causes whereby backsliding Israel committed adultery I had [b] put her away, and given her a bill of divorce; [c] yet her treacherous sister Judah feared not, but went and played the harlot also.

9 And it came to pass through the [d] lightness of her whoredom, that she [e] defiled the land, and committed adultery with [f] stones and with stocks.

10 And yet for all this her treacherous sister Judah hath not turned unto me [g] with her whole heart, but [h] feignedly, saith the LORD.

11 And the LORD said unto me, [i] The backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah.

12 Go and proclaim these words toward [k] the north, and say, Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the LORD; and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you: for I am [l] merciful, saith the LORD, and I will not keep anger for ever.

13 [m] Only acknowledge thine iniquity, that thou hast transgressed against the LORD thy God, and hast [n] scattered thy ways to the [o] strangers [p] under every green tree, and ye have not obeyed my voice, saith the LORD.

Verse 8. I had put her away] Given them up into the hands of the Assyrians.

Verse 9. The lightness of her whoredom] The grossness of her idolatry:—worshipping objects the most degrading, with rites the most impure.

Verse 11. Backsliding Israel hath justified herself more] She was less offensive in my eyes, and more excusable, than treacherous Judah. So it is said, Luke xviii, 14, the humbled Publican went down to his house justified rather than the boasting Pharisee. The one was more to be pitied than the other, and more likely to receive the mercy of God.

Verse 12. Proclaim these words toward the north] The countries where the ten tribes were then in captivity, Mesopotamia, Assyria, Media, &c., see 2 Kings xvii, 6: these lay north of Judea. How tender and compassionate are the exhortations in this and the following verses! Could these people believe that God had sent the prophet; and yet prefer the land of their bondage to the blessings of freedom in their own country, and the approbation of their God!

Verse 14. I will take you one of a city, and two of a family] If there should be but one of a city left, or one willing to return, and two only of a whole tribe, yet will I receive these, and bring them back from captivity into their own land. I have heard these words most sinfully applied to show the nature of a fancied eternal decree of election, that has appointed in several cases one only out of a whole city, and two out of a whole family, to be eternally saved, leaving the rest, according to the decree of reprobation, to perish everlastingly! And yet these persons who spoke thus of the Fountain of eternal goodness and mercy, professed to believe in Him who, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man!

Verse 15. I will give you pastors according to mine heart] The pastor means either the king or the prophet; and the pastors here promised may be either kings or prophets, or both. These shall be according to God's own heart,—they shall be of His own choosing,—and shall be qualified by Himself: and in consequence they shall feed the people with knowledge, דעה daâh, that Divine truth concerning the true God and the best interests of man, which was essentially necessary to their salvation;—and understanding, השכיל hiskil, the full interpretation of every point, that, in receiving the truth, they might become wise, holy, and happy.

Verse 16. The ark of the covenant of the LORD] This symbol of the Divine Presence, given to the Jews as a token and pledge of God's dwelling among them, shall be no longer necessary, and shall no longer exist; for, in the days of the Messiah, to which this promise seems to relate, God's worship shall not be confined either to one place or to one people. The temple of God shall be among men; and everywhere God be adored through Christ Jesus.

Neither shall that be done any more.] The ark shall be no more established, or carried from place to place; nor shall men go to visit it. All its ceremonies and importance shall cease; and, if lost, shall never be rebuilt.

Verse 17. They shall call Jerusalem the throne of the gathered unto it, [a] to the name of the LORD, to Jerusalem: neither shall they [b] walk any more after the [c] imagination of their evil heart.

18 In those days [d] the house of Judah shall walk [e] with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of [f] the north to [g] the land that I have [h] given for an inheritance unto your fathers.

19 But I said, How shall I put thee among the children, and give thee [i] a [k] pleasant land, [l] a goodly heritage of the hosts of nations? and I said, Thou shalt call me, [m] My father; and thou shalt not turn away [n] from me.

20 Surely as a wife treacherously departeth from her [o] husband, so [p] have ye dealt treacherously with me, O house of Israel, saith the LORD.

21 A voice was heard upon [q] the high places, weeping and supplications of the children of Israel: for they have perverted their way, and they have forgotten the LORD their God.

LORD] The New Jerusalem, the universal church of Christ, shall be God's throne: and wherever He is acknowledged as the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world, there God sits on His throne, and holds His court.

Verse 18. The house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel] That is, in those days in which the Jews shall be brought in with the fulness of the Gentiles.

Out of the land of the north] From Chaldea. This prophecy has two aspects:—one refers to the return from the Babylonish captivity; the other, to the glorious days of Christianity. But the words may refer to that gathering together of the Jews, not only from Chaldea, but from the countries of their dispersion over the face of the whole earth, and uniting them in the Christian church.

Verse 19. How shall I put thee among the children] As if he had said,—How can ye be accounted a holy seed, who are polluted? How can ye be united to the people of God, who walk in the path of sinners? How can ye be taken to heaven, who are unholy within, and unrighteous without?

And I said, Thou shalt call me, my Father] This is the answer to the above question. They could not be put among the children unless they became legal members of the heavenly family: and they could not become members of this family unless they abandoned idolatry, and took the Lord for their Portion. Nor could they be continued in the privileges of the heavenly family, unless they no more turned away from their heavenly Father.

Verse 21. A voice was heard upon the high places] Here the Israelites are represented as assembled together to bewail their idolatry and to implore mercy. While thus engaged, they hear the gracious call of Jehovah.

Verse 22. Return, ye backsliding children] This they gladly receive, and with one voice make their confession to Him, Behold, we come unto thee, for thou art Jehovah our God;—and thence to the end of the Chapter, show the reasons why they return unto God. 1. Because He is the true God. 2. Because the idols did not profit them: they could give no help in time of trouble. 3. Because it is the prerogative of God alone to give salvation. 4. Because they had no kind of prosperity since they had abandoned the worship of their Maker. And this was not only their case, but it was the case of their forefathers, who all suffered in consequence of their idolatry and disobedience. 5. These reasons are concluded with a hearty confession of sin, at the thought of which they are confounded; for the remembrance of their sin was grievous to them, and the burthen was intolerable. This confession ended, God appears in the next Chapter with gracious promises, and proper directions how they are to return, and how to conduct themselves in future.

Verse 24. For shame hath devoured] The word shame, here and in chap. xi, 13, Hos. ix, 10, is supposed to signify Baal, the idol which they worshipped. That thing or shame which has brought you into contempt, confusion, and ruin. Sooner or later every sinner must be ashamed of his conduct; next, confounded; and, lastly, ruined by it.

CHAPTER IV.

Sequel of the exhortations and promises addressed to Israel in the preceding Chapter, 1, 2. The Prophet then addresses the people of Judah and Jerusalem, exhorting to repentance and reformation that the dreadful visitation with which they were threatened might be averted, 3, 4. He then sounds the alarm of war, 5, 6. Nebuchadnezzar, like a fierce lion, is, from the certainty of the prophecy, represented to be on his march; and the disastrous event to have been already declared, 7—9. And as the lying prophets had flattered the people with the hopes of peace and safety, they are now introduced (when their predictions are falsified by the event) excusing themselves; and, with matchless effrontery, laying the blame of the deception upon God, ('And they said,' &c. so the text is corrected by Kennicott,) 10. The prophet immediately resumes his subject; and, in the person of God, denounces again those judgments which were shortly to be inflicted by Nebuchadnezzar, 11—18. The approaching desolation of Jerusalem lamented in language amazingly energetic and exquisitely tender, 19—21. The incorrigible wickedness of the people the sole cause of these calamities, 22. In the remaining verses the prophet describes the sad catastrophe of Jerusalem by such a beautiful assemblage of the most striking and afflictive circumstances as form a picture of a land "swept with the besom of destruction." The earth seems ready to return to its original chaos; every ray of light is extinguished, and succeeded by a frightful gloom; the mountains tremble, and the hills shake, under the dreadful apprehension of the wrath of Jehovah; all is one awful solitude, where not a vestige of the human race is to be seen. Even the fowls of heaven, finding no longer whereon to subsist, are compelled to migrate; the most fruitful places are become a dark and dreary desert, and every city is a ruinous heap. To complete the whole, the dolorous shrieks of Jerusalem, as of a woman in peculiar agony, break through the frightful gloom; and the appalled prophet pauses, leaving the reader to reflect on the dreadful effects of apostasy and idolatry, 23—31.

NOTES ON CHAP. IV.

Verse 1. Shalt thou not remove.] This was spoken before the Babylonish captivity; and here is a promise that if they will return from their idolatry, they shall not be led into captivity. So, even that positively threatened judgment would have been averted had they returned to the Lord.

Verse 2. Thou shalt swear, The LORD liveth] Thou shalt not bind thyself by any false god; thou shalt acknowledge me as the Supreme. Bind thyself BY me, and TO me; and do this in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness.

The nations shall bless themselves in him] They shall be so fully convinced of the power and goodness of Jehovah in seeing the change wrought on thee, and the mercies heaped upon thee, that their usual mode of benediction shall be,—May the God of Israel bless thee!

Verse 3. Break up your fallow ground] Fallow ground is either that which, having been once tilled, has lain long uncultivated; or, ground slightly plowed, in order to be plowed again previously to its being sown. Ye have been long uncultivated in righteousness; let true repentance break up your fruitless and hardened hearts; and when the seed of the word of life is sown in them, take heed that worldly cares and concerns do not arise, and like thorns, choke the good seed.

Verse 4. Circumcise yourselves] Put away every thing that has a tendency to grieve the Spirit of God, or to render your present holy resolutions unfruitful.

5 Declare ye in Judah, and publish in Jerusalem; and say, Blow ye the trumpet in the land: cry, gather together, and say, [a] Assemble yourselves, and let us go into the defenced cities.

6 Set up the standard toward Zion: [b] retire, stay not: for I will bring evil from the [c] north, and a great [d] destruction.

7 [e] The lion is come up from his thicket, and [f] the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; he is gone forth from his place [g] to make thy land desolate; and thy cities shall be laid waste, without an inhabitant.

8 For this [h] gird you with sackcloth, lament and howl: for the fierce anger of the LORD is not turned back from us.

9 And it shall come to pass at that day, saith the LORD, that the heart of the king shall perish, and the heart of the princes; and the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall wonder.

Verse 5. Blow ye the trumpet] Give full information to all parts of the land, that the people may assemble together and defend themselves against their invaders.

Verse 6. I will bring evil from the north] From the land of Chaldea.

Verse 7. The lion is come up] Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon. "The king (Nebuchadnezzar) is come up from his tower." Targum.

The destroyer of the Gentiles] Of the nations: of all the people who resisted his authority. He destroyed them all.

Verse 8. Lament and howl] הילילו hililoo. The aboriginal Irish had a funeral song called the Caoinian, still continued among their descendants, one part of which is termed the ulaloo: this is sung responsively, or alternately, and is accompanied with a full chorus of sighs and groans. It has been thought that Ireland was originally peopled by the Phœnicians: if so, this will account for the similarity of many words and customs among both these people.

Verse 9. The heart of the king shall perish] Shall lose all courage.

Verse 10. Ah, Lord GOD! surely thou hast greatly deceived this people] The Targum paraphrases this verse thus: "And I said, Receive my supplication, O Lord God; for, behold, the false prophets deceive this people and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall have peace." The prophet could not reconcile this devastation of the country with the promises already made; and he appears to ask the question, Hast Thou not then deceived this people in saying, there shall be peace, i. e. prosperity?—

Whereas the sword reacheth unto the soul.] That is, the life; the people being generally destroyed.

Verse 11—13. A dry wind—a full wind—as clouds—as a whirlwind] All these expressions appear to refer to the pestilential winds, suffocating vapours, and clouds and pillars of sand collected by whirlwinds, which are so common and destructive in the East, see on Isa. xxi, 1; and these images are employed here to show the overwhelming effect of the Chaldeans' invasion of the land.

Verse 13. Woe unto us!] The people, deeply affected with these threatened judgments, interrupt the prophet with the lamentation—Woe unto us, for we are spoiled! The prophet then resumes:—

Verse 14. O Jerusalem, wash thine heart] Why do ye not put away your wickedness that ye may be saved from these tremendous judgments! How long shall thy vain thoughts of safety and prosperity lodge within thee. Whilst thou continuest a rebel against God, and provokest him daily by thy abominations!

Verse 15. For a voice declareth from Dan] Dan was a city in the tribe of Dan, north of Jerusalem; the first city in Palestine which occurs in the way from Babylon to Jerusalem.

16 Make ye mention to the nations; behold, publish against Jerusalem, that watchers come [a] from a far country, and give out their voice against the cities of Judah.

17 [b] As keepers of a field, are they against her round about; because she hath been rebellious against me, saith the Lord.

18 [c] Thy way and thy doings have procured these things unto thee; this is thy wickedness, because it is bitter, because it reacheth unto thine heart.

19 My [d] bowels, my bowels! I am pained at [e] my very heart; my heart maketh a noise in me; I cannot hold my peace, because thou hast heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war.

20 [f] Destruction upon destruction is cried; for the whole land is spoiled: suddenly are [g] my tents spoiled, and my curtains in a moment.

21 How long shall I see the standard, and hear the sound of the trumpet?

22 For my people is foolish, they have not known me: they are sottish children, and they have none understanding: [h] they are wise to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge.

27 For thus hath the Lord said, The whole land shall be desolate; [n] yet will I not make a full end.

28 For this [o] shall the earth mourn, and [p] the heavens above be black: because I have spoken it, I have purposed it, and [q] will not repent, neither will I turn back from it.

29 The whole city shall flee for the noise of the horsemen and bowmen; they shall go into thickets, and climb up upon the rocks: every city shall be forsaken, and not a man dwell therein.

Affliction from mount Ephraim.] Between Dan and Jerusalem are the mountains of Ephraim. These would be the first places attacked by the Chaldeans: and the rumour from thence would show that the land was invaded.

Verse 16. Watchers come from a far country] Persons to besiege fortified places.

Verse 17. As keepers of a field] In the Eastern countries grain is often sown in the open country; and, when nearly ripe, guards are placed at different distances round about it to preserve it from being plundered. Jerusalem was watched, like one of these fields, by guards all round about it; so that none could enter to give assistance, and none who wished to escape were permitted to go out.

Verse 19. My bowels] From this to the twenty-ninth verse the prophet describes the ruin of Jerusalem and the desolation of Judea by the Chaldeans in language and imagery scarcely paralleled in the whole Bible. At the sight of misery the bowels are first affected; pain is next felt by a sort of stricture in the pericardium; and then the heart becoming strongly affected by irregular palpitations, a gush of tears, accompanied with wailings, is the issue.—My bowels, my bowels! I am pained at my very heart; (the walls of my heart) my heart maketh a noise in me; I cannot hold my peace. Here is nature, and fact also.

Verse 20. Destruction upon destruction] Cities burnt, and their inhabitants destroyed.

My tents spoiled] Even the solitary dwellings in the fields and open country do not escape.

Verse 23. I beheld the earth, (the land,) and lo, it was without form and void] תהו ובהו tohu va-bohu; the very words used in Genesis to denote the formless state of the chaotic mass before God had brought it into order.

Verse 24. The mountains—hills] Princes, rulers, &c. were astonished and fled.

Verse 25. The birds of the heavens were fled.] The land was so desolated that even the fowls of heaven could not find meat, and therefore fled away to another region. How powerfully energetic is this description! See Zeph. i, 3.

Verse 30. Though thou rentest thy face with painting] This probably refers to the custom of introducing stibium, a preparation of antimony, between the eye and the lids, in order to produce a fine lustre, which occasions a distension of the eyelid in the time of the operation. In order to of gold, [a] though thou rentest thy [b] face with painting, in vain shalt thou make thyself fair; [c] thy lovers will despise thee, they will seek thy life.

31 For I have heard a voice as of a woman in travail, and the anguish as of her that bringeth forth her first child, the voice of the daughter of Zion, that bewaileth herself, that [d] spreadeth her hands, saying, Woe is me now! for my soul is wearied because of murderers.

heighten the effect from this, some may have introduced a more than ordinary quantity, so as nearly to rend the eyelid itself. Though thou make use of every means of address, of cunning, and of solicitation, to get assistance from neighbouring states, it will be all in vain. Reference is here particularly made to the practice of harlots to allure men.

Verse 31. Bringeth forth her first child] In such a case the fear, danger, and pain, were naturally the greatest.

Spreadeth her hands] The gesture indicated by nature to signify distress, and implore help. We have met with this figure in other parts; and among the classic writers it is frequent.

CHAPTER V.

The Prophet, having described the judgments impending over his countrymen, enlarges on the corruptions which prevailed among them. Their profession of religion was all false and hypocritical, 1, 2. Though corrected, they were not amended, but persisted in their guilt, 3. This was not the case with the low and ignorant only, 4; but more egregiously so with those of the higher order, from whose knowledge and opportunities better things might have been expected, 5. God therefore threatens them with the most cruel enemies, 6; and appeals to themselves if they should be permitted to practise such sins unpunished, 7—9. He then commands their enemies to raze the walls of Jerusalem, 10; that devoted city, whose inhabitants added to all their other sins the highest contempt of God's word and prophets, 11—13. Wherefore His word, in the mouth of His prophet, shall be as fire to consume them, 14; the Chaldean forces shall cruelly afflict them, 15—17; and further judgments await them as the consequence of their apostasy and idolatry, 18, 19. The Chapter closes with a most melancholy picture of the moral condition of the Jewish people at that period which immediately preceded the Babylonish captivity, 20—31.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verse 1. Broad places] Market places, and those where there was most public resort.

If ye can find a man] A certain philosopher went through the streets of Athens with a lighted lamp in his hand; and being asked what he sought, answered, I am seeking to find a MAN. So, in Jerusalem none was found, on the most diligent search, who acted worthy the character of a rational being.

I will pardon it.] I will spare the city for the sake of one righteous person. So, at the intercession of Abraham, God would have spared Sodom if there had been ten righteous persons found in it, Gen. xviii, 26.

Verse 2. The LORD liveth] Though they profess to bind themselves by Jehovah, as if they acknowledged Him as their God and only Lord; yet they swore falsely; for not believing in Him, they took a false oath; one by which they did not

3 O LORD, are not [a] thine eyes upon the truth? thou hast [b] stricken them, but they have not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but [c] they have refused to receive correction: they have made their faces harder than a rock; they have refused to return.

4 Therefore I said, Surely these are poor; they are foolish: for [d] they know not the way of the LORD, nor the judgment of their God.

5 I will get me unto the great men, and will speak unto them; for [e] they have known the way of the LORD, and the judgment of their God: but these have altogether [f] broken the yoke, and burst the bonds.

6 Wherefore [g] a lion out of the forest shall slay them, [h] and a wolf of the [i] evenings shall spoil them, [k] a leopard shall watch over their cities: every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces: because their transgressions are many, and their backslidings [l] are increased.

7 How shall I pardon thee for this? thy children have forsaken me, and [m] sworn by them [n] that are no gods: [o] when I had fed them to the full, they then committed adultery, and assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses.

8 [p] They were as fed horses in the morning: every one [q] neighed after his neighbour's wife.

9 [r] Shall I not visit for these things? saith the LORD: [s] and shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

10 [t] Go ye up upon her walls and destroy; [u] but make not a full end: take away her battlements; for they are not the LORD's.

11 For [x] the house of Israel and the house of Judah have dealt very treacherously against me, saith the LORD.

12 [y] They have belied the LORD, and said, [z] It is not he; neither shall evil come upon us; [a] neither shall we see sword nor famine:

13 And the prophets shall become wind, and the word is not in them: thus shall it be done unto them.

believe themselves bound, not acknowledging Him as their Lord. See on chap. iv, 2.

Verse 4. These are poor] They are ignorant; they have no education; they know no better.

Verse 5. I will get me unto the great men] Those whose circumstances and rank in life gave them opportunities of information which the others could not have for the reasons already given.

These have altogether broken the yoke] These have cast aside all restraint, have acted above law, and have trampled all moral obligations under their feet; and into their vortex the lower classes of the people have been swept away. Solon said,—"The laws are like cobwebs; they entangle the small fry: but the great ones go through them, and carry all away with them."

Verse 6. Wherefore a lion] Nebuchadnezzar, according to the general opinion: who is called here a lion for his courage and violence; a bear for his rapaciousness; and a leopard for his activity. Dahler supposes the Scythians to be intended, both here and in chap. iv, 7.

Verse 7. In the harlots' houses.] In places consecrated to idolatry. In the language of the prophets, adultery generally designs idolatry. This we have often seen.

Verse 8. After his neighbour's wife.] This may have been literally true, as the abominations of idolatry, in which they were so deeply practised, would necessarily produce such a state of things as that here mentioned.

Verse 10. Go ye up upon her walls] This is the permission and authority given to the Chaldeans to pillage Jerusalem.

Take away her battlements] Some translate נטישות netishoth, branches; others, vines. The metaphor is probably taken from a tree. Destroy the branches, cut down the stem: but do not damage the root. Leave so many of the people that the state may be regenerated. The Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic read, Leave her foundations, for they are the Lord's: and this agrees with Destroy, but make not a full end.

Verse 12. They have belied the LORD] כחשו kichashu. They have denied or disavowed the Lord.

It is not he] לוא הוא lo hu, he is not; there is no such being; therefore this evil shall not come upon us. On their premises, their conclusion was just. There is no judge; therefore, there shall be no judgment. Thus they denied the Lord. They were atheists at heart.

Verse 13. And the prophets shall become wind] What are the prophets? Empty persons. Their words are wind; we hear the sound of their threatenings, but of the matter of the threatenings we shall hear no more.

And the word is not in them] There is no inspirer:—but 14 Wherefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, Because ye speak this word, [a] behold, I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them.

15 Lo, I will bring a [b] nation upon you [c] from far, O house of Israel, saith the LORD: it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say.

16 Their quiver is as an open sepulchre, they are all mighty men.

17 And they shall eat up thine [d] harvest, and thy bread, which thy sons and thy daughters should eat: they shall eat up thy flocks and thine herds: they shall eat up thy vines and thy fig trees: they shall impoverish thy fenced cities, wherein thou trustedst, with the sword.

18 Nevertheless in those days, saith the LORD, I [e] will not make a full end with you.

19 And it shall come to pass, when ye shall say, [f] Wherefore doeth the LORD our God all these things unto us? then shalt thou answer them, Like as ye have [g] forsaken me, and served strange gods in your land, so [h] shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours.

22 [l] Fear ye not me? saith the LORD: will ye not tremble at my presence, which have placed the sand for the [m] bound of the sea by a perpetual decree, that it cannot pass it: and though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass over it?

23 But this people hath a revolting and a rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone.

24 Neither say they in their heart, Let us now fear the LORD our God, [n] that giveth rain, both the [o] former and the latter, in his season: [p] he reserveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harvest.

may their own predictions fall on their own heads! This seems the natural sense of this passage.

Verse 14. Because ye speak this word] Because ye thus treat my message, I will make my words in thy mouth fire. They have said, they are but air: but I will make them fire, and a fire too that shall devour them. And how this was to be done, and by whom, is mentioned in the next verse.

Verse 15. I will bring a nation] The Scythians, says Dahler; the Babylonians, whose antiquity was great; that empire being founded by Nimrod.

Whose language thou knowest not] The Chaldee, which, though a dialect of the Hebrew, is so very different in its words and construction, that in hearing it spoken they could not possibly collect the meaning of what was said.

Verse 16. Their quiver is as an open sepulchre] They are such exact archers, as never to miss their mark; every arrow is sure to slay one man.

Verse 18. I will not make a full end] There are more evils in store for you. You shall not only be spoiled, and all your property destroyed: but ye shall be carried into captivity; and ye shall serve strangers in a land that is not your's, ver. 19.

Verse 22. Which have placed the sand for the bound of the sea] What can I not do? who confine the sea, that enormous mass of waters, and prevent it from overflowing the earth; not by immense mountains and rocks, but by the sand; no particle of which is in cohesion with another. Yet the most tremendous waves cannot displace, nor pass over, this simple barrier.

Verse 23. They are revolted and gone.] They have abandoned me, and are gone farther and farther into transgression. They are gone entirely away from truth and righteousness.

Verse 24. Giveth rain, both the former and the latter] See the note on chap. iii, 3.

The appointed weeks of the harvest.] As the early rains fell in the northern parts of Judea about the end of September, in the civil year of the Hebrews; so the latter rains fell before harvest in the months of March and April: so the appointed weeks of the harvest were those which fell between the Passover and Pentecost. In the southern parts the harvest was earlier than in the northern. Dr. Blayney translates,—"A sufficiency of the appointed things of harvest He secureth to us."

If the word שבעת shebuâth, weeks, be read with a ש sin, instead of a ס shin, it will signify fulness or sufficiency; and thus the Septuagint and Vulgate have read it. I think the present reading is much to be preferred. God appoints a harvest time, and in His good providence He generally gives harvest weather.

Verse 25. Your iniquities have turned away these things] When these appointed weeks of harvest do not come,—should we not examine and see whether this be not in God's judgment? Have not our iniquities turned away these good things from us?

Verse 26. They lay wait, as he that setteth snares] A metaphor taken from fowlers, who, having fixed their nets, lie down and keep out of sight, that when birds come, they may be ready to draw and entangle them.

Verse 27. As a cage is full of birds] There is no doubt that the reference here is to a decoy or trap-cage, as Dr. Blayney has rendered it: in these the fowlers put several tame birds, which, when the wild ones see, they come and light on the cage, and fall into the snare.

Verse 28. They judge not the cause,—yet they prosper] Perhaps we might be justified in translating, And shall they prosper?

Verse 30. A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land.] Dahler translates:—"Strange crimes and horrible trespasses have been committed in the land." These have been already detailed: but this may refer to what follows.

Verse 31. The prophets prophesy falsely] The false prophets predict favourable things, that they may please both the princes and the people.

The priests bear rule by their means] The false prophets affording them all that their influence and power can procure, to enable them to keep their places, and feed on the riches of the Lord's house.

And my people love to have it so] Are perfectly satisfied with this state of things, because they are permitted to continue in their sins without reproof or restraint. The prophets and the priests united to deceive and ruin the people. The prophets gave out false predictions; by their means the priests got the government of the people into their own hands; and so infatuated were the people that they willingly abandoned themselves to those blind guides, and would not hearken to the voice of any reformer. In my Old Bible, the words stand thus:—Stonying and mervailis ben made in the erthe, prophets prophecieden lesing; and prestis clappiden with joye with ther hondes, and my peple lovid siche thingis. False prophets and worldly priests have been in all ages the bane of religion, and the ruin of many souls. When profligate people stand up in behalf of profligate priests, corruption must then be at its height.

CHAPTER VI.

Jeremiah, in the spirit of prophecy, seeing the Chaldeans on their march, bids his people set up the usual signals of distress, and spread the general alarm to betake themselves to flight, 1. Then, by a beautiful allusion to the custom of shepherds moving their flocks to the richest pastures, Jerusalem is singled out as a place devoted to be eaten up, or trodden down, by the armies of the Chaldeans, who are called up against her, and whose ardour and impatience is so great that the soldiers, when they arrive in the evening, regret they have no more day, and desire to begin the attack without waiting for the light of the morning, 2—5. God is then represented as animating and directing the besiegers against this guilty city, which sinned as incessantly as a fountain flows, 6, 7; although warned of the fatal consequence, 8. He intimates also (by the gleaning of the grapes) that one invasion should carry away the remains of another, till their disobedience, hypocrisy, and other sins, should end in their total overthrow, 9—15. And to show that God is clear when He judgeth, he mentions His having in vain admonished and warned them; and calls upon the whole world to witness the equity of His proceedings, 16—18, in punishing this perverse and hypocritical people, 19, 20, by the ministry of the cruel Chaldeans, 21—23. Upon this a chorus of Jews is introduced expressing their fears and alarm, 24, 25; to which the Prophet echoes a response full of sympathy and tenderness, 26. The concluding verses, by metaphors taken from the process of refining gold and silver, represent all the methods hitherto used to amend them as wholly ineffectual, 27—30.

NOTES ON CHAP. VI.

Verse 1. O ye children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee] As the invading armies are fast approaching, the prophet calls on the inhabitants of Jerusalem to sound an alarm, and collect all the people to arm themselves and go against the invaders. They are called the children of Benjamin, because Jerusalem was in the tribe of Benjamin.

Tekoa] Was a city about twelve miles to the south of Jerusalem.

Beth-haccerem] Was the name of a small village situated on an eminence between Jerusalem and Tekoa. On this they were ordered to set up a beacon, or kindle a large fire, which might be seen at a distance, and give the people to understand that an enemy was entering the land.

From the north] From Babylon. The Scythians.—Dahler.

Verse 3. The shepherds with their flocks] The chiefs and their battalions. The invading army is about to spoil and waste all the fertile fields round about the city, while engaged in the siege.

Verse 4. Prepare ye war against her] The words of the invaders exciting each other to the assault; and impatient lest any time should be lost; lest the besieged should have time to strengthen themselves, or get in supplies.

Verse 5. Arise, and let us go by night] Since we have lost the day, let us not lose the night: but, taking the advantage of the darkness, let us make a powerful assault while they are under the impression of terror.

Verse 6. Hew ye down trees] To form machines.

And cast a mount] That may overlook the city, on which to place our engines.

This is the city to be visited] We are sure of success, for their God will deliver it into our hands: for it is full of oppression; and He has consigned it to destruction.

Verse 7. As a fountain casteth out her waters] The inhabitants are incessant in their acts of iniquity; they do nothing but sin.

Verse 8. Be thou instructed] Still there is respite: if they would even now return unto the Lord with all their heart, the advancing Chaldeans would be arrested on their march, and turned back.

Verse 9. They shall thoroughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine: turn back thine hand] The Chaldeans are here exhorted to turn back and glean up the remnant of the inhabitants that were left after the capture of Jerusalem; for even that remnant did not profit by the Divine judgments that fell on the inhabitants at large.

turn back thine hand as a grapegatherer into the baskets.

10 To whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? behold, their [a] ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot hearken: behold, [b] the word of the LORD is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it.

11 Therefore I am full of the fury of the LORD; [c] I am weary with holding in: I will pour it out [d] upon the children abroad, and upon the assembly of young men together: for even the husband with the wife shall be taken, the aged with him that is full of days.

12 And [e] their houses shall be turned unto others, with their fields and wives together: for I will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD.

13 For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them every one is given to [f] covetousness; and from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely.

14 They have [g] healed also the [h] hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, [i] saying, Peace peace; when there is no peace.

15 Were they [k] ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: therefore they shall fall among them that fall: at the time that I visit them they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

16 Thus saith the LORD, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the [l] old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find [m] rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein.

17 Also I set [n] watchmen over you, saying, Hearken to the sound of the trumpet. But they said, We will not hearken.

18 Therefore hear, ye nations, and know, O congregation, what is among them.

19 [o] Hear, O earth: behold, I will bring evil upon this people, even [p] the fruit of their thoughts, because they have not hearkened unto my words, nor to my law, but rejected it.

Verse 10. The word of the LORD is unto them a reproach] It is an object of derision; they despise it.

Verse 11. I am full of the fury of the LORD] God has given me a dreadful revelation of the judgments He intends to inflict: my soul is burthened with this prophecy.—I have endeavoured to suppress it; but I must pour it forth upon the children, on the young people, on husbands and wives,—on the old and the superannuated. All must partake in these judgments.

Verse 14. They have healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly] Of the daughter is not in the Text, and is here improperly added: it is, however, in some MSS.

Peace, peace] Ye shall have prosperity—when there was none; and when God had determined that there should be none. Here the prophets prophesied falsely; and the people continued in sin, being deceived by the priests and the prophets.

Verse 16. Thus saith the LORD, Stand ye in the ways, and see] Let us observe the metaphor. A traveller is going to a particular city:—he comes to a place where the road divides into several paths,—he is afraid of going astray,—he stops short,—endeavours to find out the right path,—he cannot fix his choice. At last he sees another traveller;—he enquires of him,—gets proper directions,—proceeds on his journey,—arrives at the desired place,—and reposes after his fatigue. There is an excellent sermon on these words in the Works of our first poet Geoffry Chaucer: it is among the Canterbury Tales, and is called Chaucer's Tale. The Text I find was read by him as it appears in my old MS. Bible:—Standith upon weies and seeth, and asketh of the olde pathes; What is the good weie? and goth in it, and gee schul fynden refreschyng to goure soulis. The soul needs rest;—it can only find this by walking in the good way. The good way is that which has been trodden by the saints from the beginning: it is the old way,—the way of faith and holiness. BELIEVE, LOVE, OBEY;—be holy, and be happy. This is the way; let us enquire for it, and walk in it: but these bad people said, We will not walk in it. Then they took another way, walked over the precipice, and fell into the bottomless pit; where, instead of rest, they find, famous for the best incense. It was situated towards the southern extremity of the peninsula of Arabia; and was, in respect of Judea, a far country.

And the sweet cane from a far country] The calamus aromaticus, which when dried and pulverized, yields a very fine aromatic smell, see on Isa. xliii, 24. This was employed in making the holy anointing oil, see Exod. xxx, 23.

Verse 23. They shall lay hold on bow and spear] Still pointing out the Chaldeans; or, according to Dahler, the Scythians, who had before their invasion of Palestine overrun many parts of Asia, and had spread consternation wherever their name was heard.

Verse 27. I have set thee for a tower and a fortress] Dr. Blaney translates, I have appointed thee to make an assay among my people. The words refer to the office of an assayer of silver and gold; and the manner of assaying here intended is by the cupel. To separate the alloy from the silver they add a portion of lead; and when all is fused together, and brought into a state of ebullition, the cupel absorbs the lead, and with it the dross or alloy; and the silver is left pure and motionless on the top of the cupel. The people are here represented under the notion of alloyed silver. They are full of impurities; and they are put in the hands of the prophet, the assayer, to be purified. The bellows are placed, the fire is lighted up, but all to no purpose: so intensely commixed is the alloy with the silver, that it cannot be separated. The nozzle of the bellows is even melted with the intensity of the fire used to effect the refinement; and the lead is carried off by the action of the heat; and the assayer melteth in vain, for the alloy still continues in union with the metal. The assayer gives up the process,—will not institute one more expensive or tedious,—pronounces the mass unfit to be coined, and denominates it reprobate silver, ver. 30. Thus, the evil habits and dispositions of the Israelites were so ingrained that they would not yield to either the ordinary or extraordinary means of salvation. God pronounces them reprobate silver,—not sterling,—full of alloy:—having neither the image nor the superscription of the Great King either on their hearts or on their conduct. Thus He gave them up as incorrigible, and their adversaries prevailed against them. This should be a warning to other nations, and indeed to the Christian Church; for if God did not spare the natural branches, neither will he spare these.

CHAPTER VII.

Here begins another section of prophecy, ending with the ninth Chapter. It opens with exhorting to amendment of life, without which the confidence of the Jews in their Temple is declared vain, 1—11. God bids them take warning from the fate of their brethren the Israelites, who had been carried away captive on account of their sins without any regard to that sacred place (Shiloh) where the ark of God once resided, 12—15. The iniquities of Judah are so great in the sight of God that the Prophet is commanded not to intercede for the people, 16; the more especially as they persisted in provoking God by their idolatrous practices, 17—20. The Jewish sacrifices, if not accompanied with obedience to the moral law, are of no avail, 21—24. Notwithstanding the numerous messages of mercy from the time of the Exodus, the people revolted more and more; and have added to their other sins this horrible evil the setting up of their abominations in the Temple of Jehovah; or, in other words, they have encumbered the Mosaic œconomy, which shadowed forth the glorious truths of Christianity, with a heterogeneous admixture of the idolatrous, impure, and cruel rites of Heathenism; consequently, the whole land shall be utterly desolated, 25—34.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VII.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah] This prophecy is supposed to have been delivered in the first year of the reign of Jehoiakim, son of Josiah, who, far from following the example of his pious father, restored idolatry, maintained bad priests and worse prophets and filled Jerusalem with abominations of all kinds.

Verse 2. Stand in the gate of the LORD's house] There was a show of public worship kept up. The Temple was considered God's residence; the usual ceremonies of religion restored by Josiah were still observed; and the people were led to consider the Temple and its services as sacred things, which would be preservatives to them in case of the threatened invasion.

Verse 4. The Temple of the LORD] In the Chaldee the passage stands thus:—"Do not trust in the words of lying prophets, which say, Before the Temple of the Lord ye shall worship; before the Temple of the Lord ye shall sacrifice; before the Temple of the Lord ye shall adore; thrice in the year ye shall appear before it." This the Targumist supposes to have been the reason why the words are here thrice repeated. They rather seem to express the conviction which the people had, that they should be safe while their temple service continued; for they supposed that God would not give it up into profane hands. But sacred places and sacred symbols are nothing in the sight of God when the heart is not right with Him.

Verse 5. If ye throughly amend your ways] Literally, If in making good ye fully make good your ways. God will no longer admit of half-hearted work. Semblances of piety cannot deceive Him; He will not accept partial reformation; there must be a thorough amendment.

Verse 9. Will ye steal, murder] Will you continue to commit such abominations, and pretend to worship me; and thus defile the place that is called by my name; and so make my house a den of robbers? I have seen this,—and can you expect to escape condign punishment? Ye shall not escape.

Verse 12. But go ye now unto my place which was in 15 And I will cast you out of my sight, [d] as I have cast out all your brethren, [e] even the whole seed of Ephraim.

16 Therefore [f] pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: [g] for I will not hear thee.

Shiloh] See what I did to my tabernacle and ark formerly:—after a long residence at Shiloh, for the iniquity of the priests and the people, I suffered it to fall into the hands of the Philistines, and to be carried captive into their land, and to be set up in the house of their idols. And because of your iniquities I will deal with you and this temple in the same way: for, as I spared not Shiloh, though my ark was there, but made it a victim of my wrath; so will I do to Jerusalem and her temple.

Verse 15. The whole seed of Ephraim.] Taken here for all the ten tribes, that of Ephraim being the principal.

Verse 16. Therefore pray not thou for this people] They have filled up the measure of their iniquity, and they must become examples of my justice. How terrible must the state of that place be where God refuses to pour out the spirit of supplication on His ministers and people in its behalf!

Verse 18. The children gather wood] Here is a description of a whole family gathered together, and acting unitedly in idolatrous worship. 1. The children go and collect wood, and bring it to the place of sacrifice. 2. The fathers lay it in order, and kindle a fire. 3. The mother and her maids knead dough; make their batch; and out of it form cakes, and bake them for the honour of the queen of heaven; most probably the moon, though perhaps not exclusively of the sun and planets, generally called the host of heaven. Family worship is a most amiable and becoming thing when performed according to truth. What a pity that so few families show such zeal for the worship of God as those apostate Israelites did for that of their idols!

Verse 21. Put your burnt offerings unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh.] I will receive neither sacrifice nor oblation from you; therefore you may take the beasts intended for sacrifice, and slay and eat them for your common nourishment. See on ver. 29.

Verse 23. This thing commanded I them,—Obey my voice] It was not sacrifices and oblations which I required of your fathers in the wilderness, but obedience; it was to walk in that way of righteousness which I have commanded, then I should have acknowledged them for my people, and I should have been their God; and then it would have been well with them. But to my commands,—1. They hearkened not;—paid no regard to my word. 2. They inclined not the ear;—showed no disposition to attend to my counsels. 3. They walked—in the imaginations of their evil heart;—followed its irregular and impure motions, rather than the holy dictates of my Spirit. 4. They went backward, and not forward;—instead of becoming more wise, obedient, and holy, they grew more corrupt; so that they became more profligate than their fathers.

25 Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even [e] sent unto you all my servants the prophets, [f] daily rising up early and sending them:

26 [g] Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but [h] hardened their neck: [i] they did worse than their fathers.

27 Therefore [k] thou shalt speak all these words unto them; but they will not hearken to thee: thou shalt also call unto them; but they will not answer thee.

28 But thou shalt say unto them, This is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the LORD their God, [l] nor receiveth [m] correction: [n] truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth.

29 [o] Cut off thine hair, O Jerusalem, and cast it away, and take up a lamentation on high places; for the LORD hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his wrath.

30 For the children of Judah have done evil in my sight saith the LORD: [p] they have set their abominations in the house which is called by my name, to pollute it.

32 Therefore, behold, [u] the days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be called Tophet, nor the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of slaughter: [x] for they shall bury in Tophet till there be no place.

33 And the [y] carcases of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth; and none shall fray them away.

34 Then will I cause to [z] cease from the cities of Judah, and from the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride; for [a] the land shall be desolate.

Verse 28. Nor receiveth correction] They have profited neither by mercies nor by judgments: blessings and corrections have been equally lost upon them.

Verse 29. Cut off thine hair] גזי נזרך gazzi nizarec, shear thy nazarite. The Nazarite was one who took upon him a particular vow, and separated himself from all worldly connexions for a certain time, that he might devote himself without interruption to the service of God; and during all this time no razor was to pass on his head, for none of his hair was to be taken off. After the vow was over, he shaved his head and beard, and returned to society. See Numb. vi, 2, &c., and the Notes there. Jerusalem is here considered under the notion of a Nazarite, by profession devoted to the service of God: but that profession was empty; it was not accompanied with any suitable practice. God tells them here to cut off their hair; to make no vain pretensions to holiness or religion; to throw off the mask, and attempt no longer to impose upon themselves and others by their hypocritical pretensions. On the same ground He orders them, ver. 21, to devote to common use the animals destined for sacrifice; and to make no more vain shows of religion while their hearts were not right with Him. Dr. Blayney thinks the address is to the prophet, who was a Nazarite by virtue of his office, and who was called to cut off his hair as a token of mourning for the desolations which were coming upon his people. I think the other the more natural construction. That cutting off the hair was a sign of distress and mourning may be seen, Ezra ix, 3. Isa. xv, 2. Jer. xli, 5, &c.

On high places] That the lamentation may be heard to the greater distance.

The generation of his wrath] Persons exposed to punishment: used here as children of wrath, Eph. ii, 3.

Verse 31. Tophet—in the valley of the son of Hinnom] Tophet was the place in that valley where the continual fires were kept up, in and through which they consecrated their children to Moloch.

Verse 32. The valley of slaughter] The place where the slaughtered thousands of this rebellious people shall be cast, in order to their being burnt, or becoming food for the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, ver. 33. These words are repeated, and their meaning more particularly explained, chap. xix, 6—15.

Verse 34. Then will I cause to cease—the voice of mirth] There shall no longer be in Jerusalem any cause of joy;—they shall neither marry nor be given in marriage, for the land shall be totally desolated. Such horrible sins required such a horrible punishment. And they must be horrible, when they move God to destroy the work of His own hands.

CHAPTER VIII.

The judgments threatened in the last Chapter are here declared to extend to the very dead, whose tombs should be opened, and the carcases treated with every mark of indignity, 1—3. From this the Prophet returns to reprove them for their perseverance in transgression, 4—6; and for their thoughtless stupidity, which even the instinct of the brute creation, by a beautiful contrast, is made to upbraid, 7—9. This leads to farther threatenings, expressed in a variety of striking terms, 10—13. Upon which a chorus of Jews is introduced, expressing their terror on the news of the invasion, 14, 15; which is greatly heightened in the next verse by the Prophet's hearing the snorting of Nebuchadnezzar's horses even from Dan, and then seeing the devastation made by his army, 16, whose cruelties God himself declares no intreaties will soften, 17. On this declaration the Prophet laments most bitterly the fate of the daughter of his people, changing the scene unawares to the place of her captivity, where she is introduced answering in mournful responses to the Prophet's dirge, 18—22. The variety of images and figures used to diversify the same subject is equally pleasing and astonishing. The dress is generally new, always elegant.

AT that time, saith the LORD, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves;

NOTES ON CHAPTER VIII.

Verse 1. They shall bring out the bones] This and the two following verses are a continuation of the preceding prophecy, and should not have been separated from the foregoing Chapter.

In order to pour the utmost contempt upon the land, the victorious enemies dragged out of their graves, caves, and sepulchres, the bones of kings, princes, prophets, priests, and the principal inhabitants, and exposed them in the open air; so that they became, in the order of God's judgments, a reproach to them in the vain confidence they had in the sun, moon, and the host of heaven, all the planets and stars, whose worship they had set up in opposition to that of Jehovah. This custom of raising the bodies of the dead, and scattering their bones about, seems to have been general. It was the highest expression of hatred and contempt. Horace refers to it—

Barbarus, heu, cineres insistet victor, et urbem
Eques sonante verberabit ungulâ:
Quæque carent ventis et solibus ossa Quirini, (Nefas videre) dissipabit insolens. Epod. xvi, 11.

"Barbarians fell shall wanton with success,
Scatter the city's flaming ruins wide;
Or through her streets in vengeful triumph ride,
And her great founder's hallowed ashes spurn,
That slept uninjured in the sacred urn." FRANCIS.

See this judgment referred to, Baruch ii, 24, 25.

Verse 4. Moreover thou shalt say] Dr. Blayney very properly observes,—"In that part of the prophecy which follows next, the difference of speakers requires to be attended to; the transition being quick and sudden, but full of life and energy. The prophet at first, in the name of God, reproves the people's incorrigibility; he charges their wise ones with folly, and threatens them with grievous calamities, ver. 4—13. In the three next verses he seems to apostrophise his countrymen in his own person, and as one of the people that dwelt in the open towns, advising those that were in the like situation to retire with him into some of the fortified cities, and there wait the event with patience, since there was nothing but terror abroad, and the noise of the enemy, who had already begun to ravage the country, shall he turn away, and not return?

5 Why then is this people of Jerusalem [a] slidden back by a perpetual backsliding? [b] they hold fast deceit, [c] they refuse to return.
6 [d] I hearkened and heard, but they spake not aright: no man repented him of his wickedness, saying, What have I done? every one turned to his course, as the horse rusheth into the battle.
7 Yea, [e] the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times; and the [f] turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but [g] my people know not the judgment of the LORD.
8 How do ye say, We are wise, [h] and the law of the LORD is with us? Lo, certainly [i] in vain made he it; the pen of the scribes is in vain.
9 [k] The [l] wise men are ashamed, they are dismayed and taken: lo, they have rejected the word of the LORD; and [m] what wisdom is in them?
10 Therefore [n] will I give their wives unto others, and their fields to them that shall inherit them: for every one from the least even unto the greatest is given to [o] covetousness, from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely.
11 For they have [p] healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, [q] Peace, peace; when there is no peace.

A. M. cir. 3394. B. C. cir. 610. Ol. cir. XLII. 3. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 7.

12 Were they [r] ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush: therefore shall they fall among them that fall: in the time of their visitation they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.
13 [s] I will surely consume them, saith the LORD: there shall be no grapes [t] on the vine, nor figs on the [u] fig tree, and the leaf shall fade; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.
14 Why do we sit still? [x] assemble yourselves, and let us enter into the defenced cities, and let us be silent there: for the LORD our God hath put us to silence, and given us [y] water of [z] gall to drink, because we have sinned against the LORD.
15 We [a] looked for peace, but no good came; and for a time of health, and behold trouble!

ver. 14—16. God speaks, ver. 17, and threatens to bring foes against them that should be irresistible. The prophet appears again in his own person, commiserating the daughter of his people, who is heard bewailing her forlorn case in a distant land: whilst the voice of God, like that of conscience, breaks in upon her complaints, and shows her that all this ruin is brought upon her by her own infidelities, ver. 18—30. The prophet once more resumes his discourse; he regrets that no remedy can be found to close up the wounds of his country, and pathetically weeps over the number of her slain, ver. 21—ch. ix, 1."

Shall they fall, and not arise? shall he turn away, and not return?] That is, it is as possible for sinners to return from their sin to God, for His grace is ever at hand to assist, as it is for God, who is pouring out His judgments, to return to them on their return to Him. But these held fast deceit, and refused to return;—they would not be undeceived.

Verse 6. As the horse rusheth into the battle.] This strongly marks the unthinking, careless, desperation of their conduct.

Verse 7. The stork in the heaven] The birds of passage know the times of their going and return, and punctually observe them; they obey the dictates of nature, but my people do not obey my law.

Verse 8. The pen of the scribes is in vain.] The deceitful pen of the scribes. They have written falsely, though they had the truth before them. It is too bold an assertion to say that "the Jews have never falsified the Sacred Oracles:" they have done it again and again. They have written falsities when they knew they were such.

Verse 10. Therefore will I give their wives] From this to the end of ver. 15, is repeated from chap. vi, 13—15.

Verse 16. The snorting of his horses was heard from Dan] Dan lay in the way from Babylon to Jerusalem; and it was by this city, after the battle of Karchemish, that Nebuchadnezzar, in pursuing the Egyptians, entered Palestine.

The whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing of his strong ones] Of his war horses. This is a fine image—so terrible was the united neighing of the cavalry of the Babylonians that the reverberation of the air caused the ground to tremble. This is better, and more majestic, than the celebrated line of Virgil— come, and have devoured the land, and [a] all that is in it; the city, and those that dwell therein.

17 For, behold, I will send serpents, cockatrices, among you, which will not be [b] charmed, and they shall bite you, saith the LORD.

18 When I would comfort myself against sorrow, my heart is faint [c] in me.

19 Behold the voice of the cry of the daughter of my people [d] because of them that dwell in [e] a far country: Is not the LORD in Zion? is not her king in her? Why have they [f] provoked me to anger with their graven images, and with strange vanities?

20 The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved.

21 [g] For the hurt of the daughter of my people am I hurt; I am [h] black; astonishment hath taken hold on me.

It would be much easier to shake the ground with the prancings of many horses, than to cause an earthquake by the sound of the neighing of the troops of cavalry.

Verse 17. I will send serpents] These were symbols of the enemies that were coming against them;—a foe that would rather slay them and destroy the land than get booty and ransom.

Verse 20. The harvest is past] The siege of Jerusalem lasted two years; for Nebuchadnezzar came against it in the ninth year of Zedekiah, and the city was taken in the eleventh, see 2 Kings xxv, 1—3. This seems to have been a proverb:—We expected deliverance the first year; none came.—We hoped for it the second year; we are disappointed; we are not saved,—no deliverance is come.

Verse 22. Is there no balm in Gilead?] Yes, the most excellent in the world. Is there no physician there? Yes, persons well skilled to apply it. Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered? Because ye have not applied to the physician, nor used the balm. Ye die, because ye will not use the remedy. But to apply this metaphor:—The Israelites are represented as a man dying through disease; and a disease for the cure of which the balm of Gilead was well known to be a specific, when judiciously applied by a physician. But though there be balm and a physician, the people are not cured; neither their spiritual nor political evils are removed. But what may all this spiritually mean? The people are morally diseased; they have sinned against God, and provoked Him to destroy them. They are warned by the prophet to repent and turn to God: they refuse, and sin on. Destruction is come upon them.—Might they not have avoided it? Yes. Was it the fault of God? No. Did He not send His prophets with the richest offers of mercy? Did he not give them time, the best instructions, and the most effectual means of returning to Him? Has not mercy, the heavenly balm, been ever at hand? And has not GOD, the great Physician, been ever ready to apply it? Yes. Why then are they not converted and healed? Because they would not apply to the Divine Physician, nor receive the only Remedy by which they could be spiritually healed. They, then, that sin against the only Remedy must perish, because they might have had it, but would not. It is not because there is a deficiency of grace, nor of the means of grace, that men are not saved; but because they either make no use, or a bad use, of them. Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, has tasted death for every man: but few are saved, because they WILL NOT come unto him that they may have life.

In my old MS. Bible the Text is rendered thus:—

Whether gumm is not in Galaad? Or a leche is not there? Whi than the hid wounde of the daughter of my peple is not alle helid?—

How shall they escape who neglect so great a salvation! Reader, lay this to heart. And while there is time apply heartily to the great Physician for thy cure.

CHAPTER IX.

The Prophet bitterly laments the terrible judgments about to be inflicted upon his countrymen, and points out some of the evils which have provoked the Divine Majesty, 1—9. Judea shall be utterly desolated, and the inhabitants transplanted into Heathen countries, 10—17. In allusion to an ancient custom, a band of mourning women is called to lament over the ruins of Jerusalem, 17, 18; and even the funeral dirge is given in terms full of beauty, elegance, and pathos, 19—22. God is the Fountain of all good; man, merely an instrument by which a portion of this good is distributed in the earth; therefore, none should glory in his wisdom, might, or riches, 23, 24. The judgments of God shall fall not upon the land of Judea only, but also upon many Heathen nations, 25, 26.

OH [a] that [b] my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!

2 Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men; that I might leave my people, and go from them! for [c] they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men.

3 And [d] they bend their tongues like their bow for lies: but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth; for they proceed from evil to evil, and they [e] know not me, saith the LORD.

4 [f] Take ye heed every one of his [g] neighbour, and trust ye not in any brother: for every brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbour will [h] walk with slanders.

5 And they will [i] deceive every one his neighbour, and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and weary themselves to commit iniquity.

7 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, [k] I will melt them, and try them; [l] for how shall I do for the daughter of my people?

8 Their tongue is as an arrow shot out; it speaketh [m] deceit: one speaketh [n] peaceably to his neighbour with his mouth, but [o] in heart he layeth [p] his wait.

9 [q] Shall I not visit them for these things? saith the LORD: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

10 For the mountains will I take up a weeping and wailing, and [r] for the [s] habitations of the wilderness a lamentation, because they are [t] burned up, so that none can pass through them; neither can men hear the voice of the cattle; [u] both [x] the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled; they are gone.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IX.

Verse 1. Oh that my head were waters] מי יתן ראשי mi yitten roshi, who will give to my head waters. My mourning for the sins and desolations of my people has already exhausted the source of tears: I wish to have a fountain opened there, that I may weep day and night for the slain of my people. This has been the sorrowful language of many a pastor who has preached long to a hardened, rebellious people, to little or no effect. This verse belongs to the preceding Chapter.

Verse 2. Oh that I had in the wilderness] In the Eastern countries there are no such inns or houses of entertainment as those in Europe. There are in different places public buildings called caravanserais, where travellers may lodge: but they are without furniture of any kind, and without food. Indeed they are often without a roof, being mere walls, for a protection against the wild beasts of the desert. I wish to hide myself any where, in the most uncomfortable circumstances, that I may not be obliged any longer to witness the abominations of this people, which are shortly to be visited with the most grievous punishments. Several interpreters suppose this to be the speech of GOD; I cannot receive this. I believe this verse to be spoken by the prophet; and that God proceeds with the next verse, and so on to the ninth inclusive.

Verse 3. They bend their tongues like their bow for lies] And their lies are such that they as fully take away life as the keenest arrow from the best strung bow. The false prophets told the people that there was no desolation at hand: the people believed them, made no preparation for their defence; did not return to the Lord; and the sword came and destroyed them.

They are not valiant for the truth] They are bold in sin, and courageous to support their lies: but the truth they neither patronize nor support.

Verse 5. And weary themselves to commit iniquity.] O! what a drudgery is sin! and how much labour must a man take in order to get to hell! The tenth part of it, in working together with God, would bring him to the gate of glory.

Verse 7. Behold, I will melt them] I will put them in the furnace of affliction, and see if this will be a means of purging away their dross. See on chap. vi, 27.

Verse 10. Both the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled] The land shall be so utterly devastated, that neither beast nor bird shall be able to live in it.

11 And I will make Jerusalem [a] heaps, and [b] a den of dragons; and I will make the cities of Judah [c] desolate, without an inhabitant.

12 [d] Who is the wise man, that may understand this? and who is he to whom the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, that he may declare it, for what the land perisheth and is burned up like a wilderness, that none passeth through?

13 And the LORD saith, Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein;

14 But have [e] walked after the [f] imagination of their own heart, and after Baalim, [g] which their fathers taught them:

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will [h] feed them, even this people, [i] with wormwood, and give them water of gall to drink.

16 I will [k] scatter them also among the heathen, whom neither they nor their fathers have known: [l] and I will send a sword after them, till I have consumed them.

17 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Consider ye, and call for [m] the mourning women, that they may come; and send for cunning women that they may come:

18 And let them make haste, and take up a wailing for us, that [n] our eyes may run down with tears, and our eyelids gush out with waters.

19 For a voice of wailing is heard out of Zion,

Verse 11. A den of dragons.] תנים tannim, is supposed to mean here jackals; a beast frequent in the East; an attendant on the lion, the refuse of whose prey he devours. It is an animal that seems to have been bred originally between the wolf and the dog. The original is sometimes interpreted dragons, whales, &c.

Verse 12. Who is the wise man] To whom has God revealed these things? He is the truly wise man; but it is to His prophet alone, that God has revealed these things; and the speedy fulfilment of the predictions will show that the prophet has not spoken of himself.

Verse 15. I will feed them—with wormwood] They shall have the deepest sorrows and heaviest affliction. They shall have poison instead of meat and drink.

Verse 17. Call for the mourning-women] Those whose office it was to make lamentations at funerals, and to bewail the dead; for which they received pay. This custom continues to the present in Asiatic countries. In Ireland, this custom also prevails, which no doubt their ancestors brought from the East. I have given a specimen of this elsewhere. See the Note on Matt. ix, 23. The first lamentations for the dead consisted only in the sudden bursts of inexpressible grief, like that of David over his son Absalom, 2 Sam. xix, 4. But as men grew refined, it was not deemed sufficient for the surviving relatives to vent their sorrows in these natural artless expressions of woe, but they endeavoured to join others as partners in their sorrows. This gave rise to the custom of hiring persons to weep at funerals, which the Phrygians and Greeks borrowed from the Hebrews. Women were generally employed on these occasions, because the tender passions being predominant in this sex, they succeeded better in their parts; and there were never wanting persons who would let out their services to hire on such occasions. Their lamentations were sung to the pipe, as we learn from Matt. ix, 23. See the funeral ceremonies practised at the burial of Hector, as described by Homer:—

Οι δ' επι εισαγαγον κλυτα δωματα, τον μεν επειτα
Τρηγεις εν λεχεεσσι θεσαν, παρα δ' εισαν αοιδους
Θρηνων εξαρχους, οιτε γοοεσσαν αοιδην
Οι μεν αρ' αθρηνεον, επι δε ξεναχοντο γυναικες.

Il. lib. xxiv, ver. 719.

"Arrived within the royal house, they stretched
The breathless Hector on a sumptuous bed,
And singers plac'd beside him, who should chant
The strain funereal: they with many a groan,
The dirge began; and still at every close
The female train with many a groan replied."

Cowper.

St. Jerom tells us that even to his time this custom continued in Judea; that women at funerals, with dishevelled hair and naked breasts, endeavoured in a modulated voice to invite others to lament with them. The Poem before us, from the seventeenth to the twenty-second verse, is both an illustration and confirmation of what has been delivered on this subject; and worthy of the Reader's frequent perusal, on account of its affecting pathos, moral sentiments, and fine images; particularly in the twenty-first verse, where Death is described in as animated a prosopopœia as can be conceived. See Lowth's twenty-second Prelection, and Dodd. The nineteenth verse is supposed to be the funeral song of the women.

"How are we spoiled!
We are greatly confounded!
For we have forsaken the land;
Because they have destroyed our dwellings."

A. M. cir. 3394. B. C. cir. 610. Ol. cir. XLII. 3. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 7.

How are we spoiled! we are greatly confounded, because we have forsaken the land, because [a] our dwellings have cast us out.

20 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O ye women, and let your ear receive the word of his mouth, and teach your daughters wailing, and every one her neighbour lamentation.

21 For death is come up into our windows, and is entered into our palaces, to cut off [b] the children from without, and the young men from the streets.

22 Speak, Thus saith the LORD, even the carcases of men shall fall [c] as dung upon the open field, and as the handful after the harvestman, and none shall gather them.

23 Thus saith the LORD, [d] Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches:

24 But [e] let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: [f] for in these things I delight, saith the LORD.

25 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that [g] I will [h] punish all them which are circumcised with the uncircumcised;

26 Egypt, and Judah, and Edom, [i] and the children of Ammon, and Moab, and all that are [k] in the [l] utmost corners, that dwell in the wilderness: for all these nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel are [m] uncircumcised in the heart.

Verse 20. Teach your daughters] This is not a common dirge that shall last only till the body is consigned to the earth; it must last long: teach it to your children, that it may be continued through every generation, till God turn again your captivity.

Verse 21. For death is come up into our windows] Here, DEATH is personified, and represented as scaling their wall; and after having slain the playful children without, and the vigorous youth employed in the labours of the field, he is now come into the private houses to destroy the aged and infirm, and into the palaces to destroy the king and the princes.

Verse 22. And as the handful after the harvest-man] The reapers, after having cut enough to fill their hand, threw it down; and the binders following after, collected those handfuls, and bound them in sheaves. Death is represented as having cut down the inhabitants of the land, as the reapers do the corn: but so general was the slaughter, that there was none to bury the dead, to gather up these handfuls: so that they lay in a state of putrescence as dung upon the open field.

Verse 23. Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom] Because God is the Fountain of all good, neither wisdom, nor might, nor riches, nor prosperity, can come, but from or through Him. Nothing can be more rational, than that the Source of all our blessings should be acknowledged. Riches cannot deliver in the day of death; strength cannot avail against Him; and as a shield against Him, our wisdom is foolishness.

Verse 24. But let him that glorieth] To glory in a thing, is to depend on it as the means or cause of procuring happiness. But there can be no happiness but in being experimentally acquainted with that God who exercises lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth. He who has God's mercy for his portion, may well exult; for he need not fear the power of any adversary.

Sometimes the ancient heathen poets uttered sentiments of morality far beyond their dispensation. Witness Phocylides on this subject:—

Μη γαυρου σοφιη, μετ' αλκη, μετ' ενι πλουτω
Εις Θεος εξι σοφος, δυνατος Θ' αμα, και πολυολβος.

"If wisdom, strength, or riches, be thy lot,
Boast not; but rather think thou hast them not.
ONE GOD alone, from whom those gifts proceed,
Is wise, is mighty, and is rich indeed."

Verse 25. I will punish all them which are circumcised with the uncircumcised] Do not imagine that you, because of your crimes, are the only objects of my displeasure; the circumcised and the uncircumcised, the Jew and the Gentile, shall equally feel the stroke of my justice; their transgressions being alike, after their advantages and disadvantages are duly compared. In like manner, other nations also were delivered into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar; these he immediately enumerates—Egypt and Edom, and the Moabites and the Ammonites, and the Arabians of the desert. All these nations were uncircumcised in that way which God required that rite to be practised as a sign of His covenant; and the Israelites, that did practise it as a sign of that covenant, did not attend to its spiritual meaning; for they were all uncircumcised in heart. And it may be remarked, that these people were in general confederated against the Chaldeans.

Verse 26. All that are in the utmost corners] כל קצוצי פאה kol ketsutsey peah. These words have been variously understood. The Vulgate translates:—Omnes qui attonsi sunt in comam,—"All who have their hair cut short." The Targum, Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic, have understood it nearly in the same way, and so our margin. Others think, that the insular or peninsular situation of the people is referred to. Dr. Blayney thinks the Arabians meant, who dwelt in the great desert, between Mesopotamia and Palestine. I really think our marginal reading should be preferred as expressing the sense of all the ancient Versions.

CHAPTER X.

The Jews, about to be carried into captivity, are here warned against the superstition and idolatry of that country to which they were going. Chaldea was greatly addicted to astrology; and, therefore, the Prophet begins with warning them against it, 1, 2. He then exposes the absurdity of idolatry in short but elegant satire; in the midst of which he turns, in a beautiful apostrophe, to the One true God, whose adorable attributes repeatedly strike in view, as he goes along, and lead him to contrast His infinite perfections with those despicable inanities which the blinded nations fear, 3—16. The Prophet again denounces the Divine judgments, 17, 18; upon which Jerusalem laments her fate, and supplicates the Divine compassion in her favour, 19—25.

NOTES ON CHAPTER X.

Verse 1. Hear ye the word which the LORD speaketh unto you] Dr. Dahler supposes this discourse to have been delivered in the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim. It contains an invective against idolatry; showing its absurdity, and how the Creator alone should be worshipped by all mankind.

Verse 2. Learn not the way of the heathen] These words are more particularly addressed to the ten tribes scattered among the heathen by the Assyrians, who carried them away captive: they may also regard those in the land of Israel, who still had the customs of the former heathen settlers before their eyes.

Be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed] The Chaldeans and Egyptians were notoriously addicted to astrology; and the Israelites here are cautioned against it. The signs of the heavens may mean either the sun, moon, planets, and particular stars or constellations; or the figures or characters by which they represented these heavenly bodies.

Verse 3. The customs of the people are vain] חקות chukkoth; the statutes and principles of the science are vain, empty, and illusory. They are founded in nonsense, ignorance, idolatry, and folly.

One cutteth a tree out of the forest] See the notes on Isa. xl, 19, and xliv, 9, &c., which are all parallel places, and where this conduct is strongly ridiculed.

Verse 5. They are upright as the palm tree] As straight and as stiff as the trees out of which they are hewn.

Verse 7. Who would not fear thee] Who would not worship Thee as the Author and Giver of all good. The fear of God is often taken for the whole of true religion.

Among all the wise men of the nations] Not even the wisest and most cultivated of the nations have ever found out any one equal to Thee: but so exalted and holy art Thou, that in all their wisdom and research they have never been able to find out the True God.

Verse 8. The stock is a doctrine of vanities.] Dr. Blayney translates,—"The wood itself is a rebuker of vanities." The very tree out of which the god is hewn demonstrates the vanity and folly of the idolaters;—for, can all the art of man make out of a log of wood an animate and intelligent Being?

Verse 9. Brought from Tarshish] Some suppose this to be Tartessus in Spain, from which the Phœnicians brought much silver. Uphaz, Calmet thinks to be the river Pison; some think Ophir is intended.

Blue and purple is their clothing] These were the most precious dyes; very rare, and of high price.

Verse 10. But the LORD] The original word should be preserved, however we agree to pronounce it: Jehovah יהוה is the true God. He is without beginning, and without end. This is true of no being else.

He is the living God] His Being is underived; and he gives life to all. He is the very Fountain whence all life is derived.

And an everlasting King] As He has made, so He governs all things. His sway is felt both in the heavens and in the earth.

At his wrath the earth shall tremble] All storms, tempests, tornadoes and earthquakes, are the effects of His power; and when the nations are destroyed, or turned upside down, it is the effect of His displeasure.

Verse 11. Thus shall ye say unto them] This is the message you shall deliver to the Chaldean idolaters.

The gods that have not made the heavens and the earth, even they shall perish] Both they and their worshippers shall be destroyed; and idolatry shall finally be destroyed from the earth; and the heavens shall look no more on so great an abomination. It is suffered for a while: but in the end shall be destroyed. This verse is written in a sort of Hebræo—Syriaco—Chaldee; such a dialect as I suppose was spoken at that time in Babylon, or during the captivity. As it is a message to the Babylonians; therefore, it is given in their own language. The Chaldee makes it the beginning of the copy of the epistle which the prophet Jeremiah sent to the rest of the elders of the captivity who were in Babylon. All the ancient Versions acknowledge this verse; and it is found in all MSS. hitherto collated, except one of Dr. Kennicott's, numbered 526; and he has included it between lines, as doubting its authenticity. Dr. Blayney supposes that some public teacher during the captivity, deducing it by direct inference from the prophet's words, had it inserted in the margin, and perhaps usually read together with this section, in the assemblies of the people, in order that they might have their answer always ready, whenever they were molested on the point of religion, or importuned to join the idolatrous worship of the Chaldeans.

Dahler has left it entirely out of the Text, and introduces it in a note thus:—"After ver. 10. the Hebrew Text is interrupted by a verse written in the Chaldean or Babylonish tongue. It is thus expressed:

Ye shall say unto them, Let the gods perish!
Who have not made the heavens and the earth.
Let them be banished from above the earth, and from under the heavens.

This verse can be considered only as a foreign insertion, not only on account of the difference of the language, but also because it interrupts the natural course of the ideas, and of the connexion of the tenth and twelfth verses."

As a curiosity I shall insert it in Hebrew, which the Reader may compare with the Chaldee Text, which I also subjoin.

20 [x] My tabernacle is spoiled, and all my cords are broken: my children are gone forth of me, and they are not: there is none to stretch forth my tent any more, and to set up my curtains.

is that of the common Text. Had not all the ancient Versions acknowledged it, I also, principally on account of the strangeness of the language, as being neither Chaldee nor Syriac, would have doubted its authenticity.

Verse 13. When he uttereth his voice there is a multitude of waters] This is a plain allusion to a storm of thunder and lightning, and the abundance of rain which is the consequence. Water is composed of two gases, hydrogen and oxygen: the electric or galvanic spark decomposes them, and they become air; when recomposed, they form water. The lightning acts upon the hydrogen and oxygen, which are found in the atmospheric air: they are decomposed, and water or rain is the consequence; which, being heavier than the air, falls down in the form of rain.

This verse and the three following are the same in substance, and nearly in words, as chap. li, 16, and following.

Verse 14. Every man is brutish] נבער nibaâr, is a boor; acts as a brute,—who may suppose that a stock of a tree, formed like a man, may be an intellectual being; and therefore shuns the form, as though it had life. See Isa. xliv, 10, 11. Of which verses, by the way, Dr. Blayney gives the following version to correct that of Bishop Lowth:—

Ver. 10. Who hath formed a god?
Or set up a graven image that profiteth not?
11. Behold all that are connected with it shall be ashamed,
And the artificers, they above all men!
They shall assemble all of them; they shall stand forth;
They shall fear; they shall be ashamed at the same time.

"That is, while they stand before the image they have set up, and worship it with a religious dread, the glaring absurdity of their conduct shall lead to their shame and disgrace." With due deference to this learned man, I think this interpretation too refined.

Verse 16. The Portion of Jacob is not like them] Every nation had its tutelary god; this was its portion; in reference to this, God says, Deut. iv, 19, He has divided the sun, moon, and stars, to all the nations under the heaven. And the Lord had taken the Israelites to be His Portion: for the Lord's portion is His people, Deut. xxxii, 9, and David says, The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance, Psalm xvi, 5.; cxix, 57. And hence Isaiah terms the smooth stones of the brook, to which Divine honours were paid, the portion of those idolaters, chap. lvii, 6. But in the text he says, The PORTION, i. e. the GOD of Jacob, is not like them; for HE is the former of all things, and they are formed by their foolish worshippers.

Verse 17. Gather up thy wares] Pack up your goods, or what necessaries of life your enemies will permit you to carry away, for,— Verse 18. I will sling out the inhabitants of the land] I will send you all into captivity. This discourse, from ver. 17, is supposed to have been delivered in the eleventh year of Jehoiakim.

Verse 19. This is a grief, and I must bear it.] Oppressive as it is, I have deserved it, and worse; and even in this judgment, God remembers mercy.

Verse 20. My tabernacle is spoiled] The city is taken, and all our villages ruined and desolated.

Verse 21. The pastors are become brutish] The king and his counsellors, who, by refusing to pay the promised tribute to Nebuchadnezzar, had kindled a new war.

not prosper, and all their flocks shall be scattered.

22 Behold, the noise of the bruit is come, and a great commotion out of the [a] north country, to make the cities of Judah desolate, and a [b] den of dragons.

23 O LORD, I know that the [c] way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps.

24 O LORD, [d] correct me, but with judgment; not in thine anger, lest thou [e] bring me to nothing.

Verse 22. The noise of the bruit is come] How this silly French word bruit, which signifies noise, got in here I cannot imagine. The simple translation is this,—"The voice of the report! behold it is come! yea, great commotion from the land of the north! (Chaldea) to make the cities of Judea a desolation, a habitation of wild beasts." That is, the report we had heard of the projected invasion of Judea by Nebuchadnezzar is confirmed. He has entered the land;—the Chaldeans are at the doors, and the total desolation of Judea is their sole object.

Verse 23. O LORD, I know that the way of man is not in himself] I will not pretend to dispute with Thee; Thou dost every thing wisely and justly;—we have sinned, and Thou hast a right to punish; and to choose that sort of punishment Thou thinkest will best answer the ends of justice. We cannot choose;—Thou hast appointed us to captivity;—we must not repine:—but—

Verse 24. Correct me, but with judgment] Let not the punishment be to the uttermost of the merit of the offence; else we shall be brought to nothing, totally and irrecoverably ruined.

Verse 25. Pour out thy fury upon the heathen] Even those who are now the executors of Thy justice upon us will, in their turn, feel its scourge: for if judgment begins at us, who have been called thy house and thy people,—shall they who have not acknowledged thee escape? It is impossible. The families and tribes which invoke Thee not shall have Thy fury poured out upon them; and especially they who have eaten up Jacob and consumed him, and have made his habitation desolate. This was fulfilled in the Chaldeans;—Nebuchadnezzar was punished with madness, his son was slain in his revels, and the city was taken and sacked by Cyrus; and the Babylonish empire was finally destroyed! This verse has been often quoted against those ungodly families who set not up the worship of God in their houses. These are spiritual Chaldeans; worse indeed than the Chaldeans ever were: they acknowledge God and His Christ,—and yet neither worship nor serve Him. How can that family expect the blessing of God, where the worship of God is not daily performed? No wonder their servants are wicked, their children profligate, and their goods cursed! What an awful reckoning shall such heads of families have with the Judge in the great day, who have refused to petition for that mercy which they might have had for the asking!

CHAPTER XI.

The Prophet proclaims the tenour of God's covenant with the Jews of old, 1—5; and then reproves them for their hereditary disobedience, 6—10. In consequence of this the Almighty is introduced, declaring He will show them no pity, 11—13; forbidding Jeremiah to intercede, 14; rejecting their sacrifices, 15; and, in a word, condemning this fair but unfruitful tree to the fire, 16, 17. In what remains of the Chapter the Prophet predicts evil to his neighbours of Anathoth, who had conspired against him, 18—23. "Let us," said they, "destroy this tree, with the fruit thereof," &c., alluding to what Jeremiah had said in the sixteenth verse.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Hear ye the words of this covenant, and speak unto the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem;

3 And say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel; [a] Cursed be the man that obeyeth not the words of this covenant,

4 Which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, [b] from the iron furnace, saying, [c] Obey my voice, and do them, according to all which I command you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God:

5 That I may perform the [d] oath which I have sworn unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day. Then answered I, and said, [e] So be it, O LORD.

6 Then the LORD said unto me, Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, [f] and do them.

7 For I earnestly protested unto your fathers in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, [g] rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice.

8 [h] Yet they obeyed not, nor inclined their ear, but [i] walked every one in the [k] imagination of their evil heart: therefore I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do; but they did them not.

A. M. cir. 3406. B. C. cir. 598. Ol. cir. XLV. 3. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 19.

9 And the LORD said unto me, [l] A conspiracy is found among the men of Judah, and among the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

10 They are turned back to [m] the iniquities of their forefathers, which refused to hear my words; and they went after other gods to serve them: the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken my covenant which I made with their fathers.

11 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon them, which they shall not be able [n] to escape; and [o] though they shall cry unto me, I will not hearken unto them.

12 Then shall the cities of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem go, and [p] cry unto the gods unto whom they offer incense: but they shall not save them at all in the time of their [q] trouble.

13 For according to the number of thy [r] cities were thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars to that [s] shameful thing, even altars to burn incense unto Baal.

14 Therefore [t] pray not thou for this people, neither lift up a cry or prayer for them: for I will not hear them in the time that they cry unto me for their [u] trouble.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XI.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah] This discourse is supposed to have been delivered in the first year of the reign of Zedekiah. See Dahler.

Verse 2. Hear ye the words of this covenant] It is possible that the prophet caused the words of the covenant made with their fathers in the desert, (Exod. xxiv, 4—8) to be read to them on this occasion; or, at least the blessings and the cursings which Moses caused to be pronounced to the people as soon as they had set foot in Canaan, Deut. xxvii, xxviii.

Verse 3. Cursed be the man that obeyeth not] After the reading, the prophet appears to sum up the things contained in what was read to them; as if he had said,—"Ye hear what the Lord saith unto you: remember, the sum of it is this,—the man is cursed who obeyeth not; and he is blessed who obeys. From these declarations God will not depart."

Verse 5. So be it, O LORD] Let Thy promises be fulfilled; and let the incorrigible beware of Thy threatenings.

Verse 6. Proclaim all these words] Let the same covenant, with the blessings and cursings, be read in every city of Judah, and in all the streets of Jerusalem, that all the people may know their duty, their privileges, and their danger.

Verse 9. A conspiracy is found] They were all fratres conjurati, sworn brothers, determined to cast off the Divine yoke, and no longer to have God to reign over them.

Verse 10. They are turned back to the iniquities of their forefathers] A great reformation had taken place under the reign of Josiah, and the public worship of idols had been abolished, and most of the high places destroyed; but, under the reign of his son and his successors, they had turned back again to idolatry, and were become worse than ever. It required a captivity to cure them of this propensity,—and God sent one: after that, there was no idolatry among the Jews.

Verse 12. Go, and cry unto the gods] See chap. ii, 28.

Verse 14. Therefore pray not thou for this people] I am determined to give them up into the hands of their enemies:

A. M. cir. 3406. B. C. cir. 598. Ol. cir. XLV. 3. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 19.

15 [a] What [b] hath my beloved to do in mine house, seeing she hath [c] wrought lewdness with many, and [d] the holy flesh is passed from thee? [e] when thou doest evil, then thou [f] rejoicest.

16 The LORD called thy name, [g] A green olive tree, fair, and of goodly fruit: with the noise of a great tumult he hath kindled fire upon it, and the branches of it are broken.

17 For the LORD of hosts, [h] that planted thee, hath pronounced evil against thee, for the evil of the house of Israel and of the house of Judah, which they have done against themselves to provoke me to anger in offering incense unto Baal.

18 And the LORD hath given me knowledge of it, and I know it: then thou shewedst me their doings.

19 But I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought to the slaughter; and I knew not that [i] they had devised devices against me, saying, Let us destroy [k] the tree with the fruit thereof, [l] and let us cut him off from [m] the land of the living, that his name may be no more remembered.

A. M. cir. 3406. B. C. cir. 598. Ol. cir. XLV. 3. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 19.

20 But, O LORD of hosts, that judgest righteously, that [n] triest the reins and the heart, let me see thy vengeance on them: for unto thee have I revealed my cause.

21 Therefore thus saith the LORD of the men of Anathoth, [o] that seek thy life, saying, [p] Prophesy not in the name of the LORD, that thou die not by our hand:

22 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will [q] punish them: the young men shall die by the sword; their sons and their daughters shall die by famine:

23 And there shall be no remnant of them: for I will bring evil upon the men of Anathoth, even [r] the year of their visitation.

I will neither hear thy intercession, nor regard their prayers. Their measure is full.

Verse 15. What hath my beloved to do in mine house] This has been supposed to refer to Abraham, Moses, or such eminent servants of God, whose intercession was very powerful. Were even they to appear as intercessors, their prayer should not be regarded. Others think that this is an endearing expression which properly belonged to the Israelites when God took them into covenant with Himself. They were espoused to Him, and therefore His beloved: but now that they have forsaken Him, and joined themselves to another, what have they to do with His house or its ordinances, which they wish now to frequent with vows and sacrifices, when they see the evil fast coming upon them. This is probably the sense of this very obscure passage. Dr. Blayney translates,—"What hath my beloved to do in my house whilst she practiseth wickedness? Shall vows and holy flesh (sacrifices) be allowed to come from thee? When thou art malignant, shalt thou rejoice?"

Verse 16. The LORD called thy name A green olive tree] That is, He made thee like a green olive,—fair, flourishing, and fruitful: but thou art degenerated, and God hath given the Chaldeans permission to burn thee up.

Verse 18. The LORD hath given me knowledge of it] The men of Anathoth had conspired against his life because he reproved them for their sins, and denounced the judgments of God against them. Of this God had given him a secret warning, that he might be on his guard.

Verse 19. I was like a lamb or an ox] Dahler translates,—"I was like a fattened lamb that is led to the slaughter." Blayney,—"I was like a tame lamb that is led to slaughter." The word אלוף aluph, which we translate ox, is taken by both as an adjective, qualifying the noun כבש kibbes, a lamb. It may probably signify a lamb brought up in the house;—fed at home, (אלוף aluph) instructed, or nourished, at home;—perfectly innocent and unsuspecting, while leading to the slaughter. This meaning the word will bear in Arabic, for الف alaf signifies accustomed, familiar, (to or with any person or thing) a companion, a comrade, an intimate friend:—I therefore think that ככבש אלוף ke-kebes aluph signifies like the familiar lamb,—the lamb bred up in the house, in a state of friendship with the family. The people of Anathoth were Jeremiah's townsmen; he was born and bred among them, they were his familiar friends; and now they lay wait for his life! All the Versions understood אלוף aluf as an epithet of כבש kebes, a chosen, simple, innocent lamb.

Let us destroy the tree with the fruit] Let us slay the prophet, and his prophecies will come to an end. The Targum has,—Let us put mortal poison in his food; and all the Versions understand it something in the same way.

Verse 20. Let me see thy vengeance on them] Rather, I shall see (אראה ereh) thy punishment inflicted on them.

Verse 22. Behold, I will punish them] And the punishment is,—their young men shall die by the sword of the Chaldeans; and their sons and daughters shall die by the famine that shall come on the land through the desolations occasioned by the Chaldean army.

Verse 23. The year of their visitation.] This punishment shall come in that year in which I shall visit their iniquities upon them.

CHAPTER XII.

This Chapter is connected with the foregoing. The Prophet expostulates with God concerning the ways of providence in permitting the wicked to prosper, 1—4. It is intimated to him that he must endure still greater trials, 5, from his false and deceitful brethren, 6; but that still heavier judgments awaited the nation for their crimes, 7—13. That God, however, would at length have compassion on them; restore them to their land; and turn His judgments against those that oppressed them, if not prevented by their becoming converts to the true religion, 14—17.

RIGHTEOUS [a] art thou, O LORD, when I plead with thee: yet [b] let me talk with thee of thy judgments: [c] Wherefore doth the way of the wicked prosper? wherefore are all they happy that deal very treacherously?

2 Thou hast planted them, yea, they have taken root: [d] they grow, yea, they bring forth fruit: [e] thou art near in their mouth, and far from their reins.

3 But thou, O LORD, [f] knowest me: thou hast seen me, and [g] tried mine heart [h] toward thee: pull them out like sheep for the slaughter, and prepare them for the [i] day of slaughter.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XII.

Verse 1. Righteous art thou, O LORD, when I plead with thee] The prophet was grieved at the prosperity of the wicked; and he wonders how, consistently with God's righteousness, vice should often be in affluence, and piety in suffering and poverty. He knows that God is righteous,—that every thing is done well;—but he wishes to enquire how these apparently unequal and undeserved lots take place. On this subject he wishes to reason with God, that he may receive instruction.

Verse 2. Thou art near in their mouth] They have no sincerity:—they have something of the form of religion, but nothing of its power.

Verse 3. But thou, O LORD, knowest me.] I know that the very secrets of my heart are known to Thee; and I am glad of it, for thou knowest that my heart is towards thee; is upright and sincere.

Verse 4. How long shall the land mourn] These hypocrites and open sinners are a curse to the country; pull them out, Lord, that the land may be delivered of that which is the cause of its desolation.

Verse 5. If thou hast run with the footmen] If the smallest evils to which thou art exposed cause thee to make so many bitter complaints,—how wilt thou feel when, in the course of thy prophetic ministry, thou shalt be exposed to much greater, from enemies much more powerful? Footmen may here be the symbol of common evil events; horsemen of evils much more terrible. If thou have sunk under small difficulties,—what wilt thou do when great ones come?

And if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst] I believe the meaning is this,—"If in a country now enjoying peace thou scarcely thinkest thyself in safety,—what wilt thou do in the swellings of Jordan?—in the time when the enemy, like an overflowing torrent, shall deluge every part of the land."

The overflowing of Jordan, which generally happened in harvest, drave the lions and other beasts of prey from their coverts among the bushes that lined its banks; who, spreading themselves through the country, made terrible havoc, slaying men, and carrying off the cattle.

Perhaps by footmen may be meant the Philistines, Edomites, &c., whose armies were composed principally of infantry; and by the horses, the Chaldeans, who had abundance of cavalry and chariots in their army. But still, the words are proverbial, and the above is their meaning.

Verse 6. For even thy brethren, and the house of thy father] Thou hast none to depend on but God: even thy brethren will betray thee when they have it in their power.

A. M. cir. 3406. B. C. cir. 598. Ol. cir. XLV. 3. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 19.

after thee: [a]believe them not, though they speak [b]fair words unto thee.

7 I have forsaken mine house, I have left mine heritage; I have given [c]the dearly beloved of my soul into the hand of her enemies.

8 Mine heritage is unto me as a lion in the forest; it [d]crieth [e]out against me: therefore have I hated it.

9 Mine heritage is unto me as a [f]speckled bird, the birds round about are against her; come ye, assemble all the beasts of the field, [g]come [h]to devour.

10 Many [i]pastors have destroyed [k]my vineyard, they have [l]trodden my portion under foot, they have made my [m]pleasant portion a desolate wilderness.

Believe them not] Do not trust to them; do not commit thyself to them;—they are in heart thy enemies, and will betray thee.

Verse 7. I have forsaken mine house] I have abandoned my Temple.

I have given the dearly beloved of my soul] The people once in covenant with me, and inexpressibly dear to me while faithful.

Into the hand of her enemies.] This was a condition in the covenant I made with them: if they forsook me, they were to be abandoned to their enemies, and cast out of the good land I gave to their fathers.

Verse 8. Mine heritage is unto me as a lion] The people are enraged against me; they roar like a furious lion against their God. They have proceeded to the most open acts of the most flagrant iniquity.

Verse 9. Is unto me as a speckled bird] A bird of divers colours. This is a people who have corrupted the worship of the true God with Heathenish rites and ceremonies; therefore, the different nations, (see ver. 10.) whose gods and forms of worship they have adopted, shall come and spoil them. As far as you have followed the surrounding nations in their worship, so far shall they prevail over your state. Every one shall take that which is his own; and wherever he finds his own gods, he will consider the land consecrated to them, and take it as his property, because those very gods are the objects of his worship. The fable of the daw and borrowed plumes is no mean illustration of this passage.

Dahler translates the whole verse thus:—

Birds of prey! inundate with blood my heritage.
Birds of prey! come against her from all sides.
Run together in crowds, ye savage beasts!
Come to the carnage!

Verse 10. Many pastors have destroyed my vineyard] My people have had many kinds of enemies which have fed upon their richest pastures;—the Philistines, the Moabites, Ammonites, Assyrians, Egyptians, and now the Chaldeans.

Verse 11. No man layeth it to heart] Notwithstanding all these desolations, from which the land every where mourns, and which are so plainly the consequences of the people's crimes, no man layeth it to heart, or considereth that these are God's judgments; and that the only way to have them removed is to repent of their sins, and turn to God with all their hearts.

Verse 12. The sword of the LORD shall devour] It is the sword of the Lord that has devoured, and will devour: this is what no man layeth to heart. They think these things come in the course of events.

Verse 13. They have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns] All their projects shall fail:—none of their enterprises shall succeed. They are enemies to God, and therefore cannot have His blessing.

Verse 14. Against all mine evil neighbours] All the neighbouring nations who have united in desolating Judea shall be desolated in their turn:—they also are wicked, and they shall be punished. If I make them executors of my justice, it is to them no proof of my approbation. God often uses one wicked nation to scourge another; and afterwards scourges the scourger by some other scourge. In some places a felon who was condemned to be hanged is made the common hangman for the county; he himself being still under the sentence of death,—

> 'Till soon some trusty brother of the trade
> Shall do for him what he has done to others.

Verse 15. I will return and have compassion on them] This is a promise of restoration from the captivity, and an intimation also that some of their enemies would turn to the true God with them; learn the ways of his people, that is, would abjure idols, and take Jehovah for their God:—and be built in the midst of his people, that is, Jew and Gentile forming one church of the Most High.

Verse 17. I will—destroy that nation] Several of them did not obey, and are destroyed. Of the Moabites, Ammonites, and Chaldeans, not one vestige remains. The sixteenth verse is supposed to be a promise of the conversion of the Gentiles. See Eph. ii, 13—22.

From the thirteenth verse to the end is a different discourse, and Dahler supposes it to have been delivered in the seventh or eighth year of the reign of Jehoiakim.

CHAPTER XIII.

This Chapter contains an entire prophecy. The symbol of the linen girdle, left to rot for a considerable time, was a type of the manner in which the glory of the Jews should be marred during the course of their long captivity, 1—11. The scene of hiding the girdle being laid near the Euphrates, intimated that the scene of the nation's distress should be Chaldea, which that river waters. The next three verses, by another emblem frequently used to represent the judgments of God, are designed to show that the calamities threatened should be extended to every rank and denomination, 12—14. This leads the Prophet to a most affectionate exhortation to repentance, 15—17. But God, knowing that this happy consequence would not ensue, sends him with an awful message to the royal family particularly, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem in general, declaring the approaching judgments in plain terms, 18—27. The ardent desire for the reformation of Jerusalem, with which the Chapter concludes, beautifully displays the compassion and tender mercy of God.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIII.

Verse 1. Thus saith the LORD unto me] This discourse is supposed to have been delivered under the reign of Jeconiah, the son and successor of Jehoiakim, who came to the throne in the eighteenth year of his age; when the Chaldean generals had encamped near to Jerusalem, but did not besiege it in form till Nebuchadnezzar came up with the great body of the army. In these circumstances the prophet predicts the captivity; and, by a symbolical representation of a rotten girdle, shows the people their totally corrupt state; and by another of bottles filled with wine, shows the destruction and madness of their counsels, and the confusion that must ensue.

Go and get thee a linen girdle] This was either a vision:

A. M. cir. 3405. B. C. cir. 599. Ol. cir. XLV. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 18.

unto me the second time, saying,

4 Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, and arise, go to Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.

5 So I went, and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me.

6 And it came to pass after many days, that the LORD said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there.

7 Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it: and, behold, the girdle was marred, it was profitable for nothing.

8 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Thus saith the LORD, After this manner [a] will I mar the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem.

10 This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which [b] walk in the [c] imagination of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing.

11 For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD; that [d] they might be unto me for a people, and [e] for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: but they would not hear.

A. M. cir. 3405. B. C. cir. 599. Ol. cir. XLV. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 18.

12 Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word; Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Every bottle shall be filled with wine: and they shall say unto thee, Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine?

13 Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David's throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, [f] with drunkenness.

14 And [g] I will dash them [h] one against another, even the fathers and the sons together, saith the LORD: I will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, [i] but destroy them.

15 Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud: for the LORD hath spoken.

16 [k] Give glory to the LORD your God, before he cause [l] darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and, while ye [m] look or, God simply describes the thing, in order that the prophet might use it in the way of illustration.

Put it not in water] After having worn it, let it not be washed, that it may more properly represent the uncleanness of the Israelites; for they were represented by the girdle; for as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Judah. And as a girdle is as well for ornament as use; God took them for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory, ver. 11.

Verse 4. Go to Euphrates, and hide it there] Intending to point out, by this distant place, the country into which they were to be carried away captive.

Verse 7. And behold the girdle was marred; it was profitable for nothing.] This symbolically represented the state of the Jews: they were corrupt and abominable; and God by sending them into captivity marred the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem, ver. 9.

Verse 12. Every bottle shall be filled with wine] The bottles were made for the purpose of being filled with wine; and it is likely, from the promising appearance of the season and the grapes, that there was a great likelihood of a copious vintage; and this made them say,—"Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine? Have we not every prospect that it will be so? Do we need a revelation to inform us of this?"

Verse 13. Behold I will fill all the inhabitants of this land—with drunkenness.] You pretend to take this literally, but it is a symbol. You, and your kings, and priests, and prophets, are represented by these bottles. The wine is God's wrath against you, which shall first be shown by confounding your deliberations, filling you with foolish plans of defence, causing you from your divided counsels to fall out among yourselves, so that like so many drunken men you shall reel about and jostle each other; defend yourselves without plan, and fight without order, till ye all fall an easy prey into the hands of your enemies. The ancient adage is here fulfilled:—

Quos Deus vult perdere, prius dementat.

"Those whom God determines to destroy, he first renders foolish."

Verse 16. Give glory to—God] Confess your sins and turn to Him, that these sore evils may be averted.

While ye look for light] While ye expect prosperity, He turned it into the shadow of death; sent you adversity of the most distressing and ruinous kind.

for light, he turn it into [a] the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness.

17 But if ye will not hear it, my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and [b] mine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears, because the LORD's flock is carried away captive.

18 Say unto [c] the king and to the queen, Humble yourselves, sit down: for your [d] principalities shall come down, even the crown of your glory.

19 The cities of the south shall be shut up, and none shall open them: Judah shall be carried away captive all of it, it shall be wholly carried away captive.

20 Lift up your eyes, and behold them [e] that come from the north: where is the flock that was given thee, thy beautiful flock?

21 What wilt thou say when he shall [f] punish thee? for thou hast taught them to be captains; and as chief over thee: shall not [g] sorrows take thee, as a woman in travail?

23 Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are [l] accustomed to do evil.

24 Therefore will I scatter them [m] as the stubble that passeth away by the wind of the wilderness.

25 [n] This is thy lot, the portion of thy measures from me, saith the LORD; because thou hast [o] forgotten me, and trusted in [p] falsehood.

Stumble upon the dark mountains] Before you meet with those great obstacles, which having no light, no proper understanding in the matter, ye shall be utterly unable to surmount.

Verse 17. My soul shall weep in secret places] If you will not hearken to the Lord, there is no remedy: destruction must come; and there is nothing left for me, but to go in secret, and mourn and bewail your wretched lot.

Verse 18. Say unto the king and queen] Probably Jeconiah and his mother, under whose tutelage, being young when he began to reign, he was left, as is very likely.

Sit down] Show that ye have humbled yourselves; for your state will be destroyed, and your glorious crown taken from your heads.

Verse 19. The cities of the south shall be shut up] Not only the cities of the north, the quarter at which the Chaldeans entered, but the cities of the south also; for he shall proceed from one extremity of the land to the other, spreading devastation every where, and carrying off the inhabitants.

Verse 20. Where is the flock—thy beautiful flock] Jerusalem is addressed. Where are the prosperous multitudes of men, women, and children? Alas! are they not driven before the Babylonians, who have taken them captive?

Verse 21. Thou hast taught them to be captains, and as chief over thee] This is said of their enemies, whether Assyrians or Chaldeans: for ever since Ahaz submitted himself to the king of Assyria, the kings of Judah never regained their independence. Their enemies were thus taught to be their lords and masters.

Verse 22. Are thy skirts discovered] Thy defenceless state is every where known; thou art not only weak, but ignominiously so. It is thy scandal to be in so depressed a state; thou art lower than the basest of thy adversaries, and thou art so because of thy sin.

Verse 23. Can the Ethiopian change his skin] Can a black, at his own pleasure, change the colour of his skin? Can the leopard at will, change the variety of his spots? These things are natural to them, and they cannot be altered; so sin, and especially your attachment to idolatry, is become a second nature; and we may as well expect the Ethiopian to change his skin, and the leopard her spots, as you to do good, who have been accustomed to do evil. It is a matter of the utmost difficulty to get a sinner, deeply rooted in vicious habits, brought to the knowledge of himself and God. But the expression does not imply that the thing is as impossible in a moral, as it is in a natural sense: it only shows that it is extremely difficult, and not to be often expected; and a thousand matters of fact prove the truth of this. But still what is impossible to man, is possible to God. See on ver. 27.

Verse 24. The winds of the wilderness] Some strong tempestuous wind, proverbially severe, coming from the desert to the south of Judea.

Verse 25. Trusted in falsehood.] In idols, and in lying prophets.

Verse 26. Therefore will I discover thy skirts upon thy face] It was the custom to punish lewd women by stripping them naked, and exposing them to public view; or by throwing their clothes over their heads, as here intimated. Was this the way to correct the evil?

Verse 27. I have seen thine adulteries] Thy idolatries of different kinds, practised in various ways; no doubt often accompanied with gross debauchery.

Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem! wilt thou not be made clean?] We see from this, that though the thing was difficult, yet it was not impossible, for these Ethiopians to change their skin; for these leopards to change their spots. It was only their obstinate refusal of the grace of God, that rendered it impossible. Man cannot change himself: but he may pray to God to do it, and come to Him through Christ that he may do it. To enable him to pray and believe, the power is still at hand. If he will not use it, he must perish.

CHAPTER XIV.

This Chapter begins with foretelling a drought that should greatly distress the land of Judea, the effects of which are described in a most pathetic manner, 1—6. The Prophet then, in the people's name, makes a confession of sins, and supplication for pardon, 7—9. But God declares His purpose to punish, forbidding Jeremiah to pray for the people, 10—12. False prophets are then complained of, and threatened with destruction, as are also those who attend to them, 13—16. The Prophet, therefore, bewails their misery, 17, 18; and though he had been just now forbidden to intercede for them; yet, like a tender pastor, who could not cease to be concerned for their welfare, he falls on the happy expedient of introducing themselves as supplicating in their own name that mercy which he was not allowed to ask in his, 19—22.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIV.

Verse 1. The word—that came—concerning the dearth] This discourse is supposed to have been delivered after the fourth year of Jehoiakim. Concerning the dearth—We have no historic record of any dearth that may fall in with the time of this prophecy; and perhaps it does not refer to any particular dearth: but this was a calamity to which Judea was very liable. They had ordinarily very dry summers; for scarcely any rain fell from April to the middle of October; and during much of this time, the rivers were generally either very low, or entirely dry. They kept the rain of the winter in tanks and reservoirs; and if little fell in winter, a dearth was unavoidable. See an account of a dearth in the time of Elijah, 1 Kings xviii, 5, through which almost all the cattle were lost.

Verse 2. The gates thereof languish] The gates being the places of public resort, they are put here for the people.

They are black unto the ground] Covered from head to foot with a black garment, the emblem of sorrow and calamity.

Verse 3. Their nobles have sent their little ones] So general was this calamity, that the servants no longer attended to their lords, but every one was interested alone for himself; and the nobles of the land were obliged to employ their own children to scour the land, to see if any water could be found in the tanks or the pits. In the dearth in the time of Elijah, Ahab the king, and Obadiah his counsellor, were obliged to traverse the land themselves, in order to find out water to keep their cattle alive. This and the 4 Because the ground is chapt, for there was no rain in the earth, the plowmen were ashamed, they covered their heads.

5 Yea, the hind also calved in the field, and forsook it, because there was no grass.

6 And [a] the wild asses did stand in the high places, they snuffed up the wind like dragons; their eyes did fail, because there was no grass.

7 O LORD, though our iniquities testify against us, do thou it [b] for thy name's sake: for our backslidings are many; we have sinned against thee.

8 [c] O the hope of Israel, the Saviour thereof in time of trouble, why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land, and as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night?

9 Why shouldest thou be as a man astonished, as a mighty man [d] that cannot save? yet thou, O LORD, [e] art in the midst of us, and [f] we are called by thy name: leave us not.

10 Thus saith the LORD unto this people, [g] Thus have they loved to wander, they have not refrained their feet, therefore the LORD doth not accept them; [h] he will now remember their iniquity, and visit their sins.

11 Then said the LORD unto me, [i] Pray not for this people for their good.

12 [k] When they fast, I will not hear their cry; and [l] when they offer burnt offering and an oblation, I will not accept them: but [m] I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.

13 [n] Then said I, Ah, Lord GOD? behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you [o] assured peace in this place.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, [p] The prophets prophesy lies in my name: [q] I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart.

three following verses give a lively but distressing picture of this dearth and its effects.

Verse 6. Snuffed up the wind like dragons] תנים tanim; probably here the hippopotamos, who, after feeding under the water, is obliged to come to the surface in order to take in fresh draughts of air: or, it may mean the wild asses.

Verse 7. O LORD, though our iniquities testify against us] We deeply acknowledge that we have sinned, and deserve nothing but death. Yet act for thy name's sake; work in our behalf, that we perish not.

Verse 8. O the hope of Israel] O thou who art the alone Object of the hope of this people.

The Saviour thereof in time of trouble] Who hast never yet abandoned them that seek Thee.

Why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land] As one who has no interest in the prosperity and safety of the country.

And as a wayfaring man] A traveller on his journey.

That turneth aside to tarry for a night] Who stays the shortest time he can; and takes up his lodging in a tent or caravanserai, for the dead of the night, that he may pursue his journey by break of day. Instead of dwelling among us, thou hast scarcely paid the most transient visit to thy land. O come once more, and dwell among us.

Verse 9. Yet thou, O LORD, art in the midst of us] Thy ark, temple, and sacred rites, are all here; and Thou Thyself, who art every where present, art here also: but, alas! Thou dost not reveal Thyself as the Father of mercies, who forgivest iniquity, transgression, and sin.

We are called by thy name; leave us not.] Let us call Thee our Father, and say Thou to us, Ye are my sons and daughters! O leave us not!

Verse 10. Thus have they loved to wander] And the measure of your iniquity being now full, ye must be punished.

Verse 11. Pray not for this people] They are ripe for destruction, intercede not for them. O! how dreadful is the state of that people in reference to whom the Lord says to His ministers Pray not for them: or, what amounts nearly to a prohibition, the withholding from His ministers the spirit of prayer and intercession in behalf of the people.

Verse 13. Ah Lord GOD, behold, the prophets say unto them] True, Lord, they are exceedingly wicked: but the false prophets have deceived them; this is some mitigation of their offence. This plea God does not admit; and why? the people believed them, without having any proof of their Divine mission.

Verse 14. The prophets prophesy lies] They say they have visions, but they have them by divination, and they are false. The people should know their character, and avoid them: but they love to have it so; and will not be undeceived.

Verse 15. By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.] Jeremiah had told Jehoiakim, that if he rebelled the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, [a] yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.

16 And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem because of the famine and the sword; [b] and they shall have none to bury them; them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters: for I will pour their wickedness upon them.

17 Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them; [c] Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease: [d] for the virgin daughter of my people is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous blow.

18 If I go forth into [e] the field, then behold the slain with the sword! and if I enter into the city, then behold them that are sick with famine!

yea, both the prophet and the priest [f] go about into a land that they know not.

19 [g] Hast thou utterly rejected Judah? hath thy soul loathed Zion? why hast thou smitten us, and [h] there is no healing for us? [i] we looked for peace, and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble!

20 We acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness, and the iniquity of our fathers: for [k] we have sinned against thee.

21 Do not abhor us, for thy name's sake, do not disgrace the throne of thy glory: [l] remember, break not thy covenant with us.

22 [m] Are there any among the [n] vanities of the Gentiles that can cause rain? or can the heavens give showers? [o] art not thou he, O LORD our God? therefore we will wait upon thee: for thou hast made all these things.

against Nebuchadnezzar, he should be overthrown, and the land wasted by sword and famine: the false prophets said there should be neither sword nor famine, but peace and prosperity. The king believed them, and withheld the tribute. Nebuchadnezzar incensed, invaded and destroyed the land: the false prophets fell in these calamities. See 2 Kings xxv, 3. Lam. ii, 11—19.

Verse 16. And the people—shall be cast out] They shall be destroyed, because they preferred their lying words to my Truth, proclaimed by thee.

Verse 17. For the virgin daughter of my people is broken] First, the land was sadly distressed by Pharaoh-Necho, king of Egypt. Secondly, It was laid under a heavy tribute by Nebuchadnezzar. And, Thirdly, It was nearly desolated by a famine afterwards. In a few years all these calamities fell upon them; these might be well called a great breach, a very grievous blow.

Verse 18. If I go forth into the field, then behold the slain with the sword] Every place presents frightful spectacles; the wounded, the dying, the starved, and the slain; none to bury the dead, none to commiserate the dying, none to bring either relief or consolation. Even the prophets and the priests are obliged to leave the cities, and wander about in unfrequented and unknown places, seeking for the necessaries of life. Dr. Blayney thinks that the going about of the prophets and priests in the land, is to be understood thus:—"They went trafficking about with their false doctrines and lying predictions, as pedlars do with their wares, seeking their own gain." I think the other sense preferable.

Verse 19. We looked for peace] We expected prosperity when Josiah purged the land of idolatry.

And there is no good] For we have relapsed into our former ways.

Verse 20. We acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness] This the prophet did in behalf of the people: but, alas! they did not join with him.

Verse 21. Do not disgrace the throne of thy glory] The Temple. Let not this sacred place be profaned by impious and sacrilegious hands.

Break not thy covenant] See Exod. xxiv, 7, 8; xix, 5. They had already broken the covenant, and they wish God to fulfil His part. They ceased to be His people, for they abandoned themselves to idolatry; and yet they wished Jehovah to be their LORD; to defend, support, and fill them with all good things! But when the conditions of a covenant are broken by one of the contracting parties, the other party is not bound; and the covenant is necessarily annulled.

Verse 22. Are there any among the vanities of the Gentiles] Probably the dearth was now coming, as there had been a long want of rain. It was the prerogative of the true God to give rain and send showers at the prayers of His people.

Therefore we will wait upon thee] If Thou do not undertake for us, we must be utterly ruined.

CHAPTER XV.

God declares to Jeremiah that not even Moses and Samuel, whose prayers had been so prevalent, could divert Him from His purpose of punishing so wicked a people, 1. Accordingly their captivity is again announced in a variety of images so full of terror, 2—9, that the Prophet complains of his own hard fate in being obliged to deliver such unwelcome messages, 10; for which too he is reproved, 11—14. Immediately he appeals to God for his sincerity, and supplicates pardon, 15—18; and God tempers His reproof with promising again to protect him in the faithful discharge of his duty, 19—21.

THEN said the LORD unto me, [a] Though [b] Moses and [c] Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.

2 And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the LORD; [d] Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity.

3 And I will [e] appoint over them four [f] kinds, saith the LORD: the sword to slay, and the dogs to tear, and [g] the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the earth, to devour and destroy.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XV.

Verse 1. Though Moses and Samuel] Moses had often supplicated for the people; and in consequence they were spared. See Exod. xxxii, 11, and following verses, Numb. xiv, 13. Samuel also had prayed for the people, and God heard him, 1 Sam. vii, 9: but if these or the most holy men were now to supplicate for this people, He would not spare them.

Cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.] Do not bring them into my presence by your prayers; let them go forth into captivity.

Verse 2. Whither shall we go forth?—Such as are for death, to death] Some shall be destroyed by the pestilence, here termed death. See chap. xviii, 21. Others shall be slain by the sword in battle, and in the sackage of cities. Others shall perish by famine, shall be starved to death through the mere want of the necessaries of life; and the rest shall go into captivity. There shall be different sorts of punishments inflicted on them according to the nature of their transgressions. Some shall be punished in one way, and some in another.

Verse 3. I will appoint over them four kinds] There shall appear four instruments of my justice. 1. The sword to slay. 2. The dogs to tear what is slain. 3. The fowls of the heaven to feed on the dead carcases. And, 4. The wild beasts to destroy all that the fowls have left.

Verse 4. I will cause them to be removed into all kingdoms of the earth] This seems to have respect to the succeeding state of the Jews in their different generations: and never was there a prophecy more literally fulfilled; and it is still a standing monument of Divine truth. Let infidelity cast its eyes on the scattered Jews whom it may meet with in every civilized nation of the world; and then let it deny the truth of this prophecy, if it can. The Jews are scattered through every nation, and yet are not a nation; nor do they form even a colony on any part of the face of the earth. Behold the truth and the justice of God.

Verse 5. Who shall go aside to ask how thou doest?] Perhaps there is not a more despised nor a more degraded people under the sun. Scarcely any one thinks himself called upon to do a kind office for a Jew. Their character is bad in society, and they are not at all solicitous to redeem it.

Verse 6. I am weary with repenting.] With repeatedly changing my purpose. I have often, after purposing to punish, showed them mercy. I will do it no longer: it is useless. I took them often at their promise, and in every instance they have failed.

7 And I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land; I will bereave them of [a] children, I will destroy my people, since [b] they return not from their ways.

8 Their widows are increased to me above the sand of the seas: I have brought upon them [c] against the mother of the young men, a spoiler at noonday: I have caused him to fall upon it suddenly, and terrors upon the city.

9 [d] She that hath borne seven languisheth: she hath given up the ghost; [e] her sun is gone down while it was yet day: she hath been ashamed and confounded: and the residue of them will I deliver to the sword before their enemies, saith the LORD.

10 [f] Woe is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me a man of strife and a man of contention to the whole earth! I have neither lent on usury, nor men have lent to me on usury; yet every one of them doth curse me.

11 The LORD said, Verily it shall be well with thy remnant, verily [g] I will cause [h] the enemy to intreat thee well in the time of evil and in the time of affliction.

12 Shall iron break the northern iron and the steel?

13 Thy substance and thy treasures will I give to the [i] spoil without price, and that for all thy sins, even in all thy borders.

14 And I will make thee to pass with thine enemies [k] into a land which thou knowest not: for a [l] fire is kindled in mine anger, which shall burn upon you.

15 O LORD, [m] thou knowest: remember me, and visit me, and [n] revenge me of my persecutors; take me not away in thy long-suffering: know that [o] for thy sake I have suffered rebuke.

16 Thy words were found, and I did [p] eat them; and [q] thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart: for [r] I am called by thy name, O LORD God of hosts.

17 [s] I sat not in the assembly of the mockers, nor rejoiced: I sat alone because of thy hand: for thou hast filled me with indignation.

18 Why is my [t] pain perpetual, and my wound incurable, which refuseth to be healed? wilt thou be altogether unto me [u] as a liar, and [x] as waters that [y] fail?

In the gates of the land] The places of public justice: and there it shall be seen that the judgments that have fallen upon them have been highly merited. And from these places of fanning they shall go out into their captivity.

Verse 8. The mother of the young men] The metropolis, or mother city,—Jerusalem.

Verse 9. She that hath borne seven] She that hath had a numerous offspring:—Jerusalem, the parent of so many cities, villages, and families, in the land. Seven signifies a complete, or full number.

Verse 10. A man of contention to the whole earth!] To the whole LAND,—to all his countrymen; though he had done nothing to merit their displeasure.

Verse 11. I will cause the enemy to entreat thee well in the time of evil] This was literally fulfilled, see chap. xxxix, 11, &c. Nebuchadnezzar had given strict charge to Nebuzar-adan, commander in chief, to look well to Jeremiah, to do him no harm, and to grant him all the privileges he was pleased to ask.

Verse 12. Shall iron break the northern iron and the steel?] Shall our weak forces be able to oppose and overcome the powers of the Chaldeans? נחשת nechosheth, which we here translate steel, properly signifies brass, or copper, united with tin, which gives it much hardness, and enables it to bear a good edge.

Verse 13. Thy substance—will I give to the spoil without price] Invaluable property shall be given up to thy adversaries. Or, without price;—thou shalt have nothing for it in return.

Verse 15. O LORD—remember me, and visit me] Let me not be carried away into captivity;—and it does not appear that he had ever been taken to Babylon. After the capture of the city he went into Egypt; and either died there, or was put to death by his countrymen.

Verse 16. Thy word was—the joy and rejoicing of mine heart] When I did receive the prophetic message, I did rejoice in the honour Thou hadst done me; and I faithfully testified Thy will to them. They have become mine enemies; not because there was any evil in me, but because I was faithful to Thee.

20 And I will make thee unto this people a fenced brasen [d] wall: and they shall fight against thee, but [e] they shall not prevail against thee: for I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee, saith the LORD.

vapours, the resemblance of water is produced, so that the traveller, deceived, rejoices that he is come in the sandy desert to the verge of a beautiful lake:—but the further he travels, it is still at the same distance, and at last vanishes; and he finds the whole was an illusion, for the waters have failed.

Verse 19. If thou return] By repentance unto me,—

Then will I bring thee again] Restore thee to thy own country. But some think the words are spoken to the prophet in reference to his ministry. He had greatly repined because of the persecutions which he endured. The Lord reprehends him, and is about to take from him the prophetic gift: but exhorts him first to take the precious from the vile, —not to attend to the deceitful words of the people, but boldly declare the message He had given him; not to return unto the people, but let the people return unto him. And then he should be as God's mouth; his words should appear to be what they were, the genuine words of God; and the people should be obliged to acknowledge them as such.

Verse 20. I will make thee—a fenced brasen wall] While thou art faithful to me, none of them shall be able to prevail against thee.

Verse 21. I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked] From the power of this evil people:—

And I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.] Out of the power of the Chaldean armies. Every thing took place as God had promised, for no word of His can ever fall to the ground.

CHAPTER XVI.

On account of the evils which threatened his country, the Prophet is forbidden to encumber himself with a wife and family, or to bear any share in the little joys and sorrows of his neighbours, which were to be forgotten and absorbed in those public calamities, 1—9, which their sins should draw on them, 10—13. A future restoration, however, is intimated, 14, 15, after those calamities should be endured, 16—18; and the conversion of the Gentiles is foretold, 19—21.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVI.

Verse 1. The word of the LORD came also unto me] This discourse Dahler supposes to have been delivered some time in the reign of Jehoiakim.

Verse 2. Thou shalt not take thee a wife] As it would be very inconvenient to have a family when the threatened desolations should come on the place. The reason is given in the following verses.

Verse 4. They shall die of grievous deaths] All prematurely, see chap. xiv, 16.

As dung upon the face of the earth] See chap. viii, 2.

Be meat for the fowls] See chap. vii, 33.

shall not be [a] lamented; neither shall they be buried: but they shall be [b] as dung upon the face of the earth: and they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine; and their [c] carcases shall be meat for the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

5 For thus saith the LORD, [d] Enter not into the house of [e] mourning, neither go to lament nor bemoan them: for I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the LORD, even loving-kindness and mercies.

6 Both the great and the small shall die in this land: they shall not be buried, [f] neither shall men lament for them, nor [g] cut themselves, nor [h] make themselves bald for them:

7 Neither shall men [i] tear themselves for them in mourning, to comfort them for the dead; neither shall men give them the cup of consolation to [k] drink for their father or for their mother.

8 Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting, to sit with them to eat and to drink.

9 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, [l] I will cause to cease out of this place in your eyes, and in your days, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride.

10 And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt shew this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, [m] Wherefore hath the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity? or what is our sin that we have committed against the LORD our God?

11 Then shalt thou say unto them, [n] Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith the LORD, and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, and have forsaken me, and have not kept my law;

12 And ye have done [o] worse than your fathers; for, behold, [p] ye walk every one after the [q] imagination of his evil heart, that they may not hearken unto me:

13 [r] Therefore will I cast you out of this land [s] into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there shall ye serve other gods day and night; where I will not shew you favour.

15 But, The LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and [u] I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.

Verse 5. Enter not into the house of mourning] The public calamities are too great to permit individual losses to come into consideration.

Verse 6. Nor cut themselves] A custom of the Heathen, forbidden to the Jews, Lev. xix, 28, Deut. xiv, 1, and which appears now to have prevailed among them; because, having become idolaters, they conformed to all the customs of the Heathen. They tore their hair, rent their garments, cut their hands, arms, and faces. These were not only signs of sorrow, but were even supposed to give ease to the dead, and appease the angry deities.

Verse 8. Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting] Funeral banquets were made to commemorate the dead, and comfort the surviving relatives:—and the cup of consolation—strong mingled wine—was given to those who were deepest in distress, to divert their minds, and to soothe their sorrows. These kinds of ceremonies were common among almost all the nations of the world on funeral occasions. The Canaanites, the Jews, the Persians, Arabians, New Zealanders, Huns, &c. &c.

18 And first I will recompense their iniquity and their sin [b] double; because [c] they have defiled my land, they have filled mine inheritance with the carcases of their detestable and abominable things.

19 O LORD, [d] my strength, and my fortress, and [e] my refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things [f] wherein there is no profit.

20 Shall a man make gods unto himself, and [g] they are no gods?

Verse 18. The carcases of their detestable—things.] Either meaning the idols themselves, which were only carcases without life; or the sacrifices which were made to them.

Verse 19. The Gentiles shall come] Even the days shall come when the Gentiles themselves, ashamed of their confidence, shall renounce their idols, and acknowledge that their fathers had believed lies, and worshipped vanities. This may be a prediction of the calling of the Gentiles by the gospel of Christ: if so, it is a light amidst much darkness. In such dismal accounts there is need of some gracious promise relative to an amended state of the world.

Verse 20. Shall a man make gods unto himself?] Can any be so silly, and so preposterously absurd? Yes, fallen man is capable of any thing that is base, mean, vile, and wicked, till influenced and converted by the grace of Christ.

Verse 21. Therefore, behold, I will this once] I will not now change my purpose. They shall be visited and carried into captivity; nothing shall prevent this: and they shall know that my name is JEHOVAH. Since they would not receive the abundance of my mercies, they shall know what the true God can do in the way of judgment.

CHAPTER XVII.

This Chapter begins with setting forth the very strong bias which the people of Judah had to idolatry, with the fatal consequences, 1—4. The happiness of the man that trusteth in Jehovah is then beautifully contrasted with the opposite character, 5—8. God alone knows the deceitfulness and wretchedness of the heart of man, 9, 10. The comparison of a bird's hatching the eggs of another of a different species, which will soon forsake her, is highly expressive of the vanity of ill-acquired riches, which often disappoint the owner, 11. The Prophet continues the same subject in his own person, appeals to God for his sincerity, and prays that the evil intended him by his enemies may revert on their own heads, 12—18. The remaining part of the Chapter is a distant prophecy relating to the observance of the Sabbath, enforced both by promises and threatenings, 19—27.

5 Thus saith the LORD; [e] Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh [f] flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the LORD.
6 For he shall be [g] like the heath in the desert, and [h] shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, [i] in a salt land and not inhabited.

tinguished here from engraving with a steel burine, or graver. Their altars shew what the deities are which they worship. There may be reference here to the different methods of recording events in those days:—1. A pen, or stile of iron, for engraving on lead or wood. 2. A point of a diamond, for writing on vitreous substances. 3. Writing on tables of brass or copper. 4. Writing on the horns of the altars the names of the deities worshipped there. This is probable.

Verse 2. Whilst their children remember] Even the rising generation have their imagination stocked with idol images, and their memories by the frantic rites and ceremonies which they saw their parents observe in this abominable worship.

Verse 3. O my mountain in the field] The prophet here addresses the land of Judea, which was a mountainous country, Deut. iii, 26: but Jerusalem itself may be meant, which is partly built upon hills, which, like itself, are elevated above the rest of the country.

Verse 5. Cursed be the man that trusteth in man] This reprehends their vain confidence in trusting in Egypt, which was too feeble itself to help; and had it been otherwise, too ill disposed towards them, to help them heartily. An arm of flesh is put here for a weak and ineffectual support. And he who, in reference to the salvation of his soul, trusts in an arm of flesh, in himself or others, or in any thing he has done or suffered, will inherit a curse instead of a blessing.

Verse 6. He shall be like the heath in the desert] כערער ke-ârâr; or, like a blasted tree, without moisture, parched and withered.

Shall not see when good cometh] Shall not be sensible of it: the previous drought having rendered it incapable of absorbing any more vegetable juices.

A salt land] Barren; and, therefore, unfit to be inhabited.

Verse 8. As a tree planted by the waters] Which is sufficiently supplied with moisture, though the heat be intense, and there be no rain; for the roots being spread out by the river, they absorb from it all the moisture requisite for the flourishing vegetation of the tree.

Shall not see when heat cometh] Shall not feel any damage by drought, for the reason already assigned. It shall be strong and vigorous, its leaf always green, and shall produce plenty of fruit in its season.

Verse 9. The heart is deceitful] עקב הלב âkab ha-leb, the heart is supplanting—tortuous—full of windings—insidious;—lying ever at the catch; striving to avail itself of every favouring circumstance to gratify its propensities to pride, ambition, evil desire, and corruption of all kinds.

And desperately wicked] ועגש הוא ve-ânash hu, and is wretched, or feeble; distressed beyond all things, in consequence of the wickedness that is in it. I am quite of Mr. Parkhurst's opinion, that this word is here badly translated, as ענש ânash is never used in Scripture to denote wickedness of any kind. My old MS. Bible translates thus:—Schrewid is the herte of a man; and unserchable: who schal knowen it?

Who can know it?] It even hides itself from itself; so that its owner does not know it. A corrupt heart is the worst enemy the fallen creature can have: it is full of evil devices,—of deceit, of folly, and abomination; and its owner knows not what is in him till it boils over, and is often past remedy before the evil is perceived. Therefore, trust not in man, whose purposes are continually changing, and who is actuated only by motives of self-interest.

Verse 10. I the LORD search the heart] The Lord is called by His apostles, Acts i, 24, Καρδιογνωστης, the Knower of the heart. To Him alone can this epithet be applied; and it is from Him alone that we can derive that instruction by which we can in any measure know ourselves.

ways, and according to the fruit of his doings.

11 As the partridge [a] sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches, and not by right, [b] shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be [c] a fool.

12 A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary.

13 O LORD, [d] the hope of Israel, [e] all that forsake thee shall be ashamed, and they that depart from me shall be [f] written in the earth, because they have forsaken the LORD, the [g] Fountain of living waters.

14 Heal me, O LORD, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for [h] thou art my praise.

15 Behold, they say unto me, [i] Where is the word of the LORD? let it come now.

16 As for me, [k] I have not hastened from being a pastor [l] to follow thee: neither have I desired the woeful day; thou knowest: that which came out of my lips was right before thee.

Verse 11. As the partridge] קרא koré. It is very likely that this was a bird different from our partridge. The Text Dr. Blayney translates thus:—

(As) the koré that hatcheth what it doth not lay,
(So is) he who getteth riches, and not according to right.

The covetous man, says Dahler, who heaps up riches by unjust ways, is compared to a bird which hatches the eggs of other fowls. And as the young when hatched, and able at all to shift for themselves, abandon her who is not their mother, and leave her nothing to compensate her trouble; so the covetous man loses those unjustly gotten treasures, and the fruit of his labour.

And at his end shall be a fool.] Shall be reputed as such. He was a fool all the way through; he lost his soul to get wealth, and this wealth he never enjoyed. To him also are applicable those strong words of the poet:—

"O cursed lust of gold! when for thy sake
The wretch throws up his interest in both worlds:
First starved in this, then damned in that to come."

BLAIR.

Verse 12. A glorious high throne] As he is cursed who trusts in man, so he is blessed who trusts in GOD. He is here represented as on a throne in His temple: to Him in the means of grace all should resort. He is the Support, and a glorious Support of all them that trust in Him.

Verse 13. Written in the earth] They shall never come to true honour. Their names shall be written in the dust; and the first wind that blows over it shall mar every letter, and render it illegible.

Verse 14. Heal me,—and I shall be healed] That is, I shall be thoroughly healed, and effectually saved, if Thou undertake for me.

Thou art my praise.] The whole glory of the work of salvation belongs to Thee alone.

Verse 15. Where is the word of the LORD?] Where is the accomplishment of His threatenings? Thou hast said that the city and the Temple should both be destroyed. No such events have yet taken place. But they did take place, and every tittle of the menace was strictly fulfilled.

Verse 16. I have not hastened from being a pastor] Dr. Blayney translates thus:—"But I have not been in haste to outrun thy guidance." I was obliged to utter Thy prediction: but I have not hastened the evil day. For the credit of my prophecy I have not desired the calamity to come speedily; I have rather pleaded for respite. I have followed Thy steps, and proclaimed Thy truth. I did not desire to be a prophet:—but thou hast commanded, and I obeyed.

Verse 17. Be not a terror unto me] Do not command me to predict miseries, and abandon me to them and to my enemies.

Verse 18. Let them be confounded] They shall be confounded. These words are to be understood as simple predictions, rather than prayers.

Verse 19. The gate of the children of the people] I suppose the most public gate is meant; that through which there was the greatest thoroughfare.

22 Neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the sabbath day, neither do ye any work, but hallow ye the sabbath day, as I [c] commanded your fathers.

23 [d] But they obeyed not, neither inclined their ear, but made their neck stiff, that they might not hear, nor receive instruction.

24 And it shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the LORD, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath day, but hallow the sabbath day, to do no work therein;

A. M. cir. 3393. B. C. cir. 611. Ol. cir. XLII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 6.

25 [e] Then shall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and this city shall remain for ever.

26 And they shall come from the cities of Judah, and from [f] the places about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from [g] the plain, and from the mountains, and from [h] the south, bringing burnt offerings, and sacrifices, and meat offerings, and incense, and bringing [i] sacrifices of praise, unto the house of the LORD.

27 But if ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the sabbath day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day: then [k] will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, [l] and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

Verse 20. Ye kings of Judah, and all Judah] This last clause is wanting in eight of Kennicott's and De Rossi's MSS., in the Arabic, and some copies of the Septuagint.

Verse 21. Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden] From this and the following verses we find the ruin of the Jews attributed to the breach of the sabbath;—as this led to a neglect of sacrifice, the ordinances of religion, and all public worship; so it necessarily brought with it all immorality. The breach of the sabbath was that which let in upon them all the waters of God's wrath.

Verse 24. If ye diligently hearken unto me] So we find that though their destruction was positively threatened, yet still there was an unexpressed proviso that if they did return to the Lord, the calamities should be averted, and a succession of princes would have been continued on the throne of David, ver. 25, 26.

Verse 27. But if ye will not hearken] Then their sin lay at their own door. How fully were they warned! and how basely did they reject the counsel of God against themselves!

The type of the potter's vessel, and its signification, 1—10. The inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem exhorted to repentance, 11; but on their refusal, (which is represented to be as unnatural as if a man should prefer the snowy Lebanon or barren rock to a fruitful plain, or other waters to the cool stream of the fountain,) their destruction is predicted, 12—17. In consequence of these plain reproofs and warnings of Jeremiah, a conspiracy is formed against him, 18. This leads him to appeal to God for his integrity, 19, 20; who puts a most dreadful curse in the mouth of His Prophet strongly indicative of the terrible fate of his enemies, 21—23.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVIII.

Verse 1. The word which came to Jeremiah] This Discourse is supposed to have been delivered some time in the reign of Jehoiakim; probably within the first three years.

Verse 2. Go down to the potter's house] By this similitude God shews the absolute state of dependence on Himself in which He has placed mankind. They are as clay in the hands of the potter; and, in reference to every thing here below, He can shape their destinies as He pleases. Again,—though while under the providential care of God they may go morally astray, and pervert themselves, yet they can be reclaimed by the almighty and all-wise Operator, and become such vessels as seemeth good for him to make. In considering this parable, we must take heed that in running parallels we do not destroy the free agency of man, nor disgrace the goodness and supremacy of God.

Verse 3. He wrought a work on the wheels.] על האבנים al ha-abenim, upon the stones; the potter's wheel being usually made of such; the spindle of the moving stone being placed on a stone below, on which it turned, and supported the stone above, on which the vessel was manufactured, and which alone had a rotatory motion. The potter's wheel, in the present day, seems to differ very little from that which was in use between two and three thousand years ago.

Verse 4. The vessel—was marred in the hand of the potter] It did not stand in the working: it got out of shape; or some gravel or small stone having been incorporated with the mass of clay, made a breach in that part where it was found; so that the potter was obliged to knead up the clay afresh, place it on the wheel, and form it anew; and then it was such a vessel as seemed good to the potter to make it.

Verse 6. Cannot I do with you as this potter?] Have I not a right to do with a people whom I have created, as reason and justice may require? If they do not answer my intentions,—may I not reject and destroy them? And act as this potter,—make a new vessel out of that which at first did not succeed in his hands.

It is generally supposed that St. Paul has made a very different use of this similitude from that mentioned above. See Rom. ix, 20, &c. His words are, Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour!—To this every sensible and pious man will answer, Undoubtedly he has. But, would any potter make an exceedingly fair and good vessel, on purpose to dash it to pieces when he had done? Surely, no! And would, or could, the God of infinite perfection and love make millions of immortal souls on purpose for eternal perdition, as the horrible decree of reprobation states? No! This is a lie against all the attributes of God. But does not the Text state that He can, out of the same lump, the same mass of human nature, make one vessel to honour, and another to dishonour? Yes. But the Text does not say what the horrible decree says, that he makes one part, and indeed the greater, for eternal perdition. But what then is the meaning of the Text? Why, evidently, this: As out of the same mass of clay a potter may make a flagon for the table, and a certain utensil for the chamber; the one for a more honourable, the other for a less honourable use; though both equally necessary to the owner; so God, out of the same flesh and blood, may make the tiller of the field, and the prophet of the Most High; the one in a more honourable, the other in a less honourable employ; yet both equally necessary in the world, and equally capable of bringing glory to God in their respective places. But if the vessel be marred in His hand, under His providential and gracious dealings, He may reject it as he did the Jews, and make another vessel such as He is pleased with of the Gentiles; yet even these marred vessels, the reprobate Jews, are not finally rejected; for all Israel shall be saved in (through) the Lord, i. e. Jesus Christ. And should the Gentiles act as the Jews have done, then they also shall be cut off; and God will call His Church by another name. See on Rom. ix, 21, and below.

Verses 7—10. At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, &c.—If that nation against whom, &c.—And at what instant, &c.—If that nation do evil, &c.] These verses contain what may be called God's decree, by which the whole of his conduct towards man is regulated. If He purpose destruction against an offending person, if that person repent and turn to God, he shall live, and not die.

11 Now therefore go to, speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I frame evil against you, and devise a device against you: [b] return ye now, every one from his evil way, and make your ways and your doings good.

12 And they said, [c] There is no hope: but we will walk after our own devices, and we will every one do the imagination of his evil heart.

13 Therefore thus saith the LORD; [d] Ask ye now among the heathen, who hath heard such things: the virgin of Israel hath done [e] a very horrible thing.

14 Will a man leave [f] the snow of Lebanon which cometh from the rock of the field? or shall the cold flowing waters that come from another place be forsaken?

15 Because my people hath forgotten [g] me, they have burned incense to [h] vanity, and they have caused them to stumble in their ways from the [i] ancient paths, to walk in paths, in a way not cast up;

18 Then said they, [p] Come, and let us devise devices against Jeremiah; [q] for the law shall not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet. Come, and let us smite him [r] with the tongue, and let us not give heed to any of his words.

19 Give heed to me, O LORD, and hearken to the voice of them that contend with me.

20 [s] Shall evil be recompensed for good? for [t] they have digged a pit for my soul. Remember that I stood before thee to speak good for them, and to turn away thy wrath from them.

22 Let a cry be heard from their houses, when thou shalt bring a troop suddenly upon them: for [y] they have digged a pit to take me, and hid snares for my feet.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIX.

Verse 1. Go, and get a potter's earthen bottle] This Discourse was also delivered some time in the reign of Jehoiakim. Under the type of breaking a potter's earthen bottle or jug, Jeremiah shews his enemies that the word of the Lord should stand; that Jerusalem should be taken and sacked, and they all carried into captivity.

Ancients of the priests] The chiefs of the twenty-four classes which David had established. See 1 Chron. xxiv, 4.

Verse 4. Estranged this place] Ye have devoted my Temple to a widely different purpose from that for which it was erected.

Verse 5. Offerings unto Baal] A general name for all the popular idols; Baal, Moloch, Ashtaroth, &c.

Verse 7. I will make void the counsel of Judah] Probably this refers to some determination made to proclaim themselves independent, and pay no more tribute to the Chaldeans.

To be meat for the fowls] See on chap. vii, 33.

hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss because of all the plagues thereof.

9 And I will cause them to eat the [a] flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.

10 [b] Then shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee,

11 And shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; [c] Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot [d] be made whole again: and they shall [e] bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury.

12 Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet:

13 And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled [f] as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose [g] roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and [h] have poured out drink offerings unto other gods.

14 Then came Jeremiah from Tophet, whither the LORD had sent him to prophesy; and he stood in [i] the court of the LORD's house, and said to all the people,

15 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon this city and upon all her towns all the evil that I have pronounced against it, because [k] they have hardened their necks, that they might not hear my words.

Verse 9. I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons] This was literally fulfilled when Jerusalem was besieged by the Romans. This also the prophet might have had in view.

Verse 11. Even so will I break this people and this city] The breaking of the bottle was the symbolical representation of the destruction of the city and of the state.

That cannot be made whole again] This seems to refer rather to the final destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, than to what was done by the Chaldeans. Jerusalem was healed after 70 years: but nearly 1800 years have elapsed since Jerusalem was taken and destroyed by the Romans; and it was then so broken, that it could not be made whole again.

Verse 12. And even make this city as Tophet. A place of slaughter and destruction.

Verse 14. Then came Jeremiah from Tophet] He had probably gone to the valley of Hinnom, and there repeated the Discourse which he had a little before delivered to the chief priests and elders.

Verse 15. Because they have hardened their necks] A metaphor taken from unruly and unbroken oxen, who resist the yoke, break and run away with their gears. So this people had broken and destroyed the yoke of the law.

CHAPTER XX.

Jeremiah, on account of his prophesying evil concerning Judah and Jerusalem, is beaten and imprisoned by Pashur, chief governor of the Temple, 1, 2. On the following day the Prophet is released, who denounces the awful judgments of God which should fall upon the governor and all his house, as well as upon the whole land of Judah, in the approaching Babylonish captivity, 3—6. Jeremiah then bitterly complains of the reproaches continually heaped upon him by his enemies; and, in his haste, resolves to speak no more in the name of Jehovah: but the word of the Lord is in his heart as a burning flame, so that he is not able to forbear, 7—10. The Prophet professes his trust in God, whom he praises for his late deliverance, 11—13. The remaining verses, which appear to be out of their place, contain Jeremiah's regret that he was ever born to a life of so much sorrow and trouble, 14—18. This complaint resembles that of Job; only it is milder, and more dolorous. This excites our pity, that our horror. Both are highly poetical, and embellished with every circumstance that can heighten the colouring. But such circumstances are not always to be too literally understood or explained. We must often make allowances for the strong figures of eastern poetry.

A. M. cir. 3397. B. C. cir. 607. Ol. XLIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 10.

NOW Pashur the son of [a] Immer the priest, who was also chief governor in the house of the LORD, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things.

2 Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the LORD.

3 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The LORD hath not called thy name Pashur, but [b] Magor-missabib.

4 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends: and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it: and I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword.

5 Moreover I [c] will deliver all the strength of this city, and all the labours thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah will I give into the hand of their enemies, which shall spoil them, and take them, and carry them to Babylon.

8 For since I spake, I cried out, [h] I cried violence and spoil; because the word of the LORD was made a reproach unto me, and a derision daily.

9 Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a [i] burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and [k] I could not stay.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XX.

Verse 1. Pashur—chief governor] Pashur was probably one of the chief priests of the twenty-four classes.

Verse 2. Put him in the stocks] Probably such a place near the gate, as we term the lock-up, the coal-hole; or, it may mean a sort of dungeon.

Verse 3. The LORD hath not called thy name Pashur] (Security on all sides.) This name thou hast had: but not by Divine appointment.

But Magor-missabib] (Fear on every side.) This name hath God given thee; because, in the course of His providence, thou shalt be placed in the circumstances signified by it; thou shalt be a terror to thyself.

Verse 6. And thou, Pashur—shall go into captivity] Thou shalt suffer for the false prophecies which thou hast delivered, and for thy insults to my prophet.

Verse 7. O LORD, thou hast deceived me] Thou hast promised me protection; and, lo! I am now delivered into the hands of my enemies. These words were probably spoken when Pashur smote him, and put him in prison.

I think our translation of this passage is very exceptionable. My Old Bible reads—Thou laddist me aside Lord; and I was lad aside.—The original word פתיתני pititani; thou hast pursued me; i. e. to go and prophesy to this people. I went, faithfully declared thy message; and now I am likely to perish by their cruelty. As the root פתה patah, signifies to persuade and allure, as well as to deceive, the above must be its meaning in this place. Taken as in our version it is highly irreverent. It is used in the same sense here as in Gen. ix, 27. God shall enlarge (persuade, margin,) Japhet; and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem.

Verse 8. I cried violence and spoil] This was the burden of the message Thou didst give me.

Verse 9. I will not make mention of him] I will renounce the prophetic office, and return to my house.

As a burning fire shut up in my bones] He felt stings of conscience for the hasty and disobedient resolution he had formed; he felt ashamed of his own weakness, that did not confide in the promise and strength of God; and God's word was in him as a strongly raging fire, and he was obliged to deliver it in order to get rid of the tortures which he felt from suppressing the solemn message which God had given. It is as dangerous to refuse to go when called, as it is to run without a call.

Verse 10. Report—and we will report it] Let us spread calumnies against him every where; or let us spread reports of dangers coming upon him that we may intimidate him, and cause him to desist.

halting, saying, Peradventure he will be enticed, and we shall prevail against him, and we shall take our revenge on him.

11 But [a] the LORD is with me as a mighty terrible one: therefore my persecutors shall stumble, and they shall not [b] prevail: they shall be greatly ashamed; for they shall not prosper: their [c] everlasting confusion shall never be forgotten.

12 But, O LORD of hosts, that [d] triest the righteous, and seest the reins and the heart, [e] let me see thy vengeance on them: for unto thee have I opened my cause.

13 Sing unto the LORD, praise ye the LORD: for [f] he hath delivered the soul of the poor from the hand of evil doers.

14 [g] Cursed be the day wherein I was born: let not the day wherein my mother bare me be blessed.

17 [k] Because he slew me not from the womb; or that my mother might have been my grave, and her womb to be always great with me.

Verse 11. But the LORD is with me as a mighty terrible one] Thus was he by his strong confidence in the strong God, delivered from all his fears, and was enabled to go on comfortably with his work.

Verse 13. Sing unto the LORD] He was so completely delivered from all fear, that although he remained in the same circumstances, yet he exults in the Divine protection, and does not fear the face of any adversary.

Verse 14. Cursed be the day wherein I was born] If we take these words literally, and suppose them to be in their proper place, they are utterly inconsistent with that state of confidence in which he exulted a few minutes before. If they are the language of Jeremiah, they must have been spoken on a prior occasion, when probably he had given way to a passionate hastiness. They might well comport with the state he was in ver. 9. I really believe these verses have got out of their proper place, which I conjecture to be between the eighth and ninth verses. There they will come in very properly; and might have been a part of his complaint in those moments when he had purposed to flee from God as did Jonah, and prophesy no more in His name. Transpositions in this prophet are frequent; therefore place these five verses after the eighth, and let the Chapter end with the thirteenth, and the whole will form a piece of exquisite poetry. Where the state of despair, and the hasty resolutions he had formed while under its influence, and the state of confidence to which he was raised by the succouring influence of God, will appear to be both illustrative of each other; and are touched with a delicacy and fervour, which even a cold heart must admire. See Job iii, 3, and the notes there. Both the passages are very similar.

Verse 15. A man-child is born] Borun is to thee a knave child.—Old MS. Bible. This is the Old English word for man or servant; and is so used by Wiclif, Rev. xii, 5.

Verse 16. And let him hear the cry] Let him be in continual alarms.

Verse 18. Wherefore came I forth] It would have been well had I never been born, as I have neither comfort in my life nor comfort in my work.

Nebuchadnezzar being come up against Jerusalem, Zedekiah sends Pashur and Zephaniah to the Prophet to request him to intercede with God in behalf of His people, 1, 2. But he is declared to be against Jerusalem, and the whole land of Judah; and the only mitigation of their punishment must proceed from their surrendering to the king of Babylon, 3—10. Prophecy concerning the house of the king of Judah, 11, 12. Notwithstanding the amazing fortifications round about Jerusalem, in which the people vainly trust, the Lord will most assuredly visit them for their iniquities; the city shall be taken by the Chaldeans, 13, 14.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, when king Zedekiah sent unto him [a] Pashur the son of Melchiah, and [b] Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying,

2 [c] Enquire, I pray thee, of the LORD for us; (for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon maketh war against us;) if so be that the LORD will deal with us according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

3 Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah:

4 Thus saith the LORD God of Israel; Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, and [d] I will assemble them into the midst of this city.

5 And I myself will fight against you with an [e] outstretched hand and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath.

6 And I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast: they shall die of a great pestilence.

7 And afterward, saith the LORD, [f] I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in this city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life: and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword; [g] he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.

8 And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, [h] I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 He that [i] abideth in this city shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall live, and [k] his life shall be unto him for a prey.

10 For I have [l] set my face against this city for evil, and not for good, saith the LORD: [m] it shall be given into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall [n] burn it with fire.

11 And touching the house of the king of Judah, say, Hear ye the word of the LORD;

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXI.

Verse 1. The word which came unto Jeremiah] The Chapters in the remaining parts of this prophecy seem strangely interchanged. This subject has been mentioned in the Introduction, and some Tables given; and to these the critical reader is entreated to refer. The Discourse here was delivered about the ninth year of the reign of Zedekiah. This Chapter, observes Dr. Blayney, contains the first of those prophecies which were delivered by Jeremiah, subsequent to the revolt of Zedekiah, and the breaking out of the war thereupon; and which are continued on to the taking of Jerusalem, related in chap. xxix, in the following order:—chap. xxi; xxxiv; xxxvii; xxxii; xxxiii; xxxviii; xxxix.

Pashur the son of Melchiah] There can be little doubt that this Pashur was a different person from him who was called the son of Immer, in the preceding Chapter.

Verse 2. Enquire, I pray thee] See whether God intends to deliver us into, or out of, the hand of the Chaldeans.

Verse 4. I will turn back the weapons] Every attempt you make to repel the Chaldeans shall be unsuccessful.

I will assemble them into the midst of this city.] I will deliver the city into their hands.

Verse 6. They shall die of a great pestilence.] The sword may appear to be that of man, though I have given the Chaldeans their commission: but the pestilence shall appear to be the immediate act of GOD.

Verse 7. Nebuchadrezzar] This name is spelt as above in twenty-six places of this book; and in ten places it is spelt Nebuchadnezzar, which is the common orthography. The difference is only a ר resh, for a נ nun: but the MSS. are various on this point. It is the same person who is intended by both names; and here all the Versions (except the Arabic, which omits the name,) have it in the usual form.

Verse 8. Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.] Meaning escape or destruction, in the present instance. This is explained in the next verse.

Verse 10. He shall burn it with fire.] What a heavy message to all; and especially to them who had any fear of God, or reverence for the Temple and its sacred services!

Verse 12. Execute judgment in the morning] Probably the time for dispensing judgment was the morning, when the people were going to their work: but the words may mean, do justice promptly, do not delay. Let justice be administered as soon as required.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

liver him that is spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go out like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

13 Behold, [a] I am against thee, O [b] inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain, saith the LORD; which say, [c] Who shall come down against us? or who shall enter into our habitations?

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

14 But I will [d] punish you according to the [e] fruit of your doings, saith the LORD: and I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof, and [f] it shall devour all things round about it.

[e] Prov. 1. 31. Isa. 3. 10, 11.——[f] 2 Chron. 36. 19. ch. 52. 13.

Verse 13. O inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain] Dr. Blayney translates:—O thou inhabitant of the levelled hollow of a rock. With all his explanation I cannot see the good sense of this translation. Jerusalem itself, though partly on two hills, was also extended in the valley; and Sion, the city of David, was properly a rock, strongly fortified both by nature and art; and by its ancient possessors, the Jebusites, was deemed impregnable.

Who shall come down against us?] Probably the words of those courtiers who had persuaded Zedekiah to rebel against the king of Babylon.

Verse 14. I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof] I shall send destruction into its centre, that shall spread to every part of the circumference, and so consume the whole.

The beginning of the thirty-fourth Chapter should follow here. See the arrangement on ver. 1.

CHAPTER XXII.

This section of prophecy, extending to the end of the eighth verse of the next Chapter, is addressed to the king of Judah and his people. It enjoins on them the practice of justice and equity, as they would hope to prosper, 1—4: but threatens them, in case of disobedience, with utter destruction, 5—9. The captivity of Shallum, the son of Josiah, is declared to be irreversible, 10—12; and the miserable and unlamented end of Jeconiah, contemptuously called Coniah, is foretold, 13—19. His family is threatened with the like captivity, and his seed declared to be for ever excluded from the throne, 20—30.

THUS saith the LORD; Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word,

2 And say, [a] Hear the word of the LORD, O king of Judah, that sittest upon the throne of David, thou, and thy servants, and thy people that enter in by these gates:

3 Thus saith the LORD; [b] Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor: and [c] do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place.

4 For if ye do this thing indeed, [d] then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting [e] upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, he, and his servants, and his people.

5 But if ye will not hear these words, [f] I swear by myself, saith the LORD, that this house shall become a desolation.

6 For thus saith the LORD unto the king's house of Judah; Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon: yet surely I will make thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXII.

Verse 1. Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word] This is supposed by Dahler to have been published in the first year of the reign of Zedekiah.

Verse 2. O king of Judah—thou, and thy servants] His ministers are here addressed, as chiefly governing the nation; and who had counselled Zedekiah to rebel.

Verse 6. Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon] Perhaps in allusion, says Dahler, to the oaks of Gilead, and the cedars of mount Lebanon, of which the palace was constructed. Lebanon was the highest mountain in 7 And I will prepare destroyers against thee, every one with his weapons: and they shall cut down [a] thy choice cedars, [b] and cast them into the fire.

8 And many nations shall pass by this city, and they shall say every man to his neighbour, [c] Wherefore hath the Lord done thus unto this great city?

9 Then they shall answer, [d] Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD their God, and worshipped other gods, and served them.

10 Weep ye not for [e] the dead, neither bemoan him: but weep sore for him [f] that goeth away: for he shall return no more, nor see his native country.

11 For thus saith the LORD touching [g] Shallum the son of Josiah king of Judah, which reigned instead of Josiah his father, [h] which went forth out of this place; He shall not return thither any more:

12 But he shall die in the place whither they have led him captive, and shall see this land no more.

13 [i] Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong; [k] that useth his neighbour's service without wages, and giveth him not for his work;

14 That saith, I will build me a wide house and [l] large chambers, and cutteth him out [m] windows; and it is ceiled with cedar, and painted with vermilion.

15 Shalt thou reign, because thou closest thyself in cedar? [n] did not thy father eat and drink, and do judgment and justice, and then [o] it was well with him?

16 He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then it was well with him: was not this to know me? saith the LORD.

17 [p] But thine eyes and thine heart are not but for thy covetousness, and for to shed innocent blood, and for oppression, and for [q] violence, to do it.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah; [r] They shall not lament for him, saying, [s] Ah my brother! or, Ah sister! they shall not lament for him, saying, Ah lord! or, Ah his glory!

19 [t] He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

Israel, and Gilead the richest and most fertile part of the country; and were, therefore, proper emblems of the reigning family. Though thou art the richest and most powerful, I, who raised thee up, can bring thee down and make thee a wilderness.

Verse 7. They shall cut down thy choice cedars] The destruction of the country is expressed under the symbol of the destruction of a fine forest:—a multitude of fellers come against it, each with his axe; and there being no resistance, every tree is soon felled to the earth. These destroyers, God says, I have prepared, (קדשתי kadashti,) I have sanctified;—consecrated them to this work. They have their commission from me.

Verse 8. Many nations shall pass] These words seem borrowed from Deut. xxix, 22, &c.

Verse 10. Weep ye not for the dead] Josiah, dead in consequence of the wounds he had received at Megiddo, in a battle with Pharaoh-Necho, king of Egypt: but he died in peace with God.

But weep sore for him that goeth away] Namely, Jehoahaz, the son of Josiah, called below Shallum; whom Pharaoh-Necho had carried captive into Egypt, from which it was prophesied he should never return, 2 Kings xxiii, 30—34. He was called Shallum before he ascended the throne, and Jehoahaz afterwards: so his brother Eliakim changed his name to Jehoiakim, and Mattaniah to Zedekiah.

Verse 13. Woe unto him that buildeth his house] These evils, charged against Jehoiakim, are no where else circumstantially related. We learn from 2 Kings xxiii, 35—37, that he taxed his subjects heavily, to give to Pharaoh-Necho, king of Egypt:—he exacted the silver and gold of the people of the land, and did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord. The mode of taxation is here intimated: he took the wages of the hireling, and caused the people to work without wages in his own buildings, &c.

Verse 15. Shalt thou reign, &c.] Dost thou think thou art a great king, because thou dwellest in a splendid palace!

Verse 18. They shall not lament for him, saying, Ah my brother!] These words were, no doubt, the commencement of some funeral dirge. Alas! a brother, who was our lord or governor, is gone. Alas, our sister!—his QUEEN, who has lost her glory in losing her husband. הדה hodah is feminine, and must refer to the glory of the queen.

Verse 19. With the burial of an ass] Cast out, and left unburied; or buried without any funeral solemnities.

22 The wind shall eat up all [c] thy pastors, and [d] thy lovers shall go into captivity: surely then shalt thou be ashamed and confounded for all thy wickedness.

23 O [e] inhabitant of Lebanon, that makest thy nest in the cedars, how gracious shalt thou be when pangs come upon thee, [f] the pain as of a woman in travail!

24 As I live, saith the LORD, [g] though Coniah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah [h] were the signet upon my right hand, yet would I pluck thee thence;

Verse 20. Go up to Lebanon] Probably Antilibanus, which, together with Bashan and Abarim, which we here translate passages, were on the way by which the captives should be led out of their own country.

Verse 21. I spake unto thee in thy prosperity] In all states and circumstances I warned thee by my prophets;—and thou wilt only be ashamed of thy conduct when thou shalt be stripped of all thy excellencies, and reduced to poverty and disgrace, ver. 22.

Verse 22. The wind shall eat up all thy pastors] A blast from God's mouth shall carry off thy kings, princes, prophets, and priests.

Verse 23. How gracious shalt thou be] A strong irony.

Verse 24. Though Coniah] Called Jeconiah, probably on ascending the throne. See on ver. 10.

The signet upon my right hand] The most precious seal, ring, or armlet. Though dearer to me than the most splendid gem to its possessor.

Verse 26. I will cast thee out, and thy mother] See all this fulfilled, 2 Kings xxiv, 12, 13. All were carried by Nebuchadnezzar into captivity together.

Verse 28. Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol?] These are probably the exclamations of the people, when they heard those solemn denunciations against their king and their country.

Verse 29. O earth] These are the words of the prophet in reply:—O land! unhappy land! desolated land! Hear the judgment of the Lord!

Verse 30. Write ye this man childless] Though he had seven sons, 1 Chron. iii, 17; yet, having no successor, he is to be entered on the genealogical tables as one without children; for none of his posterity ever sat on the throne of David.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Sequel of the Discourse which commenced in the preceding Chapter. The Prophet denounces vengeance against the pastors of Israel who have scattered and destroyed the flock of the Lord, 1, 2. He concludes with gracious promises of deliverance from the Babylonish captivity, and of better times under the Messiah, when the converts to Christianity, who are the true Israel of God, shadowed forth by the old dispensation, shall be delivered, by the glorious light of the gospel, from worse than Chaldean bondage, from the captivity of sin and death. But this prophecy will not have its fullest accomplishment till that period arrives which is fixed in the Divine counsel for the restoration of Israel and Judah from their various dispersions, of which their deliverance from the Chaldean domination was a type; when Jesus the Christ, the righteous Branch, the Root and the offspring of David, and the only legitimate Heir to the throne, shall take unto Himself His great power, and reign gloriously over the whole House of Jacob, 3—8. At the ninth verse a new Discourse commences. Jeremiah expresses his horror at the great wickedness of the priests and prophets of Judah, and declares that the Divine vengeance is hanging over them. He exhorts the people not to listen to their false promises, 9—22; and predicts the utter ruin that shall fall upon all pretenders to inspiration, 23—32, as well as upon all scoffers at true prophecy, 33—40.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIII.

Verse 1. Woe be unto the pastors] There shall a curse fall on the kings, princes, priests, and prophets; who, by their vicious conduct and example, have brought desolation upon the people.

Verse 2. Ye have scattered my flock] The bad government both in church and state was a principal cause of the people's profligacy.

Verse 5. I will raise unto David a righteous Branch] As there has been no age, from the Babylonish captivity to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, in which such a state of prosperity existed, and no king or governor who could answer at all to the character here given, the passage has been understood to refer to our blessed Lord, Jesus Christ, who was a branch out of the stem of Jesse;—a righteous King;—by the power of His Spirit and influence of His religion reigning, prospering, and executing judgment and justice in the earth.

Verse 6. In his days Judah shall be saved] The real Jew is not one that has his circumcision in the flesh, but in the spirit. The real Israel are true believers in Christ Jesus; and the genuine Jerusalem is the church of the Firstborn, and made free, with all her children, from the bondage of sin, Satan, death, and hell. All these exist only in the days of the Messiah. All that went before were the types, or significators, of these glorious gospel excellencies.

And this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.] I shall give the Hebrew Text of this important passage: וזה שמו אשר יקראו יהוה צדקנו ve-zeh shemo asher yikreu yehovah tsidkenu, which the Septuagint translate as follows,—Και τουτο το ονομα αυτου ὃ καλεσει αυτον Κυριος, Ιωσεδεκ, And this is his name which the Lord shall call him, Josedek.

Dahler translates the text thus:—

Et voici le nom dont on l'appellera:
L'Eternel, Auteur de notre felicité.

"And this is the name by which He shall be called; The Lord, the Author of our happiness."

Dr. Blayney seems to follow the Septuagint: he translates thus,—"And this is the name by which Jehovah shall call him, OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."

In my old MS. Bible, the first English translation ever made, it is thus:—And this is the name that thei schul clepen him: oure rigtwise Lord.

Coverdale's, the first English translation of the Scriptures ever printed, (1535) has translated thus:—And this is the name that they shall call him: even the Lord oure rightuous Maker.

Matthews, (1549) and Becke, (1549) follow Coverdale literally: but our present translation of the clause is borrowed from Cardmarden, (Rouen, 1566)—even the Lord our righteousness.

Dr. Blayney thus accounts for his translation:—"Literally, according to the Hebrew idiom,—And this is his name by which Jehovah shall call, our Righteousness; a phrase exactly the same as, 'And Jehovah shall call him so;' which implies that God would make Him such as He called Him, that is, our Righteousness, or the Author and Means of our salvation and acceptance. So that by the same metonymy Christ is said to 'have been made of God unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption,' 1 Cor. i, 30.

"I doubt not that some persons will be offended with me for depriving them by this translation of a favourite argument for proving the Divinity of our Saviour from the Old Testament. But I cannot help it: I have done it with no ill design: but purely because I think, and am morally sure, that the Text, as it stands, will not properly admit of any other construction. The Septuagint have so translated before me in an age when there could not possibly be any bias or prejudice either for or against the forementioned doctrine,—a doctrine which draws its decisive proofs from the New Testament only."

Dahler paraphrases,—"This Prince shall be surnamed by His people, The Lord, the Author of our happiness. The people shall feel themselves happy under Him; and shall express their gratitude to Him."

I am satisfied that both the translation from Cardmarden downwards, and the meaning put on these words, are incorrect. I prefer the translation of Blayney to all others; and that it speaks any thing about the imputed righteousness of Christ, cannot possibly be proved by any man who understands the original Text. As to those who put the sense of their creed upon the words, they must be content to stand out of the list of Hebrew critics. I believe Jesus to be Jehovah: but I doubt much whether this text calls Him so. No doctrine so vitally important should be rested on an interpretation so dubious and unsupported by the Text. That all our righteousness, holiness, and goodness, as well as the whole of our salvation, come by HIM, from HIM, and through HIM, is fully evident from the Scriptures: but this is not one of the passages that support this most important truth.

Verse 7. The LORD liveth, which brought up] See on chap. xvi, 14, 15.

Verse 9. Mine heart within me is broken because of the prophets] The first word of this clause is לנבאים le-nebiim, which we incorporate with the whole clause, and translate, —Because of the prophets. But as a new prophecy begins here, it is evident that the word is the title to this prophecy; and is thus distinguished both by Blayney and Dahler,—CONCERNING THE PROPHETS. This Discourse was delivered probably in the reign of Jehoiakim.

All my bones shake] He was terrified even by his own message, and shocked at the profanity of the false prophets.

Verse 10. The land is full of adulterers] Of idolaters. Of persons who break their faith to ME; as an impure wife does to her husband.

The pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up] He speaks here, most probably, in reference to dearth. Profane oaths, false swearing, evil courses, violence, &c., had provoked God to send this among other judgments, see ver. 19.

Verse 11. In my house] They had even introduced idolatry into the Temple of God!

Verse 13. I have seen folly in the prophets of Samaria] This was not to be wondered at, for their religion was a system of corruption.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts concerning the prophets; Behold, I will feed them with [g] wormwood, and make them drink the water of gall: for from the prophets of Jerusalem is [h] profaneness gone forth into all the land.

16 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you: they make you vain: [i] they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the LORD.

17 They say still unto them that despise me, The LORD hath said, [k] Ye shall have peace; and they say unto every one that walketh after the [l] imagination of his own heart, [m] No evil shall come upon you.

18 For [n] who hath stood in the [o] counsel of the LORD, and hath perceived and heard his word? who hath marked his word, and heard it?

Verse 14. I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem] That is, the prophets of Jerusalem, while professing a pure faith, have followed the ways, and become as corrupt, as the prophets of Samaria.

They are all of them unto me as Sodom] Incorrigible, brutish, sinners; who will as surely be destroyed as Sodom and Gomorrah were.

Verse 20. In the latter days ye shall consider it] I give you warning: and this punishment which I now threaten shall surely take place;—a short time will determine it,—ye shall not escape.

Verse 21. I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran] Not to save souls,—but to profit themselves.

I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied] They never received the word at my mouth; yet they went, publishing their own deceits, and pretending them to be revelations from God. The churches which have legal emoluments, are ever in danger of being overrun and ruined by worldly and self-interested priests.

Verse 23. Am I a God at hand,—and not a God afar off?] You act as if you thought I could not see you! Am I not omnipresent! Do I not fill the heavens and the earth? ver. 24.

Verse 27. By their dreams] Dreams were anciently reputed as a species of inspiration, see Numb. xii, 6. 1 Sam. xxviii, 6. Joel iii, 1. Dan. vii, 1. In the Book of Genesis we find many examples: and although many mistook the workings of their own vain imaginations in sleep for revelations from God; yet He has often revealed Himself in this way: but such dreams were easily distinguished from the others. They were always such as had no connexion with the gratification of the flesh; they were such as contained warnings against sin, and excitements to holiness; they were always consecutive,—well connected; with a proper beginning and ending,—such as possessed the intellect more than the imagination. Of such dreams the Lord says, (ver. 28,) The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream,—permit him to shew what he has thus received from the Lord:—but let him tell it as a dream; and speak my word faithfully, lest he may have been deceived.

Verse 28. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the LORD.] Do not mingle these equivocal matters with positive revelations. Do not consider a dream, even from a prophet, as that positive inspiration which my prophets receive when their reason, judgment, and spiritual feelings, are all in full and in regular exercise. Mix none of your own devices with my doctrines.

Verse 29. Is not my word like as a fire?] It enlightens, warms, and penetrates, every part. When it is communicated to the true prophet, it is like a fire shut up in his bones; he cannot retain it,—he must publish it: and when published, it is like a hammer that breaks the rock in pieces, it is ever accompanied by a Divine power, that causes both sinner and saint to feel its weight and importance.

In the original words there is something singular: הלוא כה דברי כאש halo coh debari ka-esh, Is not thus my word like fire? I suspect, with Dr. Blayney, that כה coh, thus, was formerly written כח coach, strength, or power; and so it was understood by the Targumist: Are not all my words strong like fire? and probably the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews read it thus, and had it in view when he wrote —For the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, Heb. iv, 12. This admitted, the Text would read, Is not my word powerful, like fire? or, Is not the power of my word like fire? But however we understand the words, let us take heed lest we think, as some have thought and affirmed, that the Sacred Writings are quite sufficient of themselves to enlighten, convince, and convert, the soul, and there is no need of the Holy Spirit. Fire itself must be applied by an agent, in order to produce its effects:—and surely the hammer cannot break the rock in pieces unless wielded by an able workman. And it is God's Spirit alone that can thus apply it: for we find it frequently read, and frequently spoken, without producing any salutary effects. And by this very thing the true preachers of the word of God may be distinguished from the false, non-commissioned ones,—those who run, though they are not sent, ver. 21. The word of him who has his commission from heaven, shall be as a fire, and as a hammer;—sinners shall be convinced and converted to God by it. But the others, though they steal the word from their neighbour,—borrow, or pilfer, a good sermon; yet they do not profit the people at all, because God did not send them, ver. 32; for the power of God does not in their ministry accompany the word.

There may be an allusion to the practice in some mining countries, of roasting stones containing ore, before they are subjected to the hammer, in order to pulverize them. In Cornwall I have seen them roast the tin stones in the fire before they placed them under the action of the hammers in the stamp mill. The fire separated the arsenic from the ore, and then they were easily reduced to powder by the hammers of the mill; afterwards, washing the mass with water, the grains of tin sunk to the bottom, while the lighter parts went off with the water, and thus the metal was procured clean and pure. If this be the allusion, it is very appropriate.

Verse 30. I am against the prophets] Three cases are mentioned here which excited God's disapprobation. 1. The prophets who stole the word from their neighbour; who, associated with the true prophets, got some intelligence from them; and then went and published it as a revelation which themselves had received, ver. 30. 2. The prophets who used their tongues; הלקחים לשונם ha-lokechim leshonam, who lick, or smooth with their tongues; gave their own counsels as Divine revelations, flattering them in their sins, and promising peace, when God had not spoken; and prefaced them, Thus saith the Lord, ver. 31. 3. The prophets who made up false stories, which they termed prophecies, revealed to them in dreams; and thus caused the people to err, ver. 32.

manded them: therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the LORD.

33 And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, What is [a] the burden of the LORD? thou shalt then say unto them, What burden? [b] I will even forsake you, saith the LORD.

34 And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say, The burden of the LORD; I will even [c] punish that man and his house.

35 Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbour, and every one to his brother, What hath the LORD answered? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

36 And the burden of the LORD shall ye mention no more: for every man's word shall be his burden: for ye have perverted the words of the living God, of the LORD of hosts our God.

37 Thus shalt thou say to the prophet, What hath the LORD answered thee? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

38 But since ye say, The burden of the LORD; therefore thus saith the LORD; Because ye say this word, The burden of the LORD, and I have sent unto you, saying, Ye shall not say, The burden of the LORD;

39 Therefore, behold, I, even I, [d] will utterly forget you, and [e] I will forsake you, and the city that I gave you and your fathers, and cast you out of my presence:

40 And I will bring [f] an everlasting reproach upon you, and a perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten.

[d] Hos. 4. 6.——[e] Ver. 33.——[f] Ch. 20. 11.

Verse 33. What is the burden of the LORD?] The word משא massa, here used, signifies burden, oracle, prophetic discourse; and is used by almost every prophet. But the persons in the Text appear to have been mockers. "Where is this burden of the Lord?"—"What is the burden now?" To this insolent question the prophet answers in the following verses.

I will even forsake you] I will punish the prophet, the priest, and the people, that speak thus, ver. 34. Here are burdens.

Verse 36. Every man's word shall be his burden] Ye say that all God's messages are burdens, and to you they shall be such: whereas, had you used them as you ought, they would have been blessings to you.

For ye have perverted the words of the living God] And thus have sinned against your own souls.

Verse 39. I will utterly forget you, and I will forsake you, and the city] Dr. Blayney translates:—I will both take you up altogether; and I will cast you off together with the city. Ye are a burden to me: but I will take you up, and then cast you off. I will do with you as a man who, weary with his burden, will cast it off his shoulders, and bear it no more.

Verse 40. I will bring an everlasting reproach upon you] And this reproach of having rebelled against so good a God, and rejected so powerful a Saviour, follows them to this day through all their dispersions, in every part of the habitable earth. The word of the Lord cannot fail.

Under the emblem of the good and bad figs is represented the fate of the Jews already gone into captivity with Jeconiah, and of those that remained still in their own country with Zedekiah. Verse 1. The LORD shewed me, and, behold, two baskets of figs] Besides the transposition of whole Chapters in this Book, there is not unfrequently a transposition of verses, Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon.

2 One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe; and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, [a] they were so bad.

3 Then said the LORD unto me, What seest thou, Jeremiah? And I said, figs; the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

4 Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge [b] them that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good.

6 For I will set mine eyes upon them for good, and [c] I will bring them again to this land: and [d] I will build them, and not pull them down; and I will plant them, and not pluck them up.

7 And I will give them [e] a heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be [f] my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me [g] with their whole heart.

8 And as the evil [h] figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that remain in this land, and [i] them that dwell in the land of Egypt:

9 And I will deliver them [k] to [l] be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, [m] to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt [n] and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them.

10 And I will send the sword, the famine, and the pestilence among them, till they be consumed from off the land that I gave unto them and to their fathers.

and parts of verses. Of this we have an instance in the verse before us; the first clause of which should be the last. Thus:—

"After that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon had carried away captive Jeconiah, the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon, the Lord shewed me, and, behold, two baskets of figs were set before the Temple of the Lord.

Ver. 2. One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe; and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, they were so bad."

This arrangement restores these verses to better sense, by restoring the natural connexion.

This prophecy was undoubtedly delivered in the first year of the reign of Zedekiah.

Under the type of good and bad figs, God represents the state of the persons who had already been carried captives into Babylon, with their king Jeconiah, compared with the state of those who should be carried away with Zedekiah. Those already carried away, being the choice of the people, are represented by the good figs: those now remaining, and soon to be carried into captivity, are represented by the bad figs, that were good for nothing. The state also of the former in their captivity was vastly preferable to the state of those which were now about to be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon. The latter would be treated as doubly rebels; the former, being the most respectable of the inhabitants, were treated well; and even in captivity, a marked distinction should be made between them; God ordering it so. But the prophet sufficiently explains his own meaning.

Verse 1. Set before the temple] As an offering of the first fruits of that kind.

Verse 2. Very good figs] Or, figs of the early sort. The fig trees in Palestine, says Dr. Shaw, produce fruit thrice each year. The first sort called boccore, (those here mentioned,) come to perfection about the middle or end of June. The second sort, called kermez, or summer fig, is seldom ripe before August. And the third, which is called the winter fig, which is larger and of a darker complexion than the preceding, hangs all the winter on the tree, ripening even when the leaves are shed, and is fit for gathering in the beginning of Spring.

Could not be eaten] The winter fig,—then in its crude or unripe state; the spring not being yet come.

Verse 5. Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge] Those already carried away into captivity, I esteem as far more excellent than those who still remain in the land. They have not sinned so deeply, and they are now penitent; and, therefore, I will set mine eyes upon them for good, ver. 6. I will watch over them by an especial Providence, and they shall be restored to their own land.

Verse 7. They shall be my people] I will renew my covenant with them, for they will return to me with their whole heart.

Verse 8. So will I give Zedekiah] I will treat these as they deserve. They shall be carried into captivity, and scattered through all nations. Multitudes of those never returned to Judea; the others returned at the end of seventy years.

Verse 10. I will send the sword] Many of them fell by sword and famine in the war with the Chaldeans; and many more, by such means afterwards. The first received their captivity as a correction, and turned to God: the latter still hardened their hearts more and more; and probably very few of them ever returned, and perhaps are amalgamated with Heathen nations at present. Lord, how long!

CHAPTER XXV.

This Chapter contains a summary of the judgments denounced by Jeremiah against Judah, Babylon, and many other nations. It begins with reproving the Jews for disobeying the calls of God to repentance, 1—7; on which account their captivity, with that of other neighbouring nations, during seventy years, is foretold, 8—11. At the expiration of that period, (computing from the invasion of Nebuchadnezzar in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, to the famous edict of the first year of Cyrus,) an end was to be put to the Babylonian empire, 12—14. All this is again declared by the emblem of that cup of wrath which the Prophet, as it should seem in a vision, tendered to all the nations which he enumerates, 15—29. And, for further confirmation, it is a third time repeated in a very beautiful and elevated strain of poetry, 30—38. The talent of diversifying the ideas, images, and language, even when the subject is the same, or nearly so, appears no where in such perfection as among the sacred poets.

3 [b] From the thirteenth year of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, even unto this day, that is the three and twentieth year, the word of the LORD hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; [c] but ye have not hearkened.

4 And the LORD hath sent unto you all his servants the prophets, [d] rising early and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear.

6 And go not after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands; and I will do you no hurt.

7 Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the LORD; that ye might [f] provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXV.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah—in the fourth year] This prophecy, we see, was delivered the fourth year of Jehoiakim; and the Chapter that contains it is utterly out of its place. It should be between the xxxvth and xxxvith. The defeat of the Egyptians by Nebuchadnezzar at Carchemish, and the subsequent taking of Jerusalem, took place in this year, viz. the fourth year of Jehoiakim.

The first year of Nebuchadrezzar] This king was associated with his father two years before the death of the latter. The Jews reckon his reign from this time; and this was the first of those two years: but the Chaldeans date the commencement of his reign two years later, viz. at the death of his father.

Verse 7. That ye might provoke] Ye would not hearken: but chose to provoke me to anger.

A. M. 3397. B. C. 607. Ol. XLIII. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 10.

the nations, [a] he will plead with all flesh; he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the LORD.

32 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and [b] a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

33 [c] And the slain of the LORD shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth: they shall not be [d] lamented, [e] neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground.

34 [f] Howl, ye shepherds, and cry; and wallow yourselves in the ashes, ye principal of the flock: for [g] the days of your slaughter and of your dispersions are accomplished; and ye shall fall like [h] a pleasant vessel.

A. M. 3397. B. C. 607. Ol. XLIII. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 10.

35 And [i] the shepherds shall have no way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to escape.

36 A voice of the cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock, shall be heard: for the LORD hath spoiled their pasture.

37 And the peaceable habitations are cut down because of the fierce anger of the LORD.

38 He hath forsaken [k] his covert, as the lion: for their land is [l] desolate because of the fierceness of the oppressor, and because of his fierce anger.

Verse 33. From one end of the earth] From one end of the land to the other. All Palestine shall be desolated by it.

Verse 34. Howl, ye shepherds] Ye kings and chiefs of the people.

Ye shall fall like a pleasant vessel] As a fall will break and utterly ruin a precious vessel of crystal, agate, &c., so your overthrow will be to you irreparable ruin.

Verse 38. As the lion] Leaving the banks of Jordan when overflowed, and coming with ravening fierceness to the champaign country.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Jeremiah, by the command of God, goes into the court of the Lord's house; and foretels the destruction of the Temple and city, if not prevented by the speedy repentance of the people, 1—7. By this unwelcome prophecy his life was in great danger; although saved by the influence of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, who makes a masterly defence for the Prophet, 8—18. Urijah is condemned, but escapes to Egypt; whence he is brought back by Jehoiakim, and slain, 20—23. Ahikam befriends Jeremiah, 24.

IN the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, came this word from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD; Stand in [a] the court of the LORD's house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in the LORD's house, [b] all the words that I command thee to speak unto them; [c] diminish not a word:

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVI.

Verse 1. In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim] As this prophecy must have been delivered in the first or second year of the reign of Jehoiakim, it is totally out of its place here. Dr. Blayney puts it before the xxxvith; and Dr. Dahler immediately after chap. ix, and before chap. xlvi.

A. M. 3394. B. C. 610. Ol. XLII. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 7.

4 And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD; [a] If ye will not hearken to me to walk in my law, which I have set before you,

5 To hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, [b] whom I sent unto you, both rising up early, and sending them, but ye have not hearkened;

6 Then will I make this house like [c] Shiloh, and will make this city [d] a curse to all the nations of the earth.

7 So the priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD.

8 Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die.

9 Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

10 When the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat down [e] in the entry of the new gate of the LORD's house.

11 Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes and to all the people, saying, [f] This man is worthy to die; [g] for he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears.

12 Then spake Jeremiah unto all the princes and to all the people, saying, The LORD sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words that ye have heard.

A. M. 3394. B. C. 610. Ol. XLII. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 7.

13 Therefore now [h] amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the LORD your God; and the LORD will [i] repent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you.

14 As for me, behold, [k] I am in your hand: do with me [l] as seemeth good and meet unto you.

15 But know ye for certain, that if ye put me to death, ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof: for of a truth the LORD hath sent me unto you to speak all these words in your ears.

16 Then said the princes and all the people unto the priests and to the prophets; This man is not worthy to die: for he hath spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.

17 [m] Then rose up certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly of the people, saying,

18 [n] Micah the Morasthite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spake to all the people of Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; [o] Zion shall be plowed like a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest.

19 Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him at all to death? [p] did he not fear the LORD, and besought [q] the LORD, and the LORD [r] repented him of the evil which he had pro-

Verse 4. If ye will not hearken] This and several of the following verses are nearly the same with those in chap. vii, ver. 13, &c. where see the Notes.

Verse 8. And all the people] That were in company with the priests and the prophets.

Verse 10. The princes of Judah] The king's court; his cabinet counsellors.

Verse 12. The LORD sent me to prophesy] My commission is from Him; and my words are His own. I sought not this painful office. I did not run before I was sent.

Verse 13. Therefore now amend your ways] If ye wish to escape the judgment which I have predicted, turn to God, and iniquity shall not be your ruin.

Verse 14. As for me, behold, I am in your hand] I am the messenger of God; ye may do with me what you please: but if ye slay me, ye will bring innocent blood upon you.

Verse 16. This man is not worthy to die] The whole court acquitted him.

Verse 17. Certain of the elders] This is really a fine defence, and the argument was perfectly conclusive. Some think that it was Ahikam who undertook the prophet's defence.

Verse 18. Micah the Morasthite] The same as stands among the prophets. Now all these prophesied as hard things against the land as Jeremiah has done; yet they were not put to death, for the people saw that they were sent of God.

A. M. 3394. B. C. 610. Ol. XLII. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 7.

nounced against them? [a] Thus might we procure great evil against our souls.

20 And there was also a man that prophesied in the name of the LORD, Urijah the son of Shemaiah of Kirjath-jearim, who prophesied against this city and against this land according to all the words of Jeremiah:

21 And when Jehoiakim the king, with all his mighty men, and all the princes, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death: but when Urijah heard it, he was afraid, and fled, and went into Egypt;

22 And Jehoiakim the king sent men into Egypt, namely Elnathan the son of Achbor, and certain men with him into Egypt.

A. M. 3394. B. C. 610. Ol. XLII. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 7.

23 And they fetched forth Urijah out of Egypt, and brought him unto Jehoiakim the king; who slew him with the sword, and cast his dead body into the graves of the [b] common people.

24 Nevertheless [c] the hand of Ahikam the son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah, that they should not give him into the hand of the people to put him to death.

[c] 2 Kings 22. 12, 14. ch. 39. 14.

Verse 20. Urijah—who prophesied] The process against Jeremiah is finished at the nineteenth verse, and the case of Urijah is next brought on, for he was also to be tried for his life: but hearing of it he fled to Egypt. He was however condemned in his absence; and the king sent to Egypt, and brought him thence and slew him, and caused him to have an ignominious burial, ver. 21—23.

Verse 24. The hand of Ahikam—was with Jeremiah] And it was probably by his influence, that Jeremiah did not share the same fate with Urijah. Ahikam mentioned here, was probably the same as was father of Gedaliah, who, after the capture of Jerusalem, was appointed governor of the country by Nebuchadnezzar, chap. xl, 5. Of the prophet Urijah, whether he was true or false, we know nothing but what we learn from this place.

That they should not give him into the hand of the people] Though acquitted in the supreme court, he was not out of danger: there was a popular prejudice against him; and it is likely that Ahikam was obliged to conceal him, that they might not put him to death. The genuine ministers of God have no favour to expect from those who are His enemies.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Ambassadors being come from several neighbouring nations to solicit the king of Judah to join in a confederacy against the king of Babylon, Jeremiah is commanded to put bands and yokes upon his neck, (the emblems of subjection and slavery,) and to send them afterwards by those ambassadors to their respective princes; intimating, by this significant type, that God had decreed their subjection to the Babylonian empire, and that it was their wisdom to submit. It is further declared that all the conquered nations should remain in subjection to the Chaldeans during the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, and those of his son and grandson, even till the arrival of that period in which the Babylonians shall have filled up the measure of their iniquities; and that then the mighty Chaldean monarchy itself, for a certain period the paramount power of the habitable globe, shall be visited with a dreadful storm of Divine wrath, through the violence of which it shall be dashed to pieces like a potter's vessel, the fragments falling into the hands of many nations and great kings, 1—11. Zedekiah, particularly, is admonished not to join in the revolt against Nebuchadnezzar, and warned against trusting to the suggestions of false prophets, 11—18. The Chapter concludes with foretelling that what still remained of the sacred vessels of the Temple should be carried to Babylon, and not restored till after the destruction of the Chaldean empire, 19—22.

IN the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah [a] king of Judah, came this word unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Thus [b] saith the LORD to me; Make thee bonds and yokes, [c] and put them upon thy neck,

3 And send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah;

4 And command them [d] to say unto their masters, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say unto your masters;

5 [e] I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and [f] have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me.

6 [g] And now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, [h] my servant: and [i] the beasts of the field have I given him also to serve him.

7 [k] And all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, [l] until the very time of his land come: [m] and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him.

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. Ol. XLVI. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 22.

8 And it shall come to pass, that the nation and kingdom which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, that nation will I punish, saith the LORD, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence, until I have consumed them by his hand.

9 Therefore hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners, nor to your [n] dreamers, nor to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon:

10 [o] For they prophesy a lie unto you, to [p] remove you far from your land; and that I should drive you out, and ye should perish.

11 But the nations that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him, those will I let remain still in their own land,

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVII.

Verse 1. In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim] It is most evident that this prophecy was delivered about the fourth year of ZEDEKIAH, and not Jehoiakim, as in the Text. See chap. xxviii, 1. Three of Kennicott's MSS. (one in the text, a second in the margin, and the third upon a rasure,) have Zedekiah; so likewise have the Syriac and the Arabic. Houbigant, Lowth, Blayney, Dahler, and others, declare for this reading, against that in the present Text. And it is clear from the third and twelfth verses, where Zedekiah is expressly mentioned, that this is the true reading.

Verse 2. Make thee bonds and yokes] Probably yokes with straps, by which they were attached to the neck. This was a symbolical action, to shew that the several kings mentioned below should be brought under the dominion of the Chaldeans.

Verse 5. I have made the earth] I am the Creator and Governor of all things; and I dispose of the several kingdoms of the world as seemeth best to me.

Verse 6. And now have I given] These kingdoms are at my sovereign disposal; and at present for the punishment of their rulers and people, I shall give them into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon.

Verse 7. And all nations shall serve him, (Nebuchadnezzar) and his son, (Evil-merodach, chap. lii, 31,) and his son's son, (Belshazzar, Dan. v, 11.)] All which was literally fulfilled.

Verse 9. Therefore hearken not ye to your prophets] Who pretend to have a revelation from heaven.

Nor to your diviners] קסמיכם kosmeycem, from קסם kasam, to presage, or prognosticate. Persons who guessed at futurity by certain signs in animate or inanimate creation.

Nor to your dreamers] חלמתיכם chalameteycem, from כלם chalam, to break in pieces; hence, חלים chalom, a dream, because it consists of broken fragments. Dream-interpreters; who, from these broken shreds, patch up a meaning by their own interpolations.

Nor to your enchanters] ענניכם ôneneycem, from ענן ânan, a cloud,—cloud-mongers. Diviners by the flight, colour, density, rarity, and shape, of clouds.

Nor to your sorcerers] כשפיכם keshapheycem, from כשף kashaph, to discover;—the discoverers, the finders out of hidden things, stolen goods, &c. Persons also who use incantations; and either by spells or drugs pretend to find out mysteries, or produce supernatural effects. Every nation in the world had persons who pretended to find out hidden things, or foretel future events; and such were gladly encouraged by the ignorant multitude; and many of them were mere apes of the prophets of God. Man knows that he is saith the LORD; and they shall till it, and dwell therein.

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. Ol. XLVI. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 22.

12 I spake also to [a] Zedekiah king of Judah according to all these words, saying, Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people and live.

13 [b] Why will ye die, thou and thy people, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as the LORD hath spoken against the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon?

14 Therefore hearken not unto the words of the prophets that speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon: for they prophesy [c] a lie unto you.

15 For I have not sent them, saith the LORD, yet they prophesy [d] a lie in my name; that I may drive you out, and that ye might perish, ye, and the prophets that prophesy unto you.

16 Also I spake to the priests and to all this people, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Hearken not to the words of your prophets that prophesy unto you, saying, Behold, [e] the vessels of the LORD's house shall now shortly be brought again from Babylon: for they prophesy a lie unto you.

17 Hearken not unto them; serve the king of Babylon, and live: wherefore should this city be laid waste?

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. Ol. XLVI. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 22.

18 But if they be prophets, and if the word of the LORD be with them, let them now make intercession to the LORD of hosts, that the vessels which are left in the house of the LORD, and in the house of the king of Judah, and of Jerusalem, go not to Babylon.

19 For thus saith the LORD of hosts [f] concerning the pillars, and concerning the sea, and concerning the bases, and concerning the residue of the vessels that remain in this city,

20 Which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took not, when he carried away [g] captive Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah from Jerusalem to Babylon, and all the nobles of Judah and Jerusalem;

21 Yea, thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel concerning the vessels that remain in the house of the LORD, and in the house of the king of Judah and of Jerusalem;

22 They shall be [h] carried to Babylon, and there shall they be until the day that I [i] visit them, saith the LORD; then [k] will I bring them up, and restore them to this place.

short-sighted,—feels pain at the uncertainty of futurity, and wishes to have his doubts resolved by such persons as the above, to put an end to his uncertainty.

Verse 13. Why will ye die] If ye resist the king of Babylon, to whom I have given a commission against you, ye shall be destroyed by the sword and by famine: but if ye submit, ye shall escape all these evils.

Verse 16. The vessels of the LORD's house] Which had been carried away by Nebuchadnezzar under the reigns of Jehoiakim and Jeconiah, 2 Chron. xxxvi, 7—10.

Shall now shortly be brought again] This is a lie. They shall not be restored till I bring them up, ver. 22, which was after the captivity; when they were sent back by Cyrus, the Lord inclining his heart to do it, Ezra i, 7, and vii, 19.

Verse 19. Concerning the pillars] Two brazen columns placed by Solomon in the pronaos, or portico of the Temple, eighteen cubits high, and twelve in circumference, 1 Kings vii, 15—22. Jer. lii, 11.

The sea] The brazen sea, ten cubits in diameter, and thirty in circumference. It contained water for different washings in the Divine worship, and was supported on twelve brazen oxen. Perhaps these are what are called the bases here. See the parallel places in the margin, and the Notes on them.

Verse 22. They shall be carried to Babylon] Far from those already taken being brought back, those which now remain shall be carried thither, unless ye submit to the Chaldeans. They did not submit, and the prophecy was literally fulfilled, see chap. lii, 17—23, 2 Kings xxv, 13, and the other places in the margin.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

One of those pretended Prophets spoken of in the preceding Chapter, having contradicted and opposed Jeremiah, receives an awful declaration that, as a proof to the people of his having spoken without commission, he should die in the then current year, which accordingly came to pass in the seventh month, 1—17.

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. Ol. XLVI. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 22.

AND [a] it came to pass the same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year, and in the fifth month, that Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet, which was of Gibeon, spake unto me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests and of all the people, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, I have broken [b] the yoke of the king of Babylon.

3 [c] Within [d] two full years will I bring again into this place all the vessels of the LORD's house, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from this place, and carried them to Babylon:

4 And I will bring again to this place Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with all the [e] captives of Judah, that went into Babylon, saith the LORD: for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.

5 Then the prophet Jeremiah said unto the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood in the house of the LORD,

6 Even the prophet Jeremiah said, [f] Amen: the LORD do so: the LORD perform thy words which thou hast prophesied, to bring again the vessels of the LORD's house, and all that is carried away captive, from Babylon into this place.

7 Nevertheless hear thou now this word that I speak in thine ears, and in the ears of all the people;

8 The prophets that have been before me and before thee of old prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence.

9 [g] The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the LORD hath truly sent him.

10 Then Hananiah the prophet took the [h] yoke from off the prophet Jeremiah's neck, and brake it.

11 And Hananiah spake in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon [i] from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years. And the prophet Jeremiah went his way.

12 Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the prophet, (after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah,) saying,

13 Go and tell Hananiah saying, Thus saith

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVIII.

Verse 1. And it came to pass the same year—the fifth month] Which commenced with the first new moon of August, according to our calendar. This verse gives the precise date of the prophecy in the preceding Chapter; and proves that Zedekiah, not Jehoiakim, is the name that should be read in the first verse of that Chapter.

Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet] One who called himself a prophet;—who pretended to be in commerce with the Lord, and to receive revelations from Him. He was probably a priest; for he was of Gibeon, a sacerdotal city in the tribe of Benjamin.

Verse 2. Thus speaketh the LORD] What awful impudence! when he knew in his conscience that God had given him no such commission.

Verse 3. Within two full years] Time sufficient for the Chaldeans to destroy the city, and carry away the rest of the sacred vessels: but he did not live to see the end of this short period.

Verse 6. Amen: the LORD do so] O that it might be according to thy word! May the people find this to be true!

Verse 8. The prophets that have been before me] Namely, Joel, Amos, Hosea, Micah, Zephaniah, Nahum, Habakkuk, and others, all of whom denounced similar evils against a corrupt people.

Verse 9. When the word of that prophet shall come to pass] Here is the criterion. He is a true prophet who specifies things that he says shall happen, and also fixes the time of the event;—and the things do happen, and in that time.

You say that Nebuchadnezzar shall not overthrow this city; and that in two years from this time, not only the sacred vessels already taken away shall be restored, but also that Jeconiah and all the Jewish captives shall be restored, and the Babylonish yoke broken, see verses 2, 3, 4. Now I say that Nebuchadnezzar will come this year, and destroy this city, and lead away the rest of the people into captivity, and the rest of the sacred vessels; and that there will be no restoration of any kind till seventy years from this time.

Verse 10. Then Hananiah—took the yoke—and brake it.] He endeavoured by this symbolical act to persuade them of the truth of his prediction.

Verse 13. Yokes of iron.] Instead of Nebuchadnezzar's the LORD; Thou hast broken the yokes of wood; but thou shalt make for them yokes of iron.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; [a] I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these nations, that they may serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and they shall serve him: and [b] I have given him the beasts of the field also.

15 Then said the prophet Jeremiah unto Hananiah the prophet, Hear now, Hananiah; The LORD hath not sent thee; but [c] thou makest this people to trust in a lie.

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. Ol. XLVI. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 22.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will cast thee from off the face of the earth: this year thou shalt die, because thou hast taught [d] rebellion [e] against the LORD.

17 So Hananiah the prophet died the same year in the seventh month.

[a] Deut. 28. 48. ch. 27. 4, 7.——[b] Ch. 27. 6.——[c] Ch. 29. 31. Ezek. 13. 22.——[d] Deut. 13. 5. ch. 29. 32.——[e] Heb. revolt.

yoke being broken, this captivity shall be more severe than the preceding. All these nations shall have a yoke of iron on their neck. He shall subdue them, and take all their property,—even the beasts of the field.

Verse 15. Hear now, Hananiah; the LORD hath not sent thee] This was a bold speech in the presence of those priests and people who were prejudiced in favour of this false prophet, who prophesied to them smooth things. In such cases men wish to be deceived.

Verse 16. This year thou shalt die] By this shall the people know who is the true prophet. Thou hast taught rebellion against the Lord, and God will cut thee off: and this shall take place not within seventy years, or two years, but in this very year, and within two months from this time.

Verse 17. So Hananiah—died the same year in the seventh month.] The prophecy was delivered in the fifth month, (ver. 1,) and Hananiah died in the seventh month. And thus God, in mercy, gave him about two months, in which he might prepare to meet his God. Here then the true prophet was demonstrated, and the false prophet detected. The death of Hananiah, thus predicted, was God's seal to the words of His prophet; and must have gained his other predictions great credit among the people.

CHAPTER XXIX.

This Chapter contains the substance of two letters sent by the Prophet to the captives in Babylon. In the first he recommends to them patience and composure under their present circumstances, which were to endure for seventy years, 1—14; in which, however, they should fare better than their brethren who remained behind, 15—19. But, finding little credit given to this message, on account of the suggestions of the false prophets, Ahab, the son of Kolaiah, and Zedekiah, the son of Maaseiah, who flattered them with the hopes of a speedy end to their captivity, he sends a second, in which he denounces heavy judgments against those false prophets that deceived them, 20—23; as he did afterwards against Shemaiah the Nehelamite, who had sent a letter of complaint against Jeremiah, in consequence of his message, 24—32.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIX.

Verse 1. Now these are the words of the letter] This transaction took place in the first or second year of Zedekiah. It appears that the prophet had been informed that the Jews, who had already been carried into captivity, had, through the instigations of false prophets been led to believe that they were to be brought out of their captivity speedily. Jeremiah, fearing that this delusion might induce them to

2 (After that [a] Jeconiah the king, and the queen, and the [b] eunuchs, the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, and the carpenters, and the smiths, were departed from Jerusalem;)
3 By the hand of Elasah the son of Shaphan, and Gemariah the son of Hilkiah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon) saying,
4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, unto all that are carried away captives, whom I have caused to be carried away from Jerusalem unto Babylon;
5 [c] Build ye houses, and dwell in them, and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them;
6 Take ye wives, and beget sons and daughters; and take wives for your sons, and give your daughters to husbands, that they may bear sons and daughters; that ye may be increased there, and not diminished.
7 And seek the peace of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, [d] and pray unto the LORD for it: for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

9 [f] For they prophesy [g] falsely unto you in my name: I have not sent them, saith the LORD.
10 For thus saith the LORD, That after [h] seventy years be accomplished at Babylon, I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place.
11 For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the LORD, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an [i] expected end.
12 Then shall ye [k] call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you.
13 And [l] ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me [m] with all your heart.

take some hasty steps, ill comporting with their present state, wrote a letter to them, which he entrusted to an embassy which Zedekiah had sent on some political concerns to Nebuchadnezzar. The letter was directed to the elders, priests, prophets, and people, who had been carried away captives to Babylon.

Verse 4. Thus saith the LORD of hosts] This was the commencement of the letter.

Verse 5. Build ye houses] Prepare for a long continuance in your present captivity. Provide yourselves with the necessaries of life, and multiply in the land, that ye may become a powerful people.

Verse 7. Seek the peace of the city] Endeavour to promote, as far as you can, the prosperity of the places in which ye sojourn. Let no disaffection appear in word or act. Nothing can be more reasonable than this. Wherever a man lives, and has his nourishment and support, that is his country as long as he resides in it. If things go well with that country, his interest is promoted by the general prosperity,—he lives at comparative ease, and has the necessaries of life cheaper; and unless he is in a state of cruel servitude, which does not appear to have been the case with those Israelites to whom the prophet writes, (those of the first captivity,) they must be nearly, if not altogether, in as good a state as if they had been in the country that gave them birth. And in this case they were much better off than their brethren now in Judea, who had to contend with famine and war, and scarcely any thing before them but God's curse, and extermination.

Verse 8. Neither hearken to your dreams] Rather dreamers: for it appears there was a class of such persons, who not only had acquired a facility of dreaming themselves, but who undertook to interpret the dreams of others.

Verse 10. For thus saith the LORD] It has been supposed that a very serious transposition of verses has taken place here; and it has been proposed to read after ver. 9, the sixteenth to the nineteenth inclusive; then the tenth, and on to the fourteenth inclusive; then the twentieth, the fifteenth, the twenty-first, and the rest, regularly to the end.

That after seventy years be accomplished] לפי מלאת le-pi milloth, at the mouth of the accomplishment, or, fill to the mouth. Seventy years is the measure which must be filled; —fill this to the brim,—complete this measure, and then you shall be visited and released. The whole seventy must be completed;—expect no enlargement before that time.

Verse 11. Thoughts of peace] Here God gives them to understand,—1. That his love was moved towards them. 2. That He would perform His good word, His promises often repeated, to them. 3. That for the fulfilment of these they must pray, seek, and search. 4. That He would hearken, and they should find Him: provided,—5. They sought Him with their whole heart, ver. 10—13.

14 And [a] I will be found of you, saith the LORD; and I will turn away your captivity, and [b] I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

15 Because ye have said, The LORD hath raised us up prophets in Babylon;

16 Know that thus saith the LORD of the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity;

17 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will send upon them the [c] sword, the famine, and the pestilence, and will make them like [d] vile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

18 And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, and [e] will deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, [f] to be [g] a curse, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, among all the nations whither I have driven them:

19 Because they have not hearkened to my words, saith the LORD, which [h] I sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the LORD.

20 Hear ye therefore the word of the LORD, all ye of the captivity, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon:

21 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, of Ahab the son of Kolaiah, and of Zedekiah the son of Maaseiah, which prophesy a lie unto you in my name; Behold, I will deliver them into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and he shall slay them before your eyes;

22 [i] And of them shall be taken up a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The LORD make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab, [k] whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire;

23 Because [l] they have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives, and have spoken lying words in my name which I have not commanded them; even I know, and am a Witness, saith the LORD.

24 Thus shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the [m] Nehelamite, saying,

Verse 14. I will gather you from all the nations] A quotation from Deut. xxxv, 3, and see also Deut. iv, 7.

Verse 15. Because ye have said] The Septuagint very properly insert this verse between the twentieth and the twenty-first, and thus the connection here is not disturbed, and the connection below completed.

Verse 17. Behold, I will send upon them the sword] Do not envy the state of Zedekiah who sits on the throne of David, nor that of the people, who are now in the land whence ye have been carried captive, (ver. 16,) for I will send the sword, the pestilence, and the famine upon them; and afterwards, shall cause them to be carried into a miserable captivity in all nations: (ver. 18,) but ye see the worst of your own case, and you have God's promise of enlargement when the proper time is come. The Reader will not forget that the prophet is addressing the captives in Babylon.

Verse 20. Hear ye therefore the word] Dr. Blayney thinks there were two letters written by the prophet to the captives in Babylon, and that the first ends with this verse. That having heard, on the return of the embassy, (Elasah and Gemariah, whom Zedekiah had sent to Babylon, and to whom the prophet entrusted the above letter, ver. 3,) that the captives had not received his advices favourably, because they were deceived by false prophets among them, who promised them a speedier deliverance, he therefore wrote a second letter, beginning with the fifteenth verse, and going on with the twenty-first, &c., in which he denounces God's judgments on three of the chief of those, Ahab, Zedekiah, and Shemaiah.

Verse 21. He shall slay them before your eyes] Nebuchadnezzar would be led by political reasons to punish these pretended prophets, as their predictions tended to make his Israelitish subjects uneasy and disaffected; and might excite them to rebellion. He therefore slew them: two of them it appears he burnt alive, viz., Ahab and Zedekiah, who are supposed by the Rabbins to be the two elders who endeavoured to seduce Susanna, see ver. 23. Burning alive was a Chaldean punishment, Dan. iii, 6, and Amos ii, 1. From them other nations borrowed it.

Verse 23. Have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives] This is supposed to refer to the case of Susanna. See above.

Verse 24. Speak to Shemaiah] Zephaniah was the second priest, sagan, or chief priest's deputy; and Seraiah,

A. M. cir. 3407. B. C. cir. 597. Ol. cir. XLV. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 20.

25 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Because thou hast sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, [a] and to Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, and to all the priests, saying,

26 The LORD hath made thee priest in the stead of Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be [b] officers in the house of the LORD, for every man that is [c] mad, and maketh himself a prophet, that thou shouldest [d] put him in prison, and in the stocks.

27 Now therefore why hast thou not reproved Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you?

28 For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long: [e] build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens and eat the fruit of them.

29 And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

30 Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah, saying,

31 Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the LORD concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite; Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, [f] and I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie:

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed: he shall not have a man to dwell among this people; neither shall he behold the good that I will do for my people, saith the LORD; [g] because he hath taught [h] rebellion against the LORD.

high priest, when Jerusalem was taken. See chap. lii, 24. Shemaiah directs his letter to the former, and tells him that God had appointed him to supply the place of the high priest, who was probably then absent. His name was either Azariah, or Seraiah his son: but called Jehoiada from the remarkable zeal and courage of that pontiff. See the passages in the margin.—Dodd. After the taking of Jerusalem, Zephaniah was put to death by Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, see chap. xxxvii, 3. The history of Jehoiada may be seen 2 Kings xi, 3, &c.

Verse 26. For every man that is mad, and maketh himself a prophet] Mad, משגע meshuggâ, in extatic rapture;—such as appeared in the prophets, whether true or false, when under the influence,—the one of God,—the other of a dæmon. See 2 Kings ix, 11. Hos. ix, 7.

Verse 32. I will punish Shemaiah] 1. He shall have no posterity to succeed him. 2. His family, i. e. relations, &c., shall not be found among those whom I shall bring back from captivity. 3. Nor shall he himself see the good that I shall do for my people. And all this shall come upon him and his because he hath taught rebellion against the Lord. He excited the people to reject Jeremiah, and to receive the lying words of the false prophets; and these led them to rebel.

CHAPTER XXX.

This and the following Chapter must relate to a still future restoration of the posterity of Jacob from their several dispersions, as no deliverance hitherto afforded them comes up to the terms of it; for, after the return from Babylon, they were again enslaved by the Greeks and Romans, contrary to the prediction in the eighth verse; in every Papistical country they have laboured under great civil disabilities, and in some of them have been horribly persecuted; upon the ancient people has this mystic Babylon very heavily laid her yoke; and in no place in the world are they at present their own masters; so that this prophecy remains to be fulfilled in the reign of David, i. e. the Messiah; the type, according to the general structure of the prophetical writings, being put for the antitype. The prophecy opens by an easy transition from the temporal deliverance spoken of before; and describes the mighty revolutions that shall precede the restoration of the descendants of Israel, 1—9, who are encouraged to trust in the promises of God, 10—11. They are, however, to expect corrections; which shall have a happy issue in a future period, 12—17. The great blessings of Messiah's reign are enumerated, 18—22; and the wicked and impenitent declared to have no share in them, 23, 24.

3 For, lo, the days come, saith the LORD; that [a] I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the LORD: [b] and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 And these are the words that the LORD spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah.

5 For thus saith the LORD; We have heard a voice of trembling, [c] of fear, and not of peace.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXX.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD] This prophecy was delivered about a year after the taking of Jerusalem: so Dahler. Dr. Blayney supposes it and the following Chapter to refer to the future restoration of both Jews and Israelites in the times of the Gospel; though also touching at the restoration from the Babylonish captivity, at the end of seventy years. Supposing these two Chapters to be penned after the taking of Jerusalem, which appears the most natural, they will refer to the same events,—one captivity shadowing forth another, and one restoration being the type or pledge of the second.

Verse 2. Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book] The book here recommended I believe to be the thirtieth and thirty-first Chapters; for among the Hebrews any portion of writing, in which the subject was finished, however small, was termed ספר sepher, a BOOK, a treatise, or discourse.

Verse 3. The days come] First, After the conclusion of the seventy years. Secondly, Under the Messiah.

That I will bring again the captivity of Israel] The ten tribes led captive by the king of Assyria, and dispersed among the nations.

And Judah] The people carried into Babylon at two different times; first, under Jeconiah, and, secondly, under Zedekiah, by Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 5. We have heard a voice of trembling] This may refer to the state and feelings of the people during the war which Cyrus carried on against the Babylonians. Trembling and terror would no doubt affect them, and put an end to peace and all prosperity; as they could not tell what would be the issue of the struggle, and whether their state would be better or worse should their present masters fall in the conflict. This is well described in the next verse, where men are represented as being, through pain and anguish, like women in travail. See the same comparison Isa. xiii, 6—8.

Verse 7. Alas! for that day is great] When the Medes and Persians, with all their forces, shall come on the Chaldeans, it will be the day of Jacob's trouble, trial, dismay, and uncertainty: but he shall be delivered out of it,—the Chaldean empire shall fall, but the Jews shall be delivered by Cyrus. Jerusalem shall be destroyed by the Romans, but the Israel of God shall be delivered from its ruin. Not one that had embraced Christianity perished in the sackage of that city.

Verse 8. I will break his yoke] That is, the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar.

Of him] Of Jacob, (ver. 7,) viz., the then captive Jews.

Verse 9. But they shall serve the LORD their God, and David their King] This must refer to the times of the Messiah; and hence the Chaldee has, "They shall obey the Lord their God, וישתמאון למשיחה בר דור ve-yishtamêun lemeshicha bar David, and they shall obey the Messiah, the Son of David." This is a very remarkable version; and shews that it was a version not according to the letter, but according to their doctrine and their expectation. David was long since dead; and none of his descendants ever reigned over them after the Babylonish captivity, nor have they since been a regal nation. Zerubbabel, under the Persians, and the Asmoneans, can be no exception to this. They have been no nation since;—they are no nation now; and it is only in the latter days that they can expect to be a nation, and that must be a Christian nation.

Christ is promised under the name of his progenitor, David, Isa. lv, 3, 4. Ezek. xxxiv, 23, 24. xxxvii, 24, 25. Hos. iii, 5.

13 There is none to plead thy cause, [f] that thou mayest be bound up: [g] thou hast no healing medicines.

14 [h] All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not; for I have wounded thee with the wound [i] of an enemy, with the chastisement [k] of a cruel one, for the multitude of thine iniquity; [l] because thy sins were increased.

15 Why [m] criest thou for thine affliction? thy sorrow is incurable for the multitude of thine iniquity: because thy sins were increased, I have done these things unto thee.

16 Therefore all they that devour thee [n] shall be devoured; and all thine adversaries, every one of them, shall go into captivity; and they that spoil thee shall be a spoil, and all that prey upon thee will I give for a prey.

Why do not the Jews read their own prophets more conscientiously?

CHAPTER XXXI.

This Chapter continues the subject of the preceding in a beautiful vision represented at a distant period. God is introduced expressing His continued regard for Israel, and promising to restore them to their land and liberty, 1—5. Immediately heralds appear, proclaiming on mount Ephraim the arrival of the great year of jubilee, and summoning the people to gather unto Zion, 6. Upon which God resumes the speech; and makes such gracious promises both of leading them tenderly by the way, and making them happy in their own land, that all the nations of the world are called upon to consider with deep attention this great salvation, 7—14. The scene is then diversified by a very happy invention. Rachel, the mother of Joseph and Benjamin, is represented as risen from her tomb, in a city of Benjamin near Jerusalem, looking about for her children, and bitterly lamenting their fate, as none of them are to be seen in the land of their fathers, 15. But she is consoled with the assurance that they are not lost, and that they shall in due time be restored, 16, 17. To this another tender and beautiful scene immediately succeeds. Ephraim (often put for the TEN tribes) comes in view. He laments his past errors, and expresses the most earnest desires of reconciliation; upon which God, as a tender parent, immediately forgives him, 18—20. The virgin of Israel is then directed to prepare for returning home, 21, 22; and the vision closes with a promise of abundant peace and security to Israel and Judah in the latter days, 23—26. The blessed condition of Israel under the Messiah's reign is then beautifully contrasted with their afflicted state during the general dispersion, 27, 28. In the remaining part of the Chapter the promises to the posterity of Jacob of the impartial administration of justice, increasing peace and prosperity, the universal diffusion of righteousness, and stability in their own land after a general restoration in Gospel times, are repeated, enlarged on, and illustrated by a variety of beautiful figures, 29—40.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXI.

Dr. Blayney has introduced this and the preceding Chapter with the following excellent observations:—

"There are many prophecies," says he, "in various parts of the Old Testament, which announce the future restoration of Israel to their own land, and the complete re-establishment of both their civil and religious constitution in the latter days, meaning the times of the gospel dispensation. These two Chapters contain a prophecy of this kind; which must necessarily be referred to these times, because it points out circumstances which certainly were not fulfilled at the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, nor have hitherto had their completion. For the people which returned from Babylon were the people of Judah only, who had been carried away captive by Nebuchadnezzar: but here it is foretold, that not the captivity of Judah only should be restored, but the captivity of Israel also, meaning those ten tribes which were carried away before, by Shalmaneser king of Assyria; and who still remain in their several dispersions, having never returned, in a national capacity at least, to their own land, whatever some few individuals have done. But the terms of the prophecy entitle us to expect not an obscure and partial, but a complete and universal, restoration; when God will manifest Himself, as formerly, the God and Patron of all the families of Israel, and not of a few only. Again it is promised that, after this restoration, they should no more fall under the dominion of foreigners, but be governed by princes and magistrates of their own nation, independently of any but God, and David their King. But this was not the case with the Jews who returned from Babylon. They then indeed had a leader, Zerubbabel, one of their own nation, and also of the family of David: but both the nation and their leader continued still in a state of vassalage, and the most servile dependance upon the Persian monarchy. And when the Grecian monarchy succeeded, they changed their masters only, but not their condition; till at length under the Asmonean princes they had for a while an independent government of their own, but without any title to the name of David. At last they fell under the Roman yoke; since which time their situation has been such, as not to afford the least ground to pretend that the promised restoration has yet taken place. It remains therefore to be brought about in future under the reign of the Messiah, emphatically distinguished by the name of David; when every particular circumstance predicted concerning it, will no doubt be verified by a distinct and unequivocal accomplishment. There is no particular date annexed to this prophecy, whereby to ascertain the precise time of its delivery. But it may not unreasonably be presumed to have followed immediately after the preceding one, in which the restoration of the people from their Babylonish captivity is in direct terms foretold. From hence the transition is natural and easy to the more glorious and general restoration which was to take place in a more distant period, and was designed for the ultimate object of the national hopes and expectations. Both events are frequently thus connected together in the prophetic writings; and perhaps with this design, that when that which was nearest at hand should be accomplished, it might afford the clearest and strongest, and most satisfactory kind of evidence that the latter, how remote soever its period, would in like manner be brought about by the interposition of Providence in its due season. But though this prophecy relates wholly to one single subject, it seems naturally to divide itself into three distinct parts. The first part, after a short preface, in which the prophet is required to commit to writing the matters revealed to him, commences with representing, in a style of awe and energy, the consternation and distress which, in some future day of visitation, should fall upon all nations, preparatory to the scene of Jacob's deliverance, ver. 5—9. Israel is encouraged to confide in the Divine assurance of restoration and protection, ver. 10, 11. He is prepared previously to expect a severe chastisement for the multitude of his sins: but consoled with the prospect of a happy termination, ver. 12—17. This is followed by an enumeration at large of the blessings and privileges to which the Jews should be restored upon their re-admission into God's favour, ver. 18—22. Again, however, it is declared that the anger of JEHOVAH would not subside, till His purposed vengeance against the wicked should have been fully executed; and then, but not till then, an entire reconciliation would take place between him and all the families of Israel, ver. 23, chap. xxxi, 1. The second part of this prophecy begins chap. xxxi, 2; and is marked by a sudden transition to a distant period of time, represented in a vision, and embellished with a variety of beautiful scenes and images. God announces the renewal of His ancient love for Israel; and promises, in consequence thereof, a speedy restoration of their former privileges and happiness, ver. 2—5. Already the heralds have proclaimed on mount Ephraim the arrival of the joyful day: they summons the people to re-assemble once more in Zion; and promulge by special command the glad tidings of salvation which God had accomplished for them. God Himself declares His readiness to conduct home the remnant of Israel from all parts of their dispersion, to compassionate and relieve their infirmities, and to provide them with all necessary accommodations by the way, ver. 6—9. The news is carried into distant lands; and the nations are summoned to attend to the display of God's power and goodness in rescuing his people from their stronger enemies, and in supplying them after their return with all manner of good things to the full extent of their wants and desires, ver. 10—14. Here the scene changes; and two new personages are successively introduced, in order to diversify the same subject, and to impress it more strongly. Rachel first, who is represented as just risen from the grave, and bitterly bewailing the loss of her children; for whom she looks about her in vain, but none are to be seen. Her tears are dried up; and she is consoled with the assurance, that they are not lost for ever, but shall in time be brought back to their ancient borders, ver. 15—17. Ephraim comes next. He laments his past undutifulness with great contrition and penitence, and professes an earnest desire of amendment. These symptoms of returning duty are no sooner discerned in him, than God acknowledges him once more as a darling child, and resolves with mercy to receive him, ver. 18—20. The virgin of Israel is then earnestly exhorted to hasten the preparations for her return; and encouraged with having the prospect of a signal miracle wrought in her favour, ver. 21, 22. And the vision closes at last with a promise, that the Divine blessing should again rest upon the land of Judah; and that the men of Judah should once more dwell there, cultivating it according to the simplicity of ancient institutions, and fully discharged from every want, ver. 23—26. In the third part, by way of appendix to the vision, the following gracious promises are specifically annexed:—That God would in time to come supply all the deficiencies of Israel and Judah; and would be as diligent to restore, as He had ever been to destroy, them, and would not any more visit the offences of the fathers upon the children, ver. 27—30. That he would make with them a better covenant than He had made with their forefathers, ver. 31—34. That they should continue His people by an ordinance as firm and as lasting as that of the heavens, ver. 35—37. And that Jerusalem should again be built, enlarged in its extent, and secure from future desolation, ver. 33—40."

Verse 1. At the same time] This Discourse was delivered at the same time with the former; and with that, constitutes the Book, which God ordered the prophet to write.

Will I be the God of all the families of Israel] I shall bring back the ten tribes, as well as their brethren the Jews. The restoration of the Israelites is the principal subject of this Chapter.

Verse 2. The people which were left of the sword] Those of the ten tribes that had escaped death by the sword of the Assyrians.

Found grace in the wilderness] The place of their exile; a wilderness compared to their own land.—Dahler. See Isa. xl, 3.

Verse 3. I have loved thee with an everlasting love] ואהבת עולם אהבתיך ve-ahabit ôlam ahabteic, and with the old love I have loved thee.—"Also, with a love of long standing have I loved thee."—Blayney. "But I love thee always."—Dahler. I still bear to the Jewish people that love which I shewed to their fathers in Egypt, in the wilderness, and in the Promised Land. Can it be supposed, by any person seriously considering the context, that these words are spoken of God's decree of election in behalf of the Jews. Those who make it such, act most injudiciously on their own principle;—for, how few of the Jews have ever given evidence that they were the children of God, from their restoration from Babylon to the present day! The words refer simply to their state as a people, most wonderously preserved by the providence and mercy of God, as a standing proof of the Divine authority of the Scriptures, and as an evidence of God's displeasure against sin.

Therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee] "Therefore have I lengthened out mercy to thee."—Blayney.

C'est pourquoi je t'ai conservé ma grace.—Dahler.
"Therefore I have preserved my grace to thee."

The exiles, who had not for a long time received any proofs of the Divine protection, are represented as deploring their state: but God answers, that though this may seem to be the case, He has always loved them; and this continued love He will shew by bringing them out of their captivity. However creeds may fare, this is the sense of the passage; all the context proves this.

Verse 4. O virgin of Israel] Israelites in general; now called virgin, because restored to their ancient purity.

With thy tabrets] Women in general played on these; they are used in times of rejoicing, and accompanied with dancing. To these customs, still preserved, the prophet alludes.

Verse 5. Thou shalt yet plant vines upon the mountains

6 For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, [b] Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the LORD our God.

7 For thus saith the LORD; [c] Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O LORD, save thy people, the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, I will bring them [d] from the north country, and [e] gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither.

9 [f] They shall come with weeping, and with [g] supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk [h] by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my [i] firstborn.

10 Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel [k] will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock.

of Samaria] This was the regal city of the Israelites, as Jerusalem was of the Jews.

Shall eat them as common things.] By the law of Moses, no man was permitted to eat of the fruit of his vineyard till the fifth year after planting. For the first three years, it was considered uncircumcised, unclean, not fit to be eaten; in the fourth year it was holy to the Lord, the fruit belonged to Him; in the fifth year he might use it for himself, Lev. xix, 23—25. But in the time here mentioned the fruit should be considered common, lawful at all times to be eaten.

Verse 6. For there shall be a day] Literally, for this is the day; or, the day is come.—The watchmen—the prophets.

Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion] Let both Israelites and Jews join together in the worship of the Lord.

Verse 7. The chief of the nations] The same as Jacob or Israel;—for most certainly this people was once the most honourable on the face of the earth.

O LORD, save thy people] Let the Jews earnestly intercede in behalf of their Israelitish brethren; or, let them rejoice and praise the Lord, who hath saved the remnant of Israel. So Dr. Blayney thinks the clause should be understood.

Verse 8. I will bring them from the north country] From Babylon.

From the coasts of the earth] The ten tribes were carried away partly into Assyria, by Tiglath-pileser; and partly into Mesopotamia and Media, by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xv, 29; xvii, 6. Assyria and Media, being very distant from Palestine, might have been called, in prophetical language, the coasts of the earth.

The blind and the lame] I will so effectually remove all difficulties out of the way; so provide for them on the journey; so supernaturally support their bodies and minds; that the veriest invalids shall safely proceed to, and happily arrive at, the end of their journey.

Verse 9. They shall come with weeping] Duly penetrated with a sense of their sins, they shall deeply deplore them; and, while weeping for them, earnestly supplicate God to have mercy upon them.

By the rivers of waters] I will so guide and provide for them in the arid deserts, that they shall find streams of water whenever necessary. Every one knows of how much consequence water is to travellers in the Eastern deserts.

Ephraim is my firstborn] Ephraim, being the most considerable, is often put for the whole of the ten tribes.

Verse 12. And shall flow together] Perhaps this may refer to their assembling at the three great national feasts, the Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles.

Their soul shall be as a watered garden] Full of the light, life, and power of God; so that they shall rejoice evermore, pray without ceasing, and give thanks in every thing.

Verse 14. And I will satiate the soul of the priests] The worship of God being restored, they shall have their proper share of the victims brought to the Temple.

with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the LORD.

15 Thus saith the LORD; [a] A voice was heard in [b] Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children, refused to be comforted for her children, because [c] they were not.

16 Thus saith the LORD; Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the LORD; and [d] they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

17 And there is hope in thine end, saith the LORD, that thy children shall come again to their own border.

Verse 15. A voice was heard in Ramah] The Ramah mentioned here, for there were several towns of this name, was situated in the tribe of Benjamin, about six or seven miles from Jerusalem. Near this place Rachel was buried; who is here, in a beautiful figure of poetry, represented as come out of her grave, and lamenting bitterly for the loss of her children, none of whom presented themselves to her view, all being slain or gone into exile. St. Matthew, who is ever fond of accommodation, applies these words chap. ii, 17, 18, to the massacre of the children at Bethlehem. That is, they were suitable to that occasion, and therefore he so applied them: but they are not a prediction of that event.

Verse 16. They shall come again from the land of the enemy.] This could not be said of the murdered innocents at Bethlehem,—they never came again: but the Jews, who had gone into captivity, did come again from the land of their enemy to their own border.

Verse 18. I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself] The exiled Israelites are in a state of deep repentance.

Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised] I was at first like an unbroken and untoward steer,—the more I was chastised, the more I rebelled: but now I have benefited by thy correction.

Turn thou me] I am now willing to take Thy yoke upon me, but I have no power. I can only will and pray. Take the matter into Thy own hand, and fully convert my soul.

Verse 19. After that I was turned] Converted from my sin, folly, and idolatry.

I repented] To conviction of sin, I now felt contrition for sin. Conviction, in this sense of the word, must precede contrition or repentance. As soon as a man sees himself lost and undone, he is convicted of sin; when convicted, he begins to mourn. Thus contrition follows conviction.

I smote upon my thigh] My sorrow grew deeper and deeper; I smote upon my thigh through the extremity of my distress. This was a usual sign of deep affliction. See Ezek. xxi, 12. It was the same among the ancient Greeks. So Homer:—

Ως εφατ'· αυταρ Αρης θαλερω πεπληγετο μηρω
Χερσι καταπρηνεσσι, ὀλοφυρομενος δε προσηυδα.

IL. lib. xv, 113.

Smiting, thus sorrowful, the god exclaimed."

I have often seen persons, in deep grief, do this.

Verse 20. Is Ephraim my dear son?] It is impossible to conceive any thing more tenderly affectionate than this. Let us consider the whole account. The ten tribes, called here Ephraim for the reason before alleged, are represented as acknowledging their sins. I have heard Ephraim bemoaning himself; and in his lamentation he says,—1. Thou hast chastised me. 2. Though he at first rebelled against the chastisement, yet at last he submitted and acknowledged his offences. 3. He turned from all his offences; he was converted. 4. After his conversion (שובי shubi) he repented; after conviction came contrition, as before stated. 5. Being in a state of godly sorrow, he was instructed, יורעי hivadâi, he got a thorough knowledge of the desperate wickedness of his heart and life. 6. Having received this instruction, he was filled with excessive grief; which he signified here by smiting on his thigh.—See above. 7. He finds that from his youth up he had been sinning against God; and although his youthful sins had long passed from his memory, yet the light of God brought them back, and he was ashamed and confounded at the sight of them. 8. In this state of confusion and distress, God sees him; and commiserating his state, thus speaks:—

1. Is Ephraim my dear son? Bad as he is in his own sight, and in the sight of my justice, he is now a penitent, and to me is precious. 2. How loathsome and disfigured he may be with sin and sorrow, he is to me a pleasant child—a child of delights;—one in whose conversion I delight, and my angels rejoice. 3. I did speak against him; כי מדי דברי בו ki middey dobri bo, for, from the abundance of my speaking in him; accusing, threatening, promising, exhorting, encouraging; I do still earnestly remember him. God has taken much pains with him, and is unwilling to give him up: but now that he repents, he has not received the grace of God utterly in vain. 4. God feels a yearning desire towards him; המו מעי לו hamu meêy lo, "my bowels are agitated for him."—I feel nothing towards him but pity and love. When a sinner turns to God, God ceases to be angry with him. 5. God expresses His determination to save him; רחם ארחמנו racham arachamanu, "I will be affectionately merciful to him, with tender mercy, saith the Lord." He shall find that I treat him as a father does a returning prodigal son; so every penitent is sure to find mercy at the hand of God.

Verse 21. Set thee up waymarks] Alluding to stones, or heaps of stone, which travellers in the desert set up to ascertain the way, that they may know how to return. Mark the way to Babylon, thither ye shall certainly go: but from it ye shall as certainly return.

Verse 22. A woman shall compass a man] נקבה תסובב גבר nekebah tesobeb gaber, "A weak woman shall compass or circumvent a strong man." This place has given much trouble to biblical critics. By many Christian writers it is considered a prophecy of the miraculous conception of the holy virgin: but as I am sure no such meaning is in the words, nor in the context, so I am satisfied no such meaning can be fairly brought out of them. Houbigant thinks there is a small error in the text, i. e. תשובב teshobeb, shall return, and not תסובב tesobeb, shall compass. This reading is found in two of Kennicott's MSS.; and he contends that the passage should be read, The wife shall return to her husband; alluding to the conversion of the Jewish people, called above a backsliding daughter. This makes a good sense: but I do not see why this should be called a new thing in the earth. After all, I think it likely that the Jews in their present distressed circumstances are represented under the similitude of a weak defenceless female, נקבה nekebah; and the Chaldeans under that of a fierce strong man, גבר gaber, who had prevailed over and oppressed this weak woman. But notwithstanding the disparity between them, God would cause the woman, the weak defenceless Jews, to compass, to overcome, the strong man, the powerful Babylonians. And this the prophet says would be a new thing in the land; for, in such a case, the lame would take the prey. The context favours both these meanings. Dr. Blayney gives a sense very near to this:—"A weak woman shall repulse a strong or mighty man." It is most likely a proverbial expression.

Verse 23. The LORD bless thee, O habitation of justice] After their return they shall be remarkably prosperous. Piety and industry shall go hand in hand; they shall have their husbandmen, their shepherds, and neatherds, ver. 24. And Jerusalem shall become a righteous city, and the Temple be a place of holiness; so the weary there shall have rest, and the sorrowful shall be abundantly comforted, ver. 24, 25.

Verse 26. Upon this I awaked] It appears that the prophecy commencing with chap. xxx, ver. 2, and ending with ver. 25 of this Chapter, was delivered to the prophet in a dream. Dahler supposes it to be a wish; that the prophet, though he could not hope to live to that time, might be permitted to awake up from his tomb; and, having seen this prosperity, would be content to return to his grave.

Verse 27. I will sow—with the seed of man and with the seed of beast.] I will multiply both men and cattle.

Judah, with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast.

28 And it shall come to pass, that like as I have [a] watched over them, [b] to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch them, [c] to build, and to plant, saith the LORD.

29 [d] In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

30 [e] But every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

32 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day that [g] I took them by the hand, to bring them out of the land of Egypt; (which my covenant they brake, [h] although I was an husband unto them, saith the LORD:)

33 [i] But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, [k] I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; [l] and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

35 Thus saith the LORD, [o] which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth [p] the sea when the waves thereof roar; [q] The LORD of hosts is his name:

36 [r] If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.

Verse 29. The fathers have eaten a sour grape] A proverbial expression for—"The children suffer for the offences of their parents." This is explained in the next verse,—"Every one shall die for his own iniquity." No child shall suffer Divine punition for the sin of his father; only so far as he acts in the same way, can he be said to bear the sins of his parents.

Verse 31. A new covenant] The Christian dispensation.

Verse 33. After those days] When vision and prophecy shall be sealed up, and Jesus have assumed that body which was prepared for him; and have laid down His life for the redemption of a lost world; and having ascended on high, shall have obtained the gift of the Holy Spirit, to purify the heart. Then God's law shall, by it, be put in their inward parts, and written on their hearts; so that all within and all without shall be holiness to the Lord. Then God will be truly their God, received and acknowledged as their Portion, and the sole Object of their devotion; and they shall be his people, filled with holiness, and so made partakers of the Divine nature, so that they shall perfectly love Him, and worthily magnify His name.

Verse 34. And they shall teach no more] It shall be a time of universal light and knowledge: all shall know God in Christ from the least to the greatest: the children shall be taught to read the New Covenant, and to understand the terms of their salvation.

I will forgive their iniquity] It shall be a time of GENERAL PARDON: multitudes shall be daily in the Christian Church receiving the witness of God's Spirit, and in their life and conversation witnessing a good confession. How wonderfully is this prophecy fulfilled in the age of Bibles, Sunday Schools, and village preaching!

Verse 36. If those ordinances] As sure as the sun shall give light to the day, and the moon to the night; so surely shall the Jews continue to be a distinct people. The same thing is expressed in other words in the next verse. Hitherto this prophecy has been literally fulfilled; the Jews are still a distinct people from all the dwellers upon earth. Every attempt that has been made in any country to naturalize and unite them with the people of that country, has proved abortive. And why? Because of God's purpose expressed in chap. xxxi, ver. 35—37, of the BOOK of the Prophet JEREMIAH.

Verse 38. The city shall be built to the LORD] This cannot mean the city built after the return from Babylon, for two reasons:—1. This city is to be much greater in extent.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

that the city shall be built to the LORD [a] from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner.

39 And [b] the measuring line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath.

40 And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields unto the brook of Kidron, [c] unto the corner of the horse-gate toward the east, [d] shall be holy unto the LORD; it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down any more for ever.

2. It is to be permanent, never to be thrown down, ver. 40. It must therefore mean, if taken literally at all, the city that is to be built by them when they are brought in with the fulness of the Gentiles.

The tower of Hananeel] This stood in the north-east part of the city; from thence the wall proceeded to the corner gate, probably the same as the old gate, thus named from its running out into an angle in that part.

Verse 39. Upon the hill Gareb] Gareb and Goath are out of the limits of this city. The latter is supposed to be Golgotha; that is, the heap of Gotha, which, being the place where our Lord was crucified, was without the city. These hills were a little to the north-west of the old city walls: but are destined to be within the new city. See Dr. Blayney on all these verses.

Verse 40. The whole valley of the dead bodies] The valley of the son of Hinnom.

And all the fields unto the brook of Kidron, unto the corner of the horse-gate toward the east] All these places, the fuller's field, &c., shall be consecrated to the Lord, and become a part of this new city; so that this will appear to be a city much more extensive than the city of Jerusalem ever was; and to be suited to that time, when the people shall have the law written in their hearts, and God shall have filled the land with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast. Talia sæcla currite!

CHAPTER XXXII.

Jeremiah, now confined for his faithful admonitions, foretels the fate of the king and city, 1—5. According to the direction of God, he buys of his cousin Hanameel a field in Anathoth; the contract, or deed of sale, being subscribed, sealed, and witnessed, and delivered to Baruch, together with a duplicate not sealed, who is commanded to put them into an earthen vessel that they may remain there for many days, 6—14. This transaction of the Prophet, which is entered and subscribed in the public register, God constitutes a sign, or pledge, of the Jews' return from the Babylonish captivity, and of their again possessing houses, fields, and vineyards, in their own land, and by their own right, according to their tribes and families, 15. Jeremiah's prayer, in which he recounts God's marvellous acts towards the children of Israel, and deeply deplores the lamentable state of the country, and the numerous provocations which have led to it, 16—25. After which God is introduced declaring His purpose of giving up His people into the hands of their enemies, 26—35; promising, however, to restore them in due time to their ancient possessions, and to make with them an everlasting covenant, 36—44.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXII.

Verse 1. The word that came] This prophecy bears its own date: it was delivered in the tenth year of Zedekiah, which answered to the eighteenth of Nebuchadnezzar. It appears from 2 Kings xxv, 8, that the eleventh year of Zedekiah was the nineteenth of Nebuchadnezzar; and, con-

3 For Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, [a] Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;

4 And Zedekiah king of Judah [b] shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes;

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be [c] until I visit him, saith the LORD: [d] though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper.

6 And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel the son of Shallum thine uncle shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in Anathoth: for the [e] right of redemption is thine to buy it.

8 So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and [f] weighed him the money, even [g] seventeen shekels of silver.

10 And I [h] subscribed the evidence, and sealed

sequently, that the eighteenth of that monarch must have been the tenth of the Jewish king.

Verse 2. Then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem] The siege had commenced the year before, and continued a year after, ending in the fifth month of the following year; consequently, the siege must have lasted about eighteen months and twenty-seven days. See 2 Kings xxv, 18.

Verse 4. And shall speak with him mouth to mouth] He shall be reduced to a state of the most abject servitude. The slave was obliged to fix his eyes on every motion of the master whilst giving his orders, who often condescended to give them only by dumb signs.

Verse 7. The right of redemption is thine] The law had established that the estates of a family should never be alienated. If, therefore, a man through poverty was obliged to sell his patrimony, the nearest relative had a right to purchase it before all others, and even to redeem it, if it had been sold to another. This is what is called the right of goel, or kinsman, Lev. xxv, 25. And in the year of jubilee the whole returned to its ancient master, Lev. xxv, 13.

Verse 8. This was the word of the LORD.] It was by His appointment that I was to make this purchase. The whole was designed as a symbolical act, to shew the people that there would be a return from Babylon, that each family should re-enter on its former possessions and that a man might safely purchase on the certainty of this event.

Verse 9. Weighed him the money] It does not appear that there was any coined or stamped money among the Jews before the captivity; the Scripture, therefore, never speaks of counting money, but of weighing it.

Seventeen shekels of silver.] The shekel at this time must have been a nominal coin; it was a thing of a certain weight, or a certain worth. Seventeen shekels was the weight of the silver paid: but it might have been in one ingot, or piece. The shekel has been valued at from two shillings and three-pence to two shillings and sixpence, and even at three shillings;—taking the purchase money at a medium of the value of the shekel, it would amount only to about two pounds two shillings and sixpence. But as estates bore value only in proportion to the number of years before the jubilee, and the field in question was then in the hands of the Chaldeans, and this cousin of Jeremiah was not likely to come back to enjoy it after seventy years, (nor could he then have it, as a jubilee would intervene and restore it to the original family,) and money must now be very scarce and high in its value, the seventeen shekels might have been a sufficient sum for a field in those circumstances, and one probably not large in its dimensions.

Verse 10. I subscribed the evidence] We have here all the circumstances of this legal act:—1. An offer is made of the reversion of the ground, till the jubilee, to him who would then of right come into possession. 2. The price is agreed on, and the silver weighed in the balances. 3. A contract, or deed of sale, is drawn up; to which, both parties agreeing, —4. Witnesses are brought forward to see it signed and sealed; for the contract was both subscribed and sealed. 5. A duplicate of the deed was drawn, which was not to be sealed; but to lie open for the inspection of those concerned, in some public place where it might be safe, and always to be seen. 6. The original, which was sealed up, was put in an earthen pitcher, in order to be preserved from accidents. 7. This was delivered by the purchaser into the hands of a third party, to be preserved for the use of the purchaser,—and witnesses were called to attest this delivery. 8. They it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances.

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open:

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto [a] Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the [b] witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 And I charged Baruch before them, saying,

14 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days.

15 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards [c] shall be possessed again in this land.

16 Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the LORD, saying,

17 Ah Lord GOD! behold, [d] thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched-out arm, and [e] there is nothing [f] too hard for thee:

18 Thou shewest [g] loving-kindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them: the Great, [h] the Mighty God, [i] the LORD of hosts, is his name,

19 [k] Great in counsel, and mighty in [l] work: for thine [m] eyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men: [n] to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings:

20 Which hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men; and hast made thee [o] a name, as at this day;

21 And [p] hast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with great terror;

22 And hast given them this land, which thou didst swear to their fathers to give them, [q] a land flowing with milk and honey;

23 And they came in, and possessed it; but [r] they obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law; they have done nothing of all that thou commandedst them to do: therefore thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them:

24 Behold the [s] mounts, they are come unto the city to take it; and the city [t] is given into the hand of the Chaldeans, that fight against it, because of [u] the sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence: and what thou hast spoken is come to pass; and, behold, thou seest it.

subscribed the book of the purchase,—perhaps a town book, or register, where such purchases were entered. Baruch was a scribe by profession; and the deeds were delivered into his hands, before witnesses, to be preserved as above. Perhaps the law, in this case, required that the instrument should be thus lodged. But, in the present case, both the deeds, the original and the duplicate, were put into the earthen pitcher, because the city was about to be burnt; and, if lodged as usual, must be destroyed in the general conflagration. See ver. 14.

Verse 15. Houses and fields—shall be possessed again] That is, this is an evidence that the captivity shall not last long: houses, &c., shall here be possessed again, either by their present owners or immediate descendants. The young might return; at least all under ten years of age: there was no natural impossibility that they should not live till they should be fourscore.

Verse 16. I prayed unto the LORD] And what a prayer! for weight of matter, sublimity of expression, profound veneration, just conception, Divine unction, powerful pleading, and strength of faith. Historical, without flatness;—condensed, without obscurity;—confessing the greatest of crimes against the most righteous of Beings, without despairing of His mercy, or presuming on His goodness: a confession that in fact acknowledges that God's justice should smite and destroy, had not His infinite goodness said,—I will pardon and spare.

Verse 19. Thine eyes are open upon all the ways of—men] Thou art omniscient, and knowest all things: Thou art omnipresent, and seest all things.

25 And thou hast said unto me, O Lord GOD, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses; [a] for [b] the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

27 Behold, I am the LORD, the [c] God of all flesh: [d] is there any thing too hard for me?

28 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, [e] I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it:

29 And the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come and [f] set fire on this city, and burn it with the houses, [g] upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink offerings unto other gods, to provoke me to anger.

30 For the children of Israel and the children of Judah [h] have only done evil before me from their youth: for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the LORD.

31 For this city hath been to me as [i] a provocation of mine anger and of my fury from the day that they built it even unto this day; [k] that I should remove it from before my face.

32 Because of all the evil of the children of Israel and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, [l] they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

A. M. 3415. B. C. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 28.

33 And they have turned unto me the [m] back, [n] and not the face: though I taught them [o] rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction.

34 But they [p] set their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it.

35 And they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to [q] cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto [r] Molech; [s] which I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.

36 And now therefore thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city, whereof ye say, [t] It shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence;

37 Behold, I will [u] gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them [x] to dwell safely:

38 And they shall be [y] my people, and I will be their God:

39 And I will [z] give them one heart, and one way, that they may [a] fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them:

tilence] The city was now reduced to extreme necessity; and, from the siege continuing nearly a year longer, we may conclude that the besieged made a noble defence.

Verse 29. With the houses, upon whose roofs] As it is most probable that Baal was the sun, they might have chosen the tops of the houses, which were always flat with battlements around, to offer incense and sacrifice to him at his rising, and while he was in sight above the horizon.

Verse 30. For the children of Israel and the children of Judah have only done evil] They have all been transgressors from their earliest history.

For the children of Israel] The ten tribes,—

Have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands] They have been sinners beyond all others, being excessive idolaters. Their hands have formed the objects of their worship.

Verse 33. Though I taught them rising up early and teaching them] From the frequent reference to this we may naturally conclude that morning preaching prevailed much in Judea.

Verse 37. Behold, I will gather them out of all countries] A promise often repeated. See chap. xxix, 14, and the Notes on chap. xxxi, 8, &c.

Verse 39. I will give them one heart] And that a clean one;—

And one way] And that a holy and safe one: and to have this clean heart, and to walk in this good way, will be for the good of them and their children after them. God's blessing is a profitable inheritance. They shall have but one Object of worship, and one way of salvation; and, being saved from sin, idolatry, and destruction, must necessarily be happy within, and happy without.

with them, that I will not turn away [a] from them, to do them good; but [b] I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me.

41 Yea, [c] I will rejoice over them to do them good, and [d] I will plant them in this land [e] assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul.

42 For thus saith the LORD; [f] Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them.

43 And [g] fields shall be bought in this land, [h] whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

Verse 41. Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good] Nothing can please God better than our coming to Him to receive the good which, with his whole heart and his whole soul, He is ready to impart. How exceedingly condescending are these words of God!

Verse 42. Will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised] God's word cannot fail. The Jews have never yet received the good that God has promised. Nothing like the fulfilment of these promises took place after their return from Babylon; therefore, there remaineth yet a rest for these ancient people of God; and it is under the Christian dispensation that they are to have it.

Verse 44. Men shall buy fields for money] This is a reference to the symbolical purchase mentioned at the beginning of the Chapter; that may be considered by them as a sure sign of their restoration, not only to the same land, but to their respective inheritances in that land. This, the power of God could alone perform.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

In this Chapter the Prophet predicts a restoration of Israel and Judah to the favour of God, attended with such glorious circumstances as shall astonish all the world, 1—9. Their prosperity from that period is then described by a beautiful enumeration of circumstances, 10—13. This leads to the promise of the Messiah, the grand Subject of the prophetical writings, and the happiness and stability which the children of Israel shall enjoy under His government; promises which, in so far as they respect the great body of the Jews, remain still to be fulfilled, 14—26.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIII.

Verse 1. Moreover the word of the LORD] This was in the eleventh year of the reign of Zedekiah, Jeremiah being still shut up in prison: but he was now in the court of the prison, where the elders, and the king's officers, &c., might consult him with the greater ease; for they continued to enquire, foolishly thinking that if he would but prophesy good things, that these must come; or that he had sufficient power with God to induce Him to alter His mind,—destroy the Chaldeans, and deliver the city.

Verse 2. Thus saith the LORD, the Maker thereof] עשה ôseh, the Doer of it. That is, He who is to perform that shew thee great and [a] mighty things which thou knowest not.

4 For thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city, and concerning the houses of the kings of Judah, which are thrown down by [b] the mounts, and by the sword;

5 [c] They come to fight with the Chaldeans, but it is to fill them with the dead bodies of men, whom I have slain in mine anger and in my fury, and for all whose wickedness I have hid my face from this city.

6 Behold, [d] I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth.

7 And [e] I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, [f] as at the first.

8 And I will [g] cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will [h] pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me.

9 [i] And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them: and they shall [k] fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that I procure unto it.

11 The [m] voice of joy, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the voice of them that shall say, [n] Praise the LORD of hosts: for the LORD is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: and of them that shall bring [o] the sacrifice of praise into the house of the LORD. For [p] I will cause to return the captivity of the land, as at the first, saith the LORD.

12 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; [p] Again in this place, which is desolate without man and without beast, and in all the cities thereof, shall be a habitation of shepherds causing their flocks to lie down.

13 [r] In the cities of the mountains, in the cities of the vale, and in the cities of the south, and in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, shall the flocks [s] pass again under the hands of him that telleth them, saith the LORD.

which He is now about to promise. Thus translated by Dahler:—Voici ce que dit l' Eternel, qui fait ce qu'il a dit.—"Thus saith the Lord, who doeth that which He hath said."

Verse 3. Call unto me, and I will answer thee] To me alone it belongs to reveal what is future; and the stupendous things which are now coming are known only to myself. These idolaters go to their gods to get information relative to the issue of the present commotions:—but there is no light in them. Ask thou, O Jeremiah; and I will tell thee the great and mighty things which even thou knowest not.

Verse 4. Thus saith the LORD] This is a new confirmation of what has already been said, viz., The city shall fall,—a number of the inhabitants shall perish,—the rest shall be carried into captivity:—but the nation shall be preserved, and the people return from their captivity.

Verse 6. Behold, I will bring it health and cure] ארוכה arucah, an extensive plaster; or, as we phrase it, a plaster as large as the sore. I will repair the losses of families by numerous births, and bless the land with fertility.

Verse 8. I will cleanse them] These promises of pardon and holiness must be referred to their state under the Gospel, when they shall have received Jesus as the promised Messiah.

Verse 9. They shall fear and tremble] The surrounding nations shall be persuaded that it is the hand of the Almighty that has wrought this change in your behalf; and shall fear to molest you, and tremble lest they should incur the displeasure of your God by doing you any kind of evil.

16 [c] In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, [d] The LORD our Righteousness.

17 For thus saith the LORD; [e] David shall never [f] want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel;

22 As [k] the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured: so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me.

That good thing which I have promised] By my prophets: for those who have predicted the captivity have also foretold its conclusion, though not in such express terms as Jeremiah did. See Hos. i, 10, &c., ii, 15, &c., vi, 11, &c., Amos ix, 14, &c., and Jer. iii, 12, &c. The end of the captivity has been foretold by Micah, chap. vii, 9, &c., Zephaniah, iii, 10, &c., and by Jeremiah, chap. xvi, 15, xxiii, 3, xxix, 10, xxxii, 37. The Targum explains verses 14, 15, and 16, of the Messiah.

Verse 16. And this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The LORD our Righteousness] See what has been said on chap. xxiii, 6, which is generally supposed to be a strictly parallel passage: but they are very different, and I doubt whether they mean exactly the same thing. As to our translation here, it is ignorant, and almost impious: it says that Jerusalem, for that is the antecedent, shall be called the Lord our Righteousness. The pronoun לה lah, which is translated her, is the masculine affix, in the Chaldaic form, which frequently occurs; and Dr. Blayney translates,—"And this is He whom Jehovah shall call our Righteousness," or Justification. Perhaps there is a sense which these words will bear far more congenial to the scope of the place. I will give the original, as before:—וזה אשר יקרא לה יהוה צדקנו ve-zeh asher yikera lah, yehovah tsidkenu, "And this one who shall call to her is the Lord our Justification;" that is, the salvation of the Jews shall take place when Jesus Christ is proclaimed to them as their Justifier, and they receive Him as such.

Instead of לה lah, her, or him, Chaldaicè, the Vulgate, Chaldee, and Syriac, have read, לו lo, him, less ambiguously; and this reading is supported by one or two MSS. This emendation renders the passage here more conformable to that in chap. xxiii, 6: but, if the translation above be admitted, all embarrassment is gone. One of my own MSS. has לה leh, with the masculine points, and no mappik on the ה he; and for tsidkenu has צדקינו tsidkeynu, the contracted plural form, our righteousnesses:—but this may be a mistake. The passages in this and the twenty-third Chapter were not, I am satisfied, intended to express the same thing. I suppose that above refers to the preaching or proclaiming Christ crucified to the Jews, when the time shall arrive in which they shall be incorporated with the Gentile church. Dahler translates this as he did that in chap. xxiii, which is a perfect oversight: but paraphrastic renderings are too often introduced by this learned foreigner.

Verse 18. Neither shall the priests the Levites want a man] This is a repetition of the promise made to Phineas, Numb. xxv, 13.

Verse 20. If ye can break my covenant of the day] See the note on chap. xxxi, 36.

Verse 22. So will I multiply the seed of David] This must be understood of the spiritual David, Jesus Christ; and His progeny, genuine Christians. The two families which God chose for the priesthood, that of Aaron and Phineas, or on its being taken away from him, that of Ithamar, 1 Sam. ii, 35, are both extinct. Nor has the office of high-priest, or priest of any kind offering sacrifice, been exercised among the Jews for nearly eighteen hundred years; therefore, what is said here of the priesthood must refer to the spiritual priesthood, at the head of which is Jesus Christ.

Verse 24. The two families which the LORD hath chosen] thus they have despised my people, that they should be no more a nation before them.

25 Thus saith the LORD; If [a] my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not [b] appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth;

26 [c] Then will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David my servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: for [d] I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them.

Some think these refer to the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah: but they never can be considered as two distinct families, being of one and the same race. Others think that the families of Jacob and David are intended: but neither were these distinct. If the two families which had the priesthood be not meant, then the regal family of David, and the sacerdotal family of Jacob through Levi, may be designed. See ver. 26. Following the spiritual interpretation, neither the regal nor sacerdotal family has failed; for Jesus is a King and a Priest; and all true believers in Him are kings and priests unto God and the Lamb. And the highest king that ever reigned is He who is the Seed of David, King of kings, and Lord of lords, who has all power in heaven and in earth.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

This Chapter contains two prophecies: the first, delivered during the siege of Jerusalem, predicts to Zedekiah the taking and burning of the city, with his own peaceful death, and honourable burial, 1—7. The second was delivered when the Chaldeans had, for some time, broken up the siege. It reproves the Jews for their conduct towards their brethren of the poorer sort, whom they released by a solemn covenant, from bondage, in the extremity of their danger; but compelled to return to it when they thought that danger over, 8—11. For this God threatens them with the sword, pestilence, and famine; and with the return of the Chaldeans, who should take the city, destroy it and the other cities by fire, and make an utter desolation of the whole land of Judea, 12—22.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, (when [a] Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and all his army, and [b] all the kingdoms of the earth [c] of his dominion, and all the people, fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities thereof,) saying,

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIV.

Verse 1. The word which came unto Jeremiah] This Discourse was delivered in the tenth year of the reign of Zedekiah. The Chapter contains two Discourses; one ver. 1—7, which concerns the taking of the city, and Zedekiah's captivity and death; the other ver. 8—22, which is an invective against the inhabitants of Jerusalem for having Hebrew male and female slaves. These having been manumitted at the instance of the prophet, were afterward brought back by their old masters, and put in the same thraldom; for which God threatens them with severe judgments.

Nebuchadnezzar—and all his army, and all the kingdoms of the earth of his dominion] That is, his army was composed of soldiers gathered out of Babylon, and out of all his tributary dominions.

Verse 2. He shall burn it with fire] This was a newly added circumstance. Among many ancient nations they burnt the bodies of the more illustrious dead. Odours were used in the burning: they then gathered the ashes and put them into an urn or pitcher, sometimes in a strong vessel, and buried them. Many of these have been digged up in different parts of England, where the Romans had stations.

A. M. 3415. B. C. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 28.

and [a] he shall burn it with fire: 3 And [b] thou shalt not escape out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand; and thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and [c] he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth, and thou shalt go to Babylon.

4 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword:

5 But thou shalt die in peace: and with [d] the burnings of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, [e] so shall they burn odours for thee; and [f] they will lament thee, saying, Ah lord! for I have pronounced the word, saith the LORD.

6 Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem,

7 When the king of Babylon's army fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against Lachish, and against Azekah: for [g] these defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah.

8 This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to proclaim [h] liberty unto them;

9 [i] That every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free; [k] that none should serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

10 Now when all the princes, and all the people, which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his man-servant, and every one his maid-servant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed, and let them go.

11 But [l] afterward they turned, and caused the servants and the handmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.

12 Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondmen, saying,

14 At the end of [m] seven years let ye go every man his brother an Hebrew, which [n] hath been sold unto thee; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee: but your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear.

15 And ye were [o] now turned, and had done right in my sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbour; and ye had [p] made a covenant before me [q] in the house [r] which is called by my name:

16 But ye turned and [s] polluted my name, and Verse 3. Thou shalt not escape] This however he had attempted, but was taken in his flight. See chap. xxxix, 4, and lii, 7, &c.

Verse 5. Thou shalt die in peace] Thou shalt not die a violent death; and at thy death thou shalt have all those funeral solemnities which were usual at the demise of kings. See 2 Chron. xvi, 14.

And they will lament thee, saying, Ah, lord!] They will recite the funeral dirge that begins with those words. See the note on chap. xxii, 18.

Verse 6. Spake all these words unto Zedekiah] He delivered this message at the hazard of his life. Jeremiah feared God, and had no other fear.

Verse 7. Against Lachish, and against Azekah] These were two cities of Judah of considerable importance: they had been strongly fortified by Rehoboam, 2 Chron. ii, 9—11, 2 Chron. xxxii, 9.

Verse 8. The word that came unto Jeremiah] Here the second Discourse begins, which was delivered probably a short time, even a few days, after the former.

Zedekiah had made a covenant] We find no account elsewhere of this covenant. Every man should let his man-servant and his maid-servant go free; i. e. as we learn from ver. 14, on the sabbatical year; for the seventh year was the year of release. See Deut. xv, 12.

Verse 11. But afterward they turned] They had agreed to manumit them at the end of the seventh year: but, when the seventh year was ended, they recalled their engagement, and detained their servants. This, I believe, is what is here meant.

Verse 16. Ye—polluted my name] Had made the covenant in my name, calling me to witness it; now ye have dishonoured my name by breaking that covenant, and acting contrary to my law.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom he had set at liberty at their pleasure, to return, and brought them into subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Ye have not hearkened unto me in proclaiming liberty, every one to his brother, and every man to his neighbour: [a] behold, I proclaim a liberty for you, saith the LORD, [b] to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and I will make you [c] to be [d] removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.

18 And I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, which have not performed the words of the covenant which they had made before me, when [e] they cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof,

19 The princes of Judah, and the princes of Jerusalem, the eunuchs, and the priests, and all the people of the land, which passed between the parts of the calf;

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

20 I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life: and their [f] dead bodies shall be for meat unto the fowls of the heaven, and to the beasts of the earth.

21 And Zedekiah king of Judah, and his princes, will I give into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life, and into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, [g] which are gone up from you.

22 [h] Behold, I will command, saith the LORD, and cause them to return to this city; and they shall fight against it, [i] and take it, and burn it with fire: and [k] I will make the cities of Judah a desolation without an inhabitant.

Verse 17. I proclaim a liberty for you] Ye proclaimed liberty to your slaves, and afterwards resumed your authority over them; and I had in consequence restrained the sword from cutting you off: but now I give liberty to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine, and to the captivity, to destroy and consume you, and enslave you: for ye shall be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth. The prophet loves to express the conformity between the crime and its punishment. You promised to give liberty to your enslaved brethren; I was pleased, and bound the sword in its sheath. You broke your promise, and brought them again into bondage; I gave liberty to the sword, pestilence, and famine, to destroy multitudes of you, and captivity to take the rest. Thus you are punished according to your crimes, and in the punishment you may see the crime. Sword, pestilence, and famine, are frequently joined together, as being often the effects of each other. The sword, or war, produces famine;—famine, the pestilence.

Verse 18. When they cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof] This was the ancient and most solemn way of making a covenant. 1. A calf as sacrifice was offered to God to secure His approbation and support. 2. The victim was then exactly divided from the nose to the rump; the spinal marrow being divided longitudinally, in the most careful manner, that the half of it might remain on each side. 3. These divided parts were laid opposite to each other, a passage being left between them. 4. The contracting parties entered this passage at each end, met in the middle, and there took the covenant oath; adjudging themselves to death should they break this covenant. 5. Then they both feasted on the victim. In reference to this last circumstance, God says He will give their bodies for meat to the fowls of heaven, and to the beasts. This is a farther conformity between the crime and the punishment. See my notes on Gen. xv, 9—17.

Verse 21. The king of Babylon's army, which are gone up from you.] Nebuchadnezzar, hearing that there was an Egyptian army coming to the relief of Jerusalem, raised the siege; and went, met, and defeated the Egyptians. It was in the interim this prophecy was delivered.

Verse 22. I will—cause them to return] They did return; re-invested the city; and after an obstinate defence took it, plundered it, and burnt it to the ground, taking captives Zedekiah and his princes.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Jeremiah is commanded to go to the Rechabites who, on the approach of the Chaldean army, took refuge in Jerusalem; and to try their obedience to the command of Jonadab (or Jehonadab, 2 Kings x, 15, 16,) their great progenitor, who lived in the reign of Jehu, king of Israel, upwards of two hundred and fifty years before this time, offers them wine to drink, which they refuse, 1—11. Hence occasion is taken to upbraid the Jews with their disobedience to God, their heavenly Father, 12—17; and a blessing is pronounced on the Rechabites, 18, 19.

2 Go unto the house of the [a] Rechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the LORD, into one of [b] the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

3 Then I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziniah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites;

4 And I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan, the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, [c] the keeper of the [d] door:

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXV.

Verse 1. The word which came—in the days of Jehoiakim] What strange confusion in the placing of these Chapters! Who could have expected to hear of Jehoiakim again, whom we have long ago buried; and we have now arrived in the history, at the very last year of the last Jewish king.

This Discourse was probably delivered in the fourth or fifth year of Jehoiakim's reign.

Verse 2. The house of the Rechabites] The Rechabites were not descendants of Jacob: they were Kenites, 1 Chron. ii, 55, a people originally settled in that part of Arabia Petræa, called the land of Midian; and most probably the descendants of Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses. Compare Numb. x, 29—32, with Judg. i, 16; iv, 11. Those mentioned here seem to have been a tribe of Nomades or Scenite Arabs, who fed their flocks in the deserts of Judea; they preserved the simple manners of their ancestors, considering the life of the inhabitants of cities and large towns as the death of liberty; believing that they would dishonour themselves by using that sort of food that would oblige them to live a sedentary life. Jonadab, one of their ancestors, had required his children and descendants to abide faithful to the customs of their forefathers; to continue to live in tents, and to nourish themselves on the produce of their flocks; to abstain from the cultivation of the ground, and from that particularly of the vine and its produce. His descendants religiously observed this rule, till the time when the armies of the Chaldeans had entered Judea; when, to preserve their lives, they retired within the walls of Jerusalem. But even there we find, from the account in this Chapter, they did not quit their frugal manner of life: but most scrupulously observed the law of Jonadab their ancestor, and probably of this family.

When the children of Hobab, or Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, were invited by him to accompany them in their journeying to the Promised Land; it is very likely that they continued their ancient usages, and lived a patriarchal life. Their property, consisting in nothing but their cattle and tents, was easily removable from place to place; and their manner of living was not likely to excite the envy or jealousy of those who had learnt to relish the luxuries of life; and therefore we may naturally conclude, that as they were enemies to none, so they had no enemies themselves. Nature has few wants. Most of those which we feel are fictitious; and howsoever what we call civilization may furnish us with the conveniences and comforts of life, let us not deceive ourselves by supposing, that these very things do not create the very wants which they are called in to supply; and most certainly do not contribute to the comfort of life, when the term of life is considerably abridged by their use. But it is time to return to the case of the Rechabites before us.

Verse 3. The whole house of the Rechabites] i. e. The family,—the chiefs of which are here specified.

Verse 4. Igdaliah, a man of God] A prophet or holy man, having some office in the Temple.

Verse 5. Pots full of wine, and cups] The cups were to draw the wine out of the pots, in order to drink it.

Verse 6. We will drink no wine] The reason is given above. Their whole religious and political institution consisted in obedience to three simple precepts, each of which has an appropriate spiritual meaning:—

1. Ye shall drink no wine.—Ye shall preserve your bodies in temperance; shall use nothing that would deprive you of the exercise of your sober reason at any time; lest in such a time ye should do what might be prejudicial to yourselves, injurious to your neighbour, or dishonourable to your God.

A. M. cir. 3397. B. C. cir. 607. Ol. XLIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 10.

7 Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any: but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; [a] that ye may live many days in the land where ye be strangers.

8 Thus have we obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab our father in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters;

9 Nor to build houses for us to dwell in: neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed:

10 But we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.

11 But it came to pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

12 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Go and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not [b] receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD.

14 The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment: [c] notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, [d] rising early and speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me:

A. M. cir. 3397. B. C. cir. 607. Ol. XLIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 10.

15 [e] I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, [f] Return ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers: but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

16 Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not hearkened unto me:

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them: [g] because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered.

18 And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the LORD of hosts the God of Israel; Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and done according unto all that he hath commanded you:

19 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; [h] Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to [i] stand before me for ever.

Verse 2. Neither shall ye build house—Ye shall not become residents in any place; ye shall not court earthly possessions; ye shall live free from ambition and from envy, that ye may be free from contention and strife.

Verse 3. But ye shall dwell in tents.—Ye shall imitate your forefathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the rest of the patriarchs who dwelt in tents, being strangers and pilgrims upon earth; looking for a heavenly country, and being determined to have nothing here that would indispose their minds towards that place of endless rest, or prevent them from passing through temporal things, so as not to lose those that are eternal.

There must necessarily be more in these injunctions, than meets the eye in the letter of this account.

Verse 8. Thus have we obeyed the voice] We have considered these precepts so very reasonable, so very useful, so conducive to the health of both body and mind, and sanctioned by such a respectable antiquity, that we scrupulously and religiously observe them.

Verse 11. But—when Nebuchadrezzar—came up] If at present we appear to be acting contrary in any respect to our institutions, in being found in the city, necessity alone has induced us to take this temporary step. We have sought the shelter of the city for the preservation of our lives; so now we dwell at Jerusalem.

Verse 14. The words of Jonadab—are performed—but ye hearkened not unto me.] The Lord, knowing the fidelity of this people, chose to try them in this way, that he might, by their conscientious obedience to the precepts of their forefathers, shew the Jews, to their confusion, their ingratitude to Him, and their neglect of His precepts, which, if a man do, he shall live by them.

Verse 17. I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil] Having by the conduct of the Rechabites clearly and fully convicted them of ingratitude and rebellion, He now proceeds to pronounce sentence against them.

Verse 19. Thus saith the LORD—Jonadab—shall not want a man to stand before me for ever.] His name shall ever be honourable, and his posterity shall enjoy my continual protection; and there shall never be found a time in which men of his spirit shall be wanting as patterns of genuine simplicity, filial obedience, purity of manners, and deadness to the world. True Christians may be considered as the genuine successors of these ancient Rechabites: and some suppose that the Essenes, in our Lord's time, were literally their descendants; and that these were they who followed our Lord particularly, and became the first converts to the gospel. And, if so, the prophecy is literally fulfilled: they shall never want a man to stand before God, to proclaim His salvation, and minister to the edification and salvation of others, as long as the earth shall endure.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

God commands Jeremiah to write down in one roll, or volume, all the predictions he had uttered against Israel and Judah, and all the surrounding nations, from the day of his vocation to the prophetic office, that the house of Judah might have abundant warning of the dreadful calamities with which their country was about to be visited, if not prevented by a timely repentance, 1—3. The Prophet employs Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah, to write from his mouth all the words of the Lord, and then to read them publicly upon a fast day in the Lord's house, 4—8. A general fast is proclaimed in the following year, viz. the fifth year of the reign of Jehoiakim; upon which occasion Baruch, in obedience to the Prophet's command, reads the words of Jeremiah to all the people at the entry of the new gate of the Temple, 9, 10. The princes, hearing of this, send for Baruch, who reads the roll to them; at the contents of which they are greatly alarmed, and solemnly resolve to give information to the king, at the same time advising both the Prophet and his scribe to hide themselves, 11—19. Jehoiakim likewise having sent for the roll, Jehudi reads to him a part; and then the king, though advised to the contrary by some of his princes, having cut the leaves, throws the whole into the fire, 20—25; and orders Jeremiah and Baruch to be seized: but they could not be found, because a special providence of God had concealed them, 26. Jeremiah is commanded to rewrite his prophecies, and to denounce the judgments of God against the king who had destroyed the first roll, 27—31. Baruch accordingly writes from the mouth of Jeremiah a new copy, with numerous additions, 32.

AND it came to pass in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah king of Judah, that this word came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Take thee a [a] roll of a book, and [b] write therein all the words that I have spoken unto thee against Israel, and against Judah, and against [c] all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, from the days of [d] Josiah, even unto this day.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVI.

Verse 1. And it came to pass in the fourth year] About the end of this year, see ver. 9. This Discourse also bears its own date; and was probably delivered at a time when the people enjoyed peace, and were about to celebrate one of their annual fasts.

Verse 2. Take thee a roll of a book] Take a sufficient quantity of parchment; cut and stitch it together, that it may make a roll on which to write the words that I have already spoken, that they may serve for a testimony to future generations. The Jewish rolls, several of which now lie before me, were made of vellum, or of sheep skins dressed in the half-tanned or Basil manner. These were cut into certain lengths; and those parts were all stitched together, and rolled upon a roller. The matter was written on these skins, in columns or pages. Sometimes two rollers are used, that as the matter is read from the roll in the left hand, the reader may coil it on the roller in his right. In this form the Pentateuch is written, which is read in the synagogues.

Verse 3. It may be that the house of Judah will hear] It was yet possible to avert the judgments which had been so often denounced against them. But, in order to this, they 4 Then Jeremiah [a] called Baruch the son of Neriah: and [b] Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book.

5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up; I cannot go into the house of the LORD:

6 Therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD in the ears of the people in the LORD's house upon [c] the fasting day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities.

7 [d] It may be [e] they will present their supplication before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way: for great is the anger and the fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people.

8 And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

9 And it came to pass in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

10 Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the [f] entry [g] of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.

11 When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD,

12 Then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber: and, lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes.

13 Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them.

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words.

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

18 Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink in the book.

19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.

must, 1. Hear what God has spoken. 2. Every man turn from his evil way. 3. If they do so, God graciously promises to forgive their iniquity and their sin.

Verse 4. Then Jeremiah called Baruch] This man so useful to the prophet, and so faithfully attached to him, was by office a scribe; which signifies not only a writer, but also a man in office; a chancellor, secretary, &c., a learned man; one acquainted with laws and customs.

Verse 6. Upon the fasting day] A day when multitudes of people would be gathered together from all parts to implore the mercy of God. This was a favourable time to read these tremendous prophecies.

Verse 7. Present their supplication] "Let their supplication fall," that they may fall down before God, and deplore their sins.

Verse 9. In the ninth month] Answering to a part of our December.

Verse 10. In the chamber of Gemariah] He was one of the princes of Judah. See ver. 12.

Verse 17. How didst thou write all these words?—At his mouth?] So the Text should be pointed. They wished to know whether he had not copied them, or whether he wrote as Jeremiah prophesied.

Verse 19. Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah] They saw that the king would be displeased, and most probably seek their lives; and as they believed the prophecy was from

A. M. 3398. B. C. 606. Ol. XLIII. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 11.

20 And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

22 Now the king sat in [a] the winterhouse in the ninth month: and there was a fire on the hearth burning before him.

23 And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth.

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor [b] rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words.

25 Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll: but he would not hear them.

26 But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son [c] of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but the LORD hid them.

27 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying,

A. M. cir. 3399. B. C. cir. 605. Ol. XLIII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 12.

28 Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned.

29 And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king of Judah; [d] He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: and his dead body shall be [e] cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.

31 And I will [f] punish him and his seed and his servants for their iniquity; and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them; but they hearkened not.

32 Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah; who wrote therein from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire: and there were added besides unto them many [g] like words.

[a] See Amos 3. 15.——[b] 2 Kings 22. 11. Isa. 36. 22. & 37. 1.——[c] Or, of the king.

God, they wished to save both the prophet and his scribe: but they were obliged to inform the king of what they had heard.

Verse 22. Winterhouse] A warm apartment suited to the season of the year, (December,) when in Palestine there is often snow upon the ground, though it does not last long. A fire on the hearth, a pan, or brazier of burning coals. This is the case to the present day.

Verse 23. When Jehudi had read three or four leaves] Rather columns; for the law, and the sacred Hebrew books, are written in columns of a certain breadth. דלתות delatoth, signifies gates or openings between column and column, or between section and section.

He cut it with the penknife] בתער הסופר betaâr hasopher, the knife of the scribe; properly enough penknife.

And cast it into the fire] To shew his contempt for God's words.

Verse 25. Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah] Three of the princes wished to save the roll, and entreated the king that it might not be burnt. They would have saved it out of the fire: but the king would not permit it to be done.

Verse 26. But the LORD hid them] They had, at the counsel of some of the princes, hidden themselves, ver. 19. And now, though a diligent search was made, the Lord did not permit them to be found.

Verse 28. Take thee again another roll] There was no duplicate of the former preserved; and now God inspired the prophet with the same matter that He had given him before: and there is to be added the heavy judgment that is to fall on Jehoiakim and his courtiers.

Verse 30. He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David] He shall have no successor; and himself shall have an untimely end, and shall not even be buried, but his body be exposed to the open air, both night and day. He who wishes to hide his crimes, or take away the evidence which is against him, adds thereby to his iniquities, and is sure in consequence to double his punishment. See the threatening against Jehoiakim, chap. xxii, 19, and the Note there.

Verse 32. There were added—many like words.] All the first roll, with many other threatenings, and perhaps more minute declarations which were merely of a temporary importance and local application; and the Holy Spirit did not think proper to record them.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Zedekiah succeeds Coniah, the son of Jehoiakim, in the Jewish throne, and does that which is evil in the sight of the Lord, 1, 2. The king sends a message to Jeremiah, 3—5. God suggests an answer; and foretels the return of the Chaldean army, who should most assuredly take and burn the city, 6—10. Jeremiah, in attempting to leave this devoted city, and retire to his possession in the country, is seized as a deserter, and cast into a dungeon, 11—15. The king, after a conference with him, abates the rigour of his confinement, 16—21.

AND king [a] Zedekiah the son of Josiah reigned instead of Coniah the son of Jehoiakim, whom Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon made king in the land of Judah.

2 [b] But neither he, nor his servant, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, which he spake [c] by the prophet Jeremiah.

3 And Zedekiah the king sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah and [d] Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, Pray now unto the LORD our God for us.

4 Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people: for they had not put him into prison.

5 Then [e] Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt: [f] and when the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they departed from Jerusalem.

6 Then came the word of the LORD unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

7 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel: Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, [g] that sent you unto me to enquire of me; Behold, Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return to Egypt into their own land.

8 [h] And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVII.

Verse 1. And king Zedekiah the son of Josiah] Of the siege and taking of Jerusalem referred to here, and the making of Zedekiah king instead of Jeconiah, see 2 Kings xxiv, 1, &c., and the Notes there.

Verse 3. Zedekiah—to the prophet Jeremiah] He was willing to hear a message from the Lord, provided it were according to his own mind. He did not fully trust in his own prophets.

Verse 4. Now Jeremiah came in and went out] After the siege was raised, he had a measure of liberty; he was not closely confined, as he afterwards was. See ver. 16.

Verse 5. Then Pharaoh's army] This was Pharaoh-Hophra, or Apries, who then reigned in Egypt in place of his father Necho. See Ezek. xxix, 6, &c. Nebuchadnezzar hearing that the Egyptian army, on which the Jews so much depended, was on their march to relieve the city, suddenly raised the siege, and went to meet them. In the interim Zedekiah sent to Jeremiah to inquire of the Lord to know whether they might consider themselves in safety.

Verse 7. Pharaoh's army—shall return to Egypt] They were defeated by the Chaldeans; and, not being hearty in the cause, returned immediately to Egypt, leaving Nebuchadnezzar unmolested to recommence the siege.

Verse 10. For though ye had smitten the whole army] Strong words: but they shew how fully God was determined to give up this city to fire and sword; and how fully He had instructed His prophet on this point.

A. M. cir. 3414. B. C. cir. 590. Ol. XLVII. 3. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 27.

remained but [a] wounded men among them, yet should they rise up every man in his tent, and burn this city with fire.

11 [b] And it came to pass, that when the army of the Chaldeans was [c] broken up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army, 12 Then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, [d] to separate himself thence in the midst of the people.

13 And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah; and he took Jeremiah the prophet, saying, Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans.

14 Then said Jeremiah, It is [e] false; I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes.

15 Wherefore the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, [f] and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe: for they had made that the prison.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

16 When Jeremiah was entered into [g] the dungeon, and into the [h] cabins, and Jeremiah had remained there many days;

17 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out: and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

18 Moreover Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison?

19 Where are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land?

20 Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: [i] let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there.

21 Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah [k] into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, [l] until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

Verse 12. Jeremiah went forth] At the time that Nebuchadnezzar had raised the siege, and gone to meet the Egyptian army.

Go into the land of Benjamin] To Anathoth, his native city.

To separate himself thence] "To receive a portion thereof among the people;"—Blayney: who supposes that Jeremiah went to receive a portion of the proceeds of his patrimony at Anathoth, which had, previously to the siege, been in the hands of the Chaldeans. The siege being now raised, he thought of looking thus after his own affairs. The Chaldee is to the same sense.—"He went that he might divide the inheritance which he had there among the people."

Dahler translates,—"He went to withdraw himself from the siege, as many others of the inhabitants." I believe he went to withdraw himself from a city devoted to destruction, and in which he could no longer do any good.

Verse 13. Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans] Thou art a deserter, and a traitor to thy country. As he had always declared that the Chaldeans should take the city, &c., his enemies took occasion from this to say, he was in the interest of the Chaldeans, and that he wished now to go to them, and betray the place.

Verse 15. And smote him] Without any proof of the alleged treachery, without any form of justice.

In prison in the house of Jonathan] In Asiatic countries there is an apartment in the houses of the officers of the law, to confine all the accused that are brought before them. Jonathan was a scribe or secretary, and had a prison of this kind in his house.

Verse 16. Entered into the dungeon, and into the cabins] The dungeon was probably a deep pit; and the cabins or cells, niches in the sides, where different malefactors were confined. See Blayney.

Verse 17. Is there any word from the LORD?] Is there any farther revelation?

There is: thou shalt be delivered] What bold faithfulness! And to a king, in whose hands his life now lay.

Verse 19. Where are now your prophets] They told you that the Chaldeans should not come; I told you they would. According to my word the Chaldeans are come, and are departed only for a short time.

Verse 20. Cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan] He had been ill used in this man's custody, so as to endanger his life, the place being cold, and probably unhealthy.

Verse 21. Then Zedekiah—the court of the prison] Was contiguous to the king's house, where the prisoners could readily see their friends.

Give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street] From the public stores; which he received till all the provisions were spent.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

The princes of Judah, taking offence at Jeremiah on account of his predicting the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple by the Chaldeans, cause him to be cast into a deep and miry dungeon, 1—6. Ebed-melech an Æthiopian gets the king's permission to take him out, 7—13. Jeremiah advises the king, who consulted him privately, to surrender to the Chaldeans, 14—23. The king promises the Prophet that he will not put him to death, and requires him not to reveal what had passed to the princes; to whom he accordingly gives an evasive answer, telling them only so much of the conference as related to his request for his life, 24—28.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

THEN Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and [a] Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and [b] Pashur the son of Malchiah, [c] heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, [d] He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

3 Thus saith the LORD, [e] This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

4 Therefore the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, [f] let this man be put to death: for thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them: for this man seeketh not the [g] welfare of this people, but the hurt.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

5 Then Zedekiah the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

6 [h] Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the son [i] of Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Verse 1. Then Shephatiah] This was the faction, what Dahler terms the Antitheocratic faction, who were enemies to Jeremiah, and sought his life.

Verse 3. This city shall surely be given] This was a testimony that he constantly bore: he had the authority of God for it. He knew it was true, and he never wavered nor equivocated.

Verse 4. Let this man be put to death] And they gave their reasons plain enough: but the proof was wanting.

Verse 5. He is in your hand] Ye have power to do as ye please; I must act by your counsel. Poor weak prince! you respect the prophet, you fear the cabal, and you sacrifice an innocent man to your own weakness and their malice.

Verse 6. So Jeremiah sunk in the mire.] Their obvious design was, that he might be stifled in that place.

Verse 7. Ebed-melech] The servant of the king, one of the eunuchs who belonged to the palace. Perhaps it should be read, Now, a servant of the king, a Cushite, one of the eunuchs, &c.

The king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin.] To give audience, and to administer justice. We have often seen that the gates of cities were the places of public judicature.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

8 Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's house, and spake to the king, saying,

9 My lord the king, these men have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and, [a] he is like to die for hunger in the place where he is: for there is no more bread in the city.

10 Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Æthiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty men [b] with thee, and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts, and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah.

12 And Ebed-melech the Æthiopian said unto Jeremiah, Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine armholes under the cords. And Jeremiah did so.

13 [c] So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and Jeremiah remained [d] in the court of the prison.

14 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the [e] third entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

15 Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me?

16 So Zedekiah the king sware secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, As the LORD liveth, [f] that made us this soul, I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of these men that seek thy life.

17 Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; If thou wilt assuredly [g] go forth [h] unto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burned with fire; and thou shalt live, and thine house:

18 But if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then shall this city be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and [i] thou shalt not escape out of their hand.

19 And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they [k] mock me.

20 But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee. Obey, I beseech thee, the voice of the Verse 9. My lord the king, these men have done evil] He must have been much in the king's confidence, and a humane and noble spirited man, thus to have raised his voice against the powerful cabal already mentioned.

There is no more bread in the city.] They had defended it to the last extremity; and it appears that bread had been afforded to the prophet according to the king's commandment, as long as there was any remaining. See chap. xxxvi, 21.

Verse 10. Take from hence thirty men] The king was determined that he should be rescued by force, if the princes opposed.

Verse 11. Went into the house of the king—and took thence] The Eastern kings had their wardrobes always well furnished; as garments were a usual present to ambassadors, &c. I cannot think that, in the proper acceptation of the words, these were in any part of the king's house.

Old cast clouts, and old rotten rags] The fact seems to be this:—there were several garments that had been used, and would not be used again; and there were others which, through continuing long there, had by insects, &c., been rendered useless. These he took, tied to the cord, let down to the prophet, that he might roll them round the ropes, and place them under his arm-pits, so that in being hauled up he might not suffer injury from the ropes, which in this case must sustain the whole weight of his body.

Verse 14. Into the third entry] A place, to enter which, two others must be passed through.

Verse 16. As the LORD liveth, that made us this soul] He is the living God, and He is Author of that life which each of us possesses; and as sure as He lives, and we live by Him, I will not put thee to death, nor give thee into the hands of those men who seek thy life. A very solemn oath; and the first instance on record of the profane custom of swearing by the soul.

Verse 17. Wilt assuredly go] On the king's obedience to the advice of the prophet, the safety of the city depended.

Unto the king of Babylon's princes] The generals of the army then returning to the siege from the defeat of the Egyptians:—for Nebuchadnezzar himself was then at Riblah, in Syria, chap. xxix, 5, 6.

Verse 19. They mock me.] Insult me, and exhibit me in triumph.

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

LORD, which I speak unto thee: so it shall be well unto thee, and thy soul shall live.

21 But if thou refuse to go forth, this is the word that the LORD hath shewed me:

22 And, behold, all the women that are left in the king of Judah's house shall be brought forth to the king of Babylon's princes, and those women shall say, [a] Thy friends have set thee on, and have prevailed against thee: thy feet are sunk in the mire, and they are turned away back.

23 So they shall bring out all thy wives and [b] thy children to the Chaldeans: and [c] thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon: and [d] thou shalt cause this city to be burned with fire.

24 Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death; and also what the king said unto thee:

A. M. cir. 3415. B. C. cir. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 28.

26 Then thou shalt say unto them, [e] I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return [f] to Jonathan's house, to die there.

27 Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. So [g] they left off speaking with him; for the matter was not perceived.

28 So [h] Jeremiah abode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

Verse 22. All the women—brought forth] I think this place speaks of a kind of defection among the women of the Harem; many of whom had already gone forth privately to the principal officers of the Chaldean army, and made the report mentioned in the end of this verse. These were the concubines, or women of the second rank.

Verse 23. They shall bring out all thy wives and thy children] These were the women of the first rank, by whom the king had children. These had no temptation to go out to the Chaldeans, nor would they have been made welcome: but the others being young, and without children, would be well received by the Chaldean princes.

Verse 26. I presented my supplication] This was telling the truth, and nothing but the truth: but not the whole truth. The king did not wish him to defile his conscience, nor did he propose any thing that was not consistent with the truth.

Verse 27. The matter was not perceived] They did not question him farther; and the king's commandment to remove him from the house of Jonathan being well known, they took for granted that they had all the information that they sought. And he was most certainly not obliged to relate any thing that might embroil this weak king with his factious, but powerful princes; or affect his own life. He related simply what was necessary, and no more.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

This Chapter gives an account of the siege and taking of Jerusalem; the flight, capture, and punishment, of Zedekiah; the burning of the city; and the carrying away of the people (a few of the meanest excepted) to Babylon, 1—10: also of the release of Jeremiah, and the special orders of Nebuchadnezzar concerning him, 11—14. The remaining verses relate to the subject of the preceding Chapter; and contain promises of personal safety to Ebed-melech the Æthiopian amidst the public calamities, on account of his piety, and his humanity to the Prophet, 15—18.

2 And in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.

3 [b] And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate, even Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rabsaris, Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 [c] And it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls: and he went out the way of the plain.

5 But the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and [d] overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to [e] Riblah in the land of Hamath, where he [f] gave judgment upon him.

6 Then the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah.

7 Moreover [g] he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him [h] with chains, to carry him to Babylon.

8 [i] And the Chaldeans burned the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

9 [k] Then Nebuzar-adan the [l] captain [m] of the guard carried away captive into Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIX.

Verse 1. In the ninth year of Zedekiah—in the tenth month] This month is called Tebeth in Esther ii, 16. It began with the first new moon of our January; and it was on the tenth day of this month that Nebuchadnezzar invested the city.

Verse 2. The eleventh year—in the fourth month] This month in the Hebrew calendar is called Thammuz, and commences with the first new moon of our July. The siege had lasted just eighteen months.

The city was broken up.] A breach was made in the wall by which the Chaldeans entered.

Verse 3. Sat in the middle gate] The city of Jerusalem stood upon two hills, Sion to the south, and Acra to the north, with a deep valley between them. The gate of the centre, as the term seems plainly to import, was a gate of communication in the middle of the valley, between the two parts of the city, sometimes called the higher and the lower city. The Chaldeans entered the city on the north side by a breach in the walls; and rushing forward and posting themselves in this gate, in the very heart or centre of the city, became thereby masters at will of the whole. Zedekiah with his troop, perceiving this, fled out of the opposite gate on the south side. See Blayney. This is likely: but we know nothing positively on this subject.

Nergal-sharezer] These were the principal commanders: but Dr. Blayney thinks that, instead of six persons, we have in reality but three, as the name that follows each is a title of office. Thus, Nergal-sharezer, who was Samgar; Nebu-sarsechim, who was Rab-saris; and Nergal-sharezer, who was Rab-mag. As Nergal-sharezer occurs twice here, and we know that Nebuzar-adan was general-in-chief, the first Nergal-sharezer is probably a mistake for Nebu-zaradan, or some other of the commanders. But these things are as uncertain as they are unimportant.

Verse 4. Went forth out of the city by night] Probably there was a private passage under ground, leading without the walls, by which Zedekiah and his followers might escape unperceived, till they had got some way from the city.

The way of the plain.] There were two roads from Jerusalem to Jericho. One passed over the mount of Olives: but, as this might have retarded his flight, he chose the way of the plain; and was overtaken near Jericho, perhaps about sixteen or eighteen miles from Jerusalem. He had probably intended to have passed the Jordan, in order to escape to Egypt; as the Egyptians were then his professed allies.

Verse 5. To Riblah] This city was situated on the northern frontier of Palestine; and Hamath was a large city belonging also to Syria. See Gen. x, 18.

Verse 7. Bound him with chains] Margin,—two brazen chains; one for his hands, and the other for his feet.

Verse 9. Those that fell away] That deserted to the Chaldeans during the siege.

Verse 10. Left of the poor of the people] The very refuse of the inhabitants, who were not worthy of being carried left of the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields [a] at the same time.

11 Now Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon gave charge concerning Jeremiah [b] to Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying,

12 Take him, and [c] look well to him, and do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

13 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, and all the king of Babylon's princes;

14 Even they sent, [d] and took Jeremiah out of the court of the prison, and committed him [e] unto Gedaliah the son of [f] Ahikam the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home: so he dwelt among the people.

15 Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

A. M. cir. 3416. B. C. cir. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 29.

16 Go and speak to [g] Ebed-melech the Æthiopian, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold [h] I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day before thee.

17 But I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD: and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but [i] thy life shall be for a prey unto thee: [k] because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

away; and among them he divided the fields and vineyards of those whom he took away.

Verse 12. Take him—look well to him] Nebuchadnezzar had heard that this prophet had foretold his capture of the city, and had frequently used all his influence to induce Zedekiah to pay the tribute, and not rebel against him; and on this account would be inclined to shew the prophet especial favour.

Verse 16. Go and speak to Ebed-melech] The king's servant,—the Cushite.

Verse 18. I will surely deliver thee] Thou hast feared the Lord, and not the king, nor his princes; and thou hast taken the part of the prophet, and become his intercessor. Thou shalt not be slain. Thou hast put thy trust in me; thou shalt therefore be safe whithersoever thou goest. They that fear God, need fear nothing besides.

CHAPTER XL.

This and the four following Chapters contain a distinct account of what passed in the land of Judah from the taking of Jerusalem to the retreat of the remnant of the people to Egypt; together with the prophecies of Jeremiah concerning them in that place, whither he himself accompanied them. In this Chapter we have an account of the enlargement of Jeremiah by Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, who advises him to put himself under the jurisdiction of Gedaliah, the son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land of Judea, 1—5. The Prophet and many of the dispersed Jews repair to Gedaliah, 6—12. Johanan acquaints the governor of a conspiracy against him, but is not believed, 13—16.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XL.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah] This and the four following Chapters contain a particular account of what passed in the land of Judea from the taking of the city to the retreat of the people into Egypt; and the prophecies of Jeremiah concerning them there.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

carried away captive unto Babylon.
2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and [a] said unto him, The LORD thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place.
3 Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath said: [b] because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you.
4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which [c] were upon thine hand. [d] If it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come; and [e] I will look well unto thee: but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear; behold, [f] all the land is before thee: whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go.
5 Now while he was not yet gone back, he said, Go back also to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, [g] whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people: or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go.
6 [h] Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to [i] Mizpah; and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.
7 [k] Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of [l] the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon;

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

8 Then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, [m] even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.
9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan sware unto them and to their men, saying, Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.
10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, [n] to serve the Chaldeans, which will come unto us: but ye, gather ye wine and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.
11 Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan;
12 Even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.
13 Moreover Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah,
14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly

Had let him go from Ramah] This has embarrassed most of the Commentators. Dr. Blayney has thrown much light upon it by his translation and note:—

"The word that came to Jeremiah from Jehovah, after that Nebu-Zaradan captain of the guards had taken him, and let him go from Ramah: for he had been bound with chains among all the captives of Jerusalem and Judah, who were carried away captive to Babylon."

"HAD TAKEN HIM, AND LET HIM GO. Most interpreters have understood בקחתו אתו be-kachuto oto of Nebuchadnezzar's having first taken Jeremiah as a captive unto Ramah. But, if the order of the sentence be well observed, as well as the more common use of the verb לקח lakach, it will, I think, rather appear that those words relate to his taking, or having him brought to him, in order to give him his discharge."

Verse 2. The LORD thy God hath pronounced] I know that thou art a true prophet, for what thou hast predicted from thy God is come to pass.

Verse 4. Come; and I will look well unto thee] Thou art now at full liberty to do as thou pleasest; either to come to Babylon, or to stay in thy own land.

Verse 5. Go back also to Gedaliah] If thou wilt stay in thy own land, thou hadst best put thyself under the protection of thy countryman, Gedaliah, whom the king of Babylon has made governor of the land.

Verse 8. Ishmael the son of Nethaniah] This is he who afterwards murdered Gedaliah. He had been employed to do this by Baalis, king of the Ammonites, with whom he appears to have taken refuge during the siege. See ver. 14.

Verse 14. But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not] The account given of this man proves him to have know that [a] Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah [b] to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not.

15 Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish?

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

16 But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, Thou shalt not do this thing: for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

[a] See ch. 41. 10.

[b] Heb. to strike thee in soul?

been a person of uncommon greatness of soul. Conscious of his own integrity and benevolence, he took the portrait of others from his own mind; and therefore believed evil of no man, because he felt none towards any in his own breast. He may be reproached for being too credulous and confident: but any thing of this kind that may be justly charged against him serves only to shew the greatness of his mind. A little soul is ever suspicious, and ready to believe the worst of every person and thing. A great mind acts always on the contrary.

Verse 16. Thou shalt not do this thing] He cannot be so base.

Thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.] He thought it quite possible that the man who was capable of becoming an assassin, was capable of telling a lie; and therefore he would not credit what he said. Had he been a little more distrustful, he would have saved his own life. The next Chapter shews that Johanan's information was too true. So noble Gedaliah lost his life by not believing that evil of others, of which he found himself incapable.

CHAPTER XLI.

Ishmael executes his conspiracy against Gedaliah the governor and his companions, and attempts to carry away the Jews who were with him captives to the Ammonites, 1—10: but Johanan recovers them, and purposes to flee into Egypt, 11—18.

NOW it came to pass in the seventh month, [a] that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and there they did eat bread together in Mizpah.

2 Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and [b] smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

3 Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.

4 And it came to pass the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it,

Verse 1. Now—in the seventh month] Answering to the first new moon in our month of October.

There they did eat bread together] This was the same as making a solemn covenant; for he who ate bread with another was ever reputed a friend.

Verse 2. Smote Gedaliah] See preceding Chapter, ver. 14.

Verse 5. Having their beards shaven] All these were offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to [a] the house of the LORD.

6 And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, [b] weeping all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam.

7 And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and [c] cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him.

8 But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not: for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbare, and slew them not among their brethren.

9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain [d] because [e] of Gedaliah, was it [f] which Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, [g] even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, [h] whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over to [i] the Ammonites.

11 But when Johanan the son of Kareah, and all [k] the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done,

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

12 Then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by [l] the great waters that are in Gibeon.

13 Now it came to pass that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, then they were glad.

14 So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about and returned, and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah.

15 But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and went to the Ammonites.

16 Then took Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom he had recovered from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, even mighty men of war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he had brought again from Gibeon:

17 And they departed, and dwelt in the habitation of [m] Chimham, which is by Beth-lehem, to go to enter into Egypt, 18 Because of the Chaldeans: for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, [n] whom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

signs of deep mourning; probably on account of the destruction of the city.

Verse 6. Weeping all along as he went] This felonious hypocrite pretended that he also was deeply afflicted, and wished to bear them company in their sorrow.

Come to Gedaliah] He will appoint you vineyards and fields.

Verse 7. Slew them] He kept the murder of Gedaliah secret, and no doubt had a band of his assassins lodged in Mizpah; and he decoyed these fourscore men thither that he might have strength to slay them. He kept ten alive because they told him they had treasures hidden in a field, which they would shew him. Whether he kept his word with them is not recorded. He could do nothing good or great;—and it is likely that, when he had possessed himself of those treasures, he served them as he had served their companions. Grain is preserved to the present day in subterranean pits, called mattamores, in different parts of the East.

Verse 9. Now the pit—was it which Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha] See 1 Kings xv, 22. Asa made this cistern as a reservoir for water for the supply of the place; for he built and fortified Mizpah at the time that he was at war with Baasha, king of Israel.

Verse 10. Carried away captive] He took all these that he might sell them for slaves among the Ammonites.

Verse 14. Went unto Johanan] They were weary of the tyranny of Ishmael, and were glad of an opportunity to abandon him.

Verse 16. The women,—children,—and the eunuchs] These were all, most probably, persons who belonged to the palace and harem of Zedekiah: some of them his own concubines, and their children.

Verse 17. Dwelt in the habitation of Chimham] The estate that David gave to Chimham, the son of Barzillai. See 2 Sam. xix, 37, &c. He took this merely as a resting place; as he designed to carry all into Egypt, fearing the Chaldeans, who would endeavour to revenge the death of Gedaliah.

CHAPTER XLII.

Johanan and the remnant of the people desire Jeremiah to ask counsel of God what they should do, 1—3. The Prophet assures them of safety in Judea, but destruction in Egypt, 4—18; and reproves their hypocrisy in asking a counsel with which they had no intention to comply, 19—22.

THEN all the captains of the forces, [a] and Johanan the son of Kareah, and Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people from the least even unto the greatest, came near,

2 And said unto Jeremiah the prophet, [b] Let, we beseech thee, our supplication be accepted before thee, and [c] pray for us unto the LORD thy God, even for all this remnant; (for we are left but [d] a few of many, as thine eyes do behold us:)

3 That the LORD thy God may shew us [e] the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that we may do.

4 Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard you; behold, I will pray unto the LORD your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that [f] whatsoever thing the LORD shall answer you, I will declare it unto you; I will [g] keep nothing back from you.

5 Then they said to Jeremiah, [h] The LORD be a true and faithful Witness between us, if we do not even according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us.

7 And it came to pass after ten days, that the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah.

8 Then called he Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces which were with him, and all the people from the least even to the greatest,

9 And said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto whom ye sent me to present your supplication before him;

10 If ye will still abide in this land, then [k] will I build you, and not pull you down; and I will plant you, and not pluck you up: for I [l] repent me of the evil that I have done unto you.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLII.

Verse 1. The captains of the forces] The different leaders of the small bands or companies, collected from different parts of the land. The principal are those here named.

Verse 3. That the LORD thy God may shew us] They all thought there was no safety in Jerusalem or in Judea, and therefore determined to leave the land: but they did not know which might be the safest direction to take; for though they inclined to Egypt, yet they wished to know the mind of God on that point.

Verse 5. The LORD be a true and faithful Witness] The Lord is such; and as ye have bound yourselves to obey His voice, He will register the covenant, and bless or curse according as ye shall conduct yourselves in this matter.

Verse 7. After ten days] All this time he was waiting upon God; for it is evident the prophets could not prophesy when they pleased, any more than the disciples of our Lord could work miracles when they wished. The gift of prophecy and the gift of miracles were both dependant on the will of the Most High, and each of them was given only for the moment; and when the necessity was over, the influence ceased.

Verse 10. For I repent me of the evil] The meaning is,—as I have punished you only because you continued to be rebellious, I will arrest this punishment as soon as you be-

11 Be not afraid of the king of Babylon, of whom ye are afraid; be not afraid of him, saith the LORD: [a] for I am with you to save you, and to deliver you from his hand.

12 And [b] I will shew mercies unto you, that he may have mercy upon you, and cause you to return to your own land.

13 But if [c] ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey the voice of the LORD your God,

14 Saying, No; but we will go into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, nor hear the sound of the trumpet, nor have hunger of bread; and there will we dwell:

15 And now therefore hear the word of the LORD, ye remnant of Judah, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; If ye [d] wholly set [e] your faces to enter into Egypt, and go to sojourn there;

16 Then it shall come to pass, that the sword, [f] which ye feared, shall overtake you there in the land of Egypt, and the famine, whereof ye were afraid, [g] shall follow close after you there in Egypt; and there ye shall die.

17 [h] So shall it be with all the men that set their faces to go into Egypt to sojourn there; they shall die [i] by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: and [k] none of them shall remain or escape from the evil that I will bring upon them.

19 The LORD hath said concerning you, O ye remnant of Judah; [n] Go ye not into Egypt: know certainly that I have [o] admonished you this day.

20 For [p] ye dissembled in your hearts, when ye sent me unto the LORD your God, saying, [q] Pray for us unto the LORD our God: and according unto all that the LORD our God shall say, so declare unto us, and we will do it.

21 And now I have this day declared it to you; but ye have not obeyed the voice of the LORD your God, nor any thing for the which he hath sent me unto you.

22 Now therefore know certainly that [r] ye shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, in the place whither ye desire [s] to go and to sojourn.

come obedient to my word. You need not fear the king of Babylon if you have me for your Helper; and I will so shew mercy to you that he shall see it, and cease from afflicting you, as he shall see that I am on your side.

Verse 15. If ye—set your faces to enter into Egypt, &c.] Every evil that ye dreaded by staying in your own land, shall come upon you in Egypt.

Verse 16. The sword—and the famine—shall follow close after you] Shall be at your heels; overtake and destroy you; for there ye shall die.

Verse 19. Go ye not into Egypt] Why? Because God knew, such was their miserable propensity to idolatry, that they would there adopt the worship of the country, and serve idols.

Verse 20. For ye dissembled in your hearts] What a most miserable and incorrigible people! Ingratitude, hypocrisy, rebellion, and cruelty, seem to have been enthroned in their hearts! And what are they still? Just what their fathers were, except in the mere article of idolatry; and that they practise not, because they are indifferent to their own religion, and that of all others. Examine their devotions and their lives; and see whether Charity itself can say they believe in the God of Abraham!

Verse 21. Ye have not obeyed the voice] Though ye have requested to have this particular revelation of the Divine will, and promised obedience; yet have ye not done one thing for which ye sent me to enquire of the Lord.

Verse 22. Now therefore know certainly] As ye have determined to disobey, God has determined to punish. Ye may now follow the full bent of your wicked devices; and I will follow the requisitions of my justice. Ye shall die by the sword, by the pestilence, and by the famine, in the place whither ye desire to go to sojourn. Thus was their doom sealed.

With such dispositions and with such rebellion of heart, it is strange that they should put themselves to any trouble to enquire of the Lord, relative to their future operations. They did not intend to obey: but, as a matter of curiosity, they would enquire to hear what the prophet might say; and, if according to their own inclination, they would obey.

CHAPTER XLIII.

The leading men, discrediting Jeremiah's prophecy, carry the people into Egypt, 1—7. Jeremiah, by a type, foretels the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, 8—13. This mode of conveying instruction by actions was very expressive, and frequently practised by the prophets. The image of Nebuchadnezzar arraying himself with Egypt, as a shepherd puts on his garment, is very noble. Egypt at this time contended with Babylon for the empire of the East; yet this mighty kingdom, when God appoints the revolution, shifts its owner with as much ease as a shepherd removes his tent or garment, which the new proprietor has only to spread over him. See ver. 12.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

AND it came to pass, that when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the LORD their God, for which the LORD their God had sent him to them, even all these words,

2 [a] Then spake Azariah the son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the proud men, saying unto Jeremiah, Thou speakest falsely: the LORD our God hath not sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there:

3 But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they might put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon.

4 So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, obeyed not the voice of the LORD, to dwell in the land of Judah.

5 But Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took [b] all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations, whither they had been driven to dwell in the land of Judah;

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

6 Even men, and women, and children, [c] and the king's daughters, [d] and every person that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah.

7 So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: thus came they even to [e] Tahpanhes.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 30.

8 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,

9 Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brick-kiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;

10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIII.

Verse 2. Thou speakest falsely] They had no other colour for their rebellion than flatly to deny that God had spoken what the prophet related.

Verse 6. Men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters] See the Note on chap. xli, 10. It is truly surprising that the Chaldeans should have left behind any of the royal family of Judah! But,—1. Perhaps they knew not there were any. 2. If they did know, they might think, being children of concubines, they could not inherit. Or, 3. That being females, they were not eligible. And they had taken care to seize all Zedekiah's sons, and slay them before his eyes.

Verse 7. Came they even to Tahpanhes] This city was called Daphne by the Greeks; and was situated at the extremity of Lower Egypt, near to Heliopolis. It was called Daphne Pelusiaca. They halted at this place, most probably for the purpose of obtaining the king's permission to penetrate further into Egypt. It was at this place that, according to St. Jerom, tradition says the faithful Jeremiah was stoned to death by these rebellious wretches; for whose welfare he had watched, prayed, gone through many indignities, and suffered every kind of hardship. And now he sealed the truth of his Divine mission with his blood.

Verse 9. Take great stones] This Discourse seems to have been delivered about a year after the destruction of Jerusalem. They pretended that they dare not stay in Judea for fear of the Chaldeans. The prophet here assures them that Nebuchadnezzar shall come to Egypt, extend his conquests in that kingdom, and place his tent over the very place where these stones were laid up;—and destroy them. How these prophecies were fulfilled, see at the end of chap. xliv.

of hosts the God of Israel; Behold, I will send and take Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, [a] my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid; and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.

11 [b] And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver [c] such as are for death to death: and such as are for captivity to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword.

12 And I will kindle a fire in the houses of [d] the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them and carry them away captives: and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment; and he shall go forth from thence in peace.

13 He shall break also the [e] images of [f] Beth-shemesh, that is in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

[a] Ch. 25. 9. & 27. 6. See Ezek. 29. 18, 20.——[b] Ch. 44. 13. & 46. 13.——[c] Ch. 15. 2. Zech. 11. 9.

[d] Ch. 46. 25.——[e] Heb. statues, or, standing images.——[f] Or, the house of the sun.

Verse 11. Such as are for death to death] See the Note on chap. xv, 2.

Verse 12. He shall burn them, and carry them away captives] Some of these gods, such as were of wood, he will burn; those of metal he will carry away. Some of them were of gold. See below.

Shall array himself with the land of Egypt] Shall take all its wealth, and all its grandeur; shall take all its spoils.

As a shepherd putteth on his garment] With as much ease, and with as little opposition; and with as full a confidence that it is now his own.

He shall go forth from thence in peace] He shall suffer no interruption, nor endure any disaster in his return from his Egyptian expedition. See the proof of all this in the Notes at the end of chap. xliv.

Verse 13. He shall break also the images of Beth-shemesh] בית שמש Beith-shemesh is, literally, the house, or temple, of the sun; which was worshipped here, and whose images are said to have been of solid gold. These Nebuchadnezzar was to break and carry away; and the houses of the gods,—all the temples of Egypt, he was to burn with fire. Beth-shemesh is the same as Heliopolis.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Jeremiah reproves the Jews in Egypt for continuing in idolatry after the exemplary judgments inflicted by God on their nation for that sin, 1—14; and, upon their refusing to reform, denounces destruction to them, and to that kingdom wherein they sought protection, 15—30.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIV.

Verse 1. The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews] Dahler supposes this Discourse to have been delivered in the seventeenth or eighteenth year after the taking of Jerusalem.

Which dwell at Migdol] A city of Lower Egypt, not far from Pelusium.

Tahpanhes] Daphne Pelusiaca, the place to which the emigrant Jews first went.

Noph] מפס Maphes, Targum. Memphis, a celebrated city of Middle Egypt, and the capital of its district.

The country of Pathros] A district of Upper Egypt, known by the name of the Thebais. See Bochart, Lib. Phaleg, lib. iv, c. 22. Thus we find that the Jews were scattered over the principal parts of Egypt.

Verse 2. No man dwelleth therein] The desolation of the land of Judea must have been exceedingly great when this, in almost any sense, could be spoken of it.

A. M. cir. 3433. B. C. cir. 571. Ol. cir. LII. 2. Servii Tullii, Reg. Roman. cir. annum 8.

3 Because of their wickedness which they have committed to provoke me to anger, in that they went [a] to burn incense, and to [b] serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

4 Howbeit, [c] I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate.

5 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods.

6 Wherefore [d] my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

7 Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; Wherefore commit ye this great evil [e] against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, [f] out of Judah, to leave you none to remain;

8 In that ye [g] provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might be [h] a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have ye forgotten the [i] wickedness of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

10 They are not [k] humbled even unto this day, neither have they [l] feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you and before your fathers.

A. M. cir. 3433. B. C. cir. 571. Ol. cir. LII. 2. Servii Tullii, Reg. Roman. cir annum 8.

11 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold [m] I will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

12 And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and [n] they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine: and [o] they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 [p] For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence:

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they [q] have a desire to return to dwell there: for [r] none shall return but such as shall escape.

15 Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

Verse 4. Oh, do not this abominable thing] A strong specimen of affectionate entreaty. One of the finest figures of poetry, when judiciously managed, the anthropopathia, the ascribing human passions to God, is often used by this prophet:—so God is said to grieve, to mourn, to have His bowels moved with compassion, to repent, to be angry, &c. Here He is represented as tenderly expostulating;—Oh, do not;—or, I entreat you, do not that abominable thing which I hate. 1. Do it not: your God commands. 2. O, do it not!—your Father entreats. 3. It is an abominable thing, and should not be done. 4. I hate it, and on that account ye should abstain from it.

Verse 5. But they hearkened not] 1. They disregarded the authority of their God. 2. They were not moved by the entreaties of their most affectionate Father. 3. In abominations they delighted. And,—4. They loved that which God hated; and, apparently, because He hated it.

Verse 7. This great evil against your souls] Will not self-interest weigh with you? See what ruin your conduct has brought upon your country. Your fathers sinned as you are doing; and where are they now? Either destroyed, or in captivity. And you are now taking the same way to your own destruction.

Verse 9. Have ye forgotten the wickedness of your fathers] It seems that the women were principal agents in idolatrous practices; for the queens, the wives of rulers and of common people, burnt incense to the queen of heaven, (the moon) ver. 17, and poured out drink offerings to her.

Verse 15. Then all the men—and all the women] We have not seen the women in determined rebellion before, 16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the LORD, [a] we will not hearken unto thee.

17 But we will certainly do [b] whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the [c] queen [d] of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of [e] victuals, and were well, and saw no evil.

18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.

19 [f] And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink offerings unto her, without our [g] men?

20 Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,

21 The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind?

22 So that the LORD could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land [h] a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, [i] as at this day.

23 Because ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; [k] therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

24 Moreover Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the LORD, all Judah [l] that are in the land of Egypt:

25 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying; [m] Ye and your wives have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.

26 Therefore hear ye the word of the LORD, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt; Behold, [n] I have sworn by my great name, saith the LORD, that [o] my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, the Lord GOD liveth.

27 [p] Behold, I will watch over them for evil, and not for good; and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt [q] shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them.

28 Yet [r] a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah, and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose [s] words shall stand, [t] mine, or their's.

Here they make a common cause with their idolatrous husbands.

Verse 19. And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven] The MOON seems to have been called מלכת melakath, as the SUN was called מלך molak.

The idolatrous worship of these people was a sort of imitation of the worship of the true God; only sacrifice was not common in it. The fractious women here tell us in what it consisted. 1. They burnt incense to the moon, and perhaps to the sun and the planets. 2. They poured out libations to her. 3. They made and consecrated cakes to her. All these were prescribed in the worship of the true GOD. See, among others, Exod. xxix, 23, &c. Lev. ii, 4, xxiii, 16, and Numb. vi, 15. And the women vindicate their conduct by asserting that they did all this by the consent of their husbands:—Did we worship her without our men?

Verse 22. Therefore is your land a desolation] I grant that ye and your husbands have joined together in these abominations;—and what is the consequence? The Lord could no longer bear because of your evil doings; and therefore is your land a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, this day.

Verse 30. Behold I will give Pharaoh-hophra] i. e. Pharaoh Apries. How this and the prophecies in the preceding Chapter were fulfilled we learn from ancient historians. The sum of such information is this:—the subjects of Pharaoh Apries rebelling, he sent Amasis, one of his generals, to reduce them to their duty. But no sooner had Amasis begun to make his speech, than they fixed a helmet on his head, and proclaimed him king. Amasis accepted the title, and confirmed the Egyptians in their revolt; and the greater part of the nation declaring for him, Apries was obliged to retire into Upper Egypt; and the country being thus weakened by intestine war, was attacked and easily overcome by Nebuchadnezzar, who on quitting it left Amasis his viceroy. After Nebuchadnezzar's departure, Apries marched against Amasis: but, being defeated at Memphis, was taken prisoner, carried to Saïs, and was strangled in his own palace, thus verifying this prophecy. See Herodotus in Euterpe.

Thus Nebuchadnezzar made an easy conquest of the land. He conquered it as easily as a shepherd puts on his cloak: he went thence in peace, having clothed himself with its spoils; and left all quiet under a viceroy of his own choosing. The rebellion of Pharaoh's subjects was the fire that God kindled in Egypt, chap. xliii, 12. And thus was he delivered into the hands of his enemies, his revolted people; and into the hand of him who sought his life, i. e. Amasis his general. And thus the whole prophecy was literally fulfilled.

CHAPTER XLV.

This Chapter is evidently connected with the subject treated of in the thirty-sixth. Baruch, who had written the prophecies of Jeremiah, and read them publicly in the Temple, and afterwards to many of the princes, is in great affliction because of the awful judgments with which the land of Judah was about to be visited; and also on account of the imminent danger to which his own life was exposed, in publishing such unwelcome tidings, 1—3. To remove Baruch's fear with respect to this latter circumstance, the Prophet assures him that though the total destruction of Judea was determined because of the great wickedness of the inhabitants, yet his life should be preserved amidst the general desolation, 4, 5.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLV.

Verse 1. The word that Jeremiah—spake unto Baruch] This is another instance of shameless transposition. This Discourse was delivered in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, several years before Jerusalem was taken by the Chaldeans. It is a simple appendage to chap. xxxvi, and there it should have been inserted.

Verse 3. Thou didst say, Woe is me now!] All that were the enemies of Jeremiah, became his enemies too; and he needed these promises of support.

The Lord hath added grief to my sorrow] He had mourned for the desolations that were coming on his country, and now he mourns for the dangers to which he feels his own life exposed: for we find from chap. xxxvi, 26, that the king

LORD hath added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest.

4 Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus; Behold, [a] that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not: for, behold, [b] I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the LORD: but thy life will I give unto thee [c] for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

[a] Isa. 5. 5.——[b] Ch. 25. 26.

[c] Ch. 21. 9. & 38. 2. & 39. 18.

had given commandment to take both Baruch and Jeremiah, in order that they might be put to death at the instance of his nobles.

Verse 4. Behold, that which I have built] I most certainly will fulfil all those threatenings contained in the roll thou hast written;—for I will destroy this whole land.

Verse 5. And seekest thou great things for thyself?] Nothing better can be expected of this people: thy hopes in reference to them are vain. Expect no national amendment, till national judgments have taken place. And as for any benefit to thyself, think it sufficient that God has determined to preserve thy life amidst all these dangers.

But thy life will I give unto thee for a prey] This is a proverbial expression. We have met with it before, chap. xxi, 9, xxxviii, 2, xxxix, 18; and it appears to have this meaning. As a prey or spoil is that which is gained from a vanquished enemy, so it is preserved with pleasure as the proof and reward of a man's own valour. So Baruch's life should be doubly precious unto him, not only on account of the dangers through which God should cause him to pass safely: but also on account of those services he had been enabled to render, the consolations he had received, and the continual and very evident interposition of God in his behalf. All these would be dearer to him than the spoils of a vanquished foe to the hero who had overcome in battle.

Spoil may signify, unlooked for gain. The preservation of his life, in such circumstances, must be more than he could reasonably expect: but his life should be safe; and he should have it as a spoil whithersoever he should go. This assurance must have quieted all his fears.

CHAPTER XLVI.

The difference between the preceding and the subsequent prophecies in point of composition is very remarkable; the last excelling much in majesty and elegance. This Chapter (of which the first verse forms a general title to this and the five Chapters following) contains two distinct prophecies relating to Egypt. The first was delivered previous to an engagement between Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt, and Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon; in which the Egyptians were routed in Carchemish with great slaughter as here predicted.—The Prophet sees the mighty preparations: but they are all declared to be of no avail, as God had decreed their fall, 1—6. The king of Egypt, however, is represented as marching with all the confidence of victory, like a river overflowing its banks, and threatening all around with its inundation, 7, 8. But this immense armament of Pharaoh-necho, consisting of various nations, shall, by a righteous judgment of God, receive such a signal overthrow near the river Euphrates, that the political consequence of Egypt shall be thereby irretrievably ruined, and its remaining power become contemptible in the sight of the nations, 9—12. The other prophecy, beginning at the thirteenth verse, relates to the memorable overthrow of the Egyptians by Nebuchadnezzar subsequent to his siege of Tyre, in the sixteenth year after the destruction of Jerusalem, 13—26. The promise, in the conclusion of the Chapter, of preservation to the Jews, (who have for many ages continued a distinct people, when the various peoples of antiquity who oppressed them, or with whom they had any intercourse, have long ago ceased to have any separate and visible existence,) has been most remarkably fulfilled; and is a very signal act of Providence; and a pledge of the restoration of Israel to the Divine favour, when the time of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, 27, 28.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVI.

Verse 1. The word of the LORD*—against the Gentiles*] This is a general title to the following collection of prophecies, written concerning different nations, which had less or more connection with the Jews, either as enemies, neighbours, or allies.

They were not written at the same time; and though some of them bear dates, yet it would be difficult to give them any chronological arrangement. Dahler's mode of ascertaining the times of their delivery may be seen in the Table in the Introduction.

Verse 2. Pharaoh-necho] This was the person who defeated the army of Josiah, in which engagement Josiah received a mortal wound, of which he died, greatly regretted, soon after at Megiddo. After this victory, he defeated the Babylonians, and took Carchemish; and having fortified it, returned to his own country. Nabopolassar sent his son Nebuchadnezzar with an army against him, defeated him with immense slaughter near the river Euphrates, retook Carchemish, and subdued all the revolted provinces, according to the following prophecies.

Verse 3. Order ye the buckler] This is the call to the general armament of the people against the Chaldeans.

Verse 4. Furbish the spears] Cleanse, brighten, and sharpen them; from the Franco-Gallic, fourbir, to polish, brighten.

Brigandines.] A coat of mail; especially that which was made scale fashion; one plate overlapping the other, like the scales of fish.

Verse 5. Wherefore have I seen them dismayed] What! such a numerous, formidable, and well appointed army, panic-struck? So that they have turned back—fled apace—and looked not round; while their mighty ones, their generals and commanders, striving to rally them, are beaten down!

Verse 6. Let not the swift flee away] Even the swiftest shall not be able to escape.

They shall—fall toward the north] By the Euphrates, which was northward of Judea. Here the Egyptian army was routed with great slaughter.

Verse 7. Who is this that cometh up as a flood] The vast concourse of people is here represented as a river: for instance, the Jordan, suddenly swollen with the rains in harvest, rolling its waters along, and overflowing the whole country. A fine image to represent the incursions of vast armies carrying all before them. Such was the army of Pharaoh-necho in its march to Carchemish.

Verse 9. The Æthiopians] Heb. Cush, Phut, and the Ludim. This army was composed of many nations. Cush, which we translate Æthiopians, almost invariably means the Arabians; and here, those Arabs that bordered on Egypt near the Red Sea. Phut probably means the Libyans; for Phut settled in Libya according to Josephus. Phut and Cush were two of the sons of Ham; and brothers to Mitsraim, the father of the Egyptians, Gen. x, 6; and the Ludim were descended from Mitsraim, see Gen. x, 13. Bochart contends that the Ludim were Æthiopians, and that they were famous for the use of the bow. Phaleg. lib. iv, 26.

Verse 10. For this is the day of the Lord GOD of hosts] The prophet represents this as a mighty sacrifice, where innumerable victims were slain.

16 He [i] made many to fall, yea, [k] one fell upon another: and they said, Arise, and let us go again to our own people, and to the land of our nativity, from the oppressing sword.

Verse 11. Go up into Gilead, and take balm] An irony. Egypt is so completely enfeebled by this overthrow, that her political wound is utterly incurable. This figure is used with the more propriety here, as the Egyptians have been celebrated from the remotest antiquity for their knowledge of medicine.

Verse 12. The nations have heard of thy shame] Of thy disgrace, by this prodigious slaughter of thy troops.

Verse 13. How Nebuchadrezzar—should come and smite the land of Egypt.] See on chap. xliv. This was after Amasis had driven Pharaoh-necho into Upper Egypt. See chap. xliv, 30.

Verse 14. Migdol] Magdolum, a city in Lower Egypt. Noph, Memphis. Tahpanhes, Daphne. See before, chap. xliv, 1.

Round about thee.] The Phœnicians, Philistines, Ammonites, Moabites, and Edomites, all prostrated by the arms of the Chaldeans.

Verse 15. They stood not, because the LORD did drive them.] The Lord panic-struck them, and drove them back.

Verse 16. One fell upon another] In their terror and confusion, ranks fell on ranks, and overturned each other.

Let us go again to our own people] Let us flee to our own country with all possible speed. These were the auxiliaries.

Verse 17. They did cry there] Dr. Blayney translates this cry thus:—

"——O Pharaoh, king of Egypt,
A tumult hath frustrated the appointed meeting."

These allies send their excuse to Pharaoh, that the disasters they had met, had prevented them from joining him as they had intended.

Verse 18. As Tabor is among the mountains] This mountain is situated in the plain of Esdraelon in Galilee, on the confines of the tribes of Zabulon and Issachar, Josh. xix, 22. It stood by itself, separated from all the other mountains by deep valleys; and is the highest of the whole.

And as Carmel by the sea] Carmel is a mountain on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, on the southern frontier of the tribe of Asher. Were the Egyptians as distinguished for valour and strength as the mountains Tabor and Carmel are for height among the other mountains in their vicinity, they shall not be able to stand the shock of the Chaldean army.

Verse 19. Furnish thyself to go into captivity] The thing is unavoidable; prepare for this calamity.

Verse 20. Egypt is like a very fair heifer] Fruitful and useful: but destruction cometh out of the north, from Chaldea. It may be that there is an allusion here to Isis, worshipped in Egypt under the form of a beautiful cow.

Verse 21. Are fled away together] Perhaps there is a reference here to the case of a cow stung with gnats. She runs hither and thither, not knowing where to go; so shall it be with this scattered people.

Verse 25. The multitude of No] אמון מנא Amon mi-no, the amon of No, called by the Greeks Διοσπολις, or Jupiter's city. It was the famous Thebes, celebrated anciently for its hundred gates. Amon was the name by which the Egyptians called Jupiter, who had a famous temple at Thebes.

The word Pharaoh is twice repeated here; and Dr. Dahler thinks that one may design Pharaoh Hophra, and the other Amasis, the new king.

Verse 26. Afterwards it shall be inhabited] That is, within forty years, as Ezekiel had predicted, chap. xxix, 13.

Verse 27. Fear not—my servant Jacob] In the midst of wrath God remembers mercy. A seed shall be preserved, out of which the nation shall revive.

Verse 28. I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee; but I will not make a full end of thee] The Jews still remain as a distinct people, while the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Egyptians, &c., are no more!

On this subject, I cannot withhold from my readers the following very judicious remarks of Bp. Newton, in his Dissertations on the Prophecies.

"The preservation of the Jews through so many ages, and the total destruction of their enemies, are wonderful events; and are made still more wonderful by being signified beforehand by the spirit of prophecy, as particularly in the passage before us. Their preservation is really one of the most illustrious acts of Divine Providence. They are dispersed among all nations, yet not confounded with any. The drops of rain which fall, nay the great rivers which flow into the ocean, are soon mingled with and lost in that immense body of waters. And the same, in all human probability, would have been the fate of the Jews; they would have been mingled and lost in the common mass of mankind; but, on the contrary, they flow into all parts of the world, mix with all nations, and yet keep separate from all. They still live as a distinct people; and yet they nowhere live according to their own laws, nowhere elect their own magistrates, nowhere enjoy the full exercise of their religion. Their solemn feasts and sacrifices are limited to one certain place; and that hath been now for many ages in the hands of strangers and aliens, who will not suffer them to come thither. No people have continued unmixed so long as they have done; not only of those who have sent colonies into foreign countries, but even of those who have abided in their own country. The northern nations have come in swarms into the more southern parts of Europe:—but where are they now to be discerned and distinguished? The Gauls went forth in great bodies to seek their fortune in foreign parts:—but what traces or footsteps of them are now remaining any where? In France, who can separate the race of the ancient Gauls from the various other people who from time to time have settled there? In Spain, who can distinguish between the first possessors the Spaniards, and the Goths and Moors, who conquered and kept possession of the country for some ages? In England, who can pretend to say certainly which families are derived from the ancient Britons, and which from the Romans, Saxons, Danes, and Normans? The most ancient and honourable pedigrees can be traced up only to a certain period; and beyond that there is nothing but conjecture and uncertainty, obscurity and ignorance. But the Jews can go up higher than any nation; they can even deduce their pedigree from the beginning of the world. They may not know from what particular tribe or family they are descended: but they know certainly that they all sprung from the stock of Abraham. And yet the contempt with which they have been treated, and the hardships they have undergone in almost all countries, should, one would think, have made them desirous to forget or renounce their original: but they profess it; they glory in it; and after so many wars, massacres, and persecutions, they still subsist; they are still very numerous. And what but a supernatural power could have preserved them in such a manner, as no other nation upon earth has been preserved? Nor is the providence of God less remarkable in the destruction of their enemies than in their own preservation. For, from the beginning, who have been the great enemies and oppressors of the Jewish nation, removed them from their own land, and compelled them into captivity and slavery? The Egyptians afflicted them much, and detained them in bondage several years. The Assyrians carried away captive the ten tribes of Israel; and the Babylonians afterwards the two remaining tribes of Judah and Benjamin. The Syro-Macedonians, especially Antiochus Epiphanes, cruelly persecuted them; and the Romans utterly dissolved the Jewish state, and dispersed the people so as that they have never been able to recover their city and country again. And where are now these great and famous monarchies, which in their turn subdued and oppressed the people of God? Are they not vanished as a dream; and not only their power, but their very names, lost in the earth? The Egyptians, Assyrians, and Babylonians, were overthrown and entirely subjugated by the Persians; and the Persians, it is remarkable, were the restorers of the Jews as well as the destroyers of their enemies. The Syro-Macedonians were swallowed up by the Romans; and the Roman empire, great and powerful as it was, was broken into pieces by the incursions of the northern nations; while the Jews are subsisting as a distinct people at this day. And what a wonder of Providence is it, that the vanquished should so many ages survive the victors; and the former be spread all over the world, while the latter are no more? Nay, not only nations have been punished for their cruelties as to the Jews: but divine vengeance has pursued even single persons, who have been their persecutors and oppressors. The first-born of Pharaoh was destroyed; and he himself, with his host, drowned in the sea. Nebuchadnezzar was stricken with madness, and the crown was transferred from his family to strangers. Antiochus Epiphanes, and Herod, died in great agonies, with ulcers and vermin issuing from them. Flaccus, governor of Egypt, who barbarously plundered and oppressed the Jews of Alexandria, was afterwards banished and slain; and Caligula, who persecuted the Jews for refusing to do divine honours to his statue, was murdered in the flower of his age, after a short and wicked reign. But where are now,—since they have absolutely rejected the Gospel, and been no longer the peculiar people of God;—where are now such visible manifestations of a Divine interposition in their favour? The Jews would do well to consider this point: for, rightly considered, it may be an effectual means of opening their eyes, and of turning them to Christ our Saviour."—See Bp. Newton on the Prophecies, Dissert. viii, Sect. 2. And see the Notes on Ezekiel, where the calamities of these miserable people are largely detailed.

CHAPTER XLVII.

Among the nations doomed to suffer from the hostilities of Nebuchadnezzar are the Philistines, (see chap. xxv, 20.) And the calamities predicted in this Chapter befel them probably during the long siege of Tyre, when their country was desolated to prevent their giving Tyre or Sidon any assistance, 1—5. The whole of this Chapter is remarkably elegant. The address to the sword of Jehovah, at the close of it, is particularly a very beautiful and bold personification, 6, 7.

Verse 1. The word of the LORD*—against the Philistines*] The date of this prophecy cannot be easily ascertained. Dr. Blayney thinks it probable that it was delivered about the fourth year of Zedekiah; while Dahler assigns it some time in the reign of Josiah.

Before that Pharaoh smote Gaza.] We have no historical relation of any Egyptian king smiting Gaza. It was no doubt smitten by some of them: but when, and by whom, does not appear either from sacred or profane history.

Verse 2. Waters rise up out of the north] Waters is a common prophetic image for a multitude of people. The north here, as in other places of this prophecy, means Chaldea.

Verse 3. The stamping of the hoofs] At the galloping sound—

Quadrupedante putrem sonitu quatit ungula campum, is a line of Virgil (Æn. viii, 596) much celebrated; and quoted here by Blayney, where the galloping sound of the horses' hoofs is heard. In the stamping of the horses,—the rushing of the chariots,—and the rumbling of the wheels, our translators intended to convey the sense by the sound of the words; and they have not been unsuccessful. Their translation of the original is at the same time sufficiently literal.

The fathers shall not look back] Though their children are left behind, they have neither strength nor courage to go back to bring them off.

Verse 4. To spoil all the Philistines] These people, of whom there were five seignories, occupied the coast of the Mediterranean sea, to the south of the Phœnicians.

Tyrus and Zidon] Places sufficiently remarkable both in the Old and New Testament, and in profane history. They belonged to the Phœnicians; and at this time were depending on the succour of their allies, the Philistines. But their expectation was cut off.

The remnant of the country of Caphtor] Crete, or Cyprus. Some think it was a district along the coast of the Mediterranean, belonging to the Philistines: others, that the Cappadocians are meant.

Verse 5. Baldness is come upon Gaza] They have cut off their hair in token of deep sorrow and distress.

Ashkelon is cut off] Or put to silence: another mark of the deepest sorrow. Ashkelon was one of the five seignories of the Philistines; Gaza was another.

The remnant of their valley] Or plain: for the whole land of the Philistines was a vast plain, which extended along the coast of the Mediterranean sea from Phœnicia to the frontiers of Egypt. The whole of this plain, the territory of the Philistines, shall be desolated.

Verse 6. O thou sword of the LORD] This is a most grand prosopopœia;—a dialogue between the sword of the Lord and the prophet! Nothing can be imagined more sublime!

Put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still.] Shed no more blood,—destroy no more lives,—erase no more cities,—desolate no more countries. Rest;—hast thou not been long enough at this work of judgment! O be still;—Let wars and desolations cease for ever!

Verse 7. How can it be quiet] This is the answer of the Sword. I am the officer of God's judgments; and He has given me a commission against Ashkelon, and against the sea shore;—all the coast where the Philistines have their territories. The measure of their iniquities is full; and these God hath appointed this Sword to ravage. The Philistines were ever the implacable enemies of the Jews, and the basest and worst of all idolaters. On these accounts the Sword of the Lord had its commission against them; and it did its office most fearfully and effectually by the hand of the Chaldeans.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The following prophecy concerning the Moabites is supposed to have had its accomplishment during the long siege of Tyre in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. The whole of this Chapter is poetry of the first order. The distress of the cities of Moab, with which it opens, is finely described. The cries of one ruined city resound to those of another, 1—3. The doleful helpless cry of the children is heard, 4; the highways, on either hand, resound with the voice of weeping, 5; and the few that remain resemble a blasted tree in the wide howling waste, 6. Chemosh, the chief god of the Moabites, and the capital figure in the triumph, is represented as carried off in chains, with all his trumpery of priests and officers, 7. The desolation of the country shall be so general and sudden that, by a strong figure, it is intimated there shall be no possibility of escape, except it be in the speediest flight, 8, 9. And some idea may be formed of the dreadful wickedness of this people from the consideration that the Prophet, under the immediate inspiration of the Almighty, pronounces a curse on those who do the work of the Lord negligently in not proceeding to their utter extermination, 10. The subject is then diversified by an elegant and well supported comparison, importing that the Moabites increased in insolence and pride in proportion to the duration of their prosperity, 11: but this prosperity is declared to be nearly at an end; the destroyer is already commissioned against Moab, and his neighbours called to sing the usual lamentation at his funeral, 12—18. The Prophet then represents some of the women of Aroer and Ammon (the extreme borders of Moab) standing in the highways, and asking the fugitives of Moab, What intelligence? They inform them of the complete discomfiture of Moab, 19—24, and of the total annihilation of its political existence, 25. The Divine judgments about to fall upon Moab are further represented under the expressive metaphor of a cup of intoxicating liquor, by which he should become an object of derision because of his intolerable pride, his magnifying himself against Jehovah, and his great contempt for the children of Israel in the day of their calamity, 26, 27. The Prophet then points out the great distress of Moab by a variety of striking figures, viz. by the failure of the customary rejoicings at the end of harvest; by the mournful sort of music used at funerals; by the signs which were expressive among the ancients of deep mourning, as shaving the head, clipping the beard, cutting the flesh, and wearing sackcloth; and by the methods of catching wild beasts in toils, and by the terror and pitfall, 28—46. In the close of the Chapter it is intimated that a remnant shall be preserved from this general calamity, whose descendants shall be prosperous in the latter days, 47.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVIII.

Verse 1. Against Moab] This was delivered some time after the destruction of Jerusalem. The Moabites were in the neighbourhood of the Ammonites; and whatever evils fell on the one would naturally involve the other. See Isa. xv, and xvi, on this same subject.

Woe unto Nebo! for it is spoiled] This was a city in the tribe of Reuben, afterwards possessed by the Moabites. It probably had its name from Nebo, one of the principal idols of the Moabites.

Kiriathaim] Another city of the Moabites.

Misgab is confounded] There is no place of this name known; and therefore several learned men translate המשגב ha-misgab literally, The high tower, or fortress, which may apply to Kiriathaim, or any other high and well fortified place.

Verse 2. No more praise of Moab] "The glory of Moab that it had never been conquered" (Dahler) is now at an end. Dr. Blayney translates,— > "Moab shall have no more glorying in Heshbon;

> They have devised evil against her (saying)"

And this most certainly is the best translation of the original. He has marked also a double paranomasia in this and the next verse, a figure in which the prophets delight,—בחשבון חשבו be-chesbon chashebu, in Cheshbon they have devised; and מדמן תדמי medmen tidmi, Madmena, thou shalt be dumb.

Verse 3. Horonaim] Another city of Moab, near to Luhith. At this latter place the hill country of Moab commenced. It is a place, says Dahler, situated upon a height between Aréopolis and Zoar.

Verse 6. Flee, save your lives] The enemy is in full pursuit of you.

Be like the heath] כערוער ke-ârôêr, like Aroer: which some take for a city, others for a blasted or withered tree. It is supposed that a place of this name lay towards the north, in the land of the Ammonites, on a branch of the river Jabbok; surrounded by deserts. Save yourselves by getting into the wilderness; where the pursuing foe will scarcely think it worth his while to follow you, as the wilderness itself must soon destroy you.

Verse 7. Chemosh shall go forth into captivity] The grand national idol of the Moabites, Numb. xxi, 29, Judg. xi, 7. Ancient idolaters used to take their gods with them to the field of battle. This was probably in imitation of the Israelites, who took the ark with them in such cases.

Verse 9. Give wings unto Moab] There is no hope in resistance; and to escape requires the speediest flight. I cannot conceive how Dahler came to translate thus:—Tirez Moab par les cheveux, "Drag Moab away by the hair of the head."

Verse 10. Cursed be he that doeth the work of the LORD deceitfully] Moab is doomed to destruction; and the Lord pronounces a curse on their enemies if they do not proceed to utter extirpation. God is the author of life, and has a sovereign right to dispose of it as He pleases; and these had forfeited theirs long ago by their idolatry and other crimes.

Verse 11. Moab hath been at ease] The metaphor here is taken from the mode of preserving wines. They let them rest upon their lees for a considerable time, as this improves them both in strength and flavour; and when this is sufficiently done, they rack, or pour them off into other vessels. Moab had been very little molested by war since he was a nation:—he has never gone out of his own land. Though some had been carried away by Shalmanezer forty years before this, he has had neither wars nor captivity.

Therefore his taste remained in him] Still carrying on the allusion to the curing of wines: by resting long upon the lees, the taste and smell are both improved. See the Note on Isa. xxv, 6.

Verse 12. I will send unto him wanderers, that shall cause him to wander] Dr. Blayney renders צעים tsâim, tilters:—those who elevate one end of the wine cask when nearly run out, that the remains of the liquor may be the more effectually drawn off at the cock. And this seems to be well supported by the following words,—

And shall empty his vessels] I will send such as will carry the whole nation into captivity.

Verse 13. Beth-el their confidence.] Alluding to the 34 [a] From the cry of Heshbon even unto Elealeh, and even unto Jahaz, have they uttered their voice, [b] from Zoar even unto Horonaim, as an heifer of three years old: for the waters also of Nimrim shall be [c] desolate.

35 Moreover I will cause to cease in Moab, saith the LORD, [d] him that offereth in the high places, and him that burneth incense to his gods.

36 Therefore [e] mine heart shall sound for Moab like pipes, and mine heart shall sound like pipes for the men of Kir-heres: because [f] the riches that he hath gotten are perished.

37 For [g] every head shall be bald, and every beard [h] clipped: upon all the hands shall be cuttings, and [i] upon the loins sackcloth.

38 There shall be lamentation generally upon all the housetops of Moab, and in the streets thereof: for I have broken Moab like [k] a vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith the LORD.

39 They shall howl, saying, How is it broken down! how hath Moab turned the [l] back with shame! so shall Moab be a derision and a dismaying to all them about him.

41 [o] Kerioth [p] is taken, and the strong holds are surprised, and [q] the mighty men's hearts in Moab at that day shall be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

42 And Moab shall be destroyed [r] from being a people, because he hath magnified himself against the LORD.

43 [s] Fear, and the pit, and the snare, shall be upon thee, O inhabitant of Moab, saith the LORD.

44 He that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for [t] I will bring upon it, even upon Moab, the year of their visitation, saith the LORD.

45 They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon because of the force: but [u] a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the midst of Sihon, and [x] shall devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the [y] tumultuous ones.

46 [z] Woe be unto thee, O Moab! the people of Chemosh perisheth: for thy sons are taken [a] captives, and thy daughters captives.

47 Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab [b] in the latter days, saith the LORD. Thus far is the judgment of Moab.

Verse 46. The people of Chemosh] The Moabites, who worshipped Chemosh as their supreme god.

Verse 47. Will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days] I have already expressed doubts (see ver. 42,) whether the Moabites were ever restored to their national distinction. The expressions in this Chapter, relative to their total destruction as a people, are so strong and so frequent that they leave little room for a limited interpretation. That many of them returned on the edict of Cyrus, by virtue of which the Jews were restored, I doubt not:

but neither the Ammonites, Moabites, Philistines, nor even the Jews themselves, were ever restored to their national consequence. Perhaps the restoration spoken of here, which was to take place in the latter days, may mean the conversion of these people, in their existing remnants, to the faith of the Gospel. Several judicious interpreters are of this opinion. The Moabites were partially restored: but never, as far as I have been able to learn, to their national consequence. Their conversion to the Christian faith must be the main end designed by this prophecy.

CHAPTER XLIX.

This Chapter is a collection of prophecies relating to several nations in the neighbourhood of Judea; and, like those preceding, are supposed to have been fulfilled by the ministry of Nebuchadnezzar during the thirteen years' siege of Tyre. The Chapter opens with a prophecy concerning the Ammonites, whose chief city, Rabbah, shall be destroyed; and Malcom, the supreme divinity of the people, with all his retinue of priests and officers, carried into captivity, 1—5. Promise that the Ammonites shall be restored to their liberty, 6. Prophecy against the Edomites, (very like that most dreadful one in the thirty-fourth chapter of Isaiah against the same people,) who shall be utterly exterminated, after the similitude of Sodom and Gomorrah, 7—22. Prophecy against Damascus, 23—27, and against Kedar, 28, 29. Utter desolation of the kingdoms of Hazor foretold, 30—33. The polity of the Elamites shall be completely dissolved, and the people dispersed throughout the nations, 34—38. The Elamites shall be delivered from their captivity in the latter days, 39. It will be proper here to observe that these predictions should not be so explained as if they admitted of merely a private interpretation; for, as Bishop Lowth remarks upon Isaiah's prophecy concerning the Idumeans, "by a figure very common in the prophetical writings, any city or people, remarkably distinguished as enemies of the people and kingdom of God, is put for those enemies in general;" therefore, it is under the gospel dispensation, that these prophecies shall be accomplished to their fullest extent upon all the Antichristian nations that have sinned after the similitude of the ancient enemies of the people of God, under the Mosaic œconomy.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIX.

Verse 1. CONCERNING THE AMMONITES] This prophetic Discourse was also delivered after the capture of Jerusalem.

Hath Israel no sons?—no heir?] The Ammonites, it appears, took advantage of the depressed state of Israel; and invaded their territories in the tribe of Gad, hoping to make them their own for ever. But the prophet intimates that God will preserve the descendants of Israel, and will bring them back to their forfeited inheritances.

Why then doth their king] מלכם Malcom, or Milcom, the chief idol of the Ammonites. That the idol Milcom is here meant is sufficiently evident from ver. 3, where it is said,—"Milcom (not their king) shall go into captivity; his PRIESTS and his princes together." Milcom is also called Molec. Malcom is put here for the Ammonites; as the people of Chemosh in the preceding Chapter are put for the Moabites in general.

Verse 3. Run to and fro by the hedges] It is supposed that this may refer to the women making lamentations for the dead, that were in general buried by the walls of their gardens: but others think that it refers to the smaller cities, or villages, called here the daughters of Rabbah, the metro-cloth; lament, and run to and fro by the hedges; for [a] their king shall go into captivity, and his [b] priests and his princes together.

4 Wherefore gloriest thou in the valleys, [c] thy flowing valley, O [d] backsliding daughter? that trusted in her treasures, [e] saying, Who shall come unto me?

5 Behold, I will bring a fear upon thee, saith the Lord GOD of hosts, from all those that be about thee; and ye shall be driven out every man right forth; and none shall gather up him that wandereth.

6 And [f] afterward I will bring again the captivity of the children of Ammon, saith the LORD.

7 [g] Concerning Edom, thus saith the LORD of hosts; [h] Is wisdom no more in Teman? [i] is counsel perished from the prudent? is their wisdom vanished?

8 [k] Flee ye, [l] turn back, dwell deep, O inhabitants of [m] Dedan; for I will bring the calamity of Esau upon him, the time that I will visit him.

9 If [n] grape-gatherers come to thee, would they not leave some gleaning grapes? if thieves by night, they will destroy [o] till they have enough.

10 [p] But I have made Esau bare, I have uncovered his secret places, and he shall not be able to hide himself: his seed is spoiled, and his brethren, and his neighbours, and [q] he is not.

11 Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive; and let thy widows trust in me.

12 For thus saith the LORD; Behold, [r] they whose judgment was not to drink of the cup have assuredly drunken; and art thou he that shall altogether go unpunished? thou shalt not go unpunished, but thou shalt surely drink of it.

13 For [s] I have sworn by myself, saith the LORD, that [t] Bozrah shall become a desolation, a reproach, a waste, and a curse; and all the cities thereof shall be perpetual wastes.

14 I have heard a [u] rumour from the LORD, and an ambassador is sent unto the heathen, saying, Gather ye together, and come against her, and rise up to the battle.

15 For, lo, I will make thee small among the heathen, and despised among men.

polis; the inhabitants of which are exhorted to seek safety somewhere else, as there is none can be expected from them, now that the enemy is at hand.

Verse 4. Wherefore gloriest thou] Though thy valleys be fruitful, yet glory not in them. Though thou have much political and military power, do not trust in them, nor in the multitude of thy cities; a stronger than thou is coming against thee.

Verse 6. Afterward I will bring again] The Ammonites are supposed to have returned with the Moabites and Israelites, on permission given by the edict of Cyrus.

Verse 7. CONCERNING EDOM] This is a new and separate Discourse.

Teman] A part of Idumea, put here for the whole country.

Verse 8. Dwell deep] An allusion to the custom of the Arabs, who, when about to be attacked by a powerful foe, strike their tents, pack up their utensils, lade their camels, which they can do in a couple of hours, and set off to the Great Desert, and so bury themselves in it that no enemy either will or can pursue; as it is the Arabs alone that know the deserts, and can find water and provender for their support.

Dedan] Was a city of Idumea, not far from Teman.

Verse 9. If grape-gatherers] Both in vintage and harvest every grape and every stalk are not gathered; hence the gleaners get something for their pains: but your enemies shall not leave one of you behind, all shall be carried into captivity.

Verse 10. I have made Esau bare] I have stripped him of all defence, and have discovered his hiding places to his enemies.

Verse 11. Leave thy fatherless children] The connexion of this with the context is not easy to be discerned: but, as a general maxim, it is of great importance. Widows and orphans are the peculiar care of God. He is as the best of fathers to the one, and the most loving of husbands to the other. Even the widows and orphans of Esau, who escape the general destruction, shall be taken care of by the Lord.

Verse 12. Art thou he that shall altogether go unpunished?] A similar form of speech appears, chap. xxv, 29. Others, less wicked than thou, have been punished;—and canst thou expect to escape? Thou shalt not escape.

Verse 13. Bozrah shall become a desolation] Bozrah, a city of Idumea, is here put for the whole country.

Verse 14. I have heard a rumour] The Lord has revealed to me what He is about to do to the Edomites.

An ambassador is sent] I believe this means only that God has given permission, and has stirred up the hearts of 16 Thy terribleness hath deceived thee, and the pride of thine heart, O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, that holdest the height of the hill: [a] though thou shouldest make thy [b] nest as high as the eagle, [c] I will bring thee down from thence, saith the LORD.

17 Also Edom shall be a desolation: [d] every one that goeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss at all the plagues thereof.

18 [e] As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD, no man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it.

19 [f] Behold, he shall come up like a lion from [g] the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong: but I will suddenly make him run away from her: and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for [h] who is like me? and who will [i] appoint me the time? and [k] who is that shepherd that will stand before me?

20 [l] Therefore hear the counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Edom; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the inhabitants of Teman: Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out: surely he will make their habitations desolate with them.

these nations to go against those whom He has doomed to destruction.

Verse 17. O thou that dwellest] All Idumea is full of mountains, and rocks, and these rocks and mountains full of caves where, in time of great heats, and in time of war, the people take shelter.

Verse 18. As in the overthrow of Sodom] The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbouring cities was so terrible that, when God denounces judgments against incorrigible sinners, He tells them they shall be like Sodom and Gomorrah.

No man shall abide there] It shall be so desolate as not to be habitable. Travellers may lodge on the ground for a night: but it cannot become a permanent dwelling.

Verse 19. Behold, he shall come up like a lion] See the Note on chap. xii, 5. The similitude used here is well illustrated by Dr. Blayney. "When I shall occasion a like commotion in her (Idumea) as a fierce and strong lion may be supposed to do in the sheepfolds, then I will cause him (the man of whom it is said in the preceding verse that he should not dwell in it) to run away from her as the affrighted shepherds and their flocks run from the lion."

A chosen man] Nebuchadnezzar. That is, God has chosen this man, and given him a commission against Idumea.

Verse 20. The inhabitants of Teman] Taken here for the whole of Idumea. These are a kind of synonymes which prevent monotony, and give variety to the poet's versification.

Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out] They shall be like timid sheep; the weakest foe shall overcome them.

Verse 21. The earth is moved] The whole state is represented here as a vast building suddenly thrown down, so as to cause the earth to tremble, and the noise to be heard at a great distance.

Verse 22. He shall come up and fly as the eagle] Nebuchadnezzar. See chap. xlviii, 40.

Verse 23. CONCERNING DAMASCUS.] This is the head, or title, of another prophecy. Damascus was one of the principal cities of Syria. It was taken by David, (2 Sam. viii, 6,) was retaken in the reign of Solomon, (1 Kings xi, 24, &c.,) and regained its independence. Its kings were often at war with the ten tribes, and once it joined with them for the destruction of Judah. To defend himself against these powerful enemies Ahaz made a league with the king of Assyria, who besieged Damascus, took, and demolished it. From that time we hear nothing of Damascus till we meet with it in this prophecy. It appears to have been rebuilt and restored to some consequence. It made an obstinate resistance to Nebuchadnezzar: but was at last taken and sacked by him. At present it is both a large and populous city, with considerable commerce.

Hamath is confounded] This is a city of Syria, on the Orontes. The Greeks call it Epiphania.

Arpad] Not far from Damascus.

Sorrow on the sea] They are like the troubled sea, that cannot rest.

Verse 25. How is the city of praise not left] Damascus is so ruined that she can no more be called a praiseworthy, or happy city.

Verse 27. The palaces of Ben-hadad] Damascus was a seat of the Syrian kings; and Ben-hadad was a name common to several of its kings.

Verse 28. CONCERNING KEDAR, AND CONCERNING THE KINGDOMS OF HAZOR] This is the title of another new prophecy.

Kedar was the name of one of the sons of Ishmael, (Gen. xxv, 13,) who settled in Arabia, and who gave name to a powerful tribe of Arabs who used to traffic with the Tyrians in cattle. It appears from this prophecy that Nebuchadnezzar got a commission to go against and reduce them to great misery.

Verse 29. Their tents and their flocks] This description of property shews that they were Scenite or Nomad Arabs; persons who dwell in tents, and whose principal property was cattle, especially camels, of the whole of which they were plundered by the Chaldeans.

Verse 30. Dwell deep] Retire into the depths of the desert. See on ver. 8.

Inhabitants of Hazor] I cannot find this place. It was no doubt in Arabia, and a place of considerable importance:—but it is now no more.

Verse 31. The wealthy nation] גוי שליו goi sheleiv, the peaceable nation—

Have neither gates nor bars] The Arabs, who had nothing but their tents; no cities, nor even permanent villages.

Verse 32. The utmost corners] Even in these utmost inaccessible recesses the sword and pillage shall reach them. The utmost corners;—"Insulated coasts;—the peninsula of Arabia." Blayney.

Verse 33. Hazor shall be a dwelling for dragons] Shall be turned into a wilderness.

A desolation for ever] Never to be repeopled.

There shall no man abide there] It may occasionally be visited, but never made a permanent abode.

Verse 34. THE WORD—AGAINST ELAM] Another new head of prophecy. As this was delivered in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah, it can have no natural nor historical connexion with the other prophecies in this various Chapter. Some think that by Elam Persia is always meant: but this is not at all likely. It was a part of the Babylonian empire in the time of Daniel, (chap. viii, 2,) and is most probably what is called Elymais by the Greeks. This, with Susiana, Nebuchadnezzar subdued, and took from Astyages, king of Media.

nence by their dexterity in the use of the bow. See Isa. xxii, 6. Strabo, Livy, and others, speak of their eminence in archery.

Verse 36. Will I bring the four winds] Nebuchadnezzar and his armies, gathered out of different provinces; and attacking this people at all points, in the same time.

There shall be no nation, &c.] They shall be scattered through the one hundred and twenty-seven provinces, of which the Babylonish empire is composed.

Verse 38. I will set my throne in Elam] This is spoken either of Nebuchadnezzar or Cyrus. It is certain that Cyrus did render himself master of Elymais and Media, which are in the land of Elam.

Verse 39. I will bring again the captivity of Elam] As this is to be in the latter days, probably it may mean the spiritual freedom which these people would receive under the gospel dispensation. Under Cyrus, the Elamites, collected out of all quarters, were united to the Persians their neighbours; and became, with them, masters of the East.—See Calmet and Dahler. There are however still difficulties on this subject. Who the Elamites were is still a question. That which appears to be nearest the truth is, that the Elamites and Persians were two distinct people, and continued so till blended together under Cyrus. It is in this light that I have considered the subject in the preceding Notes. Neighbouring people are frequently confounded in history, and sometimes the name of a people is given to those who have the same character.

CHAPTER L.

This and the following Chapter contain a prophecy relating to the fall of Babylon, interspersed with several predictions relative to the restoration of Israel and Judah who were to survive their oppressors; and, on their repentance, to be pardoned and brought to their own land.—This Chapter opens with a prediction of the complete destruction of all the Babylonish idols, and the utter desolation of Chaldea, through the instrumentality of a great northern nation, 1—3. Israel and Judah shall be reinstated in the land of their forefathers after the total overthrow of the great Babylonish empire, 4, 5. Very oppressive and cruel bondage of the Jewish people during the captivity, 6, 7. The people of God are commanded to remove speedily from Babylon, because an assembly of great nations are coming out of the north to desolate the whole land, 8—10. Babylon, the hammer of the whole earth, the great desolator of nations, shall itself become a desolation on account of its intolerable pride, and because of the iron yoke it has rejoiced to put upon a people whom a mysterious Providence had placed under its domination, 11—34. The judgments which shall fall upon Chaldea, a country addicted to the grossest idolatry, and to every species of superstition, shall be most awful and general, as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, 35—40. Character of the people appointed to execute the Divine judgments upon the oppressors of Israel, 41—45. Great sensation among the nations at the very terrible and sudden fall of Babylon, 46.

NOTES ON CHAPTER L.

Verse 1. THE WORD THAT THE LORD SPAKE AGAINST BABYLON] This is also a new head of Discourse.

The prophecy contained in this and the following Chapter was sent to the captives in Babylon, in the fourth year of the reign of Zedekiah. They are very important: they predict the total destruction of the Babylonish empire, and the return of the Jews from their captivity. These Chapters were probably composed, with several additions, out of the Book that was then sent by Jeremiah to the captives, by the hand of Seraiah. See chap. li, 59—64.

Verse 2. Declare ye among the nations] God's determination relative to this empire.

Set up a standard] Shew the people where they are to assemble.

Say, Babylon is taken] It is a thing so firmly determined, that it is as good as already done.

Bel] The tutelar deity of Babylon, is confounded; because it cannot save its own city.

Merodach] Another of their idols, is broken to pieces; it was not able to save itself, much less the whole empire.

Her idols are confounded] It is a reproach to have acknowledged them.

Her images] Great and small, golden and wooden, are broken to pieces; even the form of them no longer appears.

Verse 3. Out of the north there cometh up a nation] The Medes, who formed the chief part of the army of Cyrus, lay to the north, or north-east, of Babylon.

Shall make her land desolate] This war, and the consequent taking of the city, began those disasters that brought Babylon in process of time to complete desolation; so that now it is not known where it stood, the whole country being a total solitude.

Verse 4. In those days, and in that time] In the times in which Babylon shall be opposed by the Medes and Persians, both Israel and Judah, seeing the commencement of the fulfilling of the prophecies, shall begin to seek the Lord with much prayer, and broken and contrite hearts. When the decree of Cyrus comes, they shall be ready to set off for their own country, deploring their offences, yet rejoicing in the mercy of God which has given them this reviving in their bondage.

Verse 5. Let us join ourselves to the LORD in a perpetual covenant] All our former covenants have been broken; let us now make one that shall last for ever. HE shall be the LORD OUR GOD, and WE will no more worship idols. This covenant they have kept to the present day: whatever their present moral and spiritual state may be, they are no idolaters, in the gross sense of the term.

The description that is here given of the state of this people, their feelings and their conduct, finely exhibit the state of real penitents, who are fervently seeking the salvation of their souls.

1. In those days, when Jesus Christ is manifested in the flesh; and in that time, when through Him is preached the remission of sins, and the people who hear are pricked in their conscience.

2. The children of Israel and the children of Judah together.—No distinctions being then felt or attended to; for all feel themselves sinners, who have come short of the glory of God. Even national distinctions and religious differences, which bind men fastest, and hold them longest, are absorbed in the deep and overpowering concern they feel for their eternal interests.

3. Going and weeping shall they go.—Religious sorrow does not preclude activity and diligence. While they are weeping for their sins, they are going on in the path of duty, seeking the Lord while He may be found, and calling upon Him while He is near.

4. They shall ask the way to Zion.—Real penitents are the most inquisitive of all mortals: but their enquiries are limited to one object, they ask the way to Zion. What shall we do to be saved? How shall we shun the perdition of ungodly men? &c.

5. With their faces thitherward.—They have turned FROM sin, and turned TO God. They have left the paths of the destroyer; and their hearts are towards God, and the remembrance of His name. Thus they are profiting by that light which has convinced them of sin, righteousness, and judgment.

6. Come, and let us join ourselves to the Lord.—Reli-faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the LORD in [a] a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

6 My people hath been [b] lost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on [c] the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their [d] resting place.

7 All that found them have [e] devoured them: and [f] their adversaries said, [g] We offend not, because they have sinned against the LORD, [h] the habitation of justice, even the LORD, [i] the Hope of their fathers.

8 [k] Remove out of the midst of Babylon, and go forth out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be as the he-goats before the flocks.

9 [l] For, lo, I will raise and cause to come up against Babylon an assembly of great nations from the north country: and they shall [m] set themselves in array against her; from thence she shall be taken: their arrows shall be as of a mighty [n] expert man; [o] none shall return in vain.

gion is a social principle, and begets a social feeling in the soul. No man, who feels his own sore, and the plague of his heart, wishes to venture alone in the way to heaven. He feels he wants counsel, support, comfort, and the company of those who will watch over him in love. Like David, the true penitent is a companion of all those who fear the Lord. These heavenly feelings come from one and the same Spirit, and lead to the same end: hence they say,

7. Let us join ourselves to the LORD in a perpetual covenant.—It is said, that to be undecided, is to be decided. They who are not determined to go to heaven, will never reach it. If the heart be not laid under obligation, it will do nothing. "I hope I am in earnest; I trust I shall be in earnest about the salvation of my soul; it is very proper I should be so;" and such like, shew an irresolute soul. Such persons are ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.

Let us therefore bind ourselves.—We have trifled too long; been indecisive too long, have halted too long, between two opinions. We know now that Jehovah is God; let us, therefore, enter into a covenant with Him. Let this covenant be a perpetual one; let us not make it for a day, for any particular time, but for ever; and let it never be broken. Let our part be kept inviolable: WE are and WILL be Thy people; and God's part will never fail, I AM and WILL be your God.

8. The covenant requires a sacrifice.—Hence ברית berith, signifies both. Christ crucified is the great covenant Sacrifice. By Him, God becomes united to us, and through Him we become united to God.

Verse 6. My people hath been lost sheep] He pities them; for their pastors, kings, and prophets, have caused them to err.

They have gone from mountain] In all high places, they have practised idolatry.

Verse 7. Their adversaries said, We offend not] God has abandoned them; we are only fulfilling His designs in plaguing them.

Verse 8. Remove out of the midst of Babylon] The sentence of destruction is gone out against it; prepare for your flight, that ye be not overwhelmed in its ruin.

Be as the he-goats before the flocks.] Who always run to the head of the flock, giving the example for others to follow. This may be addressed to the elders and persons of authority among the people.

Verse 9. An assembly of great nations] The army of Cyrus was composed of Medes, Persians, Armenians, Caducians, Sacæ, &c. Though all these did not come from the north; yet they were arranged under the Medes, who did come from the north, in reference to Babylon.

Their arrows] They are such expert archers, that they shall never miss their mark.

Verse 10. Chaldea shall be a spoil] She has been a spoiler, and she shall be spoiled. They had destroyed Judea, God's heritage; and now God shall cause her to be destroyed.

Verse 11. As the heifer at grass] Ye were wanton in the desolations ye brought upon Judea.

Verse 12. Your mother] Speaking to the Chaldeans: BABYLON, the metropolis, or mother city, shall be a wilderness,—a dry land,—a desert,—neither fit for man nor beast.

late: [a] every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished, and hiss at all her plagues.

14 [b] Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about: all ye [c] that bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows: for she hath sinned against the LORD.

15 Shout against her round about: she hath [d] given her hand: her foundations are fallen, [e] her walls are thrown down: for [f] it is the vengeance of the LORD: take vengeance upon her; [g] as she hath done, do unto her.

16 Cut off the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the [h] sickle in the time of harvest: for fear of the oppressing sword [i] they shall turn every one to his people, and they shall flee every one to his own land.

17 Israel is [k] a scattered sheep; [l] the lions have driven him away: first [m] the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this [n] Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria.

19 [o] And I will bring Israel again to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and Gilead.

20 In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, [p] the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them [q] whom I reserve.

21 Go up against the land [r] of Merathaim, even against it, and against the inhabitants of [s] Pekod: [t] waste and utterly destroy after them, saith the LORD, and do [u] according to all that I have commanded thee.

22 [x] A sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction.

23 How is [y] the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!

Verse 15. Shout against her round about] Encompass her with lines and with troops; let none go in with relief, none come out to escape from her ruin.

Verse 16. Cut off the sower] Destroy the gardens and the fields, that there may neither be fruits nor tillage.

Verse 17. Israel] All the descendants of Jacob have been harassed and spoiled, first by the Assyrians, and afterwards by the Chaldeans. They acted towards them as a lion to a sheep which he has caught; first he devours all the flesh, next he breaks all the bones to extract the marrow.

Verse 18. As I have punished the king of Assyria.] The Assyrians were overthrown by the Medes and the Chaldeans. The king is here taken for all their kings, generals, &c. Tiglath-pileser, Shalmanezer, Sennacherib, Esarhaddon, &c. To them succeeded the Chaldean or Babylonish kings. Nebuchadnezzar came against Judea several times; and at last took the city and burnt it, profaned and demolished the temple, wasted the land, and carried the princes and people into captivity.

Verse 19. I will bring Israel again] This seems to refer wholly to the ten tribes; for Carmel, Bashan, mount Ephraim, and Gilead, were in their territories.

Verse 20. In those days and in that time] This phrase appears to take in the whole of an epoch, from its commencement to its end. See ver. 4.

I will pardon them] So as to deliver them from their captivity, and exact no more punishment from them whom I reserve; namely, the remnant left in the Babylonish captivity.

Verse 21. Go up against the land of Merathaim—and against the inhabitants of Pekod] No such places as these are to be found any where else; and it is not likely that places are at all meant. The ancient Versions agree in rendering the first as an appellative, and the last as a verb, except the Chaldee, which has Pekod as a proper name. Dr. Blayney translates:—

> "Against the land of bitternesses, go up:
> Upon it, and upon its inhabitants, visit, O Sword!"

Dr. Dahler renders thus:—

> "March against the country doubly rebellious,
> And against its inhabitants worthy of punishment."

The latter of these two versions I take to be the most literal. The words are addressed to the Medes and Persians; and the country is Chaldea, doubly rebellious by its idolatry and its insufferable pride. In these two, it was exceeded by no other land.

Verse 23. The hammer of the whole earth] Nebuchadnezzar dashed to pieces the nations against whom he warred. He was the scourge of the Lord.

Verse 24. I have laid a snare for thee] It was not by storm that Cyrus took the city. The Euphrates ran through it; he dug a channel for the river in another direction, to divert its stream; he waited for that time in which the inhabitants had delivered themselves up to debauchery; in the dead of the night, he turned off the stream; and he and his army entered by the old channel, now void of its waters. This was the snare of which the prophet here speaks. See Herodotus, lib. 1, c. 191.

Verse 26. Open her storehouses] At the time that Cyrus took the city, it was full of provisions and treasures of all kinds; the walls had suffered no injury; and when the inhabitants heard that the enemy was within, they thought they must have arisen out of the earth in the centre of the city!

Verse 31. O thou most proud] זדון zadon. PRIDE in the abstract: proudest of all people.

Verse 32. And the most proud] זדון zadon, as before. Here Pride is personified, and addressed as if possessing a being and rational powers.

Verse 34. Their Redeemer is strong] And it was not that he wanted power, and that Nebuchadnezzar had much, that Jerusalem was taken; but because the people had sinned, and would not return; and therefore national sins called for national punishments. These have taken place; and now the Lord of hosts shews them, that the power of the Chaldeans is mere weakness against His might.

40 [e] As God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD; so shall no man abide there, neither shall any son of man dwell therein.

41 [f] Behold, a people shall come from the north, and a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

42 [g] They shall hold the bow and the lance: [h] they are cruel, and will not shew mercy: [i] their voice shall roar like the sea, and they shall ride upon horses, every one put in array, like a man to the battle, against thee, O daughter of Babylon.

43 The king of Babylon hath heard the report of them, and his hands waxed feeble: [k] anguish took hold of him, and pangs as of a woman in travail.

44 [l] Behold, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan unto the habitation of the strong: but I will make them suddenly run away from her: and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for who is like me? and who will [m] appoint me the time? and [n] who is that shepherd that will stand before me?

45 Therefore hear ye [o] the counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Babylon; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the land of the Chaldeans: Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out: surely he shall make their habitation desolate with them.

46 [p] At the noise of the taking of Babylon the earth is moved, and the cry is heard among the nations.

Verse 38. A drought is upon her waters] May not this refer to the draining of the channel of the Euphrates, by which the army of Cyrus entered the city. See on ver. 24. The original is however חרב chereb, a sword, as in the preceding verses, which signifies war, or any calamity by which the thing on which it falls is ruined.

Verse 39. The wild beasts of the desert] Dahler translates these various terms,—"The wild cats, the jackals, and the ostriches."—And Blayney the same. Wicklif, "Dragons, woodewoses, and ostriches." Coverdale, "Wild beestes, apes, and estriches."

Verse 40. As God overthrew Sodom] As the very ground on which these cities stood, with all the plain, now lies under the Dead sea; so Babylon, and the adjacent country, shall be rendered totally barren and unfruitful, and utterly incapable of being inhabited. And this is the fact concerning both countries. See chap. xlix, 18.

Verse 41. Behold, a people shall come from the north] This and the two following verses are nearly the same with chap. vi, 22—24. But here, destroyers against Babylon are intended; there, destroyers against Jerusalem.

Verse 44. Behold, he shall come up like a lion] The same words as in chap. xlix, 19, &c., where see the Note.

Verse 46. At the noise of the taking of Babylon] See the note on the parallel place, chap. xlix, 21. In the forty-ninth chapter, these words are spoken of Nebuchadnezzar; here, of Cyrus. The taking of Babylon was a wonder to all the surrounding nations. It was thought to be impregnable.

CHAPTER LI.

Sequel of the prophecies of Jeremiah against Babylon. The dreadful, sudden, and final ruin that shall fall upon the Chaldeans, who have compelled the nations to receive their idolatrous rites (see an instance in the third chapter of Daniel) set forth by a variety of beautiful figures; with a command to the people of God, (who have made continual intercession for the conversion of their Heathen rulers,) to flee from the impending vengeance, 1—14.

Jehovah, Israel's God, whose infinite power, wisdom, and understanding, are every where visible in the works of creation, elegantly contrasted with the utterly contemptible objects of the Chaldean worship, 15—19. Because of their great oppression of God's people, the Babylonians shall be visited with cruel enemies from the north, whose innumerable hosts shall fill the land, and utterly extirpate the original inhabitants, 20—44. One of the figures by which this formidable invasion is represented is awfully sublime. "The SEA is come up upon Babylon; she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof." And the account of the sudden desolation produced by this great armament of a multitude of nations, (which the Prophet, dropping the figure, immediately subjoins) is deeply afflictive. "Her cities are a desolation, a dry land, and a wilderness; a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby." The people of God a third time admonished to escape from Babylon, lest they be overtaken with her plagues, 45, 46. Other figures setting forth in a variety of lights the awful judgments with which the Chaldeans shall be visited on account of their very gross idolatries, 47—58. The significant emblem with which the Chapter concludes, of Seraiah, after having read the book of the prophet Jeremiah against Babylon, binding a stone to it, and casting it into the Euphrates, thereby prefiguring the very sudden downfal of the Chaldean city and empire, 59—64, is beautifully improved by the writer of the Apocalypse, chap. xviii, 21, in speaking of Babylon the GREAT, of which the other was a most expressive type; and to which many of the passages interspersed throughout the Old Testament scriptures relative to Babylon must be ultimately referred, if we would give an interpretation in every respect equal to the terrible import of the language in which these prophecies are conceived.

NOTES ON CHAPTER LI.

Verse 1. Thus saith the LORD] This Chapter is a continuation of the preceding prophecy.

A destroying wind.] Such as the pestilential winds in the East; and here the emblem of a destroying army, carrying all before them, and wasting with fire and sword.

Verse 2. And will send—fanners] When the corn is trodden out with the feet of cattle, or crushed out with a heavy wheel armed with iron, with a shovel they throw it up against the wind, that the chaff and broken straw may be separated from it. This is the image used by the prophet: these people shall be trodden, crushed, and fanned, by their enemies.

Verse 5. For Israel hath not been forsaken] God still continued His prophets among them; He had never cast them wholly off. Even in the midst of wrath, highly deserved and inflicted punishment, He has remembered mercy; and is now about to crown what He has done by restoring them to their own land. I conceive ם֫וְשׁ asham, which we translate sin, as rather signifying punishment, which meaning it often has.

Verse 7. Made all the earth drunken] The cup of God's wrath is the plenitude of punishment, that he inflicts on transgressors. It is represented as intoxicating, and making them mad.

8 Babylon is suddenly [a] fallen and destroyed: [b] howl for her; [c] take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed.

9 We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed: forsake her, and [d] let us go every one into his own country: [e] for her judgment reacheth unto heaven, and is lifted up even to the skies.

10 The LORD hath [f] brought forth our righteousness: come, and let us [g] declare in Zion the work of the LORD our God.

11 [h] Make [i] bright the arrows; gather the shields: [k] the LORD hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes: [l] for his device is against Babylon, to destroy it; because it is [m] the vengeance of the LORD, the vengeance of his temple.

12 [n] Set up the standard upon the walls of Babylon, make the watch strong, set up the watchmen, prepare the [o] ambushes: for the LORD hath both devised and done that which he spake against the inhabitants of Babylon.

Verse 8. Babylon is suddenly fallen and destroyed] These appear to be the words of some of the spectators of Babylon's misery.

Verse 9. We would have healed Babylon] Had it been in our power, we would have saved her; but we could not turn away the judgment of God.

Verse 10. The LORD hath brought forth our righteousness] This is the answer of the Jews. God has vindicated our cause.

Verse 11. Make bright the arrows] This is the prophet's address to Babylon.

The LORD hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes] Of Cyaxares king of Media, called Darius the Mede in Scripture; and of Cyrus king of Persia, presumptive heir of the throne of Cyaxares, his uncle. Cambyses, his father, sent him (Cyrus) with 30,000 men to assist his uncle Cyaxares, against Neriglissar king of Babylon, and by these was Babylon overthrown.

Verse 12. Set up the standard] A call to the enemies of Babylon to invest the city, and press the siege.

Verse 13. O thou that dwellest upon many waters] Thou who hast an abundant supply of waters. It was built on the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates; the latter running through the city. But the many waters may mean the many nations which belonged to the Babylonish empire; nations and people are frequently so called in Scripture.

Verse 14. I will fill thee with men] By means of these very waters through the channel of thy boasted river, thou shalt be filled with men, suddenly appearing as an army of locusts; and, without being expected, shall lift up a terrific cry, as soon as they have risen from the channel of the river.

Verse 15. He hath made the earth by his power] The omnipotence of God is particularly manifested in the works of creation.

He hath established the world by his wisdom] The omniscience of God is particularly seen in the government of תבל tebel, the inhabited surface of the globe. What a profusion of wisdom and skill is apparent in that wondrous system of Providence, by which He governs and provides for every living thing.

And hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding.] Deep thought, comprehensive design, and consummate skill, are especially seen in the formation, magnitudes, distances, revolutions, and various affections, of the heavenly bodies.

Verse 16. When he uttereth his voice] Sends thunder.

There is a multitude of waters] For the electric spark, by decomposing atmospheric air, converts the hydrogen and oxygen gases, of which it is composed, into water; which falls down in the form of rain.

Causeth the vapours to ascend] He is the Author of that power of evaporation, by which the water is rarefied; and, being lighter than the air, ascends in form of vapour, forms clouds, and is ready to be sent down again to water the earth by the action of His lightnings, as before. And by those same lightnings, and the agency of heat in general, currents of air are formed, moving in various directions, which we call winds.

17 [a] Every man [b] is brutish by his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image: [c] for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

19 [e] The Portion of Jacob is not like them; for he is the former of all things: and Israel is the rod of his inheritance: the LORD of hosts is his name.

20 [f] Thou art my battle axe and weapons of war: for [g] with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms;

21 And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;

22 With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces [h] old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid;

23 I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers.

24 [i] And I will render unto Babylon and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the LORD.

25 Behold, I am against thee, [k] O destroying mountain, saith the LORD, which destroyest all the earth: and I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and roll thee down from the rocks, [l] and will make thee a burnt mountain.

Verse 17. Every man is brutish by his knowledge] He is brutish for want of real knowledge; and he is brutish when he acknowledges that an idol is any thing in the world. These verses, from fifteen to nineteen, are transcribed from chap. x, 12—16.

Verse 20. Thou art my battle axe] I believe, Nebuchadnezzar is meant, who is called, chap. l, 23, the hammer of the whole earth. Others think the words are spoken of Cyrus. All the verbs are in the past tense, With thee have I broken in pieces, &c. &c.

Verse 24. And I will render] The vau (ו) should be translated but, of which it has here the full power. But I will render unto Babylon.

Verse 25. O destroying mountain] Another epithet which he applies to the Babylonish government: it is like a burning mountain which, by vomiting continual streams of burning lava, inundates and destroys all towns, villages, fields, &c., in its vicinity.

And roll thee down from the rocks] I will tumble thee from the rocky base on which thou restest. The combustible matter in thy bowels being exhausted, thou shalt appear as an extinguished crater; and the stony matter which thou castest out shall not be of sufficient substance to make a foundation stone for solidity, or a corner stone for beauty, ver. 26. Under this beautiful and most expressive metaphor, the prophet shews the nature of the Babylonish government; setting the nations on fire, deluging and destroying them by its troops, till, at last exhausted, it tumbles down, is extinguished, and leaves nothing as a basis to erect a new form of government on; but is altogether useless, like the cooled lava, which is, properly speaking, fit for no human purpose.

Verse 27. Set ye up a standard] Another summons to the Medes and Persians to attack Babylon.

Ararat, Minni] The Greater and Less Armenia.

And Askchenaz] A part of Phrygia, near the Hellespont. So Bochart, Phaleg. lib. i, c. 3, lib. iii, c. 9. Concerning Ashchenaz, Homer seems to speak, Il. ii, 370, 371.

Φορκυς αυ Φρυγας ηγε, και Ασκανιος θεοειδης Τηλ' εξ Ασκανιης.

"Ascanius, godlike youth, and Phorcys led The Phrygians from Ascania's distant land."

Calmet thinks that the Ascantes, who dwelt in the vicinity of the Tanais, are meant.

Verse 29. And the land shall tremble] It is represented for every purpose of the LORD shall be performed against Babylon, [a] to make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant.

32 And that [e] the passages are stopped, and the reeds they have burned with fire, and the men of war are affrighted.

33 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; The daughter of Babylon is [f] like a threshing-floor, [g] it [h] is time to thresh her: yet a little while, [i] and the time of her harvest shall come.

here as trembling under the numerous armies that are passing over it, and the prancing of their horse.

Verse 30. The mighty men—have forborne to fight] They were panic struck when they found the Medes and Persians within their walls, and at once saw that resistance was useless.

Verse 31. One post shall run to meet another] As the city was taken by surprise, in the manner already related; so now messengers, one after another, were despatched to give the king information of what was done; viz. that the city was taken at one end. Herodotus tells us, that the extreme parts of the city were taken, before those of the centre knew any thing of the invasion. Herodot. lib. i, c. 191.

Verse 32. That the passages are stopped] Either the bridges or slips for boats, by which the inhabitants passed from one side to the other; and may mean the principal gates or passes in the city, which the victorious army would immediately seize, that they might prevent all communication between the inhabitants.

The reeds they have burned with fire] What this means I cannot tell, unless it refer to something done after the taking of the city. Setting fire to the reeds in the marshy ground, in order the better to clear the places, and give a freer passage to the water, that it may neither stagnate, nor turn the solid ground into a marsh. Dr. Blayney thinks it refers to the firing of the houses, in order to throw the inhabitants into the greater confusion: but no historian makes any mention of burning the city, except what is said, ver. 30. They have burned her dwelling-places. But this may be a poetical expression. That they burnt nothing before they took the city must be evident, from the circumstance of their taking the city by surprise, in the night time, with the greatest secrecy. Still there might have been some gates, barricadoes, or wooden works, serving for barracks or such like, which obstructed some of the great passages; which, when they had entered, they were obliged to burn, in order to get themselves a ready passage through the city. This is the more likely, because this burning of the reeds is connected with the stopping of the passages, burning the dwelling-places, and breaking the bars.

Verse 33. The daughter of Babylon is like a threshing-floor] The threshing wheel is gone over her; she is trodden under foot.

Verse 34. Nebuchadrezzar—hath devoured me] These are the words of Judea; he has taken away all my riches.

He hath cast me out] He shall vomit all up; i. e. they shall be regained.

Verse 35. The violence done to me—be upon Babylon,—and my blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea] Zion begins to speak, ver. 34, and ends with this verse. The answer of Jehovah begins with the next verse. Though the Chaldeans have been the instrument of God to punish the Jews; yet in return they, being themselves exceedingly wicked, shall suffer for all the carnage they have made, and for all the blood they have shed.

Verse 36. I will dry up her sea] Exhaust all her treasures.

Verse 37. Without an inhabitant.] See chap. l, 39.

Verse 39. In their heat I will make their feasts] It was 46 And [i] lest your heart faint, and ye fear [k] for the rumour that shall be heard in the land; a rumour shall both come one year, and after that in another year shall come a rumour, and violence in the land, ruler against ruler.

47 Therefore, behold, the days come, that [l] I will [m] do judgment upon the graven images of Babylon: and her whole land shall be confounded, and all her slain shall fall in the midst of her.

48 Then [n] the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein, shall sing for Babylon: [o] for the spoilers shall come unto her from the north, saith the LORD.

49 [p] As Babylon hath caused the slain of Israel to fall, so at Babylon shall fall the slain of all [q] the earth.

50 [r] Ye that have escaped the sword, go away, stand not still: remember the LORD afar off, and let Jerusalem come into your mind.

51 [s] We are confounded, because we have heard reproach; shame hath covered our faces: for strangers are come into the sanctuaries of the LORD's house.

52 Wherefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, [t] that I will do judgment upon her graven images; and through all her land the wounded shall groan.

53 [u] Though Babylon should mount up to heaven, and though she should fortify the height of her strength, yet from me shall spoilers come unto her, saith the LORD.

on the night of a feast-day, while their hearts were heated with wine and revelry, that Babylon was taken, see Dan. v, 1—3. This feast was held in honour of the goddess Sheshach, (or perhaps of Bel) who is mentioned, ver. 41, as being taken with her worshippers. As it was in the night the city was taken, many had retired to rest, and never awoke:—slain in their beds, they slept a perpetual sleep.

Verse 41. How is Sheshach taken!] Perhaps the city is here called by the name of its idol.

The praise of the whole earth] One of the seven wonders of the world: superexcellent for the height, breadth, and compass of its walls,—its hanging gardens,—the temple of Belus, &c. &c.

Verse 42. The sea is come up] A multitude of foes have inundated the city.

Verse 44. I will punish Bel in Babylon] Bel, or Belus, was their supreme deity.

That which he hath swallowed up] The sacred vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem, which were taken thence by Nebuchadnezzar, and dedicated to him in his temple at Babylon.

The wall of Babylon shall fall.] It shall cease to be a defence; and shall moulder away until, in process of time, it shall not be discernible.

Verse 45. My people, go ye out] A warning to all the Jews in Babylon to leave the city, and escape for their lives.

Verse 46. A rumour shall—come one year] A year before the capture of the city there shall be a rumour of war,—and in that year Belshazzar was defeated by Cyrus. The following year the city was taken.

Verse 48. The heaven and the earth—shall sing for Babylon] Its fall shall be a subject of universal rejoicing.

Verse 50. Ye that have escaped the sword] The Jews.

Let Jerusalem come into your mind.] Pray for its restoration; and embrace the first opportunity offered of returning thither.

Verse 51. Strangers are come into the sanctuaries] The lamentation of the pious Jews for the profanation of the Temple by the Chaldeans.

Verse 53. Though Babylon should mount up to heaven]

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. Ol. XLVI. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 22.

54 [a] A sound of a cry cometh from Babylon, and great destruction from the land of the Chaldeans:

55 Because the LORD hath spoiled Babylon, and destroyed out of her the great voice; when her waves do roar like great waters, a noise of their voice is uttered:

56 Because the spoiler is come upon her, even upon Babylon, and her mighty men are taken, every one of their bows is broken: [b] for the LORD God of recompenses shall surely requite.

57 [c] And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men: and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith [d] the King, whose name is the LORD of hosts.

58 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; [e] The [f] broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly [g] broken, and her high gates shall be burned with fire; and [h] the people shall labour in vain, and the folk in the fire, and they shall be weary.

59 The word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, when he went [i] with Zedekiah the king of Judah into Babylon in the fourth year of his reign. And this Seraiah was a [k] quiet prince.

60 So Jeremiah wrote in a book all the evil that should come upon Babylon, even all these words that are written against Babylon.

61 And Jeremiah said to Seraiah, When thou comest to Babylon, and shalt see, and shalt read all these words;

62 Then shalt thou say, O LORD, thou hast spoken against this place, to cut it off, that [l] none shall remain in it, neither man nor beast, but that it shall be [m] desolate for ever.

63 And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, [n] that thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates:

64 And thou shalt say, Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her: [o] and they shall be weary. Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.

Verse 55. The great voice] Its pride, and insufferable boasting.

Verse 56. The LORD God of recompenses] The fall of Babylon is an act of Divine Justice: whatever it suffers, it is in consequence of its crimes.

Verse 57. I will make drunk her princes] See on ver. 39.

Verse 58. The broad walls of Babylon] Herodotus, who saw these walls, says, "The city was a regular square, each side of which was one hundred and twenty stadia,—the circumference four hundred and eighty stadia. It was surrounded by a wall fifty cubits broad, and two hundred cubits high; and each side had twenty-five brazen gates."—Herod. lib. i, c. 178. Had not Cyrus resorted to stratagem, humanly speaking, he could not have taken this city. For the destruction of this wall and its very vestiges, see on Isa. xiii, 19.

Verse 59. The word which Jeremiah] On account of the message sent by Jeremiah to the Jewish captives in Babylon.

Verse 60. Wrote in a book] Whether this book contained any more than is recorded in this place we do not know; probably it contained no more than what is found in verses 62—64. A book, ספר sepher, signifies, in Hebrew, any writing, great or small.

Verse 64. Thus shall Babylon sink, &c.] This is the emblem of its overthrow and irretrievable ruin. See Rev. xviii, 21, where we find that this is an emblem of the total ruin of mystical Babylon.

Herodotus relates a similar action of the Phoceans, who, having resolved to leave their country and never return to it again,—Μυδρον σιδηρεον κατεπονταδαν, και ωμοσαν μη πριν ες Φωκαιην ηξειν, πριν η τον μυδρον τουτον αναφηναι,—"threw a mass of iron into the sea, and swore that they would never return to Phocea till that iron mass should rise and swim on the top." The story is this:—The Phoceans being besieged by Harpagus, general of the Persians, demanded one day's truce to deliberate on the propositions he had made to them relative to their surrendering their city; and begged that in the mean while he would take off his army from the walls. Harpagus having consented, they carried their wives, children, and their most valuable effects, aboard their ships; then, throwing a mass of iron into the sea, bound themselves by an oath never to return till that iron should rise to the top and swim. See Herodotus, lib. i, c. 165.

Horace refers to this in his epode Ad Populum Romanum, Epode xvi, ver. 25.

"As the Phocæans oft for freedom bled,
At length with imprecated curses fled." FRANCIS.

Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.] It appears that the following Chapter is not the work of this prophet: it is not his style. The author of it writes Jehoiachin; Jeremiah writes him always Jeconiah, or Coniah. It is merely historical, and is very similar to 2 Kings xxiv, 18, to xxv, 30. The author, whoever he was, relates the capture of Jerusalem, the fate of Zedekiah, the pillage and burning of the city and the temple. He mentions also certain persons of distinction who were slain by the Chaldeans. He mentions the number of the captives that were carried to Babylon at three different times; and concludes with the deliverance of king Jehoiachin from prison in Babylon, in which he had been for thirty-seven years. It is very likely that the whole Chapter has been compiled from some chronicle of that time; or it was designed as a preface to the Book of the Lamentations; and would stand with great propriety before it, as it contains the facts on which that inimitable poem is built. Were it allowable, I would remove it to that place.

CHAPTER LII.

This Chapter was added after Jeremiah's time, probably by Ezra, after the return from the captivity, of which it gives a short account, nearly the same as in 2 Kings xxiv, 18—20, and xxv. It is very properly subjoined to the preceding prophecies, in order to shew how exactly they were fulfilled. It likewise forms a proper introduction to the following Lamentations, as it gives an account of the mournful events which gave rise to them.—Zedekiah's evil reign, and rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar, 1—3. Jerusalem is taken by the Chaldeans after a siege of eighteen months, 4—7. Zedekiah pursued and taken in the plains of Jericho, and his whole army dispersed, 8, 9. The king's sons and all the princes of Judah slain in Riblah, 10. Zedekiah has his eyes put out by order of the Chaldean monarch; and is afterwards bound in chains, carried to Babylon, and imprisoned for life, 11. Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, burns and spoils the city and temple, 12—19. The two pillars of the temple, with their dimensions and ornaments, 20—23. The officers of the temple, and several others, carried away captives into Babylon, and then slain by order of Nebuchadnezzar, 24—27. The number of Jews that Nebuchadnezzar carried away captive in the seventh year of his reign, 28; in his eighteenth year, 29; and in his twenty-third year, 30. Evil-merodach, the son of Nebuchadnezzar, in the year of his accession to the throne of Babylon, (which was in the thirty-seventh year of the captivity, and the one hundred and ninety-first from the building of Rome according to the computation of Varro,) orders Jehoiachin to be taken out of prison, and treats him kindly for the remainder of his life, 31—34.

6 And in the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.

7 Then the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden; (now the Chaldeans were by the city round about:) and they went by the way of the plain.

8 But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him.

9 [a] Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

10 [b] And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: he slew also all the princes of Judah in Riblah.

11 Then he [c] put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in [d] chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in [e] prison till the day of his death.

12 [f] Now in the fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, [g] which was the nineteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, [h] came Nebuzar-adan, [i] captain [k] of the guard, which [l] served the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem,

13 And burned the house of the LORD, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the houses of the great men, burned he with fire:

14 And all the army of the Chaldeans, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down all the walls of Jerusalem round about.

15 [m] Then Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive certain of the poor of the people, and the residue of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the multitude.

16 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left certain of the poor of the land for vinedressers and for husbandmen.

17 [n] Also the [o] pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon.

18 [p] The caldrons also, and the [q] shovels, and the snuffers, and the [r] bowls, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away.

19 And the basons, and the [s] firepans, and the bowls, and the caldrons, and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups; that which was of gold in gold, and that which was of silver in silver, took the captain of the guard away.

20 The two pillars, one sea, and twelve brasen bulls that were under the bases, which king Solomon had made in the house of the LORD: [t] the [u] brass of all these vessels was without weight.

The three keepers] The priests who stood at the door to receive the offerings of the people, see 2 Kings xx, 9, and xxiii, 4.

Verse 25. Seven men—that were near the king's person] These were privy counsellors.

Verses 28—30. On these verses Dr. Blayney has some sensible remarks: I will extract the substance. These verses are not inserted in 2 Kings xxv. Are we to conclude from these verses that the whole number of the Jews which Nebuchadnezzar, in all his expeditions, carried away, was no more than four thousand six hundred? This cannot be true; for he carried away more than twice that number at one time; and this is expressly said to have been in the eighth year of his reign, 2 Kings xxiv, 12—16. Before that time he had carried off a number of captives from Jerusalem in the first year of his reign, among whom were Daniel and his companions. Dan. i, 3—6. These are confessedly not noticed here. And as the taking and burning of Jerusalem is in this very Chapter said to have been in the fourth and fifth months of the nineteenth year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, those who were carried into captivity at the date of those events cannot possibly be the same with those that are said to be carried away either in the eighteenth or twenty-third year of that prince. Nor, indeed, is it credible that the number carried away at the time that the city was taken, and the whole country reduced, could be so few as eight hundred and thirty-two; (see ver. 29,) supposing a mistake in the date of the year, which some are willing to do without sufficient grounds.

Here then we have three deportations, and those the most considerable ones, in the first, in the eighth, and nineteenth years of Nebuchadnezzar, sufficiently distinguished from those in the seventh, eighteenth, and twenty-third years. So that it seems most reasonable to conclude with Abp. Ussher, in Chronologia Sacra, that by the latter three the historian meant to point out deportations of a minor kind, not elsewhere noticed in direct terms in Scripture.

The first of these, said to have been in the seventh year of Nebuchadnezzar, was of those that had been picked up in several parts of Judah by the bands of Chaldeans, Syrians, and others, whom the king of Babylon sent against the land previously to his own coming, 2 Kings xxiv, 2.

That, in the eighteenth year, corresponds with the time when the Chaldean army broke off the siege before Jerusalem, and marched to meet the Egyptian army; at which time they might think it proper to send off the prisoners that were in camp, under a guard to Babylon.

And the last, in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar, was when that monarch, being engaged in the siege of Tyre, sent off Nebuzar-adan against ths Moabites, Ammonites, and other neighbouring nations, who at the same time carried away the gleanings of Jews that remained in their own land, amounting in all to no more than seven hundred and forty-five.

Josephus speaks of this expedition against the Moabites and Ammonites, which he places in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar: but mentions nothing done in the land of Israel at that time. Only he says, that after the conquest of those nations, Nebuchadnezzar carried his victorious arms against Egypt, which he in some measure reduced; and carried the Jews whom he found there captives to Babylon. But the Egyptian expedition was not till the twenty-seventh year of Jehoiachin's captivity, i. e. the thirty-fifth of Nebuchadnezzar, as may be collected from Ezek. xxix, 17, so that those who were carried away in the twenty-third year were not from Egypt; but were, as before observed, the few Jews that remained in the land of Judah.

Lifted up the head of Jehoiachin] This phrase is taken from Gen. xl, 13. It is founded on the observation that those who are in sorrow hold down their heads; and when they are comforted, or the cause of their sorrow removed, they lift up their heads. The Hebrew phrase, lift up the head, signifies to comfort, cheer, make happy.

Verse 32. Spake kindly] Conversed freely with him.

Set his throne] Gave him a more respectable seat than any of the captive princes, or better than even his own princes had; probably near his person.

Verse 33. And changed his prison-garments] That is, Jehoiachin changed his own garments, that he might be suited in that respect to the state of his elevation. Kings also, in token of favour, gave caftans or robes to those whom they wished to honour.

And he did continually eat bread before him] Was a constant guest at the king's table.

Verse 34. And—there was a continual diet given him] This was probably a ration allowed by the king for the support of Jehoiachin's household. For other particulars, see the Note on 2 Kings xxv, 30.

All the days of his life.] I believe these words have been by mistake added from the preceding verse. There, they are proper: here, they are tautological. They are wanting in the Septuagint and in the Arabic.

The preceding words עד יום מותו âd yom motho, "to the day of his death," are wanting in two of De Rossi's and one of Kennicott's MSS.

Coverdale ends thus: All the dayes of his life untill he died. This is better than the Common Version.

Immediately after this verse, my old MS. Bible adds the following words:—And done is aftir that into caitifte is brougt Israel, and Jerusalem is destroide, satte Jeremye the prophet weepund, and weiled with this lamentacion Jerusalem; and with bitter inwit sighand and criand weilawai, seide. Then follows in red letters.—Here begynneth the Lamentacion of Jeremye, that is intitle Cenoth; with the sortynge out of Ebrue letters. Aleph. How sitteth aloon the city, &c. See something of a similar kind from other authorities, at the beginning of Lamentations.

END OF THE NOTES ON THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JEREMIAH.

INTRODUCTION

JEREMIAH.

THIS Book, like the several Books of the Pentateuch, is denominated in Hebrew איכה Eicah, (How!) from its first word; and sometimes קינות Kinnoth, (Lamentations) from its subject. In the Septuagint it is termed ΘΡΗΝΟΙ ΤΟΥ ΙΕΡΕΜΙΟΥ, for the same reason. The Syriac and Arabic copy, or follow, the Septuagint; and so does the Vulgate, from the Lamentationes of which, the Book has that name which it bears in our language. In the Chaldee it has no name; and in it, and perhaps anciently in the Hebrew, it was written consecutively with the last chapter of Jeremiah.

It is one of the Books of the מגילות Megilloth, or Roll among the Jews; and because it relates to the ruin of their affairs, and contains promises of restoration, it is peculiarly prized, and frequently read. The five Megilloth are:—Ecclesiastes, Canticles, Lamentations, Ruth, and Esther.

There has been little difference among learned men concerning the author of this Book. The whole current of antiquity and modern times have pointed out Jeremiah as the writer: of this the style is a sufficient evidence. Mr. John Henry Pareau, in a Dissertation prefixed to his Translation and Notes on this Book, (8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1790) has proved this point amply from a general collation of the prophecy of Jeremiah with select passages in this Book. I have heard of but one learned man who has entertained serious doubts on the subject; Mr. Herman Van der Hardt, who has supposed the five chapters were written by Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, Abednego, and Jeconiah. To this opinion I suppose none has ever been converted.

There has been more difference of opinion relative to the subject and occasion. Some have thought the Book was composed on the death of Josiah; others that it was composed on occasion of the destruction of Jerusalem, and the various desolations connected with it. To this all its parts, and its general phraseology, seem best to apply; and this is the sentiment most generally embraced at present. This will receive much proof from a minute consideration of the Book itself.

The composition of this Poem is what may be called very technical. Every Chapter, except the last, is an acrostic. Of the two first, each verse begins with a several letter of the Hebrew alphabet, in the order of the letters; with this exception, that in the second, third, and fourth Chapters, the פ phe is put before the ע ain; whereas in all the acrostic Psalms the latter precedes the former, as it does in all grammars of the Hebrew language. In the first and second Chapters each verse is composed of three hemistichs or half verses, except the seventh verse of the first, and the nineteenth of the second Chapter, which have each four hemistichs.

The third Chapter contains sixty-six verses, each, as before, formed of three hemistichs; but with this difference, that each hemistich begins with the same letter, so that the whole alphabet is thrice repeated in this Chapter.

The fourth Chapter is made up of twenty-two verses, according to the number of the Hebrew letters: but the composition is different from all the rest; for each verse consists of only two hemistichs, and those much shorter than in any of the preceding Chapters.

I have called this an inimitable poem; better judges are of the same mind. "Never," says Bishop Lowth, "was there a more rich and elegant variety of beautiful images and adjuncts arranged together within so small a compass, nor more happily chosen and applied."

"One would think," says Dr. South, "that every letter was written with a tear,—every word, the sound of a breaking heart:—that the author was compacted of sorrows,—disciplined to grief from his infancy;—one who never breathed but in sighs,—nor spoke, but in a groan."

"Nor can we too much admire," says Dr. Blayney, "the full and graceful flow of that pathetic eloquence in which the Author pours forth the effusions of a patriotic heart, and piously weeps over the ruins of his venerable country. But it was observed before that the prophet's peculiar talent lay in working up and expressing the passions of grief and pity; and, unhappily for him as a man and a citizen, he met with a subject but too well calculated to give his genius its full display."

David in several places has forcibly depicted the sorrows of a heart oppressed with penitential sorrow:—but where, in a composition of such length, have bodily misery and mental agony been more successfully painted? All the expressions and images of sorrow are here exhibited in various combinations, and in various points of view. Misery has no expression that the Author of the Lamentations has not employed. Patriots! you who tell us you burn for your country's welfare, look at the prophecies and history of this extraordinary man;—look at his Lamentations;—take him through his life to his death, and learn from him what true patriotism means! The man who watched, prayed, and lived, for the welfare of his country; who chose to share her adversities, her sorrows, her wants, her afflictions and disgrace, when he might have been a companion of princes, and have sat at the table of kings!—who only ceased to live for his country when he ceased to breathe:—that was a patriot, in comparison with whom almost all others are obscured, minished, and brought low; or are totally annihilated.

CHAPTER I.

The Prophet begins with lamenting the dismal reverse of fortune that befel his country, confessing at the same time that her calamities were the just consequence of her sins, 1—6. Jerusalem herself is then personified and brought forward to continue the sad complaint, and to solicit the mercy of God, 7—22.

Jerusalem was become desolate, that Jeremiah sat weeping; and he lamented with this lamentation over Jerusalem; and he said."

The Vulgate has the same with some variations:—"Et factum est postquam in captivitatem redacta est Israel, et Jerusalem deserta est, sedit Jeremias propheta flens, et planxit lamentatione hac in Jerusalem, et amaro animo suspirans et ejulans, dixit."—The translation of this, as given in the first translation of the Bible into English, may be found at the end of Jeremiah, taken from an ancient MS. in my own possession.

I subjoin another taken from the first PRINTED edition of the English Bible, that by Coverdale, 1535.—"And it came to passe, (after Israel was brought into captivytie, and Jerusalem destroyed;) that Jeremy the prophet sat weeping, mournynge, and makinge his mone in Jerusalem: so that with an hevy herte he sighed and sobbed, sayenge."

Matthew's Bible, printed in 1549, refines upon this:—"It happened after Israell was brought into captyvite, and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremy the prophet sate wepyng, and sorrowfully bewayled Jerusalem: and syghynge and hewlynge with an hevy and wooful hert, sayde."

Beck's Bible of the same date, and Cardmarden's of 1566, have the same, with a trifling change in the orthography.

On this Beck and others have the following note:—"These words are read in the LXX interpreters: but not in the Hebrue."

All these shew that it was the ancient opinion that the Book of Lamentations was composed, not over the death of Josiah, but on account of the desolations of Israel and Jerusalem.

The Arabic copies the Septuagint. The Syriac does not acknowledge it; and the Chaldee has these words only,—"Jeremiah the great priest and prophet said."

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. How doth the city sit solitary] Sitting down, with the elbow on the knee, and the head supported by the hand, without any company, unless an oppressor near, all these were signs of mourning and distress. The coin struck by Vespasian on the capture of Jerusalem, on the obverse of which there is a palm-tree, the emblem of Judea, and under it a woman, the emblem of Jerusalem, sitting leaning, as before described, with the legend Judea capta, illustrates this expression as well as that in Isa. xlvii, 1. See the note on Isa. iii, 26, where the subject is farther explained.

Become as a widow] Having lost her king. Cities are commonly described as the mothers of their inhabitants, the kings as husbands, the princes as children. When therefore they are bereaved of these, they are represented as widows, and childless.

Is she become tributary!] Having no longer the political form of a nation; and the remnant that is left paying tribute to a foreign and heathen conqueror.

Verse 2. Among all her lovers] Her allies; her friends, instead of helping her, have helped her enemies. Several, who sought her friendship when she was in prosperity in the time of David and Solomon, are now among her enemies.

Verse 3. Between the straits] She has been brought into such difficulties, that it was impossible for her to escape. Has this any reference to the circumstances in which Zedekiah and the princes of Judah endeavoured to escape from Jerusalem, by the way of the gates between the two walls? Jer. lii, 7.

Verse 4. The ways of Zion do mourn] A fine prosopopœia. The ways in which the people trod, coming to the sacred solemnities, being now no longer frequented, are represented as shedding tears; and the gates themselves partake of the general distress. All poets of eminence among the Greeks and Romans have recourse to this image. So Moschus, in his Epitaph on Bion, ver. 1—3.

Αιλινα μοι ϛοναχειτε ναπαι, και Δωριον ὑδωρ,
Και ποταμοι κλαιοιτε τον ιμεροεντα Βιωνα.
Νυν φυτα μοι μυρεσθε, και αλσεα νυν γοαοισθε. κ. τ. λ.

"Ye winds with grief your waving summits bow;
Ye Dorian fountains, murmur as ye flow;
From weeping urns your copious sorrows shed,
And bid the rivers mourn for Bion dead.
Ye shady groves, in robes of sable hue,
Bewail: ye plants, in pearly drops of dew.
Ye drooping flowers, diffuse a languid breath,
And die with sorrow, at sweet Bion's death."

FAWKES.

So Virgil, Æn. vii, ver. 759.

Te nemus Anguitiæ, vitrea te Fucinus unda
Te liquidi flevere lacus.

"For thee, wide echoing, sigh'd th' Anguitian woods;
For thee, in murmurs, wept thy native floods."

A. M. cir. 3416. B. C. cir. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 29.

are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

5 Her adversaries [a] are the chief, her enemies prosper; for the LORD hath afflicted her [b] for the multitude of her transgressions: her [c] children are gone into captivity before the enemy.

6 And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed: her princes are become like harts that find no pasture, and they are gone without strength before the pursuer.

7 Jerusalem remembered in the days of her affliction and of her miseries all her [d] pleasant things that she had in the days of old, when her people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her: the adversaries saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.

8 [e] Jerusalem hath grievously sinned; therefore she [f] is removed: all that honoured her despise her, because [g] they have seen her nakedness: yea, she sigheth and turneth backward.

9 Her filthiness is in her skirts; she [h] remembereth not her last end; therefore she came down wonderfully: [i] she had no comforter. O LORD, behold my affliction: for the enemy hath magnified himself.

A. M. cir. 3416. B. C. cir. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 29.

10 The adversary hath spread out his hand upon [k] all her [l] pleasant things: for she hath seen that [m] the heathen entered into her sanctuary, whom thou didst command that [n] they should not enter into thy congregation.

11 All her people sigh, [o] they seek bread; they have given their pleasant things for meat [p] to relieve the soul: see, O LORD, and consider; for I am become vile.

12 [q] Is it nothing to you, all ye that [r] pass by? behold, and see [s] if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the LORD hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger.

13 From above hath he sent fire into my bones,

The thirsty cattle of themselves abstain'd
From water, and their grassy fare disdain'd.
The death of Daphnis woods and hills deplore;
The Libyan lions hear, and hearing roar." DRYDEN.

Verse 5. Her adversaries are the chief] They have now supreme dominion over the whole land.

Verse 7. Did mock at her sabbaths.] משבתה mishabateah. Some contend that sabbaths are not intended here. The Septuagint has κατοικεσια αυτης, her habitation; the Chaldee, על טובהא âl tubaha, "her good things;" the Syriac, ܠܥ ܛܒܘܬܗ âl toboroh, "her breach." The Vulgate and Arabic read with the Hebrew. Some of my oldest MSS. have the word in the plural number, משבתיה meshabateyah, "her sabbaths." A multitude of Kennicott's MSS. have the same reading. The Jews were despised by the Heathen for keeping the sabbath. Juvenal mocks them on that account:—

——— cui septima quæque fuit lux
Ignava et partem vitæ non attigit ullam. Sat. v.

"To whom every seventh day was a blank, and formed not any part of their life."

St. Augustin represents Seneca as doing the same:—Inutiliter id eos facere affirmans, quod septimani fermè partem ætatis suæ perdent vacando, et multa in tempore urgentia, non agendo lædantur. "That they lost the seventh part of their life in keeping their sabbaths; and injured themselves by abstaining from the performance of many necessary things in such times." He did not consider that the Roman calendar and customs gave them many more idle days than God had prescribed in sabbaths to the Jews. The sabbath is a most wise and beneficent ordinance.

Verse 9. She remembereth not her last end] Although evident marks of her pollution appeared about her, and the land was defiled by her sinfulness even to its utmost borders, she had no thought or consideration of what must be the consequence of all this at the last. Blayney.

Verse 11. They have given their pleasant things] Jerusalem is compared to a woman brought into great straits, who parts with her jewels and trinkets in order to purchase by them the necessaries of life.

Verse 12. Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?] The desolations and distress brought upon this city and its inhabitants had scarcely any parallel. Excessive abuse of and it prevaileth against them: he hath [a] spread a net for my feet, he hath turned me back: he hath made me desolate and faint all the day.

14 [b] The yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand: they are wreathed, and come up upon my neck: he hath made my strength to fall, the LORD hath delivered me into their hands, from whom I am not able to rise up.

15 The LORD hath trodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me: he hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men: [c] the LORD hath trodden [d] the virgin, the daughter of Judah, as in a wine-press.

16 For these things I weep; [e] mine eye, mine eye runneth down with water, because [f] the comforter that should [g] relieve my soul is far from me: my children are desolate, because the enemy prevailed.

17 [h] Zion spreadeth forth her hands, and [i] there is none to comfort her: the LORD hath commanded concerning Jacob, that his adversaries should be round about him: Jerusalem is as a menstruous woman among them.

19 I called for my lovers, but [n] they deceived me: my priests and mine elders gave up the ghost in the city, [o] while they sought their meat to relieve their souls.

20 Behold, O LORD; for I am in distress: my [p] bowels are troubled; mine heart is turned within me; for I have grievously rebelled: [q] abroad the sword bereaveth, at home there is as death.

21 They have heard that I sigh: [r] there is God's accumulated mercies calls for singular and exemplary punishment.

Verse 14. The yoke of my transgressions] I am now tied and bound by the chain of my sins; and it is so wreathed, so doubled and twisted round me, that I cannot free myself. A fine representation of the miseries of a penitent soul, which feels that nothing but the pitifulness of God's mercy can loose it.

Verse 15. Called an assembly] The Chaldean army, composed of various nations, which God commissioned to destroy Jerusalem.

Verse 17. Zion spreadeth forth her hands] Extending the hands is the form in supplication.

Jerusalem is as a menstruous woman] To whom none dared to approach, either to help or comfort, because of the law, Lev. xv, 19—27.

Verse 19. I called for my lovers] My allies: the Egyptians and others.

Verse 20. Abroad the sword bereaveth] WAR is through the country: and at home death; the pestilence and famine rage in the city: calamity in every shape is fallen upon me.

Virgil represents the calamities of Troy under the same image:—

——— Nec soli pœnas dant sanguine Teucri:
Quondam etiam victis redit in præcordia virtus;
Victoresque cadunt Danai. Crudelis ubique
Luctus, ubique Pavor, et plurima mortis imago.
Æneid. lib. ii, 366.

"Not only Trojans fall; but, in their turn,
The vanquish'd triumph, and the victors mourn.
Our's take new courage from despair and night;
Confused the fortune is, confused the fight.
All parts resound with tumults, plaints, and fears;
And grisly death in sundry shapes appears."
DRYDEN.

So Milton—

"——————————— Despair
Tended the sick, busiest from couch to couch;
And over them triumphant Death his dart
Shook." Par. Lost, B. xi, 489.

Jeremiah (chap. ix, 21,) uses the same image:—

Death is come up into our windows:
He hath entered our palaces,
To cut off the infants without,
And the young men in our streets.

So Silius Italicus, II, 548.—

Mors graditur, vasto pandens cava guttura rictu, Casuroque inhians populo.

"Death stalks along, and opens his hideous throat to gulp down the people."

Verse 21. They have heard that I sigh] My affliction is public enough; but no one comes to comfort me:—

They are glad that thou hast done it] On the contrary, none to comfort me: all mine enemies have heard of my trouble; they are glad that thou hast done it: thou wilt bring [a] the day that thou hast [b] called, and they shall be like unto me.

22 [c] Let all their wickedness come before thee; and do unto them, as thou hast done unto me for all my transgressions: for my sighs are many, and [d] my heart is faint.

they exult in my misery; and they see that THOU hast done what they were incapable of performing.

Thou wilt bring the day that thou hast called, and they shall be like unto me] Babylon shall be visited in her turn; and Thy judgments poured out upon her shall equal her state with my own. See the last six Chapters of the preceding prophecy for the accomplishment of this prediction.

Verse 22. Let all their wickedness come before thee] That is, Thou wilt call their crimes also into remembrance; and Thou wilt do unto them by siege, sword, famine, and captivity, what Thou hast done to me. Though Thy judgments, because of Thy long-suffering, are slow; yet, because of Thy righteousness, they are sure.

For my sighs are many] My desolations continue; and my heart is faint,—my political and physical strength almost totally destroyed.

Imprecations in the Sacred Writings are generally to be understood as declarative of the evils they indicate; or, that such evils will take place. No prophet of God ever wished desolation on those against whom he was directed to prophesy.

CHAPTER II.

The Prophet shews the dire effects of the Divine anger in the miseries brought on his country; the unparalleled calamities of which, he charges, in a great measure, on the false prophets, 1—14. In this desperate condition, the astonishment and bye-word of all who see her, Jerusalem is directed to sue earnestly for mercy and pardon, 15—22.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verse 1. How hath the Lord covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud] The women in the Eastern countries wear veils, and often very costly ones. Here, Zion is represented as being veiled by the hand of God's judgment. And what is the veil? A dark cloud, by which she is entirely obscured.

Instead of ארני adonai, lord, twenty-four of Dr. Kennicott's MSS., and some of the most ancient of my own, read יהוה yehovah, LORD, as in ver. 2.

The beauty of Israel] His Temple.

His footstool] The ark of the covenant, often so called. The rendering of my old MS. Bible is curious:—And record not of his litil steging-stole of his feet, in the dai of his woodnesse. To be wood signifies, in our ancient language, to be mad.

Verse 2. The LORD hath swallowed up] It is a strange figure when thus applied; but Jehovah is here represented as having swallowed down Jerusalem and all the cities and fortifications in the land: that is, He has permitted them to be destroyed. See ver. 5.

Verse 3. The horn of Israel] His power and strength. It is a metaphor taken from cattle, whose principal strength lies in their horns.

Hath drawn back his right hand] He did not support us when our enemies came against us.

A. M. cir. 3416. B. C. cir. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 29.

of Israel: [a] he hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, [b] and he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about.

4 [c] He hath bent his bow like an enemy: he stood with his right hand as an adversary, and slew [d] all [e] that were pleasant to the eye in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion: he poured out his fury like fire.

5 [f] The LORD was an enemy: he hath swallowed up Israel, [g] he hath swallowed up all her palaces: he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.

6 And he hath violently [h] taken away his [i] tabernacle, [k] as if it were of a garden: he hath destroyed his places of the assembly: [l] the LORD hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised in the indignation of his anger the king and the priest.

7 The LORD hath cast off his altar, he hath abhorred his sanctuary, he hath [m] given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; [n] they have made a noise in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast.

8 The LORD hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion: [o] he hath stretched out a line, he hath not withdrawn his hand from [p] destroying: therefore he made the rampart and the wall to lament; they languished together.

A. M. cir. 3416. B. C. cir. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 29.

9 Her gates are sunk into the ground; he hath destroyed and [q] broken her bars: [r] her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: [s] the law is no more; her [t] prophets also find no vision from the LORD.

10 The elders of the daughter of Zion [u] sit upon the ground, and keep silence: they have [x] cast up dust upon their heads; they have [y] girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.

11 [z] Mine eyes do fail with tears, [a] my bowels are troubled, [b] my liver is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because [c] the children and the sucklings [d] swoon in the streets of the city.

12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.

13 What thing shall I take to witness for thee?

Verse 6. As if it were of a garden] "As it were the garden of his own hedging." Blayney.

The LORD hath caused the solemn feasts] By delivering us up into the hands of the enemy our religious worship is not only suspended, but all Divine ordinances are destroyed.

Verse 7. They have made a noise in the house of the LORD] Instead of the silver trumpets of the sanctuary, nothing but the sounds of warlike instruments are to be heard.

Verse 8. He hath stretched out a line] The line of devastation; marking what was to be pulled down and demolished.

Verse 9. Her gates are sunk into the ground] The consequence of their being long thrown down and neglected. From this it appears that the captivity had already lasted a considerable time.

Her king and her princes are among the Gentiles] Zedekiah and many of the princes were then prisoners in Babylon,—another proof that the captivity had endured some time; unless all this be spoken prophetically, of what should be done.

Verse 10. Sit upon the ground] See the Note on chap. i, 1.

Keep silence] No words can express their sorrows: small griefs are eloquent,—great ones dumb.

Verse 11. Swoon in the streets of the city.] Through the excess of the famine.

Verse 12. When their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.] When, in endeavouring to draw nourishment from the breasts of their exhausted mothers, they breathed their last in their bosoms! How dreadfully afflicting was this!

Verse 13. What thing shall I take] Or, rather, as Dr. Blayney, "What shall I urge to thee?" How shall I comfort thee?

Thy breach is great like the sea] Thou hast a flood of afflictions,—a sea of troubles,—an ocean of miseries.

A. M. cir. 3416. B. C. cir. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 29.

[a] what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? what shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? for thy breach is great like the sea: who can heal thee?

14 Thy [b] prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee: and they have not [c] discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have seen for thee false burdens and causes of banishment.

15 [d] All that pass [e] by [f] clap their hands at thee; they hiss [g] and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying, Is this the city that men call [h] The perfection of beauty, The joy of the whole earth?

16 [i] All thine enemies have opened their mouth against thee: they hiss and gnash the teeth: they say, [k] We have swallowed her up: certainly this is the day that we looked for; we have found, [l] we have seen it.

17 The LORD hath done that which he had [m] devised; he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old: [n] he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied: and he hath caused thine enemy to [o] rejoice over thee, he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.

Verse 14. They have not discovered thine iniquity] They did not reprove for sin; they flattered them in their transgressions;—and, instead of turning away thy captivity by turning thee from thy sins, they have pretended visions of good in thy favour, and false burthens for thy enemies.

Verse 15. The perfection of beauty] This probably only applied to the Temple. Jerusalem never was a fine or splendid city: but the Temple was, most assuredly, the most splendid building in the world.

Verse 16. This is the day that we looked for] Jerusalem was the envy of the surrounding nations: they longed for its destruction, and rejoiced when it took place.

Verse 17. The LORD hath done that] This and the sixteenth verse should be interchanged, to follow the order of the letters in the Hebrew alphabet; as the sixteenth has פ phe for its acrostic letter, and the seventeenth has ע ain, which should precede the other in the order of the alphabet.

Verse 18. O wall of the daughter of Zion] חומת בת ציון chometh bath tsion, wall of the daughter of Zion. These words are probably those of the passengers, who appear to be affected by the desolations of the land; and they address the people and urge them to plead with God day and night, for their restoration. But what is the meaning of wall of the daughter of Zion? I answer, I do not know. It is certainly harsh to say, O wall of the daughter of Zion, let tears run down like a river day and night. Zion's ways may lament, and her streets mourn; but how the walls can be said to weep is not so easy to be understood, because there is no parallel for it. One of my most ancient MSS. omits the three words; and in it the text stands thus,—Their heart cried unto the Lord, let tears run down like a river day and night; give thyself no rest, &c.

Let not the apple of thine eye cease.] בת עין bath êyn means either the pupil of the eye, or the tears. Tears are the produce of the eye, and are here elegantly termed the daughter of the eye. Let not thy tears cease. But with what propriety can we say to the apple or pupil of the eye, Do not cease? Tears are most certainly meant.

Verse 19. Arise, cry out in the night] This seems to refer to Jerusalem besieged. Ye who keep the night watches pour out your hearts before the Lord. Instead of calling the time of night, &c., or, when you call it, send up a fervent prayer to God for the safety and relief of the place.

Verse 20. Consider to whom thou hast done this.] Perhaps the best sense of this difficult verse is this:—"Thou art our Father, we are Thy children;—wilt Thou destroy Thy own offspring? Was it ever heard that a mother devoured her own child, a helpless infant of a span long? That it was foretold that there should be such distress in the siege,—that mothers should be obliged to eat their own children,—is evident enough from Lev. xxvi, 29, Deut. xxviii, 53, 56, 57: but the former view of the subject seems the most natural, and is best supported by the context. The priest and the prophet are slain,—the young and old lie on the ground in the streets,—the virgins and young men are fallen by the sword.—THOU hast slain them in the day of thine anger; THOU hast killed, and not pitied. See chap. iv, 10.

Verse 22. Thou hast called as in a solemn day] It is by Thy influence alone that so many enemies are called together at one time; and they have so hemmed us in that none could escape, and none remained unslain or uncaptivated. Perhaps the figure is the collecting of the people in Jerusalem on one of the solemn annual festivals. God has called terrors together to feast on Jerusalem, similar to the convocation of the people from all parts of the land to one of those annual festivals. The indiscriminate slaughter of young and old, priest and prophet, all ranks and conditions, may be illustrated by the following verses from Lucan, which appear as if a translation of the nineteenth, twentieth, and twenty-first verses of this Chapter:—

Nobilitas cum plebe perit; latèque vagatur
Ensis, et à nullo revocatum est pectore ferrum.
Stat cruor in Templis; multaque rubentia cæde
Lubrica saxa madent. Nulli sua profuit ætas.
Non senes extremum piguit vergentibus annis
Præcipitâsse diem; nec primo in limine vitæ,
Infanti miseri nascentia rumpere fata.
Pharsal. lib. ii, 101.

"With what a slide devouring slaughter past,
And swept promiscuous orders in her haste,
O'er noble and plebeian ranged the sword;
Nor pity nor remorse one pause afford!
The sliding streets with blood were clotted o'er,
And sacred temples stood in pools of gore.
The ruthless steel, impatient of delay,
Forbad the sire to linger out his day:
It struck the bending father to the earth,
And cropt the wailing infant at its birth."

CHAPTER III.

The Prophet, by enumerating his own severe trials, 1—20, and shewing his trust in God, 21, encourages his people to the like resignation and trust in the Divine and never-failing mercy, 22—27. He vindicates the goodness of God in all His dispensations, and the unreasonableness of murmuring under them, 28—39. He recommends self-examination and repentance; and then, from their experience of former deliverances from God, encourages them to look for pardon for their sins, and retribution to their enemies, 40—66.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verse 1. I am the man that hath seen affliction] Either the prophet speaks here of himself, or he is personating his miserable countrymen. This, and other passages in this poem, have been applied to Jesus Christ's passion: but, in my opinion, without any foundation.

Verse 2. He hath—brought me into darkness] In the Sacred Writings, darkness is often taken for calamity;—light, for prosperity.

Verse 5. He hath builded against me] Perhaps there is a reference here to the mounds and ramparts raised by the Chaldeans in order to take the city.

7 [b] He hath hedged me about, that I cannot get out: he hath made my chain heavy.
8 Also [c] when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.
9 He hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone, he hath made my paths crooked.
10 [d] He was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places.
11 He hath turned aside my ways, and [e] pulled me in pieces: he hath made me desolate.
12 He hath bent his bow, and [f] set me as a mark for the arrow.

Verse 7. He hath hedged me about] This also may refer to the lines drawn round the city during the siege. But these and similar expressions in the following verses may be merely metaphorical, to point out their straightened, oppressed, and distressed state.

Verse 9. He hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone] He has put insuperable obstacles in my way; and confounded all my projects of deliverance, and all my expectations of prosperity.

Verse 12. He hath bent his bow, and set me as a mark for the arrow.] One might conjecture that the following thought in the Toozek i Teemour was borrowed from this:—

"One addressed the Calif Aaly, and said, 'If the heavens were a bow, and the earth the cord thereof; if calamities were arrows, man the butt for those arrows; and the holy blessed God the unerring Marksman;—where could the sons of Adam flee for succour? The calif replied, The children of Adam must flee unto the Lord.'" This was the state of poor Jerusalem. It seemed as a butt for all God's arrows; and each arrow of calamity entered into the soul, for God was the unerring Marksman.

Verse 13. The arrows of his quiver] בני אשפתו beney ashpitho, "The sons of his quiver." The issue or effect; the subject, adjunct, or accident, or produce of a thing, is frequently denominated its son or child. So arrows that issue from a quiver, are here termed the sons of the quiver.

Verse 15. He hath filled me with bitterness] במרורים be-mararim, with bitternesses, bitter upon bitter.

He hath made me drunken with wormwood.] I have drunk the cup of misery till I am intoxicated with it. Almost in all countries, and in all languages, bitterness is a metaphor to express trouble and affliction. The reason is, there is nothing more disagreeable to the taste than the one; and nothing more distressing to the mind than the other. An Arabic poet, Amralkeis, one of the writers of the Moallakat, terms a man grievously afflicted ناقع حنظل a pounder of wormwood.

Verse 16. He hath also broken my teeth with gravel stones] What a figure to express disgust, pain, and the consequent incapacity of taking food for the support of life; a man, instead of bread, being obliged to eat small pebbles, till all his teeth are broken to pieces by endeavouring to grind them. One can scarcely read this description without feeling the toothache. The next figure is not less expressive.

He hath covered me with ashes.] הכפישני באפר hicphisheni be-apher, "he hath plunged me into the dust." To be thrown into a mass or bed of perfect dust, where the eyes are blinded by it, the ears stopped, and the mouth and lungs filled at the very first attempt to respire, after having been thrown into it, what a horrible idea of suffocation and drowning! One can scarcely read this without feeling a suppression of breath, or a stricture upon the lungs! Did ever man paint sorrow like this man!

Verse 17. Thou hast removed my soul] Prosperity is at such an utter distance from me, that it is impossible I should ever reach it; and as to happiness, I have forgotten whether I have ever tasted of it.

Verse 18. And my hope] That first, that last support of the miserable, it is gone! it is perished! The sovereign God alone can revive it.

Verse 20. My soul—is humbled in me] It is evident that in the preceding verses there is a bitterness of complaint against the bitterness of adversity, that is not becoming to man when under the chastising hand of God; and, while indulging this feeling, all hope fled. Here, we find a different feeling: he humbles himself under the mighty hand of God, and then his hope revives, ver. 21.

Verse 22. It is of the LORD'S mercies that we are not consumed] Being thus humbled, and seeing himself and his sinfulness in a proper point of view; he finds that God, instead of dealing with him in judgment, has dealt with him in mercy; and that though the affliction was excessive, yet it was less than his iniquity deserved. If, indeed, any sinner be kept out of hell, it is because God's compassion faileth not.

Verse 23. They are new every morning] Day and night proclaim the mercy and compassion of God. Who could exist throughout the day, if there were not a continual superintending Providence? Who could be preserved in the night, if the Watchman of Israel ever slumbered or slept?

Verse 24. The LORD is my portion] See on Psa. cxix, 57.

Verse 26. It is good that a man should both hope] Hope is essentially necessary to faith; he that hopes not, cannot believe; if there be no expectation, there can be no confidence. When a man hopes for salvation, he should wait for it; use every means that may lead to it; for hope cannot live, if there be no exercise. If hope become impatient, faith will be impossible:—for who can believe for his salvation when his mind is agitated? He must therefore quietly wait. He must expect, and yet be dumb, as the words imply: ever feeling his utter unworthiness; and, without murmuring, struggle into life.

Verse 27. That he bear the yoke in his youth.] Early habits, when good, are invaluable. Early discipline is equally so. He who has not got under wholesome restraint in youth will never make a useful man, a good man, nor a happy man.

Verse 28. He sitteth alone] He has learnt that necessary lesson of independence, that shews him how he is to serve himself; to give no trouble to others; and keep his troubles, as far as possible, in his own bosom.

Verse 29. He putteth his mouth in the dust] Lives in a state of deep humility.

If so be there may be hope] Because there is room for hope.

Verse 30. He giveth his cheek to him that smiteth] He has that love that is not provoked.—He is not quarrelsome,—not apt to resent injuries;—he suffers long and is kind. Or it may be rendered, let him give his cheek.

He is filled full with reproach] Though all this take place, yet let his trust be in God, who will not cast off for ever. God will take his part, and bring him safely through all hardships.

Verse 31. The Lord] אדני adonai: but one of my ancient MSS. has יהוה yehovah. The above verse is quoted in reference to our Lord's passion, by Matt. xxvi, 62.

Verse 33. For he doth not afflict willingly] It is no pleasure to God to afflict men. He takes no delight in our pain and misery; yet, like a tender and intelligent parent, he uses the rod; but not to gratify himself, but to profit and save us.

Verse 34. To crush under his feet] He can neither gain credit nor pleasure in trampling upon those who are already bound, and in suffering; such He knows to be the state of man here below. From which it most assuredly follows, that God never afflicts us but for our good; and chastises that we may be partakers of His holiness.

All the prisoners of the earth] By the prisoners of the earth, or land, Dr. Blayney understands those insolvent debtors who were put in prison, and there obliged to work out the debt. Yet this is mercy in comparison with those who put them in prison, and kept them there, when they know that it is impossible, from the state of the laws, to lessen the debt by their confinement.

In verses 34, 35, and 36, certain acts of tyranny, malice, and injustice, are specified, which men often indulge themselves in the practice of towards one another: but which the Divine goodness is far from countenancing or approving by any similar conduct.—Blayney.

Verse 35. To turn aside the right of a man] To make a man lose his right because one of the higher orders opposes him. Dr. Blayney thinks that עליון êlion, instead of being referred to God, should be considered as pointing out one of the chief of the people. I do not see that we gain any thing by this. The evil fact is, turning aside the right of a man; and the aggravation of it is, doing it before the face of the Most High; that is, in a court of justice, where God is ever considered to be present.

Verse 36. To subvert a man in his cause] To prevent his having justice done him in a lawsuit, &c., by undue interference, as by suborning false witnesses, or exerting any kind of influence in opposition to truth and right. Blayney.

The LORD approveth not.] Instead of אדני adonai, seventeen MSS. of Kennicott, and one ancient of my own, have יהוה yehovah. Approveth not, לא ראה lo raah, doth not see, turns away His face from it,—abhors it.

Verse 39. Wherefore doth a living man complain] He who has his life still lent to him has small cause of complaint. How great soever his affliction may be, he is still alive; therefore, he may seek and find mercy unto eternal life. Of this, death would deprive him; let not therefore a living man complain.

Verse 40. Let us search] How are we to get the pardon of our sins? The prophet tells us:—1. Let us examine ourselves. 2. Let us turn again to the Lord. 3. Let us lift up our heart; let us make fervent prayer and supplication for mercy. 4. Let us lift up our hand; let us solemnly promise to be His, and bind ourselves in a covenant to be the Lord's only: so much lifting up the hand to God implies. Or, let us put our heart on our hand, and offer it to God; so some have translated this clause. 5. We have transgressed; let our confession of sin be fervent and sincere. 6. And to us who profess Christianity it may be added, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ as having died for thee; and thou shalt not perish, but have everlasting life. Verses 46, 47, 48, beginning with פ phe, should, as to the order of the alphabet, follow 49, 50, 51, which begin with ע ain, which in its grammatical position precedes the former.

Verse 47. Fear and a snare] See on Jer. xlviii, 43.

Verse 48. Mine eye runneth down] I weep incessantly.

Verse 51. Mine eye affecteth mine heart] What I see, I feel. I see nothing but misery; and I feel, in consequence, nothing but pain. There have been various translations of the original: but they all amount to this.

The daughters of my city.] The villages about Jerusalem.

Verse 52. Mine enemies chased me] From this to the end of the Chapter the prophet speaks of his own personal sufferings, and especially of those which he endured in the dungeon. See Jer. xxxviii, 6, &c.

Verse 56. Hide not thine ear at my breathing] He dared not even to complain,—nor to cry,—nor to pray aloud:—he was obliged to whisper his prayer to God. It was only a breathing.

Verse 57. Fear not.] How powerful is this word when spoken by the Spirit of the Lord to a disconsolate heart. To every mourner we may say, on the authority of God, Fear not! God will plead thy cause, and redeem thy soul.

Verse 60. Thou hast seen—all their imaginations] Every thing is open to the eye of God. Distressed soul! though thou knowest not what thy enemies meditate against thee; yet HE who loves thee does, and will infallibly defeat all their plots, and save thee.

Verse 65. Give them sorrow of heart] They shall have a callous heart, covered with obstinacy, and Thy execration. The former is their state, the latter their fate. This is the consequence of their hardening their hearts from Thy fear. Blayney translates,—"Thou wilt give with a hearty concordance Thy curse unto them." That is, Thou wilt give it to them freely, and without reserve; intimating that God felt no longer any bowels of compassion for them. Formerly he inflicted punishments with reluctance, while there was any hope of amendment: but, in the instance before us, the case was so hopeless, that God acts according to the simple principle of vindictive justice. The prophet therefore considers them on the utmost verge of final reprobation;—another plunge, and they are lost for ever.

Verse 66. Persecute and destroy them] Thou wilt pursue them with destruction. These are all declaratory, not imprecatory.

From under the heavens of the LORD.] This verse seems to allude to the Chaldee prediction, in Jer. chap. x, 11. By their conduct they will bring on themselves the curse denounced against their enemies.

The Septuagint and Vulgate seem to have read,—"From under heaven, O Jehovah:" and the Syriac reads,—"Thy heavens, O Jehovah!" None of these makes any material change in the meaning of the words.

It has already been noticed in the Introduction, that this Chapter contains a triple acrostich, three lines always beginning with the same letter; so that the Hebrew alphabet is thrice repeated in this Chapter, twenty-two multiplied by three being equal to sixty-six.

CHAPTER IV.

The present deplorable state of the nation is now contrasted with its ancient prosperity, 1—12; and the unhappy change ascribed, in a great degree, to the profligacy of the priests and prophets, 13—16. The national calamities are tenderly lamented, 17—20. The ruin of the Edomites also, who had insulted the Jews in their distress, is ironically predicted, 21. (See Psa. cxxxvii, 7, and Obadiah 10—12.) The Chapter closes with a gracious promise of deliverance from the Babylonish captivity, 22.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verse 1. How is the gold become dim] The prophet contrasts, in various affecting instances, the wretched circumstances of the Jewish nation, with the flourishing state of their affairs in former times. Here they are compared to gold, זהב zahab, native gold from the mine, which, contrary to its nature, is become dim, is tarnished; and even the fine, the sterling gold, כתם kethem, that which was stamped to make it current, is changed or adulterated, so as to be no longer passable. This might be applied to the Temple; but particularly to the fallen priests and apostate prophets.

The stones of the sanctuary] אבני קדש abeney kodesh, the holy stones; the Jewish godly men, who were even then, the living stones of which God built His church.

Verse 2. The precious sons of Zion] The Jewish priests and Jewish believers.

Comparable to fine gold] Who were of the pure standard of holiness: holy, because God who called them is holy; and now esteemed no better than earthen pitchers, vessels of dishonour in comparison of what they once were.

Verse 3. Even the sea monsters draw out the breast] The whales give suck to their young ones. The word תנין tannin, signifies all large and cruel creatures, whether aquatic or terrestrial; and need not here be restrained to the former sort. My old MS. Bible translates curiously:—

Bot and the cruel bestis that ben clepid Lamya, and thei nakeden ther tetis, geve ther whelpis souken.

Like the ostriches in the wilderness.] For her carelessness about her eggs, and her inattention to her young, the ostrich is proverbial.

Verse 4. The tongue of the sucking child] See the note on chap. ii, 12.

Verse 5. Embrace dunghills.] Lie on straw or rubbish, instead of the costly carpets and sofas on which they formerly stretched themselves.

Verse 6. For the punishment] He thinks the punishment of Jerusalem far greater than that of Sodom. That was destroyed in a moment, while all her inhabitants were in health and strength: Jerusalem fell by the most lingering calamities; her men partly destroyed by the sword, and partly by the famine.

Instead of no hands stayed on her, Blayney translates:—"Nor were hands weakened in her." Perhaps the meaning is, Sodom was destroyed in a moment without any human labour. It was a judgment from God himself: so the Sacred Text, The LORD rained down fire and brimstone from the LORD out of heaven. See Gen. xix, 24.

Verse 7. Her Nazarites were purer than snow] נזיר nazir, does not always signify a person separated under a religious vow: but sometimes signifies what is chief or eminent. It is applied to Joseph, Gen. xlix, 26. Blayney therefore translates here, HER NOBLES.

"Her nobles were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk,
They were ruddier on the bone than rubies; their veining was the sapphires."

On which he remarks:—"In the first line the whiteness of their skin is described; and in the second, their flesh;" and as גזר gazar signifies to divide and intersect, as the blue veins do on the surface of the body; these, therefore, are without doubt intended.

Milk will most certainly well apply to the whiteness of the skin; the beautiful ruby, to the ruddiness of the flesh; and the sapphire, in its clear transcendent purple, to the veins in a fine complexion. The reverse of this state, as described in the following verse, needs no explanation. The face was a dismal dark brown, the flesh gone, the skin shrivelled, and apparently wrapped round the bones.

Verse 10. The hands of the pitiful women have sodden their own children] See on chap. ii, ver. 20. But here there is a reference to mothers eating their own children; and this was done, not by mothers cruel and brutal, but by נשים רחמניות nasim rachamanioth, the compassionate, the tender hearted mothers. From these horrible scenes it is well to pass with as hasty a step as possible.

Verse 12. The kings of the earth] Jerusalem was so well fortified both by nature and art, that it appeared as a miracle that it should be taken at all.

Verse 13. For the sins of her prophets, and the iniquities of her priests] These most wretched beings, under the pretence of zeal for the true religion, persecuted the genuine prophets, priests, and people of God; and caused their blood to be shed in the midst of the city, in the openest and most public manner; exactly as the murderous priests and blood-thirsty preachers, under the reign of bloody Queen Mary, did in England. However, the profligate priests, and idolatrous prophets in Jerusalem, only shed the blood of the saints of God there: but the sanguinary Papists, in the above reign, burnt the blood here, for they burnt the people alive; and at the same time, in their worse than Molochean cruelty, consigned, with all the fervour peculiar to their then ruthless church, the souls of those whom they thus massacred, to the bitter pains of eternal death! O earth, cover not thou their blood!

Verse 14. They have wandered as blind men in the streets] Rather, They ran frantic through the streets, they were stained with blood. This was in their pretended zeal for their cause. Bp. Bonner, who was at the head of those sanguinary executions in England, was accustomed to buffet the poor Protestants, when on their examinations they were too powerful for him in argument:—

> "He proved his doctrine orthodox,
> By apostolic blows and knocks."

Just as his elder brethren, the false priests and prophets of Jerusalem.

Verse 15. When they fled away] These priests and prophets were so bad, that the very heathen did not like to permit them to sojourn among them. The prophet now resumes the history of the siege.

Verse 17. We have watched for a nation] Viz. the Egyptians, who were their pretended allies, but were neither able nor willing to help them against the Chaldeans.

Verse 18. We cannot go in our streets] Supposed to refer to the darts and other missiles cast from the mounds which they had raised on the outside of the walls, by which those who walked in the streets were grievously annoyed, and could not shield themselves.

Verse 19. They pursued us upon the mountains] They hunted the poor Jews down like wild beasts in every part of the country by their marauding parties, whilst the great army besieged Jerusalem. But this may apply to the pursuit of Zedekiah. See what follows.

Verse 20. The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the LORD] That is, Zedekiah the king, who was as the life of the city, was taken in his flight by the Chaldeans, and his eyes were put out; so that he was wholly unfit to perform any function of government: though they had fondly hoped that if they surrendered and should be led captives, yet they should be permitted to live under their own laws and king in the land of their bondage.

Verse 21. Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom] A strong irony.

The cup also shall pass through unto thee] Thou who hast triumphed in our disasters shalt shortly have enow of thy own. They had joined themselves to the Chaldeans, see Psa. cxxxvii, 7; and therefore they should share in the desolations of Babylon.

Verse 22. The punishment of thine iniquity is accomplished, O daughter of Zion] On the contrary,—Rejoice, O Jerusalem, for thy captivity will soon end; thy sufferings are nearly completed. Thou shalt soon return to thy own land:—but He will visit thy iniquity, O Edom; he will discover thy sins. When sin is pardoned, it is said to be covered: here, God says he will not cover the sins of Edom; He will not pardon them,—they shall drink the cup of wrath.

The promise in this last verse may refer to Jerusalem under the Gospel. When they receive Christ crucified, they shall be gathered from all nations,—become one with the Church among the Gentiles,—be one flock under one and the same Shepherd,—and shall be carried no more into captivity.

CHAPTER V.

This Chapter is, as it were, an epiphonema, or conclusion, to the four preceding, representing the nation as groaning under their calamities, and humbly supplicating the Divine favour, 1—22.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verse 1. Remember, O LORD] In the Vulgate, Syriac, and Arabic, this is headed "The Prayer of Jeremiah." In my old MS. Bible, Here bigynneth the orison of Jeremye the prophete.

Though this Chapter consists exactly of twenty-two verses, the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet, yet the acrostic form is no longer observed. Perhaps any thing so technical was not thought proper when in agony and distress (under a sense of God's displeasure on account of sin) they prostrated themselves before Him to ask for mercy. Be this as it may, no attempt appears to have been made to throw these verses into the form of the preceding Chapters. It is properly a solemn prayer of all the people, stating their past and present sufferings, and praying for God's mercy.

Behold our reproach.] הביטה hebita. But many MSS. of Kennicott, and the oldest of my own, add the ה he paragogic, הביטה hebitah, "Look down earnestly with commiseration;" for paragogic letters always increase the sense.

Verse 2. Our inheritance is turned to strangers] The greater part of the Jews were either slain or carried away captive; and even those who were left under Gedaliah were not free, for they were vassals to the Chaldeans.

Verse 4. We have drunken our water for money] I suppose the meaning of this is,—that every thing was taxed by the Chaldeans, and that they kept the management in their own hands; so that wood and water were both sold, the people not being permitted to help themselves. They were now so lowly reduced by servitude, that they were obliged to pay dearly for those things which formerly were common and of no price.

Verse 5. Our necks are under persecution] We feel the yoke of our bondage; we are driven to our work like the bullock, which has a yoke about his neck.

Verse 6. We have given the hand to the Egyptians] We have sought alliances both with the Egyptians and the Assyrians, and made covenants with them in order to get the necessaries of life. Or, wherever we are now driven, we are obliged to submit to the people of the countries in order to the preservation of our lives.

Verse 7. Our fathers have sinned, and are not] Nations, as such, cannot be punished in the other world; therefore, national judgments are to be looked for only in this life. The punishment which the Jewish nation had been meriting for a series of years came now upon them, because they copied and increased the sins of their fathers, and the cup of their iniquity was full. Thus, the children might be said to bear the sins of their fathers, that is, in temporal punishment; for in no other way does God visit these upon the children. See Ezek. xviii, 1, &c.

Verse 8. Servants have ruled over us] To be subject to such is the most painful and dishonourable bondage:—

Quid domini faciant, audent cum talia fures?
Virg. Ecl. iii, 16.

"Since slaves so insolent are grown,
What may not masters do?"

Perhaps he here alludes to the Chaldean soldiers, whose will the wretched Jews were obliged to obey.

Verse 9. We gat our bread with the peril of our lives] they could not go into the wilderness to feed their cattle, or to get the necessaries of life, without being harassed and plundered by marauding parties; and by these were often exposed to the peril of their lives. This was predicted by Moses, Deut. xxviii, 31.

Verse 10. Our skin was black—because of the terrible famine.] Because of the searching winds that burnt up every green thing, destroying vegetation, and, in consequence, producing a famine.

Verse 11. They ravished the women in Zion, and the maids in the cities of Judah.] The evil mentioned here was predicted by Moses, Deut. xxviii, 30, 32; and by Jeremiah, chap. vi, 12.

Verse 12. Princes are hanged up by their hand] It is very probable that this was a species of punishment. They were suspended from hooks in the wall by their hands, till they died through torture and exhaustion. The body of Saul was fastened to the wall of Beth-shan, probably in the same way; but his head had already been taken off. They were hung in this way that they might be devoured by the fowls of the air. It was a custom with the Persians, after they had slain, strangled, or beheaded their enemy, to hang their bodies upon poles or empale them. In this way they treated Hirstæus of Miletum, and Leonidas of Lacedæmon. See Herodot. lib. vi, c. 30; lib. vii, c. 238.

Verse 13. They took the young men to grind] This was the work of female slaves. See the Note on Isa. xlvii, 2.

Verse 14. The elders have ceased from the gate] There is now no more justice administered to the people: they are under military law; or disposed of in every sense according to the caprice of their masters.

Verse 16. The crown is fallen from our head] At feasts, marriages, &c., they used to crown themselves with garlands of flowers: all festivity of this kind was now at an end. Or, it may refer to their having lost all sovereignty,—being made slaves.

[d] Heb. for length of days?——[e] Psa. 80. 3, 7, 19. Jer. 31. 18.——[f] Or, For wilt thou utterly reject us?

Verse 18. The foxes walk upon it.] Foxes are very numerous in Palestine, see on Judges xv, 4. It was usual among the Hebrews to consider all desolated land to be the resort of wild beasts; which is, in fact, the case every where when the inhabitants are removed from a country.

Verse 19. Thou, O LORD, remainest for ever] THOU sufferest no change. Thou didst once love us; O let that love be renewed towards us!

Verse 21. Renew our days as of old] Restore us to our former state. Let us regain our country, our Temple, and all the divine offices of our religion;—but, more especially, Thy favour.

Verse 22. But thou hast utterly rejected us] It appears as if Thou hadst sealed our final reprobation, because Thou shewest against us exceeding great wrath. But convert us, O Lord, unto thee, and we shall be converted. We are now greatly humbled, feel our sin, and see our folly:—once more restore us, and we shall never again forsake Thee! He heard the prayer; and at the end of seventy years they were restored to their own land.

This last verse is well rendered in the first printed edition of our Bible, 1535:—Renue our daies as in olde tyme, for thou hast now vanished us longe ynough, and bene sore displeased at us.

My old MS. Bible is not less nervous:—Newe thou our dais as fro the begynnyng: bot castand aweie thou hast put us out: thou wrathedist ageín us hugely.

Dr. Blayney translates,—"For surely Thou hast cast us off altogether:" and adds, "כי ki ought certainly to be rendered as causal; God's having rejected His people, and expressed great indignation against them, being the cause and ground of the preceding application, in which they pray to be restored to His favour, and the enjoyment of their ancient privileges."

Pareau thinks no good sense can be made of this place, unless we translate interrogatively, as in Jer. xiv, 19,—

"Hast thou utterly rejected Judah?
Hath thy soul loathed Sion?"

On this ground he translates here,—

An enim prorsus nos rejecisses?
Nobis iratus esses usque adeo?

"Hast thou indeed utterly cast us off?
Wilt thou be angry with us for ever?"

Wilt Thou extend Thy wrath against us so as to shew us no more mercy? This agrees well with the state and feelings of the complainants.

MASORETIC NOTES.

Number of verses in this Book, 154.—Middle verse, chap. iii, 34.

In one of my oldest MSS. the twenty-first verse is repeated at the conclusion of the twenty-second verse. In another, yet older, there is only the first word of it, השיבנו hashibenu, Convert us!

Having given in the preceding Preface and Notes what I judge necessary to explain the principal difficulties in this very fine and affecting Poem, very fitly termed THE LAMENTATIONS, as it justly stands at the head of every composition of the kind, I shall add but a few words, and these shall be by way of recapitulation chiefly.

The Hebrews were accustomed to make lamentations or mourning songs upon the death of great men, princes, and heroes who had distinguished themselves in arms; and upon any occasion of public miseries and calamities. Calmet thinks they had collections of these sorts of Lamentations; and refers in proof to 2 Chron. xxxv, 25.—"And Jeremiah lamented for Josiah; and all the singing men, and the singing women, spake of Josiah in their lamentations, to this day; and made them an ordinance in Israel: and behold they are written in the Lamentations."

From this verse it is evident, that Jeremiah had composed a funeral elegy on Josiah: but, from the complexion of this Book, it is most evident that it was not composed on the death of Josiah, but upon the desolations of Jerusalem, &c., as has already been noted. His lamentation for Josiah is therefore lost. It appears also, that on particular occasions, perhaps anniversaries, these lamentations were sung by men and women singers, who performed their several parts; for these were all alternate or responsive songs. And it is very likely that this Book was sung in the same way; the men commencing with א aleph, the women responding with ב beth, and so on. Several of this sort of songs are still extant. We have those which David composed on the death of his son Absalom, and on the death of his friend Jonathan. And we have those made by Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, on the desolation of Egypt, Tyre, Sidon, and Babylon. See Isa. xiv, 4, 5; xv, xvi. Jer. vii, 29; ix, 10; xlviii, 32. Ezek. xix, 1; xxviii, 11; xxxii, 2. Jer. ix, 17. Besides these, we have fragments of others in different places; and references to some, which are now finally lost.

In the two first Chapters of this Book, the prophet describes, principally, the calamities of the siege of Jerusalem.

In the third, he deplores the persecutions which he himself had suffered; though he may in this be personifying the city and state; many of his own sufferings being illustrative of the calamities that fell generally upon the city and people at large.

The fourth Chapter is employed chiefly on the ruin and desolation of the city and temple; and upon the misfortunes of Zedekiah, of whom he speaks in a most respectful, tender, and affecting manner:—

"The anointed of Jehovah, the breath of our nostrils, was taken in their toils, Under whose shadow we said, we shall live among the nations."

At the end he speaks of the cruelty of the Edomites, who had insulted Jesusalem in her miseries, and contributed to its demolition. These he threatens with the wrath of God.

The fifth Chapter is a kind of form of prayer for the Jews, in their dispersions and captivity. In the conclusion of it, he speaks of their fallen royalty; attributes all their calamities to their rebellion and wickedness; and acknowledges that there can be no end to their misery, but in their restoration to the Divine favour.

This last Chapter was probably written some considerable time after the rest: for it supposes the temple to be so deserted, that the foxes walked undisturbed among its ruins, and that the people were already in captivity.

The Poem is a monument of the people's iniquity and rebellion; of the displeasure and judgment of God against them; and of the piety, eloquence, and incomparable ability, of the Poet.

END OF THE NOTES ON THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE BOOK OF

THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

EZEKIEL, the Prophet, was son of Buzi; and was of the sacerdotal race, as himself informs us, chap. i, 3, and was born at a place called Saresa, as the pseudo-Epiphanius tells us in his Lives of the Prophets. He was carried captive by Nebuchadnezzar into Babylon, with Jeconiah king of Judah and three thousand other captives of the principal inhabitants; and was sent into Mesopotamia where he received the prophetic gift, which is supposed (from an obscure expression in his Prophecies, chap. i, 1,) to have taken place in the thirtieth year of his age. He had then been in captivity five years; and continued to prophesy about twenty-two years, from A. M. 3409 to A. M. 3430, which answers to the fourteenth year after the destruction of Jerusalem.

About three months and ten days after this conquest of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar made another descent, and again besieged the city; and Jehoiachin, who succeeded his father Jehoiakim, was obliged to surrender. The victorious Chaldeans carried off all the inhabitants of note into Babylon, leaving none behind but the very poorest of the people. See 2 Kings xxiv, 8—16. These captives were fixed at Tel-abib, and other places on the river Chebar, which flows into the east side of the Euphrates at Carchemish, nearly two hundred miles northward of Babylon. There, as Abp. Newcome observes, he was present in body, though in visionary representation he was sometimes taken to Jerusalem.

With this same learned writer I am of opinion that, the better to understand the propriety and force of these Divine revelations,—the circumstances and dispositions of the Jews in their own country, and in their state of banishment, and the chief historical events of that period, should be stated and considered. Most writers of this Prophet have adopted this plan; and Abp. Newcome's abstract of this history is sufficient for every purpose.

"Zedekiah, uncle to the captive king Jehoiachin, was advanced by Nebuchadnezzar to the kingdom of Judah; and the tributary king bound himself to subjection by a solemn oath in the name of Jehovah, Ezek. xvii, 18. But, notwithstanding the Divine judgments which had overwhelmed Judah during the reigns of his two immediate predecessors, he did evil in the sight of God, 2 Chron. xxxvi, 12. Jerusalem became so idolatrous, impure, oppressive, and blood-thirsty, that God is represented as smiting His hands together through astonishment at such a scene of iniquity, chap. xxii, 13. The Prophet Jeremiah was insulted, rejected, and persecuted; —false prophets abounded, whose language was, We shall not serve the king of Babylon, Jer. xxvii, 9. I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon, Jer. xxviii, 2. They even limited the restoration of the sacred vessels and the return of Jehoiachin and his fellow captives to so short an interval as two years, Jer. xxviii, 3, 4. Zedekiah, blinded by his vices and these delusions,—flattered by the embassies which he had received from Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre, and Sidon, Jer. xxvii, 3, and probably submitting with his accustomed timidity to the advice of evil counsellors, Jer. xxviii, 25, rebelled against his powerful conquerors, and sent ambassadors into Egypt for assistance, Ezek. xvii, 15. Hence arose a third invasion of the Chaldeans. Pharaoh-Hophra, king of Egypt, did not advance to the assistance of Zedekiah till Jerusalem was besieged, Jer. xxxvii, 5. The Babylonians raised the siege with the design of distressing the Egyptians in their march, and of giving battle when advantage offered: but Pharaoh, with perfidy and pusillanimity, returned to his own country; and left the rebellious and perjured king of Judah to the rage of his enemies, Jer. xxxvii, 7. Before the siege was thus interrupted, Zedekiah endeavoured to conciliate the favour of God by complying so far with the Mosaic law as to proclaim the sabbatical year,—a year of liberty to Hebrew servants, Exod. xxi, 2. But such was his impiety, and so irresolute and fluctuating were his counsels, that, on the departure of the Chaldeans, he revoked his edict, Jer. xxxiv, 11; upon which God, by the prophet Jeremiah, proclaimed liberty to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and commissioned these messengers of His wrath to avenge Himself on His people, Jer. xxxiv, 17. When the siege was resumed, we have a farther instance of Zedekiah's extreme infatuation; his rejection of Jeremiah's counsel, given him by the authority of God, to preserve himself, his family, and his city, by a surrender to the Chaldeans. Thus, after a siege of eighteen months, Jerusalem was stormed and burnt, Jer. xxxix, 1, 2. Zedekiah was taken in his flight,—his sons were slain before his eyes,—his eyes were afterwards put out agreeably to the savage custom of Eastern conquerors,—and he was carried in chains to Babylon, Jer. xxxix, 5—7.

"The exiles on the river Chebar were far from being awakened to a devout acknowledgment of God's justice by the punishment inflicted on them: they continued rebellious and idolatrous, Ezek. ii, 3, xx, 39;—they hearkened to false prophets and prophetesses, Ezek. xiii, 2, 17;—and they were so alienated that He refused to be inquired of by them. In vain did Ezekiel endeavour to attract and win them by the charms of his flowing and insinuating eloquence; in vain did he assume a more vehement tone to awe and alarm them by heightened scenes of calamity and terror.

"We know few particulars concerning the Jews at Babylon. They enjoyed the instruction and example of the prophet Daniel, who was carried away captive to that city in the third year of Jehoiakim, eight years before the captivity of Ezekiel, Dan. i, 1. Jeremiah cautioned them not to be deceived by their false prophets and divines, Jer. xxix, 8, 9, 15, 21; against some of whom he denounced fearful judgments. He exhorted them to seek the peace of the city where they dwelt; to take wives, build houses, and plant gardens, till their restoration after seventy years, Jer. xxix, 5, 6, 7, 10. He also comforted them by a prediction of all the evil which God designed to inflict on Babylon: he assured them that none should remain in that proud city, but that it should be desolate for ever. The messenger, when he had read the book containing these denunciations, was commanded to bind a stone to it, and cast it into the Euphrates, and say, Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil which I will bring on her, Jer. li, 59—64. It farther appears by Divine hymns now extant, see Psa. lxxix, cii, cvi, and cxxxvii, that God vouchsafed to inspire some of these Babylonian captives with His Holy Spirit. Nebuchadnezzar appointed Gedaliah ruler of the people that remained in Judea, 2 Kings xxv, 23, Jer. xl. 5; and the scattered military commanders and their men, together with other Jews who had taken refuge in the neighbouring countries, Jer. xl, 7, 11, submitted to his government on the departure of the Chaldeans. The Jews employed themselves in gathering the fruits of the earth, Jer. xl, 12, and a calm succeeded the tempest of war: but it was soon interrupted by the turbulence of this devoted people. Ishmael slew Gedaliah; and compelled the wretched remains of the Jews in Mizpah, the seat of Gedaliah's government, to retire with him towards the country of the Ammonites, Jer. xl, 1, 10; a people hostile to the Chaldeans, Jer. xxvii, 3. Johanan raised a force to revenge this mad and cruel act, Jer. xli, 11—15, pursued Ishmael, overtook him, and recovered from him the people whom he had forced to follow him: but the assassin himself escaped with eight men to his place of refuge. The succeeding event furnishes another signal instance of human infatuation. Johanan, through fear of the Chaldeans, many of whom Ishmael had massacred, together with Gedaliah, Jer. xli, 3, conceived a design of retreating to Egypt, Jer. xli, 17 : but, before he executed this resolution, he formally consulted the prophet Jeremiah. The Prophet answered him in the name of Jehovah, Jer. xlii, that if Johanan and the people abode in Judea, God would build them, and not pull them down; would plant them and not pluck them up; but if they went to sojourn in Egypt they should die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence; and should become an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach. Notwithstanding this awful assurance, and the many prophecies of Jeremiah, which the most calamitous events had lately verified, Johanan defied the living God and His prophet, and madly adhered to his determination. Not long after the destruction of Jerusalem, the siege of Tyre was undertaken by Nebuchadnezzar. It continued for the space of thirteen years: and many think that the conquest of the Sidonians, Philistines, Ammonites, Moabites, and Idumeans, coincided with this period, the Chaldean being able to make powerful detachments from his vast forces. See the prophecies, Jer. xxvii, 2, 3, xlviii, xlix, and Ezek. xxv. After the reduction of that famous city, Nebuchadnezzar made his descent on Egypt, which he subdued and ravaged throughout; and at this time Johanan and his Jewish colonists experienced the vengeance of the conqueror, together with the Egyptians. So widely did Nebuchadnezzar spread his victories and devastations that, according to the learned chronologer Marsham, Lond. edit. 1672, fol. p. 556, s. 18, this might justly be called the æra of the subversion of cities.—

——————— Omnis eo terrore Ægyptus, et Indi, Omnis Arabs, omnes vertebant terga Sabæi. VIRG. Æn. viii, 705.

"The trembling Indians and Egyptians yield; Arabs and soft Sabæans quit the field."

I may add, that the stroke fell upon no people so heavily as upon the Jews; for no other nation possessed privileges like them, and no other nation had sinned so deeply against God. Their crimes were seen in their punishment.

The principal design of this Prophet was to comfort his companions in tribulation, during their captivity; and to render it light by the most positive promises of their restoration to their own land, the rebuilding of the Temple, and the re-establishment of the Divine worship; all their enemies being finally destroyed.

That Ezekiel is a very obscure writer all have allowed who have attempted to explain his Prophecies. The Jews considered him inexplicable. There is a tradition that the Rabbins held a consultation whether they should admit Ezekiel into the Sacred Canon? And it was likely to be carried in the negative, when Rabbi Ananias rose up and said he would undertake to remove every difficulty from the account of Jehovah's chariot, chap. i, which is confessedly the most difficult part in the whole Book. His proposal was received; and to assist him in his work, and that he might complete it to his credit, they furnished him with three hundred barrels of oil to light his lamp during the time he might be employed in the study of this part of his subject! This extravagant grant proved at once the conviction the Rabbins had of the difficulty of the work: and it is not even intimated that Rabbi Ananias succeeded in any tolerable degree, if indeed he undertook the task; and they believe that till this hour, the chariot mentioned in chap. i, and the account of the Temple described at the conclusion of the Book, have not been explained.

I believe it may be affirmed with truth, that these parts of the Prophecy have had as many different explanations as there have been expositors! Yet each has been sanguine in the hope that he had removed all difficulties; while every successor felt that the whole work was yet to be done, and that the Gordian knot was not likely to be untied unless by himself! And, it is to be lamented that in these circumstances the work still remains as to its principal difficulties; and I certainly do not attempt to add another to Ezekiel's Commentators with the most distant hope of being able to solve those particular difficulties.

After all, with the exception of the Chariot, Gog and Magog, the peculiarities in the description of the Temple, and some matters of this kind, the major part of the Prophecy is very intelligible, and highly edifying; and does not present more difficulties than have been found in the preceding Prophets, and may be found in those which follow. I have in the following Notes done what I could, as a help to a better understanding of this part of the Sacred Writings.

The ancient Versions give some help: but it is astonishing how difficult it is to settle the Text by a collation of MSS. This has not yet been properly done; and we cannot know the true meaning till we can ascertain the true reading. But, after having laboured in this way, I must express myself as the learned Professor of the Oriental Tongues at Parma, J. B. De Rossi—tanta hîc in suffixis præsertim pronominibus codicum inconstantia ac varietas, ut tæduerit me laboris mei, ac verius ego quod olim de uno Zachariæ versu (xi, 5,) dolens inquiebat Norzius, de toto Ezechielis libro usurpare possim, angustiatam fuisse animam meam ob varietates multas, et avertisse faciem meam ab eis. "That there is so much inconstancy and variation among the MSS. in suffixes, especially in the pronouns, that I was weary of my labour; and I could more truly say of the whole book of Ezekiel, than Norzius did relative to one passage in Zechariah, who, bitterly complaining of the many variations he met with, said,—'My soul was perplexed with them, and I turned away my face from them.'" As most of our printed editions have been taken from a very inadequate collation of MSS., especially of this Prophet, much remains to be done to restore the Text to a proper state of purity. When this is done, it is presumed that several of the difficulties in this Book will be removed. In many instances Abp. Newcome has been very successful.

On the famous controversy relative to Gog and Magog, I must refer the Reader to the Notes on chap. xxxviii and xxxix, where the best accounts I have met with are detailed. There are only two schemes that appear at all probable, that which makes Gog Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Assyria; and that which makes him Cambyses, king of Persia. The former, as being the most probable, and the best supported in all its parts by the marks given in the prophecy, I have in a certain measure adopted, for want of one more satisfactory to my own mind.

The character of Ezekiel as a Poet has been drawn at large by some of the most eminent critics of these and other countries. Lowth, Michaelis, and Eichorn, are the chief. Abp. Newcome has quoted largely from the latter; and from his work which is now very scarce, and extremely dear, I shall present my Readers with the following extracts:—

"The two first visions are so accurately polished, chap. i—vii, viii—xi, and demanded so much art to give them their last perfection and proportion, that they cannot possibly be an unpremeditated work. And if, according to the commonly received opinion, they were publicly read by Ezekiel as we read them now, he must have seriously designed them as a picture, and finished them in form. The intention of his visions might make this necessary. He designed no doubt to make deep impressions upon the people whom he was to guide; and, by highly labouring the Divine appearances, to open their ears for his future oracles and representations. The more complete, sublime, and majestic, the Divine appearances were which he represented, the deeper veneration was impressed upon the mind towards the prophet, to whom such high visions were communicated. Most of the parts which compose Ezekiel, as they are generally works of art, are full of artificial and elaborate plans.

"The peculiarities of language in the first Chapter are to be found in the middle and end of the Book. The same enthusiasm, which in the beginning of his prophecies produced the magnificent Divine appearances, must also have built the Temple of God at the conclusion. As in the beginning, every thing is first proposed in high allegorical images, and afterwards the same ideas are repeated in plain words; thus also, in the middle and at the end in every piece, allegorical representation is succeeded by literal. Throughout, the style is rather prose than verse; and rough, hard, and mixed with the Chaldee.

"The division of Ezekiel into two parts has been adopted by several writers. They continue the former part to the thirty-ninth Chapter, and consider the last nine Chapters from the fortieth as a separate book. This division is possible. From the eleventh Chapter, a new elevated scene commences. Before, there was nothing but oracles, full of misfortunes, punishments, death, and ruin; visions concerning the destruction of the government, and concerning the flight and state of the last king; and pictures of the universal corruption, idolatry, and superstition of Israel. From the fortieth Chapter, a new temple rises before the eyes of the holy seer: he walks round about it in Palestine; he measures the city and country for their new inhabitants;

he orders sacrifices, feasts, and customs. In short, a Magna Charta is planned for priests, kings, and people, in future and better times. Lastly, from hence prosaic expressions predominate; at least, the prophet elevates himself by poetical colouring much more rarely than before.

"A generally acknowledged character of Ezekiel is, that he minutely distinguishes every thing in its smallest parts. What the more ancient prophets brought together in one single picture, and to which they only alluded, and what they explained with the utmost brevity, are shewn only from one side, that he explains and unfolds formally, and represents from all possible sides.

"Another character, and a principal one, which distinguishes his oracle is, that no other prophet has given so free a course to his imagination. Almost every thing is dressed in symbolical actions, in fables, narrations, allegories, or in the still higher poetry of visions. And as they are very complicate, there resound from all sides complaints of darkness. Whoever can look on these things with the eye of an eagle, and is not disturbed from the principal object by what is not essential;—he alone is able to comprehend the sense of the whole composition, and he scarcely conceives how any one can complain of obscurity. Mean while, how different soever the species of composition are which he hazards, they are all worked out in the same general form. What he represents in one image, picture, or vision, in allegory, parable, or narration, is explained in a short speech, which God, who is at his right hand, enables him to pronounce.

"It is evident that he has shewn an inexhaustible imagination and power of invention throughout all the pages of his book. He uses all sorts of prophetical poetry, to appear always great and magnificent; and it cannot be denied, that he has given all kinds, excellent pieces, both in design and execution. Particularly, he is so used to ecstasies and visions, that he adopts the language proper to these, where he has no visions to describe.

"If the dress of vision fitted any prophet, it was certainly Ezekiel: he was even naturally led to it by his situation, and by the subjects which he was to represent. He was to describe and foretel to his fellow captives, several facts which happened in Palestine, in Jerusalem, and in the king's palace. A narration and description in simple prose could not possibly suit a prophet; he must give his object the requisite prophetic dignity, by a particular dress.

"He therefore brought the scene of events nearer. For this purpose he chose high ecstasies, such as the Greek and Roman poets pretended to in their flights of enthusiasm: the hand of Jehovah came upon him, and carried him to that place, where what he intended to propose to his countrymen in their exile might be seen and considered. All ecstasies in my opinion, are nothing but dresses, nothing but poetical fictions: and a poet of another age, and of another tone, of an inferior imagination and poetical endowments, would have given the same ideas quite another dress.

"Accustomed to this kind of poetry, he represented the restitution of the Jewish state in a sublime vision. His imagination placed him upon graves, where he stood on the dried bones of the dead. He saw how the graves opened, the bones were clothed with flesh, and the dead came forth by a new creation. Could there be a more lively fiction for this case? Another poet would have represented the restoration of the Jews in simple words; and would only have compared it to a resurrection, or give it some other ornamental delineation. To view this intuitively in an example, compare Ezek. xxxvii, 1—14, and Isa. xxvi, 19.

> "Thy dead shall live, their dead bodies shall rise:
> Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust:
> For thy dew is as the dew of herbs,
> And the earth shall cast forth the mighty dead."

"And, however numerous the fictions of Ezekiel are, they all appear in magnificent dress, and each in its peculiar splendid one. Lustre shines in him on every side; and if the poet has here and there overloaded his subject with ornaments, we shall be unable to refuse our admiration to his genius, notwithstanding these defects.

"The first part of his Book may be an instance. The barren genius of Moses was gone, when God appeared only in a fiery bush in the wilderness; and as the world improved in cultivation, a more luxuriant one succeeded in his place, which in process of time demanded wonderful figures and giant forms, that the representation of the Divine appearance might please. Isaiah had already appeared in a higher style than Moses. To him God manifested Himself in the pomp of an oriental king; and this piece makes a strong impression by its unity, and gains on us by its elevated simplicity, majesty, and dignity, Isa. vi. But Ezekiel differs widely. Before him stands the chariot throne of God with wonderful forms: he summons all the pomp which nature and art can furnish; he abundantly employs fiction and composition to give his Divine appearance dignity, elevation, and majesty; and thus to make a suitable expression. The whole creation must lend him its most noble forms. Men, oxen, lions, and eagles, support the throne: the Hebrew history must furnish all its most wonderful scenes, to surround the chariot throne with the greatest pomp imaginable. I admire the master-hand of the artist, who knew how to compose in such a manner. I am astonished at the richness of his imagination, that could give dignity to all the exalted scenes of the Hebrew history, and could combine them in one body. But, notwithstanding this, the scene in Ezekiel is far from making the same deep and heart-striking impression with that of Isaiah. A short view of the whole in Isaiah does wonders: in Ezekiel the prospect is dispersed; and as it is not rounded, it astonishes rather than impresses. In Isaiah, there is a majestic silence, which is only interrupted by the heavenly cry of the seraphs, Isa. vi, 3; in Ezekiel, the noise of the restless wheels and moving wings confound us. In Isaiah, the eye is delighted with artless majesty; in Ezekiel, it is consumed by the brightness of the fire which shines round about the chariot throne.

"The Author of the Revelation, whose poetry is in the same style with that of Ezekiel, and full of imagination, has for the most part avoided the rocks upon which his predecessor struck; and happily, for the most part, has cut off the wild shoots of a heated imagination. He also has fictions of wonders and giant forms: but he has produced them only so far, as to give the Reader a full image before his eyes. He does not pursue them minutely, and he does not distract or pain his Reader.

"On the contrary, it was a happy invention that his lofty poems are sometimes interrupted by short speeches; they are not only useful for the illustration of his symbols, but also for the repose of the mind. By this change, his Readers are agreeably entertained; and their imagination finds resting-places, so as to soar more easily after the imagination of the poet.

"Ezekiel is a great poet, full of originality; and, in my opinion, whoever censures him as if he were only an imitator of the old prophets, can never have felt his power. He must not in general be compared with Isaiah, and the rest of the old prophets. Those are great, Ezekiel is also great; those in their manner of poetry, Ezekiel in his; which he had invented for himself, if we may form our judgments from the Hebrew monuments still extant."—Thus far a judicious critic, who but indirectly admits the Prophet's inspiration.

Bp. Lowth, who has done so much to elucidate the Hebrew poetry, has also given fine critical judgments on the comparative merits of the prophets. Isaiah is his favourite; and him he places always at the head, and with him all others are compared. Of Ezekiel, his character is very high and accurately drawn; and my Readers will naturally expect that I should produce what he says on this subject, rather than attempt any thing of my own: for this would resemble the attempt to write an Iliad after Homer.

"Ezekiel," says this learned prelate, "is inferior to Jeremiah in elegance; but is equal to Isaiah in SUBLIMITY, though in a different species of the sublime. He is bold, vehement, tragical, and deals very much in amplification. His SENTIMENTS are lofty, animated, poignant, and full of indignation. His IMAGES are fertile, magnificent, and sometimes rather bordering on indelicacy. His DICTION is grand, weighty, austere, rough, and sometimes uncultivated. He abounds in repetitions, not for the sake of beauty or grace, but from vehemence and indignation. Whatever his subject be, he keeps it always in his eye, without the least deviation; and is so much taken up with it, that he has scarcely any regard to order or connexion. In other things, he may be perhaps exceeded by the other prophets: but in that species for which he was particularly turned, that is, force, impetuosity, weight, and grandeur, no writer ever equalled him. His diction is clear enough: almost all his obscurity arises from his subjects. His VISIONS are particularly obscure; which, however, as in Hosea, Amos, and Zechariah, are delivered in a plain historical narration.

"The greater part of the Book, particularly the middle of it, is poetical; whether we regard the matter or the language. But some passages are so rough and unpolished, that we are frequently at a loss to what species of writing we ought to refer them. As to STYLE, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, may be placed with propriety enough in the same rank among the Hebrews; as Homer, Symonides, and Æschylus, among the Greeks."

Nothing need be added, and indeed nothing can be added, to this character; it is as fairly as it is fully drawn; and every paragraph in the Book will shew its propriety. But could we satisfactorily fathom the Prophet's meaning in those places where he is peculiarly obscure, we should feel the force and propriety of the Bishop's character still more, as in those very places the prophet is peculiarly sublime. The prophecy was delivered that it might be understood and be profitable; and no doubt it was fully apprehended by those to whom it was originally given, and for whose sake it was sent from heaven. As to the portions which respect a very remote futurity, they will be understood when the events take place; which will, in such times, be an additional argument in favour of Divine Revelation, when it is seen with what precision and accuracy prophets have foreseen and described such very remote and apparently contingent events.

To the general Reader the following Table taken from Calmet may be useful:—

A Chronological Table of the Prophecies of Ezekiel.

A. M.

3405 Ezekiel is led captive to Babylon with king Jeconiah. From this year the epoch of these prophecies must be taken.

3409 The first vision by the river Chebar, chap. i. The circumstances which followed Ezekiel's vocation to the prophetic office, chap. i, ii.

He draws upon a tile, or bed of clay, the plan of Jerusalem, and the siege that it was about to endure; and he remains lying on this plan, on his left side, three hundred and ninety days, chap. iv. See under A. M. 3420.

3410 He turns on his right side, and lies forty days, which point out the forty years of the sins of Judah. To this time chap. v, vi, vii, refer.

About the month of September, this being the sixth year of the captivity of Jeconiah, he had the visions related chap. viii, ix, x, xi.

3411 Prophecies and figurative actions by which he points out the flight, capture, and blinding of Zedekiah, chap. xii, and the seven following.

Zedekiah rebels against Nebuchadnezzar, chap. xvii, 15, 17.

The Prophet charges the elders of Judah with hypocrisy, who came to consult him, chap. xx, xxi, xxii, xxiii.

3414 The siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. This was a Sabbatic year, (Jer. xxiv, 8, &c.) The siege did not begin till about the middle of the winter, 2 Kings xxv, 1. The Prophet's wife dies on the same day of the siege, and he is forbidden to mourn for her, chap. xxiv, 1, 2.

3415 Predictions against EGYPT, chap. xxix, 16. Nebuchadnezzar puts to flight Pharaoh-hophra, and returns to the siege of Jerusalem three hundred and ninety days before it was taken.

3416 Predictions against Tyre, chap. xxvi—xxviii, the first day of the first month.

In the seventh day of the same month, God shews the Prophet the miseries to be brought on Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, chap. xxx.

In the third month of the same year, the Prophet had another vision against Egypt, chap. xxxi.

Jerusalem is taken, the ninth of the fourth month. Zedekiah was taken prisoner near Jericho. He is brought to Riblah, where, after seeing his children slain, his eyes are put out, he is laden with chains, and led to Babylon. Thus were fulfilled and reconciled the seemingly contradictory prophecies concerning him.

3417 Ezekiel being informed of the taking of Jerusalem, the fifth day of the tenth month, he predicts the ruin of the remnant that was left there under Gedaliah, chap. xxxiv, 21—29.

3417 He afterwards foretels the ruin of Egypt, chap. xxxii, 1, 16, 32; and that of the Idumeans, chap. xxv, 12.

3419 The commencement of the siege of Tyre, which lasted thirteen years.

To the same time we must refer the miseries of the Sidonians, the Amalekites, the Moabites, and the Idumeans, pointed out by Jeremiah, chap. xxvii, xlviii, xlix. Ezek. xxv.

A. M.

3420 End of the forty years mentioned, chap. iv, 5, 6, and of the three hundred and ninety years, from the separation of Israel and Judah. The forty years commence with the renewal of the covenant under Josiah.

3430 The vision in which God shewed the Prophet the rebuilding of the city and the temple, and the restoration of the kingdom of Israel, chap. xl, 1, to the end of the Book.

This vision took place on the tenth of the first month, fourteen years after the taking of Jerusalem.

3432 Taking of the city of Tyre, by Nebuchadnezzar, to whom God promises the spoils of Egypt, as a compensation for the trouble and loss he sustained before Tyre, chap. xxix, 17—20.

Nebuchadnezzar enters Egypt. Amasis had been made king by the Cyrenians, who had rebelled against Pharaoh-hophra. Herodotus, lib. iv, c. 159, and lib. ii, cc. 161, 162.

3433 The king of Babylon overruns and subdues the whole of Egypt; commits the greatest outrages; and carries off captives the inhabitants, the Jews, and others whom he found there. See Jer. xliii, xliv, xlvi. Ezek. xxix, xxx, xxxi.

Nebuchadnezzar leaves Amasis king of Lower Egypt; Hophra, or Apries, having escaped to the Thebais.

3442 Death of Nebuchadnezzar.

Evil-Merodach succeeds him; and sets Jeconiah at liberty, and makes him his companion, 2 Kings xv, 27, and Jer. lii, 31.

CHAPTER I.

This Chapter contains that extraordinary vision of the Divine glory with which the Prophet was favoured when he received the commission and instructions respecting the discharge of his office which are contained in the two following Chapters. The time of this Divine manifestation to the Prophet, 1—3. The vision of the four living creatures, and of the four wheels, 4—25. Description of the firmament that was spread over them, and of the throne upon which one sat in appearance as a man, 26—28. This vision, proceeding in a whirlwind from the NORTH, seems to indicate the dreadful judgments that were coming upon the whole land of Judah through the instrumentality of the cruel Chaldeans, who lay to the north of it. See Jeremiah i, 14; iv, 6; and vi, 1.

NOW it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the [a] captives [b] by the river of Chebar, that [c] the heavens were opened, and I saw [d] visions of God.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. In the thirtieth year] We know not what this date refers to. Some think it was the age of the prophet; others think the date is taken from the time that Josiah renewed the covenant with the people, 2 Kings xxii, 3, from which Ussher, Prideaux, and Calmet, compute the forty years of Judah's transgression, mentioned chap. iv, 6.

Abp. Newcome, thinks there is an error in the Text, and that instead of בשלשים be-sheloshim, in the thirtieth, we should read בחמישית be-chamishith, in the fifth, as in the second verse. Now it came to pass in the fifth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, &c. But this is supported by none of the ancient Versions, nor by any MS. The Chaldee paraphrases the verse,—"And it came to pass thirty years after the highpriest Hilkiah had found the book of the law, in the house of the sanctuary, &c." This was in the twelfth year of Josiah's reign. The thirtieth year, computed as above, comes to A. M. 3409, the fourth year from the captivity of Jeconiah, and the fifth of the reign of Zedekiah. Ezekiel was then among the captives who had been carried away with Jeconiah, and had his dwelling near the river Chebar, Chaborus, or Aboras, a river of Mesopotamia, which falls into the Euphrates a little above Thapsacus, after having run through Mesopotamia from east to west.—Calmet.

Fourth month] Thammuz, answering nearly to our July.

I saw visions of God.] Emblems and symbols of the Divine Majesty. He particularly refers to those in this Chapter.

Verse 2. Jehoiachin's captivity] Called also Jeconiah and Coniah, see 2 Kings xxiv, 12. He was carried away by Nebuchadnezzar, see 2 Kings xxiv, 14.

Verse 3. The hand of the LORD] I was filled with His power, and with the influence of the prophetic spirit.

Verse 4. A whirlwind came out of the north] Nebuchadnezzar, whose land, Babylonia, lay north of Judea. Chaldea is thus frequently denominated by Jeremiah.

A great cloud, and a fire infolding itself] A mass of fire concentrated in a vast cloud, that the flames might be more distinctly observable, the fire never escaping from the cloud, but issuing, and then returning in upon itself. It was in a state of powerful agitation; but always involving itself, or returning back to the centre whence it appeared to issue.

A brightness was about it] A fine tinge of light surrounded the cloud, in order to make its limits the more discernible; beyond which verge the turmoiling fire did not proceed.

The colour of amber] This was in the centre of the cloud; and this amber-coloured substance was the centre of the labouring flame. The word ηλεκτρον, which we translate amber, was used to signify a compound metal, very bright, made of gold and brass.

Verse 5. Also out of the midst thereof came—four living creatures] As the amber-coloured body was the centre of the fire, and this fire was in the centre of the cloud; so out of this amber-coloured igneous centre came the living creatures just mentioned.

Verse 6. Every one had four faces] There were four several figures of these living creatures; and each of these figures had four distinct faces: but as the face of the man was that which was presented to the prophet's view, so that he saw it more plainly than any of the others, hence it is said, ver. 5, that each of these figures had the likeness of a man; and the whole of this compound image bore a general resemblance to the human figure.

Verse 7. Their feet were straight feet] There did not seem to be any flexure at the knee, nor were the legs separated in that way as to indicate progression by walking. I have before me several ancient Egyptian images of Isis, Osiris, Anubis, &c., where the legs are not separated, nor any bend at the knees; so that if there was any motion at all, it must have been by gliding, not progressive walking. And it is a remark of Ælian, that the gods are never represented as walking, but always gliding; and he gives this as 8 [b] And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and their wings.

9 [c] Their wings were joined one to another; [d] they turned not when they went; they went every one straight forward.

10 As for [e] the likeness of their faces, they four [f] had the face of a man, [g] and the face of a lion, on the right side: [h] and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; [i] they four also had the face of an eagle.

11 Thus were their faces: and their wings were [k] stretched upward; two wings of every one were joined one to another, and [l] two covered their bodies.

13 As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, [p] and like the appearance of lamps: it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning.

14 And the living creatures [q] ran and returned [r] as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

15 Now as I beheld the living creatures, behold [s] one wheel upon the earth by the a criterion to discern common angelic appearances from those of the gods: all other spiritual beings walked progressively, rising on one foot, while they stretched out the other; but the deities always glided without gradual progressive motions.

Like the sole of a calf's foot] Before, it is stated to be a straight foot; one that did not lay down a flat horizontal sole, like that of the human foot.

And they sparkled like the colour of burnished brass.] I suppose this refers rather to the hoof of the calf's foot, than to the whole appearance of the leg. There is scarcely any thing that gives a higher lustre than highly polished or burnished brass. Our blessed Lord is represented with legs like burnished brass, Rev. i, 15.

Verse 8. They had the hands of a man under their wings] I doubt much whether the arms be not here represented as all covered with feathers, so that they had the appearance of wings, only the hand was bare; and I rather think that this is the meaning of their having the hands of a man under their wings.

Verse 9. Their wings were joined one to another] When their wings were extended, they formed a sort of canopy, level with their own heads or shoulders; and on this canopy was the throne, and the likeness of the man upon it, ver. 26.

They turned not when they went] The wings did not flap in flying, or move in the manner of oars, or of the hands of a man in swimming, in order to their passing through the air: as they glided in reference to their feet, so they soared in reference to their wings.

Verse 10. As for the likeness of their faces] There was but one body to each of those compound animals: but each body had four faces; the face of a man and of a lion on the right side; the face of an ox and an eagle on the left side. Many of these compound images appear in the Asiatic idols. Many are now before me: some with the head and feet of a monkey; with the body, arms, and legs of a man. Others with the head of the dog; body, arms, and legs, human. Some with the head of an ape; all the rest human. Some with one head and eight arms; others with six heads or faces, with twelve arms. The head of a lion, and the head of a cock, often appear; and some with the head of a cock, the whole body human, and the legs terminating into snakes. All these were symbolical, and each had its own appropriate meaning. Those in the Text had theirs also, could we but find it out.

Verse 12. They went every one straight forward] Not by progressive stepping, but by gliding.

Whither the spirit was to go] Whither that whirlwind blew, they went, being borne on by the wind, see ver. 4.

Verse 13. Like burning coals of fire] The whole substance appeared to be of flame; and among them frequent corruscations of fire like vibrating lamps, often emitting lightning, or rather sparks of fire, as we have seen struck out of strongly ignited iron in a forge. The flames might be something like what is called warring wheels, in pyrotechny. They seemed to conflict together.

Verse 14. The living creatures ran and returned] They had a circular movement; they were in rapid motion, but did not increase their distance from the spectator. So I think this should be understood.

Verse 15. One wheel upon the earth] It seems, at first view, there were four wheels, one for each of the living creatures; that is, the creatures were compound, so were the wheels, for there was a wheel in the middle of a wheel. And it is generally supposed that these wheels cut each other at right angles, up and down; and this is the manner in which they are generally represented: but most probably living creatures, with his four faces.

16 [a] The appearance of the wheels and their work was [b] like unto the colour of a beryl: and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel.

17 When they went, they went upon their four sides: [c] and they turned not when they went.

18 As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their [d] rings were [e] full of eyes round about them four.

19 And [f] when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them: and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.

20 [g] Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: [h] for the spirit [i] of the living creature was in the wheels.

21 [k] When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit [l] of the living creature was in the wheels.

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. Ol. XLVI. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 22.

22 [m] And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above.

23 And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one toward the other: every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies.

24 [n] And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, [o] like the noise of great waters, as [p] the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host: when they stood, they let down their wings.

25 And there was a voice from the firmament the wheel within, means merely the nave in which the spokes are inserted, in reference to the ring, rim, or periphery, where these spokes terminate from the centre or nave. I do think this is what is meant by the wheel within a wheel; and I am the more inclined to this opinion, by some fine Chinese drawings now before me, where their deities are represented as walking upon wheels, the wheels themselves encompassed with fire. The wheel is simply by itself, having a projecting axis; so of these it is said, their appearance and their work was, as it were, a wheel within a wheel. There were either two peripheries or rims with their spokes, or the nave answered for the wheel within. I have examined models of what are called Ezekiel's wheels, which are designed to move equally in all directions: but I plainly saw that this was impossible; nor can any kind of complex wheel move in this way.

Verse 18. As for their rings] The strakes which form the rim or periphery.

They were dreadful] They were exceedingly great in their diameter, so that it was tremendous to look from the part that touched the ground to that which was opposite above.

Were full of eyes] Does not this refer to the appearance of nails keeping on the spokes, or strokes or bands upon the rim?

Verse 19. When the living creatures went, the wheels went] The wheels were attached to the living creatures; so that, in progress, they had the same motion.

Verse 20. The spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.] That is, the wheels were instinct with a vital spirit; the wheels were alive; they also were animals, or endued with animal life, as the creatures were that stood upon them. Here then is the chariot of Jehovah. There are four wheels, on each of which one of the compound animals stands; the four compound animals form the body of the chariot, their wings spread horizontally above, the canopy or covering of this chariot; on the top of which, or upon the extended wings of the four living creatures, was the throne, on which was the appearance of a man, ver. 26.

Verse 22. The colour of the terrible crystal] Like a crystal, well cut and well polished, with various facets, by which rays of light were refracted, assuming either a variety of prismatic colours, or an insufferable brilliant splendour. This seems to be the meaning of the terrible crystal. Newcome translates, fearful ice. The common translation is preferable.

Verse 23. Every one had two, which covered on this side] While they employed two of their wings to form a foundation for the firmament to rest on, two other wings were let down to cover the lower part of their bodies: but this they did only when they stood, ver. 24.

Verse 24. The noise of their wings] When the whirlwind drove the wheels, the wind rustling among the wings, was like the noise of many waters; like a waterfall, or waters dashing continually against the rocks, or rushing down precipices.

As the voice of the Almighty] Like distant thunder; for this is termed the voice of God, Psa. xviii, 13. Exod. ix, 23, 28, 29; xx, 18.

that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings.

26 [a] And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, [b] as the appearance of a sapphire stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it.

27 [c] And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about.

28 [d] As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. [e] This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, [f] I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.

Verse 26. A sapphire] The pure oriental sapphire, a large well cut specimen of which is now before me, is one of the most beautiful and resplendent blues that can be conceived. I have sometimes seen the heavens assume this illustrious hue. The human form above this canopy is supposed to represent Him who, in the fulness of time, was manifested in the flesh.

Verse 27. The colour of amber] There are specimens of amber which are very pure and beautifully transparent. One which I now hold up to the light gives a most beautiful bright yellow colour. Such a splendid appearance had the august Being who sat upon this throne from the reins upward: but from thence downward he had the appearance of fire, burning with a clear and brilliant flame. For farther particulars see the Notes on chap. x.

Verse 28. As the appearance of the bow] Over the canopy on which this glorious Personage sat there was a fine rainbow, which, from the description here, had all its colours vivid, distinct, and in perfection,—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet. In all this description we must understand every metal, every colour, and every natural appearance, to be in their utmost perfection of shape, colour, and splendour. And this, as above described, was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord. Splendid and glorious as it was, it was only the appearance of the likeness, —a faint representation of the real thing.

I have endeavoured to explain these appearances as correctly as possible; to show their forms, positions, colours, &c. But who can explain their meaning? We have conjectures in abundance;—and can it be of any use to mankind to increase the number of those conjectures? I think not. I doubt whether the whole does not point out the state of the Jews, who were about to be subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, and carried into captivity. And I am inclined to think that the living creatures, wheels, fires, whirlwinds, &c., which are introduced here, point out emblematically the various means,—sword, fire, pestilence, famine, &c., which were employed in their destruction; and that God appears in all this to shew that Nebuchadnezzar is only His instrument to inflict all these calamities. What is in the following Chapter appears to me to confirm this supposition. But we have the rainbow, the token of God's covenant, to shew that though there should be a destruction of the city, temple, &c., and sore tribulation among the people, yet there should not be a total ruin:—after a long captivity they should be restored. The rainbow is an illustrious token of mercy and love.

CHAPTER II.

The Prophet, having been overwhelmed with the glorious vision in the preceding Chapter, is here strengthened and comforted, 1, 2; and then commissioned to declare to the rebellious house of Israel the terrible judgments that would very shortly come upon the whole land, if they repented not: with a gracious assurance to Ezekiel that God would be constantly with him while executing the duties of his office, 3—5. The Prophet is also commanded to be fearless, resolute, and faithful, in the discharge of it, 6—8, as he must be the messenger of very unpleasing tidings, which will expose him to great persecution, 9, 10.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verse 1. And he said unto me] In the last verse of the preceding Chapter we find that the prophet was so penetrated with awe at the sight of the glory of God in the mystical chariot, that he fell upon his face; and, while he was in this posture of adoration, he heard the voice mentioned here. It is evident, therefore, that the present division of these Chapters is wrong. The first should either end with the words—This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD, ver. 28; or the first verse of this Chapter should be added to the preceding, and this begin with the second verse.

Verse 2. And the spirit entered into me] This spirit was different to that mentioned above, by which the wheels, &c., were moved. The spirit of prophecy is here intended; whose office was not merely to enable him to foresee and foretel future events, but to purify and refine his heart, and qualify him to be a successful preacher of the Word of life.

He who is sent by the God of all grace to convert sinners must be influenced by the Holy Ghost; without which he can neither be saved himself, nor become the instrument of salvation to others.

And set me upon my feet] That he might stand as a servant before his master, to receive his orders.

Verse 3. Son of man] This appellative, so often mentioned in this Book, seems to have been given first to this prophet: afterwards to Daniel; and after that to the MAN Christ Jesus. Perhaps it was given to the two former to remind them of their frailty, and that they should not be exalted in their own minds by the extraordinary revelations granted to them: and that they should feel themselves of the same nature with those to whom they were sent: and, from the common principle of humanity, deeply interest themselves in the welfare of their unhappy countrymen. To the latter it might have been appropriated merely to shew that though all His actions demonstrated Him to be GOD, yet that He was also really MAN; and that in the man Christ Jesus dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. When the acts of Christ are considered, it is more easy to believe His eternal Godhead, than to be convinced that the Person we hear speaking, and see working, is also a man like unto ourselves.

I send thee to the children of Israel] To those who were now in captivity,—in Chaldea particularly: and to the Jews in general, both far and near.

Verse 4. Thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord] Let them know that what thou hast to declare is the message of the LORD, that they may receive it with reverence.

Every preacher of God's word should take heed that it is God's message that he delivers to the people. Let him not suppose, because it is according to his own creed or confession of faith, that therefore it is God's word. False doctrines and fallacies without end are foisted on the world in this way. Bring the creed first to the Word of God, and scrupulously try whether it be right; and when this is done, leave it where you please,—take the Bible, and warn them from God's word recorded there.

Verse 5. Yet shall know that there hath been a prophet among them.] By this they shall be assured of two things,—1. That God in His mercy had given them due warning. 2. That themselves are inexcusable, for not taking it.

Verse 6. Be not afraid of them] They will maltreat thee for thy message: but let not the apprehension of this induce thee to suppress it. Though they be rebels, fear them not; I will sustain and preserve thee.

Verse 7. Whether they will hear] Whether they receive the message, or persecute thee for it, declare it to them, that they may be without excuse.

A. M. 3409. B. C. 595. Ol. XLVI. 2. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 22.

8 But thou, son of man, hear what I say unto thee; Be not thou rebellious like that rebellious house: open thy mouth, and [a] eat that I give thee.

9 And when I looked, behold, [b] a hand was sent unto me; and, lo, [c] a roll of a book was therein;

10 And he spread it before me: and it was written within and without: and there was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and woe.

[a] Rev. 10. 9.——[b] Ch. 8. 3. Jer. 1. 9.

[c] Ch. 3. 1.

Verse 8. Open thy mouth, and eat that I give thee.] Take my word as thou wouldst take thy proper food: receive it into thy heart; ponder it there, that it may be the means of strengthening and preserving thy soul, as proper nourishment will strengthen the body, and preserve from death. And the people to whom such messages of God may come should so hear it, read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest it, that it may turn to efficient nourishment to their souls.

Verse 9. A hand was sent] Here, the hand signifies not only the instrument of conveyance, but an emblem of the Divine power, which the hand of God always signifies.

A roll of a book] מגלת ספר megillath sepher. All ancient books were written so as to be rolled up; hence, volumen, a volume, from volvo, I roll.

Verse 10. It was written within and without] Contrary to the state of rolls in general, which are written on the inside only. The Hebrew rolls are generally written in this way. There are several of such Hebrew rolls before me, all written on the inside only, consisting of skins of vellum, or parchment, sewed together; extending to several yards in length. Other Asiatic books were written in the same way. A Sanscrit roll of sixty feet in length, also before me, is written all on the inside; and a Koran, written in exceedingly small characters, about two inches broad and twelve feet long, and weighing but about half an ounce. But the roll presented to the prophet was written on both sides, because the prophecy was long, and to the same effect; that they might see the mind of God wherever they looked.

There was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and woe.] What an awful assemblage! קינים והגה והי kinnim, va-hegeh, vehi, lamentations and a groan, and alas! Lamentations on all hands: a groan from the dying; and alas, or Woe is me! from the survivors. It was the letter that killeth, and is the ministration of death. What a mercy to have that which is emphatically called Το Ευαγγελιον, The Glad Tidings, the Good News! Christ Jesus is come into the world to save sinners; and He wills that all men should be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth. Here are rejoicings, thanksgivings, and exultation.

CHAPTER III.

This Chapter contains more particular instructions to the Prophet. It begins with repeating his appointment to his office, 1—3. Ezekiel is then informed that his commission is, at this time, to the house of Israel exclusively, 4—6; that his countrymen would pay little regard to him, 7; that he must persevere in his duty notwithstanding such great discouragement: and he is endued with extraordinary courage and intrepidity to enable him fearlessly to declare to a disobedient and gainsaying people the whole counsel of God, 8—11. The Prophet is afterwards carried by the spirit that animated the cherubim and wheels, and by which he received the gift of prophecy, to a colony of his brethren in the neighbourhood, where he remained seven days overwhelmed with astonishment, 12—15. He is then warned of the awful importance of being faithful in his office, 16—21; commanded to go forth into the plain that he may have a visible manifestation of the Divine presence, 22; and is again favoured with a vision of that most magnificent set of symbols described in the first Chapter, by which the glorious majesty of the God of Israel was in some measure represented, 23. See also Isa. vi, 1—18, Dan. x, 5—19, and Rev. i, 10—16, iv, 1—11, for other manifestations of the Divine glory, in all of which some of the imagery is very similar. The Prophet receives directions relative to his future conduct, 24—27.

MOREOVER he said unto me, Son of man, eat that thou findest; [a] eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel.

2 So I opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat that roll.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I [b] eat it; and it was in my mouth [c] as honey for sweetness.

4 And he said unto me, Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them.

5 For thou art not sent to a people [d] of a strange speech and of a hard language, but to the house of Israel;

6 Not to many people [e] of a strange speech and of a hard language, whose words thou canst not understand. [f] Surely, [g] had I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee.

7 But the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; [h] for they will not hearken unto me: [i] for all the house of Israel are [k] impudent and hard-hearted.

11 And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them, [n] Thus saith the Lord GOD; whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.

12 Then [o] the spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing, saying, Blessed be the glory of the LORD from his place.

13 I heard also the noise of the wings of the living creatures that [p] touched one another, and the noise of the wheels over against them, and a noise of a great rushing.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verse 1. Eat this roll, and go speak] This must have passed in vision: but the meaning is plain. Receive my word,—let it enter into thy soul; digest it,—let it be thy nourishment; and let it be thy meat and drink to do the will of thy Father who is in heaven.

Verse 3. It was in my mouth as honey] It was joyous to me to receive the Divine message,—to be thus let into the secrets of the Divine counsel; and I promised myself much comfort in that intimate acquaintance with which I was favoured by the Supreme Being. In Rev. x, 10, we find St. John receiving a little book, which he ate, and found it sweet as honey in his mouth, but after he had eaten it, it made his belly bitter; signifying, that a deep consideration of the awful matter contained in God's Word against sinners, which, multitudes of them will turn to their endless confusion, must deeply afflict those who know any thing of the worth of an immortal spirit.

Verse 5. Thou art not sent to a people of a strange speech] I neither send thee to thy adversaries, the Chaldeans; nor to the Medes and Persians, their enemies. Even these would more likely have hearkened unto thee than thy own countrymen.

Verse 12. Then the spirit took me up] This, as Calmet remarks, has been variously understood. 1. An impetuous wind carried him to the place where his brethren sojourned. 2. The Holy Spirit, which filled his heart, transported him in a moment to the place where the captives were. 3. Or, he was so transported with heavenly ardour in his mind, that he ran immediately off, and seemed to fly to the place where God commanded him to go. The promptitude and impetuosity of his spirit seemed to furnish him with wings on the occasion. However this may be understood, the going to the captives was real.

A voice of a great rushing] This was the noise made by the wings of the living creatures that formed the chariot of Jehovah. See the Notes on chap. i, and x.

Blessed be the glory of the LORD] Probably the acclamation of the living creatures,—"Let God be blessed from the throne of His glory! He deserves the praises of His creatures in all the dispensations of His mercy and justice, of His providence and grace."

Verse 13. A great rushing.] All the living creatures, and the wheels, being then in motion.

Verse 14. I went in bitterness] Being filled with indignation at the wickedness and obstinacy of my people, I went, my spirit; but [a] the hand of the LORD was strong upon me.

15 Then I came to them of the captivity at Tel-abib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and [b] I sat where they sat, and remained there astonished among them seven days.

16 And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

17 [c] Son of man, I have made thee [d] a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me.

18 When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man [e] shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

19 Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; [f] but thou hast delivered thy soul.

determining to speak the word of God without disguise, and to reprove them sharply for their rebellion: and yet I was greatly distressed because of the heavy message which I was commanded to deliver.

Verse 15. I came to them of the captivity] Because the hand of the Lord was strong upon him and supported him, he soon reached the place.

Seven days.] God perhaps kept him all this time without an immediate revelation, that the bitterness and heat of spirit of which he speaks above might be subdued, and that he might speak God's words in God's own Spirit. Had he gone in a better spirit, he had probably been employed in his work as soon as he had gained the place of labour.

Verse 17. I have made thee a watchman] The care and welfare of all this people I have laid on thee. Thou must watch for their safety;—preach for their edification;—and pray for their eternal welfare. And, that thou mayest be successful, receive the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

God is particularly jealous lest any words but His own be taught for Divine doctrines. He will not have human creeds, no more than TRADITIONS, taught instead of His own Word. No word can be successful in the salvation of sinners, but that which comes from God. Every minister of His Gospel should be familiar with his Maker by faith and prayer;—God will then hold communion with his spirit: otherwise, what he preaches will be destitute of spirit and life; and his hackneyed texts and sermons be like the dry mouldy Gibeonitish crusts.

Verse 18. Thou shalt surely die] That is, if he turn not from his wickedness. And thou givest him not warning; as above, he shall die in his iniquity, which he should not have committed:—but his blood will I require at thy hand;—I will visit thy soul for the loss of his. O how awful is this! Hear it, ye priests,—ye preachers,—ye ministers of the Gospel;—ye, especially, who have entered into the ministry for a living:—ye who gather a congregation to yourselves that ye may feed upon their fat, and clothe yourselves with their wool;—in whose parishes and in whose congregations souls are dying unconverted from day to day,—who have never been solemnly warned by you, and to whom you have never shewn the way of salvation,—probably because ye know nothing of it yourselves. O, what a perdition awaits you! To have the blood of every soul that has died in your parishes or in your congregations unconverted, laid at your door! To suffer a common damnation for every soul that perishes through your neglect! How many loads of endless woe must such have to bear! Ye take your tithes, your stipends, or your rents, to the last grain, and the last penny; while the souls over whom you made yourselves watchmen have perished, and are perishing, through your neglect. O worthless and hapless men! better for you had ye never been born! Vain is your boast of apostolical authority, while ye do not the work of apostles. Vain your boast of your orthodoxy, while ye neither shew nor know the way of salvation;—vain your pretensions to a Divine call, when ye do not the work of evangelists. The state of the most wretched of the human race is enviable to that of such ministers, pastors, teachers, and preachers.

But let not this discourage the faithful minister, who teaches every man, and warns every man, in all wisdom, that he may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus. If, after such teaching and warning, they will sin on, and do die in their sins, their blood will be upon them: but thou, O man of God, hast delivered thy own soul.

Verse 20. When a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness] Which these words plainly state he may do, and commit iniquity, and die in his sin,—and, consequently, die eternally, which is also here granted: if he have not die: because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

21 Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also thou hast delivered thy soul.

22 [a] And the hand of the LORD was there upon me; and he said unto me, Arise, go forth [b] into the plain, and I will there talk with thee.

23 Then I arose, and went forth into the plain: and, behold, [c] the glory of the Lord stood there, as the glory which I [d] saw by the river of Chebar: [e] and I fell on my face.

24 Then [f] the spirit entered into me, and set me upon my feet, and spake with me, and said unto me, Go, shut thyself within thine house.

been warned though he die in his sin, the blood, the life and salvation, of this person also will God require at the watchman's hand. Pastor hunc occidit, quia eum tacendo, mori tradidit.—GREGORY. From these passages we see that a righteous man may fall from grace, and perish everlastingly. Should it be said that it means the self-righteous,—I reply, this is absurd; for self-righteousness is a fall itself, and the sooner a man falls from it the better for himself. Real genuine righteousness of heart and life is that which is meant. Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall.

And I lay a stumbling-block before him] That is, I permit him to be tried, and he fall in the trial. God is repeatedly represented as doing things which he only permits to be done. He lays a stumbling-block, i. e. He permits one to be laid.

Verse 22. Arise, go forth into the plain] Into a place remote from observation and noise: a place where the glory of God might have sufficient room to manifest itself, that the prophet might see all its movements distinctly.

Verse 25. They shall put bands upon thee] Thy countrymen will rise up against thee; and, to prevent thy prophesying, will confine thee.

Verse 26. I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth] I will not give thee any message to deliver to them. They are so rebellious, it is useless to give them farther warning.

Verse 27. I will open thy mouth] When it is necessary to address them again, thou shalt sum up what thou hast said in this one speech, Thus saith the Lord, "He that heareth, let him hear; and he that forbeareth, let him forbear." Let him who feels obedience to the voice of God, his interest, be steadfast. Let him who disregards the Divine monition, go on in his own way, and abide the consequences.

CHAPTER IV.

Ezekiel delineates Jerusalem, and lays siege to it, as a type of the manner in which the Chaldean army should surround that city, 1—3. The Prophet commanded to lie on his left side three hundred and ninety days, and on his right side forty days, with the signification, 4—8. The scanty and coarse provision allowed the Prophet during his symbolical siege, consisting chiefly of the worst kinds of grain, and likewise ill-prepared, as he had only cow's dung for fuel, tended all to denote the scarcity of provision, fuel, and every necessary of life, which the Jews should experience during the siege of Jerusalem, 9—17.

THOU also, son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and pourtray upon it the city, even Jerusalem:

2 And lay siege against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount against it; set the camp also against it, and set [a] battering rams against it round about.

3 Moreover take thou unto thee [b] an iron pan, and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city: and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. [c] This shall be a sign to the house of Israel.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verse 1. Take thee a tile] A tile, such as we use in covering houses, will give us but a very inadequate notion of those used anciently: and also appear very insufficient for the figures which the prophet was commanded to pourtray on it. And a brick is most undoubtedly meant; yet, even the larger dimensions here, as to thickness, will not help us through the difficulty, unless we have recourse to the ancients, who have spoken of the dimensions of the bricks commonly used in building. Palladius, De Re Rusticâ, lib. vi, c. 12, is very particular on this subject:—Sint vero lateres longitudine pedum duorum, latitudine unius, altitudine quatuor unciarum. "Let the bricks be two feet long, one foot broad, and four inches thick." Edit. Gesner, Vol. III, p. 144. On such a surface as this the whole siege might be easily pourtrayed.

But the tempered clay out of which the bricks were made might be meant here: of this substance he might spread out a sufficient quantity to receive all his figures. The figures were, first, Jerusalem. 2. A fort. 3. A mount. 4. The camp of the enemy. 5. Battering rams, and such like engines round about. 6. A wall round about the city, between it and the besieging army.

Verse 2. Battering rams] כרים karim. This is the earliest account we have of this military engine. It was a long beam with a head of brass, like the head and horns of a ram, whence its name. It was hung by chains or ropes, between two beams, or a three legs, so that it could admit of being drawn back and forward some yards. Several stout men, by means of ropes, pulled it as far back as it could go; and then, suddenly letting it loose, it struck with great force against the wall, which it was intended to batter and bring down. This machine was not known in the time of Homer, as in the siege of Troy, there is not the slightest mention of such. And the first notice we have of it is here, where we see that it was employed by Nebuchadnezzar in the siege of Jerusalem, A. M. 3416. It was afterwards used by the Carthaginians at the siege of Gades, as Vitruvius notes, lib. x, c. 19, in which he gives a circumstantial account of the invention, fabrication, use, and improvement, of this machine. It was for the want of a machine of this kind, that the ancient sieges lasted so long; they had nothing to beat down or undermine the walls.

Verse 3. Take thou unto thee an iron pan] מחבת machabath, a flat plate, or slice, as the Margin properly renders it; such as are used in some countries, to bake bread on, called a gridle or girdle, being suspended above the fire, and kept in a proper degree of heat for the purpose. A plate like this, stuck perpendicularly in the earth, would shew the nature of a wall much better than any pan could do. The Chaldeans threw such a wall round Jerusalem, to prevent the besieged from receiving any succours, and from escaping from the city.

This shall be a sign to the house of Israel.] This shall be an emblematical representation of what shall actually take place.

Verse 4. Lie thou also upon thy left side] It appears that all that is mentioned here and in the following verses was done, not in idea, but in fact. The prophet lay down on his left side upon a couch to which he was chained, ver. 5, for three hundred and ninety days; and afterwards he lay in the same manner, upon his right side, for forty days. And thus was signified the state of the Jews, and the punishment that was coming upon them. 1. The prophet himself, represents the Jews. 2. His lying, their state of depression. 3. His being bound, their helplessness and captivity. 4. The days signify years, a day for a year; during which they were to bear their iniquity, or the temporal punishment due to their sins. 5. The three hundred and ninety days, during which he was to lie on his left side, and bear the iniquity of the house of Israel, point out two things:—the first, the duration of the siege of Jerusalem. Secondly, The duration of the captivity of the ten tribes, and that of Judah. 6. The prophet lay three hundred and ninety days upon his left side, and forty days upon his right side, in all four hundred and thirty days. Now Jerusalem was besieged the ninth year of the reign of Zedekiah, 2 Kings xxv, 1, 2, and was not taken till the eleventh year of the same prince, 2 Kings xxv, 2. But, properly speaking, the siege did not continue the whole bear the iniquity of the house of Israel.

6 And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days: I have appointed thee [a] each day for a year.

7 Therefore thou shalt set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and thine arm shall be uncovered, and thou shalt prophesy against it.

8 [b] And, behold, I will lay bands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee [c] from one side to another, till thou hast ended the days of thy siege.

9 Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and millet, and [d] fitches, and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof, according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon thy side, three hundred and ninety days shalt thou eat thereof.

10 And thy meat which thou shalt eat shall be by weight, twenty shekels a day: from time to time shalt thou eat it.

11 Thou shalt drink also water by measure, the sixth part of a hin: from time to time shalt thou drink.

12 And thou shalt eat it as barley cakes, and thou shalt bake it with dung that cometh out of man, in their sight.

13 And the LORD said, Even thus [e] shall the children of Israel eat their defiled bread among the Gentiles, whither I will drive them.

of that time: it was interrupted; for Nebuchadnezzar was obliged to raise it, and go and meet the Egyptians, who were coming to its succour. This consumed a considerable portion of time. After he had defeated the Egyptians, he returned and recommenced the siege, and did not leave it till the city was taken. We may, therefore, conclude that the four hundred and thirty days only comprise the time in which the city was actually besieged, when the city was encompassed with walls of circumvallation, so that the besieged were reduced to a state of the utmost distress. The siege commenced the tenth day of the tenth month of the ninth year of Zedekiah; and it was taken on the ninth day of the fourth month of the eleventh year of the same king. Thus the siege had lasted, in the whole, eighteen months, or five hundred and ten days. Subtract for the time that Nebuchadnezzar was obliged to interrupt the siege, in order to go against the Egyptians, four months and twenty days, or one hundred and forty days, and there will remain four hundred and thirty days, composed of 390+40=430. See Calmet on this place. See also at the end of this Chapter.

Verse 6. Forty days] Reckon, says Archbishop Newcome, near fifteen years and six months in the reign of Manasseh, two years in that of Amon, three months in that of Jehoahaz, eleven years in that of Jehoiakim, three months and ten days in that of Jehoiachin, and eleven years in that of Zedekiah, and there arises a period of forty years, during which gross idolatry was practised in the kingdom of Judah. Forty days may have been employed in spoiling and desolating the city and the temple.

Verse 9. Take thou also unto thee wheat] In times of scarcity, it is customary in all countries to mix several kinds of coarser grain, with the finer, to make it last the longer. This mashlin, which the prophet is commanded to take of wheat, barley, beans, lentiles, millet, and fitches, was intended to shew how scarce the necessaries of life should be during the siege.

Verse 10. Twenty shekels a day] The whole of the above grain being ground, was to be formed into one mass, out of which he was to make three hundred and ninety loaves; one loaf for each day: and this loaf was to be of twenty shekels in weight. Now a shekel, being in weight about half an ounce, this would be ten ounces of bread for each day: and with this water to the amount of one sixth part of a hin, which is about a pint and a half of our measure. All this shews that so reduced should provisions be during the siege, that they should be obliged to eat the meanest sort of aliment, and that by weight, and their water by measure; each man's allowance being scarcely a pint and a half, and ten ounces, a little more than half a pound of bread, for each day's support.

Verse 12. Thou shalt bake it with dung] Dried ox and cow dung is a common fuel in the East; and with this, for want of wood and coals, they are obliged to prepare their food. Indeed, dried excrement of every kind is gathered. Here, the prophet is to prepare his bread with dry human excrement. And when we know that this did not come in contact with the bread, and was only used to warm the plate, (see ver. 3,) on which the bread was laid over the fire, it removes all the horror, and much of the disgust. This was required to shew the extreme degree of wretchedness to which they should be exposed: for, not being able to leave the city to collect the dried excrements of beasts, the inhabitants during the siege would be obliged (literally) to use dried human ordure for fuel. The very circumstances shew that this was the plain fact of the case. However, we find that the prophet was relieved from using this kind 14 Then said I, [a] Ah Lord GOD! behold, my soul hath not been polluted: for from my youth up even till now have I not eaten of [b] that which dieth of itself, or is torn in pieces; neither came there [c] abominable flesh into my mouth.

15 Then he said unto me, Lo, I have given thee cow's dung for man's dung, and thou shalt prepare thy bread therewith.

16 Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, behold, I will break the [d] staff of bread in Jerusalem: and they shall [e] eat bread by weight, and with care; and they shall [f] drink water by measure, and with astonishment:

17 That they may want bread and water, and be astonished one with another, and [g] consume away for their iniquity.

of fuel, for cows' dung was substituted at his request. See ver. 15.

Verse 14. My soul hath not been polluted] There is a remarkable similarity between this expostulation of the prophet, and that of St. Peter, Acts x, 14.

Verse 16. I will break the staff of bread] They shall be besieged till all the bread is consumed, till the famine becomes absolute, see 2 Kings xxv, 3. And on the ninth of the fourth month, the famine prevailed in the city; and THERE WAS NO BREAD for the people of the land. All this was accurately foretold, and as accurately fulfilled.

Abp. Newcome on ver. 6. observes:—"This number of years will take us back, with sufficient exactness, from the year in which Jerusalem was sacked by Nebuchadnezzar, to the first year of Jeroboam's reign, when national idolatry began in Israel. The period of days seems to predict the duration of the siege by the Babylonians, ver. 9, deducting from the year five months and twenty-nine days, mentioned 2 Kings xxv, 1—4, the time during which the Chaldeans were on their expedition against the Egyptians, see Jer. xxxvii, 5." This amounts nearly to the same as that mentioned above.

CHAPTER V.

In this Chapter the Prophet shews, under the type of hair, the judgments which God was about to execute on the inhabitants of Jerusalem by famine, sword, and dispersion, 1—4. The type, or allegory, is then dropped; and God is introduced declaring in plain terms the vengeance that was coming on the whole nation which had proved so unworthy of those mercies with which they had hitherto been distinguished, 5—17.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verse 1—4. Take thee a sharp knife] Among the Israelites, and indeed among most ancient nations, there were very few edged tools. The sword was the chief: and this was used as a knife, a razor, &c., according to its different length and sharpness. It is likely that only one kind of instrument is here intended; a knife or short sword, to be employed as a razor.

Here is a new emblem produced, in order to mark out the coming evils.—1. The prophet represents the Jewish nation. 2. His hair, the people. 3. The razor, the Chaldeans. 4. The cutting the beard and hair, the calamities, sorrows, and disgrace, coming upon the people. Cutting off the hair was a sign of mourning, see on Jer. xlv, 5, xlviii, 37; and also a sign of great disgrace, see 2 Sam. x, 4. 5. He is ordered to divide the hair, ver. 2, into three equal parts, to intimate the different degrees and kinds of punishment which should fall upon the people. 6. The balances, ver. 1, were to represent the Divine justice, and the exactness with which God's judgments should be distributed among the offenders. 7. This hair, divided into three parts, is to be disposed of thus:—1. A third part is to be burnt in the midst of the city, to shew that so many should perish by famine and pestilence during the siege. 2. Another third when [a] the days of the siege are fulfilled: and thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife: and a third part thou shalt scatter in the wind; and I will draw out a sword after them.

3 [b] Thou shalt also take thereof a few in number, and bind them in thy [c] skirts.

4 Then take of them again, and [d] cast them into the midst of the fire, and burn them in the fire; for thereof shall a fire come forth into all the house of Israel.

5 Thus saith the Lord GOD; This is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her.

6 And she hath changed my judgments into wickedness more than the nations, and my statutes more than the countries that are round about her: for they have refused my judgments and my statutes, they have not walked in them.

10 Therefore the fathers [g] shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers; and I will execute judgments in thee, and the whole remnant of thee will I [h] scatter into all the winds.

part he was to cut in small portions about the city, (that figure which he had pourtrayed upon the brick,) to signify those which should perish in different sorties, and in defending the walls. 3. And the remaining third part he was to scatter in the wind, to point out those who should be driven into captivity. And, 4. The sword following them was intended to shew that their lives should be at the will of their captors; and that many of them should perish by the sword, in their dispersions. 5. The few hairs which he was to take in his skirts, ver. 3, was intended to represent those few Jews that should be left in the land under Gedaliah, after the taking of the city. 6. the throwing a part of these last into the fire, ver. 4, was intended to shew the miseries that these suffered in Judea, in Egypt, and finally in their being also carried away into Babylon on the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar. See these transactions particularly pointed out in the notes on Jeremiah, chap. xl, xli, xlii. Some think that this prophecy may refer to the persecution of the Jews by Antiochus Epiphanes.

Verse 5. This is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations] I have made this city the most eminent, and the most illustrious, in the world. Some think that these words refer to its geographical situation, as being equally in the centre of the habitable world. Any point on a globe is its centre, no matter where laid down. But it would not be difficult to shew that even this literal sense is tolerably correct: but I will not pursue the enquiry, as I doubt whether the prophet had any such thing in view.

Verse 6. She hath changed my judgments] God shews the reason why he deals with Jerusalem in greater severity than with the surrounding nations; because she was more wicked than they. Bad and idolatrous as they were, they had a greater degree of morality among them, than the Jews had. Having fallen from the true God, they became more abominable than others, in proportion to the height, eminence, and glory, from which they had fallen. This is the common case of backsliders: they frequently, in their fall, become tenfold more the children of wrath than they were before.

Verse 9. I will do in thee that which I have not done] The destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar was one of the greatest calamities that ever fell on any nation or place before; and that by the Romans under Titus, exceeded all that has taken place since. These two sackages of that city have no parallel in the history of mankind.

Verse 10. The fathers shall eat the sons] Though we have not this fact so particularly stated in history; yet we cannot doubt of it, considering the extremities to which they were reduced during the siege. The same is referred to by Jeremiah, Lam. iv, 10. Even the women, who were remarkable for kindness and humanity, boiled their own children, and ate them during the siege.

13 Thus shall mine anger [e] be accomplished, and I will [f] cause my fury to rest upon them, [g] and I will be comforted: [h] and they shall know that I the LORD have spoken it in my zeal, when I have accomplished my fury in them.

14 Moreover [i] I will make thee waste, and a reproach among the nations that are round about thee, in the sight of all that pass by.

Verse 12. A third part of thee] See the note on ver. 1—4.

Verse 13. I will cause my fury to rest] My displeasure, and the evidences of it, shall not be transient; they shall be permanent upon you, and among you. And is not this dreadfully true to the present day?

Verse 16. The evil arrows of famine] Famine and pestilence are represented as poisoned arrows, inflicting death wherever they wound. The ancients represented them in the same way.

Verse 17. So will I send upon you famine, and evil beasts; and they shall bereave thee] Wild beasts always multiply in depopulated countries. In England, wolves abounded when the country was thinly peopled; it is now full of inhabitants, and there is not one wolf in the land. Nebuchadnezzar and his Chaldeans may be called here evil beasts. He is often compared to a lion, Jer. iv, 7, Dan. vii, 14, on account of the ravages made by him and his Chaldean armies.

CHAPTER VI.

In this Chapter, which forms a distinct section, the Prophet denounces the judgments of God against the Jews for their idolatry, 1—7: but tells them that a remnant shall be saved, and brought to a sense of their sins by their severe afflictions, 8—14.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VI.

Verse 2. Set thy face toward the mountains of Israel] This is a new prophecy, and was most probably given after the four hundred and thirty days of his lying on his left and right side were accomplished. By Israel here, Judea is simply meant; not the ten tribes, who had long before been carried into captivity. Ezekiel uses this term in reference to the Jews only.

bring a sword upon you, and [a] I will destroy your high places.

4 And your altars shall be desolate, and your [b] images shall be broken: and [c] I will cast down your slain men before your idols.

5 And I will [d] lay the dead carcases of the children of Israel before their idols; and I will scatter your bones round about your altars.

6 In all your dwelling-places the cities shall be laid waste, and the high places shall be desolate; that your altars may be laid waste and made desolate, and your idols may be broken and cease, and your images may be cut down, and your works may be abolished.

7 And the slain shall fall in the midst of you, and [e] ye shall know that I am the LORD.

8 [f] Yet will I leave a remnant, that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries.

9 And they that escape of you shall remember me among the nations whither they shall be carried captives, because [g] I am broken with their whorish heart, which hath departed from me, and [h] with their eyes, which go a whoring after their idols: and [i] they shall loathe themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations.

10 And they shall know that I am the LORD, and that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.

11 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Smite [k] with thine hand, and stamp with thy foot, and say, Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! [l] for they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

12 He that is far off shall die of the pestilence; and he that is near shall fall by the sword; and he that remaineth and is besieged shall die by the famine: [m] thus will I accomplish my fury upon them.

13 Then [n] shall ye know that I am the LORD, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars, [o] upon every high hill, [p] in all the tops of the mountains, and [q] under every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols.

14 So will I [r] stretch out my hand upon them, and make the land desolate, yea, [s] more desolate than the wilderness toward [t] Diblath, in all their habitations: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

The mountains may be addressed here particularly, because it was on them the chief scenes of idolatry were exhibited.

Verse 4. Your images shall be broken] Literally, your sun images; representations of the sun, which they worshipped.

Verse 5. Will scatter your bones round about your altars.] This was literally fulfilled by the Chaldeans. According to Baruch, chap. ii, 24, 25, they opened the sepulchres of the principal people, and threw the bones about on every side.

Verse 9. They that escape of you shall remember me] Those that escape the sword, the pestilence, and the famine, and shall be led into captivity, shall plainly see that it is God who has done this; and shall humble themselves on account of their abominations,—leave their idolatry,—and worship me alone. And this they have done from the Babylonish captivity to the present day.

Verse 11. Smite with thine hand, and stamp with thy foot] Shew the utmost marks of thy astonishment and indignation, and dread of the evils that are coming upon them. Some have contended for the propriety of clapping and stamping in public worship from these words! It is scarcely a breach of charity to think that such persons are themselves incapable either of attending on, or conducting, the worship of God. To be consistent, they should copy the prophet in his other typical actions as well as these; and then we shall hear of them lying on their left side for three hundred and ninety days, and on their right side for forty days; shaving their heads, burning their hair, baking their bread with dung, &c. Now all these things, because they were typical and commanded, were proper in the prophet; in such persons as the above they would be evidences of insanity. Such extravagant acts are no part of God's worship.

Verse 14. And make the land—more desolate than the wilderness toward Diblath] Diblath, or Diblathayim, is situated in the land of Moab. It is mentioned Numb. xxxiii, 46, Almon-Diblathaim;—and in Jer. xlviii, 22, Beth-Diblathaim. It was a part of that horrible wilderness mentioned by Moses, Deut. viii, 15, "wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought." The precise reason why it is mentioned here is not very evident. Some think it is the same as Riblah, where Nebuchadnezzar slew the princes of Israel, and put out Zedekiah's eyes; the principal difference lying between the ד daleth and the ר resh, which in MSS. is often scarcely discernible; and hence vast multitudes of various readings. Five, probably six, of Kennicott's MSS. have רבלתה riblathah, as likewise two of my oldest MSS.; though in the margin of one a later hand directs the word to be read בדלת be-daleth, with daleth. But all the Versions read the word with a D. This may appear a matter of little importance, but we should take pains to recover even one lost letter of the word of God.

CHAPTER VII.

This Chapter, which also forms a distinct prophecy, foretels the dreadful destruction of the land of Israel, or Judah, (for after the captivity of the ten tribes these terms are often used indiscriminately for the Jews in general,) on account of the heinous sins of its inhabitants, 1—15; and the great distress of the small remnant that should escape, 16—19. The Temple itself, which they had polluted with idolatry, is devoted to destruction, 20—22; and the Prophet is directed to make a chain, as a type of that captivity, in which both king and people should be led in bonds to Babylon, 23—27. The whole Chapter abounds in bold and beautiful figures, flowing in an easy and forcible language.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VII.

Verse 2. An end, the end is come] Instead of קץ בא הקץ kets ba, ha-kets, one MS. of Kennicott, one of De Rossi, and one of my own, read קץ בא בא הקץ kets ba, ba ha-kets, "The end cometh, come is the end." This reading is supported by all the ancient Versions, and is undoubtedly genuine. The end COMETH:—the termination of the Jewish state is coming; and, while I am speaking, it is come. The destruction is at the door. The later hand, who put the vowel points to the ancient MS. that has the above reading, did not put the points to the first בא ba, but struck his pen gently across it, and by a mark in the margin intimated that it should be blotted out. All my ancient MSS. were without the points originally: but they have been added by modern hands, with a different ink; and they have in multitudes of instances corrected, or rather changed, important readings, to make them quadrate with the masora. But the original reading, in almost every case, is discernible.

The end is come upon the four corners of the land.] This is not a partial calamity: it shall cover, and sweep, the whole land. The cup of your iniquity is full, and my forbearing is at an end. This whole Chapter is poetical.

Verse 4. Thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee] They shall ever stare thee in the face, upbraid thee with thy ingratitude and disobedience, and be witnesses against thee.

Verse 5. An evil, an only evil] The great, the sovereign, the last exterminating evil, is come:—the sword, the pestilence, the famine, and captivity. Many MSS. read אחר achar, after. So evil cometh after evil; one instantly succeeds another.

Verse 6. An end is come, the end is come: it watcheth for thee] This is similar to the second verse: but there is a paranomasia, or play upon letters and words, which is worthy of note קץ בא הקץ אליך kets ba, ho hak-kets, hakets elaic. קצה katsah signifies to make an end, or extremity, by cutting of something; and יקץ yakats signifies to awake from sleep: hence קיץ kits, the summer, as the earth and its productions seem then to awake from the sleep of winter. The end, or final destruction is here personified; and represented as an executioner who has arisen early from his sleep, and is waiting for his orders to execute judgment upon these offenders. Hence it is said,—

Verse 7. The morning is come unto thee] Every note of time is used in order to shew the certainty of the thing. The morning that the executioner has watched for, is come;—the time of that morning, in which it should take place; and the day to which that time, precise hour, of that morning belongs, in which judgment shall be executed. All, all is come.

And not the sounding again of the mountains.] The hostile troops are advancing! Ye hear a sound, a tumultuous noise: do not suppose that this proceeds from festivals upon the mountains; from the joy of harvestmen, or the treaders of the wine-press. It is the noise of those by whom ye and your country are to fall. Now will I shortly pour out,—(ver. 8.) Here they come!

Verse 10. Behold the day] The same words are repeated,—sometimes varied, and pressed on the attention with new figures and new circumstances, in order to alarm this infatuated people. Look at the day! It is come!

The morning is gone forth] It will wait no longer. The rod that is to chastise you hath blossomed; it is quite ready.

Pride hath budded.] Your insolence, obstinacy, and daring opposition to God, have brought forth their proper fruits.

Verse 11. Violence is risen up into a rod of wickedness] The prophet continues his metaphor: Pride has budded.—And what has it brought forth? Violence and iniquity. To meet these, the rod of God cometh. There is such a vast rapidity of succession in the ideas of the prophet that he cannot wait to find language to clothe each. Hence we have broken sentences; and, consequently, obscurity. Something must be supplied to get the sense, and most critics alter words in the Text. Houbigant, who rarely acknowledges himself to be puzzled, appears here completely nonplussed. He has given a meaning; it is this:—"Violence hath burst forth from the rod; salvation shall not proceed from them, nor from their riches, nor from their turbulence: there shall be no respite for them." Calmet has given no less than five interpretations to this verse! The simple meaning seems to be,—that such and so great is their wickedness that it must be punished;—and from this punishment neither their multitude nor struggles shall set them free. They may strive to evade the threatened stroke: but they shall not succeed, nor shall they have any respite. Our Version is to be understood as saying,—None of the people shall be left; all shall be slain, or carried into captivity: nor shall any of theirs, their princes, priests, wives, children, escape. And, so deserved shall their desolation appear, that none shall lament them. This may be as good a sense as any, and it is nearest to the letter.

Verse 12. Let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn] Such is now the state of public affairs that he, who through want has been obliged to sell his inheritance, need not mourn on the account; as of this the enemy would soon have deprived him. And he who has bought it need not rejoice in his bargain, as he shall soon be stripped of his purchase, and either fall by the sword, or be glad to flee for his life.

Verse 13. For the seller shall not return] In the sale of all heritages among the Jews it was always understood that the heritage must return to the family on the year of Jubilee, which was every fiftieth year; but in this case the seller should not return to possess it, as it was not likely that he should be alive when the next jubilee should come; and if he were even to live till that time, he could not possess it, as he would then be in captivity. And the reason is particularly given; for the vision,—the prophetic declaration of a seventy Verse 17. All knees shall be weak as water.] Calmet understands this curiously:—La frayeur dont on sera saisi, fera qu'on ne pourra retenir son urine. D'autres l'expliquent d'une autre soüillure plus honteuse. I believe him to be nearly about right. St. Jerom is exactly the same:—Pavoris magnitudine, urina polluet genua, nec valebit profluentes aquas vesica prohibere. This, and other malretentions, are often the natural effect of extreme fear or terror.

Verse 19. They shall cast their silver in the streets] Their riches can be of no use; as in a time of famine there is no necessary of life to be purchased, and gold and silver cannot fill their bowels.—It is the stumbling-block of their iniquity.] They loved riches, and placed in the possession of them their supreme happiness. But they have even taken its riches to make their idols, which they have brought into the very courts of the Lord's house; and therefore God hath set it (the Temple) from him,—given it up to pillage. Some say it means, they took their ornaments, which were their pride, and made them into images to worship.

Verse 22. The robbers shall enter into it] The Chaldeans shall not only destroy the city; but they shall enter the Temple, deface it, plunder it, and burn it to the ground.

How true is the saying,—Quem Deus vult perdere, prius dementat. "Those whom God designs to destroy, He first infatuates."

CHAPTER VIII.

Here begins a section of prophecy extending to the twelfth Chapter. In this Chapter the Prophet is carried in vision to Jerusalem, 1—4; and there shewn the idolatries committed by the rulers of the Jews, even within the Temple. In the beginning of this vision, by the noblest stretch of an inspired imagination, Idolatry itself is personified, and made an idol; and the image sublimely called, from the provocation it gave God, the IMAGE OF JEALOUSY, 5. The Prophet then proceeds to describe the three principal superstitions of this unhappy people; the Ægyptian, 6—12, the Phœnician, 13, 14, and the Persian, 15, 16, giving the striking features of each; and concluding with a declaration of the heinousness of their sins in the sight of God, and the consequent greatness of their punishment, 17, 18.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VIII.

Verse 1. In the sixth year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month] This, according to Abp. Ussher, was the sixth year of Ezekiel's captivity. The sixth day of the fifth month of the ecclesiastical year, which answers to August, A. M. 3410.

This Chapter and the three following contain but one vision, of which I judge it necessary, with Calmet, to give a general idea, that the attention of the Reader may not be too much divided.

The prophet in the visions of God is carried to Jerusalem, to the northern gate of the Temple, which leads by the north side to the court of the priests. There he sees the glory of the Lord in the same manner as he did by the river Chebar. At one side he sees the image of jealousy. Going thence to the court of the people he sees, through an opening in the wall, seventy elders of the people who were worshipping all sorts of beasts and reptiles, which were painted on the wall. Being brought thence to the door of the gate of the house, he saw women weeping for Tammuz, or Adonis. As he returned to the court of the priests, between the porch and the altar, he saw twenty-five men with their backs to the sanctuary and their faces towards the east, worshipping the rising sun. This is the substance of the vision contained in the eighth Chapter.

About the same time he saw six men come from the higher gate with swords in their hands; and, among them, one with an ink-horn. Then the Divine Presence left the cherubim, the appearance of his loins even downward, fire; and from his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, [a] as the colour of amber.

3 And he [b] put forth the form of a hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and [c] the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and [d] brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north; [e] where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which [f] provoketh to jealousy.

4 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I [g] saw in the plain.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

5 Then said he unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold northward at the gate of the altar this image of jealousy in the entry.

6 He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary? but and took post at the entrance of the Temple, and gave orders to the man with the ink-horn to put a mark on the foreheads of those who sighed and prayed because of the abominations of the land; and then commanded the men with the swords to go forward and slay every person who had not this mark. The prophet, being left alone among the dead, fell on his face, and made intercession for the people. The Lord gives him the reason of His conduct; and the man with the ink-horn returns, and reports to the Lord what was done. These are the general contents of the ninth Chapter.

The Lord commands the same person to go in between the wheels of the cherubim; and take his hand full of live coals, and scatter them over the city. He went as commanded; and one of the cherubim gave him the live coals: at the same time the glory of the Lord, that had removed to the threshold of the house, now returned, and stood over the cherubim. The cherubim, wheels, wings, &c., are here described as in the first Chapter. This is the substance of the tenth Chapter.

The prophet then finds himself transported to the east gate of the Temple, where he saw twenty-five men, and among them Jaazaniah the son of Azur, and Pelatiah the son of Benaiah, princes of the people; against whom the Lord commands him to prophesy, and to threaten them with the utmost calamities, because of their crimes. Afterwards, God Himself speaks; and shews that the Jews who should be left in the land should be driven out because of their iniquities; and that those who had been led captive, and who acknowledged their sins and repented of them, should be restored to their own land. Then the glory of the Lord arose out of the city, and rested for a time on one of the mountains on the east of Jerusalem, and the prophet being carried in vision by the Spirit to Chaldea, lost sight of the chariot of the Divine glory, and began to shew to the Captivity what the Lord had shewn to him. This is the substance of the eleventh Chapter.

We may see from all this what induced the Lord to abandon His people, His city, and His temple:—the abominations of the people in public and in private. But because those carried away captives with Jeconiah acknowledged their sins, and their hearts turned to the Lord, God informs them that they shall be brought back and restored to a happy state both in temporal and spiritual matters; while the others, who had filled up the measure of their iniquities, should be speedily brought into a state of desolation and ruin. This is the sum and intent of the vision in these four Chapters.

Verse 2. The appearance of fire] See the Note on chap. i, 27.

Verse 3. The image of jealousy] סמל הקנאה semel hakinah. We do not know certainly of what form, nor of what god, this was the image. Some say it was the image of Baal, which was placed in the Temple by Manasses;—others, that it was the image of Mars;—and others, that it was the image of Thammuz, or Adonis. Calmet supports this opinion by the following reasons:—1. The name agrees perfectly with him. He was represented as a beautiful youth, beloved by Venus; at which Mars, her paramour, being incensed and filled with jealousy, sent a large boar against Adonis, which killed him by his tusks. Hence, it was the image of him who fell a victim to jealousy. 2. The prophet being returned towards the northern gate, where he had seen the image of jealousy, ver. 14, there saw the women lamenting for Thammuz. Now Thammuz, all agree, signifies Adonis: it was that, therefore, which was called the image of jealousy. 3. The Scripture often gives to the Heathen idols names of degradation; as Baal-zebub, god of flies; Baal-zebul, god of dung. It is likely that it was Adonis who is called The dead, Lev. xix, 27, 28, Deut. xiv, 9, because he was worshipped as one dead. And the women represented as worshipping him were probably adulteresses, and had suffered through the jealousy of their husbands. And this worship of the image of jealousy provoked God to jealousy, to destroy this bad people.

Verse 4. The vision that I saw in the plain.] See the Note on chap. iii, 23; see also chap. i, 3.

turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations.

7 And he brought me to the door of the court; and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall.

8 Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door.

9 And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here.

10 So I went in and saw; and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, pourtrayed upon the wall round about.

11 And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan, with every man his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

12 Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they say, [a] The LORD seeth us not; the LORD hath forsaken the earth.

13 He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and [b] thou shalt see greater abominations that they do.

14 Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the LORD's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz.

[a] Ch. 9. 9.

[b] Ver. 6, 15.

Verse 7. A hole in the wall.] This, we find, was not large enough to see what was doing within; and the prophet is directed to dig, and make it larger, ver. 8; and when he had done so and entered, he says,—

Verse 10. And saw—every form of creeping things] It is very likely that these images pourtrayed on the wall were the objects of Ægyptian adoration:—the ox, the ape, the dog, the crocodile, the ibis, the scarabæus or beetle, and various other things. It appears that these were privately worshipped by the Sanhedrin or great Jewish council, consisting of seventy or seventy-two persons, six chosen out of every tribe, as representatives of the people. The images were pourtrayed upon the wall as we find those ancient idols are on the walls of the tombs of the kings and nobles of Egypt. See the plates to Belzoni's Travels, the Isaic Tomb in the Bodleian Library, and the Ægyptian hieroglyphics in general. Virgil speaks of these, Æn. lib. viii.—

Omnigenumque Deûm monstra, et latrator Anubis.

"All kinds of gods, monsters, and barking dogs."

Verse 11. Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan] Shaphan was a scribe, or what some call comptroller of the Temple, in the days of Josiah; and Jaazaniah his son probably succeeded him in this office. He was at the head of this band of idolaters.

Verse 14. There sat women weeping for Tammuz.] This was Adonis, as we have already seen; and so the Vulgate here translates. My old MS. Bible reads,—There saten women, morynge a mawmete of lecherye that is cleped Adonydes. He is fabled to have been a beautiful youth beloved by Venus, and killed by a wild boar in mount Lebanon, whence springs the river Adonis which was fabled to run blood at his festival in August. The women of Phœnicia, Assyria, and Judea, worshipped him as dead, with deep lamentation, wearing priapi and other obscene images all the while; and they prostituted themselves in honour of this idol. Having for some time mourned him as dead, they then supposed him revivified, and broke out into the most extravagant rejoicings. Of the appearance of the river at this season Mr. Maundrel thus speaks:—"We had the good fortune to see what is the foundation of the opinion which Lucian relates, viz. that this stream at certain seasons of the year, especially about the feast of Adonis, is of a bloody colour, proceeding from a kind of sympathy, as the Heathens imagined, for the death of Adonis, who was killed by a wild boar in the mountain out of which this stream issues. Something like this we saw actually come to pass, for the water was stained to a surprising redness; and, as we observed in travelling, had stained the sea a great way into a reddish hue." This was no doubt occasioned by a red ochre, over which the river ran with violence at this time of its increase. Milton works all this up in these fine lines:—

"Thammuz came next behind,
Whose annual wound in Lebanon allured
The Syrian damsels to lament his fate,
In am'rous ditties, all a summer's day;
While smooth Adonis, from his native rock,
Ran purple to the sea, suffused with blood
Of Thammuz, yearly wounded. The love tale
Infected Sion's daughters with like heat:
Whose wanton passions in the sacred porch
Ezekiel saw, when, by the vision led,
His eye surveyed the dark idolatries
Of alienated Judah." Par. Lost, B. i, 446.

Thammuz signifies hidden, or obscure; and hence the worship of his image was in some secret place.

15 Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these.

16 And he brought me into the inner court of the LORD's house, and, behold, at the door of the temple of the LORD, [a] between the porch and the altar, [b] were about five and twenty men, [c] with their backs toward the temple of the LORD, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped [d] the sun toward the east.

17 Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? [e] Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have [f] filled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger: and, lo, they put the branch to their nose.

Verse 16. Five and twenty men] These most probably represented the twenty-four courses of the priests, with the high priest for the twenty-fifth. This was plainly the Persian worship; as their turning their faces to the east plainly shews they were worshipping the rising sun.

Verse 17. They put the branch to their nose.] This is supposed to mean some branch or branches, which they carried in succession in honour of the idol, and with which they covered their faces, or from which they inhaled a pleasant smell, the branches being odoriferous. That the Heathens carried branches of trees in their sacred ceremonies is well known to all persons acquainted with classic antiquity;—and it is probable that the Heathen borrowed those from the use of such branches in the Jewish feast of Tabernacles. There are many strange, and some filthy, interpretations given of this clause: but the former are not worth repeating, and I abominate the latter too much to submit to defile my paper with them.

It really seems that at this time the Jews had incorporated every species of idolatry in their impure worship,—Phœnician, Egyptian, and Persian. I might add that some imagine the image of jealousy to be a personification of idolatry itself.

CHAPTER IX.

The vision in this Chapter seems intended to denote the general destruction of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, excepting a few pious individuals that were distressed at the abominations that were committed in the land; who, in order to be delivered from the general calamity, were MARKED; in allusion, perhaps, to the custom of eastern princes, who marked their servants in the forehead; or, rather, to the custom very frequent among the Pagan worshippers of indelibly imprinting on different parts of their body the marks of their idols. To indicate, likewise, that God was soon to forsake the Temple, the Shechinah, or glorious symbol of His presence, is seen to remove from the inner sanctuary to the threshold or door of the Temple, 1—7. The Prophet intercedes for his people: but God, on account of the greatness of their sins, will not be intreated, 8—11.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IX.

Verse 1. Cause them that have charge over the city] By those six men with destroying weapons, the Chaldeans are represented, who had received commission to destroy the city; and, when the north is mentioned in such cases, Chaldea and the Chaldean armies are generally intended.

3 And [d] the glory of the God of Israel was gone up from the cherub, whereupon he was, to the threshold of the house. And he called to the man clothed with linen, which had the writer's ink-horn by his side;

4 And the LORD said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and [e] set [f] a mark upon the foreheads of the men [g] that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof.

5 And to the others he said in [h] mine hearing, Go ye after him through the city, and smite: [i] let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity:

6 [k] Slay [l] utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women: but [m] come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and [n] begin at my sanctuary. [o] Then they began at the ancient men which were before the house.

There appear to have been six men with a sort of slaughter-bills, and one man with an ink-horn. These may represent the seven counsellors of the eastern monarchs, who always saw the king's face, and knew all the secrets of the government. One of whom was that minister who had the office of reporting concerning criminals; who carried the book of death and the book of life into the presence of the king, where the names were entered of criminals who were destined to suffer; and of those who were either considered as innocent, or recommended to mercy; those of the former, in the book of death; those of the latter, in the book of life. This person with the ink-horn might be termed, in our phrase, the recorder.

Verse 2. Stood beside the brasen altar.] To signify, that the people against whom they had their commission were, for their crimes, to be sacrificed to the demands of Divine justice.

Verse 3. And he called to the man] The person here who called was that who sat on the chariot of the Divine glory. See chap i, 26.

Verse 4. Set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh] This is in allusion to the ancient everywhere used custom of setting marks on servants and slaves, to distinguish them from others. It was also common for the worshippers of particular idols, to have their idol's mark upon their foreheads, arms, &c. These are called sectarian marks to the present day among the Hindoos and others in India. Hence by this mark we can easily know who is a follower of Vishnoo, who of Siva, who of Brama, &c. The original words והתוית תו ve-hithtevita tau, have been translated by the Vulgate, et signa thau, "and mark thou tau on the foreheads, &c." St. Jerom and many others have thought that the letter tau was that which was ordered to be placed on the foreheads of those mourners; and Jerom says, that this Hebrew letter ת tau, was formerly written like a cross. So, then, the people were to be signed with the sign of the cross. It is certain that on the ancient Samaritan coins, which are yet extant, the letter ת tau is in this form + which is what we term St. Andrew's cross. The sense derived from this by many commentators is, that God having ordered those penitents to be marked with this figure, which is the sign of the cross, intimated that there is no redemption nor saving of life, but by the cross of Christ; and that this will avail none but the real penitent. All this is true in itself, but it is not true in respect to this place. The Hebrew words signify literally, thou shalt make a mark, or, sign a sign; but give no intimation what that mark or sign was. It was intended here, to be what the sprinkling of the blood of the Paschal Lamb on the lintels and door posts of the Israelites was; namely, a notice to the destroying angel, what house he should spare. As the whole of this matter only passed in vision, we are bound to neither letter, nor any other kind of figure. The symbolical action teaches us, that God, in general judgments, will make a distinction between the innocent and the guilty; between the penitent and the hardened sinner.

Verse 6. Begin at my sanctuary] Let those who have sinned against most mercy, and most privileges, be the first victims of justice. Those who know their Lord's will, and do it not, shall be beaten with many stripes. The unfaithful members of Christ's Church will be first visited, and most punished. But let not those who belong to the synagogue of Satan exult in this; for, if judgment begin at the house of God,—what will the end be of them who obey not the gospel! However, the truly penitent of all descriptions, in such cases shall be safe. The command of God is, Set a mark on all them that sigh and cry; and His command to the destroyers is, Come not near any man on whom is the mark.

Verse 7. Defile the house] A dreadful sentence. Let it

8 And it came to pass, while they were slaying them, and I was left, that I [a] fell upon my face, and cried, and said, [b] Ah Lord GOD! wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?

9 Then said he unto me, The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great, and [c] the land is [d] full of blood, and the city full of [e] perverseness: for they say, [f] The LORD hath forsaken the earth, and [g] the LORD seeth not.

10 And as for me also, mine [h] eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity, but [i] I will recompense their way upon their head.

11 And, behold, the man clothed with linen, which had the inkhorn by his side, [k] reported the matter, saying, I have done as thou hast commanded me.

be polluted, I will no more dwell in it; I now utterly forsake it.

Verse 8. Wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel, in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?] These destroyers had slain the seventy elders, the twenty-five adorers of the sun, and the women that mourned for Thammuz; and, on seeing this slaughter, the prophet fell on his face, and began to make intercession.

Verse 9. For they say, The LORD hath forsaken the earth] את הארץ et ha-arets, this land. He has no more place in Israel; He has quite abandoned it; He neither sees nor cares, and He can be no longer the Object of worship to any man in Israel. This seems to be the meaning; and God highly resents it, because it was bringing Him on a level with idols and provincial deities, who had, according to supposition, regency only in some one place.

Verse 10. Mine eye shall not spare] They say, the LORD seeth not: this is false; I have seen all their iniquities, and do see all their abominations; and I will bring deserved judgment upon them, and then that eye which now sees will not pity nor spare.

Verse 11. I have done as thou hast commanded me] Angels and men must all give account of their conduct to God; for although He is every where, and His eye sees all things; yet they must personally account for all that they have done. I have done as thou hast commanded me. — The penitents are all signed; the penitents are all safe. This is good news for them that mourn.

CHAPTER X.

The same august vision, which appeared to the Prophet at first, is repeated here; and coals of fire are scattered over the city to intimate that it was to be burned. The symbol of the Divine Presence is likewise represented as removing farther and farther from the Temple, to signify that God's protection was about to be withdrawn from it, 1—22. It may not be improper to remark that, whatever is particularly intended by the cherubim, wheels, firmament, throne, &c., described in this and the first Chapter, the Prophet several times informs us, (chap. i, 28, iii, 25, viii, 4, x, 4, 18,) that his vision was a manifestation, or similitude, of the GLORY of Jehovah; or, in other words, consisted of a set of hieroglyphics by which this glory was in some measure represented. It is also worthy of observation that the faces of the living creatures, of which we have an account in the fourth chapter of the Apocalypse, are precisely the same with those of Ezekiel's cherubim; and we may readily collect, (as Mr. Mede remarks,) the quarter of the heavens in which each cherub was situated in reference to the other three, from the consideration that as Ezekiel saw the vision proceeding from the NORTH, (see chap. i, 4, 10,) the human face of the cherubim was towards him, or the south; on his right hand, or the east, was the face of a lion; on his left hand, or the west, the face of an ox; and towards the north the face of an eagle.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

THEN I looked, and, behold, in the [a] firmament that was above the head of the cherubims there appeared over them as it were a sapphire stone, as the appearance of the likeness of a throne.

2 [b] And he spake unto the man clothed with linen, and said, Go in between the wheels, even under the cherub, and fill [c] thine hand with [d] coals of fire from between the cherubims, and [e] scatter them over the city. And he went in my sight.

3 Now the cherubims stood on the right side of the house, when the man went in; and [f] cloud filled the inner court.

4 [f] Then the glory of the LORD [g] went up from the cherub, and stood over the threshold of the house; and [h] the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the LORD's glory.

5 And the [i] sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the outer court, as [k] the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

6 And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubims; then he went in, and stood beside the wheels.

7 And one cherub [l] stretched forth his hand from between the cherubims unto the fire that was between the cherubims, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen: who took it, and went out.

8 [m] And there appeared in the cherubims, the form of a man's hand under their wings.

9 [n] And when I looked, behold the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a [o] beryl stone.

10 And as for their appearances, they four

NOTES ON CHAPTER X.

Verse 1. As it were a sapphire stone] See the note on chap. i, 22, 26.—The chariot, here mentioned by the prophet, was precisely the same as that which he saw at the river Chebar, as himself tells us, ver. 15; of which see the description in Chapter the First.

Verse 2. Coals of fire] These were to signify the burning of the city by the Chaldeans. It seems that the space between the four wheels, which was all on fire, was that from which those coals were taken.

Verse 3. On the right side of the house] The right hand always marked the south among the Hebrews.

Verse 4. The glory of the LORD went up] This is repeated from chap. ix, 3.

The house was filled with the cloud] This is a fact similar to what occurred frequently at the tabernacle in the wilderness, and in the dedication of the temple by Solomon. What is mentioned here, was the Divine Shekinah; the symbolical representation of the majesty of God.

Verse 5. As the voice of the Almighty God] That is, as thunder; for this was called the voice of God.

Verse 8. The form of a man's hand under their wings.] I am still of opinion, that the hands and wings were not distinct. The arms were feathered like wings, and the hand terminated the arm: but as the long front feathers of the wings would extend much beyond the fingers, hence the hands would appear to be under the wings. See on chap. i, 8. The human hand might be intended to shew, that God helps and punishes man by man; and that, in the general operations of His providence, he makes use of human agency.

Verse 9. The colour of a beryl stone.] אבן תרשיש eben tarshish, "the stone of Tarshish." The Vulgate translates it, chrysolith; Symmachus, the jacinct; the Septuagint, the carbuncle. In the parallel place, chap. i, 16, it is כעין תרשיש ke-êyn tarshish, like the eye of Tarshish;" i. e. the colour of tarshish, or the stone so called, which the Vulgate translates visio maris, "like the sea," i. e. azure. The beryl is a gem of a green colour; passing from one side into blue, on the other side into yellow. The chrysolith is also green, what is called a pistachio green: but the chrysolith of the ancients was our topaz, which is of a fine wine yellow. The beryl, or chrysolith, is most likely what is here meant by tarshish. One name among the ancients served for several kinds of gems, that were nearly of the same colour. The moderns go more by chemical characters, than by colour.

Verse 10. A wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.] It is difficult to comprehend this description. It is generally supposed to mean one wheel within another, cutting each other at right angles. This, in my opinion, will not account for the motions attributed to these wheels; nor can I see how, on this supposition, they could have any motion: for if one was moved on its axis, the other must be dragged contrary to its axis. I have conjectured it, rather to mean a wheel within a wheel; or a wheel with two rims, working on the same axis. See on chap. i, 16—18. It is, however, no matter of faith; and the Reader may judge as he thinks had one likeness, as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.

11 [a] When they went, they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went.

12 And their whole [b] body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and [c] the wheels, were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had.

13 As for the wheels, [d] it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel.

14 [e] And every one had four faces: the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle.

15 And the cherubims were lifted up. This is [f] the living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar.

16 [g] And when the cherubims went, the wheels went by them: and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them.

17 [h] When they stood, these stood: and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for the spirit [i] of the living creature was in them.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

18 Then [k] the glory of the LORD [l] departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims.

19 And [m] the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them, and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the LORD's house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

20 [n] This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel [o] by the river of Chebar; and I knew that they were the cherubims.

21 [p] Every one had four faces apiece, and every one four wings; [q] and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings.

22 And [r] the likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themselves: [s] they went every one straight forward.

proper. For other matters relative to this chariot, wheels, cherubim, wings, &c., I must refer to the notes on the first Chapter. And perhaps from the whole of this vision, and its difficulties, he will see the propriety of the council of Rabbins, ordering Rabbi Ananias three hundred barrels of oil, to light his lamp during the time it would be necessary for him to employ, in explaining this one vision.

Verse 13. As for the wheels, it was cried unto them—O wheel.] Never was there a more unfortunate and unmeaning translation. The word הגלגל ha-galgal, may signify, simply, the roller, or a chariot, or roll on, or the swift roller. And he clepide ilke wheelis volible, or turninge about.—Old MS. Bible. Any of these will do:—and as to the wheels, לאופנים le-ophanim, they were called in my hearing הגלגל ha-galgal, the chariot. The gentleman who took for his text "O wheel!" and made God's decree of eternal predestination out of it, must have borrowed some of Rabbi Ananias' three hundred barrels of oil? But such working of God's word cannot be too severely reprehended.

As these wheels are supposed to represent Divine Providence, bringing about the designs of the Most High; how like is the above הגלגל ha-galgal, taken as a verb, roll on, to those words of Virgil in his Pollio:—

> Talia sæcla suis dixerunt currite fusis,
> Concordes stabili fatorum numine Parcæ.
> "The Fates, when they this happy web have spun, > Shall bless the sacred clue, and bid it swiftly run."

Verse 14. The first—was the face of a cherub] In chap. i, 10, this is called the face of an ox; here, the face of a cherub: hence, a cherub was in the likeness of an ox; at least, as to its head. כרוב kerub, never occurs as a verb; and its meaning can not be precisely ascertained. Parkhurst thinks the כ caph to be here the note of similitude; and then translates כ ke, like, רב rab or רוב rob, the mighty one; and, in consequence, makes the cherubim an emblem of the Holy Trinity. See his lengthy Dissertation under כרב in his Hebrew and English Lexicon.

Verse 20. And I knew that they were the cherubims.] This formation of the plural is quite improper. In general, Hebrew nouns of the masculine gender end in ים im in the plural; the s, therefore, should never be added to such. Cherub is singular; cherubim, is plural. The s should be uniformly expunged.

I have already referred to the end of this Chapter for farther information relative to this glorious chariot of Jehovah: but I must say that I have met with nothing on the subject that entirely satisfies myself. In the preceding notes I have endeavoured to make the literal meaning as plain as possible; and have occasionally given some intimations relative to the general design of this sublime vision.

My readers are already apprized, that I do not like conjectures on Divine things; many points that had originally no other origin, are now incorporated with creeds, of which it is deemed sinful to doubt. Because some learned and pious men have written to prove that this symbolical compound figure is a representation of the Holy Trinity; therefore, the sentiment now passes current. Now this is not proved; and I suppose never can be proved. The continuator of the Historical Discourses of Saurin has made some sensible remarks on the subject of this vision; and these I shall lay here before the intelligent Reader. They deserve attention.

This intelligent writer observes:—"For the right interpretation of this vision the following rules should be laid down:—

"The first rule is this:—An explanation, which accounts for all the parts contained in the vision, is much more probable than those which explain only one part.

"The second is this:—An explanation which is conformable to the present circumstances of the prophet, and of the people to whom he is sent, as well as to the nature of the things which he is called upon to say to them, is incomparably more probable than those explanations which go in quest of past or future events, which have no connexion with the immediate circumstances of the prophet, nor with the end of his mission. These rules, which appear incontestible, being laid down, we observe, that their opinion who think that God here draws out a plan of the government of His providence, applied to the present state of the Jews, accounts for all that Ezekiel saw; and that in a manner which refers to the end of the prophet's mission, and all that he had to say to this rebellious people. Why wish God to represent to His prophet the future state of the Christian church, which was not to be founded till after a series of time, rather than the state of the Jewish church, and the chastisements which hung over the heads of that hardened people. The people having revolted from God, and persevering obstinately in that revolt, notwithstanding the menaces of the prophet; it was proper to shew to Ezekiel, in order that he might declare it to the rebellious; that Providence had its eyes open to all that had been done, all that had hitherto happened; and that it had seized upon the rod to smite. The people imagined, but too much according to the errors of infidelity, that God saw every thing with indifference; and had given the world up to chance. It was necessary therefore to divest them of these fatal prejudices; and to teach them that the Supreme Being did not behold with the same eye order and disorder, contempt of His laws and submission to His will; and that all the revolutions of states are directed by a superior intelligence, which cannot be imposed upon. The Jewish people imagined but too much, that the prophets exaggerated when they threatened them with the severest chastisements. They repeated with emphasis and complacency the promises of God made to the patriarchs; that their posterity should not only be more numerous than the stars of heaven, and the sand which covers the sea-shore; but that it should subsist for ever and ever. God had declared to Abraham, I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and thy seed after thee, Gen. xvii, 7. It was proper therefore to shew this stiff-necked people, that the threatenings of God, and His promises, were not contradictory. That the people, conformable to the promises given by God to the patriarchs, should not be destroyed: but that notwithstanding, they should be severely chastised, to correct them for their propensity to idolatry, and their scandalous irregularities.

"These suppositions, which are reasonable, being granted, we shall have no difficulty to perceive the sense of this celebrated vision. We shall not follow the order observed by Ezekiel, in the description of what he saw: he raises himself from the nearest to the most distant objects, going back from effects to their general cause. We will begin with the First Cause which gives motion to all that happens, traces out the plan, and procures the execution, according to the rules of His ineffable wisdom, and agreeable to the nature of those creatures which are the object of His agency. Next, we will proceed to consider the effects of this universal Providence, and the intelligent secondary causes which He frequently employs in the administration of the government of the universe.

"Ezekiel saw a firmament which was above the heads of the animals: there was the resemblance of a throne like a sapphire stone; and over the resemblance of the throne, there was, as it were, the resemblance of a man. This vast transparent firmament represents to us the heaven, the peculiar residence of the Lord of the earth; and where He hath established the throne of His empire. This appearance of a man was the emblem of Providence, or God; considered as taking care of all the creatures whom He hath made. Man is the symbol of intelligence. The mind of man, with respect to his knowledge and wisdom, is a weak sketch of that Mind which knows all things, and whose wisdom is unbounded. And yet, of all sublunary beings, there is none that approaches so near to the Divine nature as man. Under this emblem also it is that God, considered as seeing all things, and directing all, would be represented. This resemblance of man, was seated upon a throne, to shew that God governs all things as Lord; and that without agitation, and without labour.

"The shining metal, and the fire which surrounded Him who sat on the throne, were the symbol of His glory and His judgments, which are poured upon the wicked as a fire, which nothing can withstand; agreeably to Isaiah, chap. xxxiii, 14.

"The Jews acknowledged that there was a Providence which governs the whole universe with infinite wisdom. The Psalmist gives us a description of it, equally just and pathetic, in Psa. civ, 27, &c. Christians, no less than Jews, admit this important truth; and the gospel establishes it no less strongly than the law. See Matt. vi, 26; x, 29, 30. To raise the mind of the prophet up to the first Mover of those events, which strike and admonish us in all the revolutions which happen to individuals, families, and states, God shews him four wheels above the firmament, over which the emblem of Providence was placed on a throne. These wheels are a symbol of those perpetual revolutions, which are observed in the earth; and which, by turns, lift up and abase individuals and nations. They are of a prodigious height, to shew that man cannot fathom or know all that is great, wonderful, and astonishing, in the ways of Providence. See Job xi, 7, 8. Rom. xi, 33, 34. Isa. lv, 8, 9. These wheels move themselves every way, and are full of eyes in the vast circle of their felloes. This shews, that all which God does He effects without pain; and that the eye of His wisdom ordereth all events. The wheels did not move of themselves: but they followed the impulse of the four living creatures; when the living creatures went, they went. This shews, that, in the government of the world, all the living creatures are subject to Providence; and that God subordinates the creatures one to another. He directs what those holy intelligences ought to do, who serve Him as ministers, and are here represented by the four animals. And these intelligences, enlightened and supported by the Supreme Wisdom, contribute, as far as is suitable, to all that happens to mankind. The angels whom Ezekiel saw were in number four, in reference to the four cardinal points of the world; to shew that their ministry extends every where, and that there is no part of the universe which the Providence of God does not govern in an immediate manner, or by the means of His ministers. The extraordinary shape of these angels, which appeared to the prophet in vision, is symbolical; for it is not to be supposed that those heavenly ministers are really thus formed. The four faces, wings, and arms of a man, denote the sublime qualities of these immediate ministers of the Deity; qualities entirely essential to fill up the extent of their duty. The face of a man, denotes their intelligence; of a lion their intrepid courage; of an ox their patience and perseverance in labour; and of an eagle their great penetration, their sublime sight into heavenly things, and their readiness to rise up into all that is great and divine. The wings being stretched out, signify that they are always ready to set forward, and run with rapidity wherever the commands of their great Master call them. The wings bent down, are a symbol of that profound respect in which these heavenly ministers stand before the Lord of the universe. Under the wings there were men's arms, to shew that zeal produces application and labour. Labour, without zeal, can never be supported; and zeal, without application, is only a hypocritical ardour, which amounts to nothing with that supreme Master who requires sincere homage from those who serve Him. If God chose to make known to Ezekiel that His providence extends to all things, and that even in this life it often takes up the rod to chastise nations and individuals, He would also shew beforehand that He wished not the destruction of the Jewish people, whom he was about to visit in His anger, but only its correction and amendment. This is signified by the precious metal, which the prophet found unmelted in the midst of the fiery cloud. This cloud of fire urged on by a whirlwind, and involving on all sides the metal, represented the judgments of God, which were about to fall upon this rebellious nation; not to destroy, but to humble and purify it. Nothing is more proper than afflictions, to bring men back to their duty. As fire purifies metals; so the paternal chastisements of God have a tendency to purify the soul and heart, if the man be not entirely incorrigible. The people upon whom God was about to pour the vials of His anger, were not worthy of His lenity. But that great God, who is firm in His promises, remembers the covenant of peace He had made with the patriarchs. This covenant is made sensible to the prophet under the image of a rainbow, which was round about Him who appeared upon the throne. Every one knows, that this splendid phænomenon, which seems to join heaven and earth together, was given to Noah and his posterity as a symbol of the covenant which God then made with mankind, and by which He declared to them that the earth should undergo deluge no more. Thus, the Pagans considered the Iris as the messenger of the gods. See Virgil, Æn. lib. iv, ver. 694. But, whereas the rainbow to the Jews was a symbol of peace, the Iris of the Pagans was a messenger of trouble. On the sight of this bow, the symbol of grace, Ezekiel was to be encouraged; and persuaded that his people were not threatened with an utter destruction. The event fully justified all that the prophet had contemplated, with surprise, in this enigmatical picture. The Chaldeans, the rod of the Lord's just severity, ravaged Judea; the people were carried away captive; they groaned for seventy years in a foreign land; but they were protected in a miraculous manner against the bloody designs of a cruel Haman; and at length, favoured with various decrees of the kings of Persia, they had permission not only to return to their own country, but also to rebuild Jerusalem and the Temple." See Dr. Dodd's notes on this place.

CHAPTER XI.

This Chapter denounces the judgments of God against those wicked persons who remained in Jerusalem, and made a mock of the types and predictions of the prophets, 1—13; compare verse 3, with Jer. i, 13. God promises to favour those who were gone into captivity, and intimates their restoration from the Babylonish yoke, 14—21.

Then the Shekinah, or symbol of the Divine presence, is represented as forsaking the city, as in the foregoing Chapter it did the temple, 22, 23; and the Prophet returns in vision to the place from which he set out (chap. viii, 1, &c.,) in order to communicate his instructions to his brethren of the captivity, 24, 25.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XI.

Verse 1. At the door of the gate five and twenty men] The same persons no doubt who appear chap. viii, 16, worshipping the sun.

Jaazaniah the son of Azur] In chap. viii, 16, we find a Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan. If Shaphan was also called Azur, they may be the same person. But it is most likely that there were two of this name, and both chiefs among the people.

Verse 3. It is not near] i. e. The threatened invasion.

This city is the caldron, and we be the flesh.] See the vision of the seething-pot, Jer. i, 13. These infidels seem to say:—"We will run all risks, we will abide in the city. Though it be the caldron and we the flesh, yet we will share its fate: if it perish, we will perish with it." Or they may allude to the above prediction of Jeremiah, in order to ridicule it:—"We were to have been boiled long ago: but the fulfilment of that prediction is not near yet."

Verse 7. Your slain—they are the flesh] Jerusalem is the caldron, and those who have been slain in it they are the flesh; and though ye purpose to stay and share its fate, ye shall not be permitted to do so; ye shall be carried into captivity.

Verse 9. And deliver you into the hands of strangers] This seems to refer chiefly to Zedekiah and his family.

Verse 11. I will judge you in the border of Israel.] Though Riblah was in Syria, yet it was on the very frontiers of Israel; and it was here that Zedekiah's sons were slain, and his own eyes put out.

Verse 13. Pelatiah the son of Benaiah died.] Most probably he was struck dead the very hour in which Ezekiel prophesied against him. His death appears to have resembled that of Ananias and Sapphira, Acts v, 1, &c.

Verse 15. Get you far from the LORD] These are the words of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, against those of Israel who had been carried away to Babylon with Jecothren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get you far from the LORD: unto us is this land given in possession.

16 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, [a] yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come.

17 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; [b] I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel.

18 And they shall come thither, and [c] they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence.

19 And [d] I will give them one heart, and I will put [e] a new spirit within you; and I will take [f] the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them a heart of flesh:

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

20 [g] That they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: [h] and they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

21 But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, [i] I will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord GOD.

22 Then did the cherubims [k] lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

23 And [l] the glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city, and stood [m] upon the mountain [n] which is on the east side of the city.

24 Afterwards [o] the spirit took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit of God into Chaldea, to them of the captivity. So the vision that I had seen went up from me.

25 Then I spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the LORD had shewed me.

niah. Go ye far from the LORD: but as for us, the land of Israel is given to us for a possession; we shall never be removed from it, and they shall never return to it.

Verse 16. Yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary] Though thus exiled from their own land, yet not forgotten by their God. While in their captivity, I will dispense many blessings to them; and I will restore them to their own land, ver. 17, from which they shall put away all idolatry, ver. 18.

Verse 19. And I will give them one heart] A whole system of renewed affections.

And I will put a new spirit within you] To direct and influence these new affections.

And I will take the stony heart out of their flesh] That which would not receive the impressions of my Spirit.

And I will give them a heart of flesh] One that is capable of receiving and retaining those impressions.

Verse 20. That they may walk in my statutes] The holiness of their lives shall prove the work of God upon their hearts. Then it shall appear that I am their God, because I have done such things in them, and for them; and their holy conduct shall shew that they are my people. See on chap. xxxvi, 25, &c.

Verse 21. But as for them whose heart walketh] Them whose affections are attached to idolatry, they shall have such rewards as their idols can give them; and such a recompense as Divine justice shall award them.

Verse 23. The glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city] This vision is no mean proof of the long suffering of God. He did not abandon this people all at once, He departed by little and little. FIRST, He left the temple. SECONDLY, He stopped a little at the gate of the city. THIRDLY, He departed entirely from the city, and went to the mount of Olives, which lay on the east side of the city. Having tarried there for some time to see if they would repent and turn to Him,—FOURTHLY, he departed to heaven. The vision being now concluded, the prophet is taken away by the Spirit of God into Chaldea; and there announces to the captive Israelites what God had shewed him in the preceding visions and the good that He had spoken concerning them; who, at first, did not seem to profit much by them, which the prophet severely reproves.

CHAPTER XII.

The Prophet proceeds, by a variety of types and parables, to convince those of the captivity that their brethren, who were left behind to sustain the miseries of a siege, and the insults of a conqueror, would be in a much worse condition than they who were already settled in a foreign land. In the beginning of this Chapter he foretels the approaching captivity of Judah by action instead of words, 1—7. He predicts particularly the flight, capture, captivity, and sufferings, of Zedekiah and his followers, 8—16, compared with Jer. lii, 11. He is to eat his food with trembling, and signs of terror, as an emblem of the consternation of the Jews when surrounded by their enemies, 17—20; and then he answers the objections and bye-words of scoffers and infidels, who either disbelieved his threatenings, or supposed the accomplishment of them very distant, 21—28. Josephus (Antq. xi, 10,) tells us that Zedekiah thought the prophecy of Ezekiel in the thirteenth verse inconsistent with that of Jeremiah, (chap. xxxiv, 3,) and resolved to believe neither. Both, however, were literally fulfilled; and the event convinced him that they were not irreconcileable. Thus, blinded by infidelity, sinners rush on to that destruction against which they are sufficiently warned.

THE word of the LORD also came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of [a] a rebellious house, which [b] have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: [c] for they are a rebellious house.

3 Therefore, thou son of man, prepare thee [d] stuff for removing, and remove by day in their sight; and thou shalt remove from thy place to another place in their sight: it may be they will consider, though they be a rebellious house.

4 Then shalt thou bring forth thy stuff by day in their sight, as stuff for removing: and thou shalt go forth at even in their sight, [e] as they that go forth into captivity.

5 [f] Dig thou through the wall in their sight, and carry out thereby.

6 In their sight shalt thou bear it upon thy shoulders, and carry it forth in the twilight: thou shalt cover thy face, that thou see not the ground: [g] for I have set thee for a sign unto the house of Israel.

7 And I did so as I was commanded: I brought forth my stuff by day, as stuff for captivity, and in the even I [h] digged through the wall with mine hand; I brought it forth in the twilight, and I bare it upon my shoulder in their sight.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

8 And in the morning came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, hath not the house of Israel, [i] the rebellious house, said unto thee, [k] What doest thou?

10 Say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; This [l] burden concerneth the prince in Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that are among them.

11 Say, [m] I am your sign: like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them: [n] they [o] shall remove and go into captivity.

12 And [p] the prince that is among them shall bear upon his shoulder in the twilight, and shall go forth: they shall dig through the wall to carry out thereby: he shall cover his face, that he see not the ground with his eyes.

13 My [q] net also will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare: and [r] I will bring

NOTES ON CHAPTER XII.

Verse 2. Which have eyes to see, and see not] It is not a want of grace that brings them to destruction. They have eyes to see, but they will not use them. No man is lost because he had not sufficient grace to save him, but because he abused that grace.

Verse 3. Prepare thee stuff for removing] Get carriages to transport thy goods to another place. Signifying by this the captivity that was at hand.

Verse 5. Dig thou through the wall] This refers to the manner in which Zedekiah and his family would escape from the city. They escaped by night, through a breach in the wall. See Jer. xxxix, 2—4, and 2 Kings xxv, 4.

Verse 6. Thou shalt cover thy face, that thou see not the ground] Referring to the blinding of Zedekiah:—even the covering of the face might be intended to signify that in this way Zedekiah should be carried to Babylon upon men's shoulders, in some sort of palanquin, with a cloth tied over his eyes, because of the recent wounds made by extracting them. All the prophecies from this to the twentieth Chapter are supposed to have been delivered in the sixth year of Zedekiah, five years before the taking of Jerusalem. How accurate the prediction! and how exactly fulfilled!

Verse 10. This burden] This prediction concerning the prince. By this I point out the capture, misery, and ruin, of Zedekiah.

Verse 13. I will bring him to Babylon—yet shall he not see it] Because Nebuchadnezzar caused him to have his him to Babylon to the land of the Chaldeans; yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there.

14 And [a] I will scatter toward every wind all that are about him to help him, and all his bands; and [b] I will draw out the sword after them.

15 [c] And they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall scatter them among the nations, and disperse them in the countries.

16 [d] But I will leave [e] a few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence; that they may declare all their abominations among the heathen whither they come; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

17 Moreover the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

18 Son of man, [f] eat thy bread with quaking, and drink thy water with trembling and with carefulness;

19 And say unto the people of the land, Thus saith the Lord GOD of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel; They shall eat their bread with carefulness, and drink their water with astonishment, that her land may [g] be desolate from [h] all that is therein, [i] because of the violence of all them that dwell therein.

20 And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and the land shall be desolate; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

21 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

22 Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, [k] The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?

23 Tell them therefore, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel; but say unto them, [l] The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision.

24 For [m] there shall be no more any [n] vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel.

25 For I am the LORD: I will speak, and [o] the word that I shall speak shall come to pass; it shall be no more prolonged: for in your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord GOD.

26 Again the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

27 [p] Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is [q] for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off.

28 [r] Therefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith the Lord GOD.

eyes extracted at Riblah. To Babylon he was carried in his blind state, and there he died. In saying My net also will I spread upon him, there is probably a reference to an ancient manner of fighting. One, who was called the retiarius, had a small casting net, which, if he could throw over his antagonist's head, he then despatched him with his sword; if he missed his throw, he was obliged to run, in order to get his net once more adjusted for another throw. In the meantime the other pursued him with all his speed to prevent this, and to despatch him; hence, he was called Secutor:—the first, the netman; the second, the pursuer.

Verse 18. Eat thy bread with quaking] Assume the manner of a person who is every moment afraid of his life;—who has nothing but a morsel of bread to eat, and a little water to drink. Thus signifying the siege, and the straits to which they should be reduced. See this explained ver. 19.

Verse 22. The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?] These are the words of the infidels and scoffers, who, because vengeance was not speedily executed on an evil work, set their heart to do iniquity. These predictions either will not come in our days, or will wholly fail;—why then should we disquiet ourselves about them? Strange, that the very means used by the most gracious God to bring sinners to repentance, should be made by them the very instruments of their own destruction! See 2 Pet. iii, 4.

Verse 23. The days are at hand] Far from failing, or being prolonged;—time is posting on, and the destruction threatened is at the door.

Verse 25. In your days—will I say the word, and will perform it] Even these mockers shall live to see and feel this desolation. This is more particularly intimated in the following verses.

Verse 28. There shall none of my words be prolonged any more] He had waited to be gracious; they abused His mercy; and, at last, the protracted wrath rushed upon them, with irresistible force.

CHAPTER XIII.

This Chapter denounces heavy judgments against lying prophets who flattered the people, in the midst of their sin and danger, with false hopes of peace and security, 1—9. The work of these deceivers is beautifully compared to a frail and insufficient piece of building, which can never stand against the battering elements of heaven (the Chaldean forces) which God will commission against it, 10—16. In the remaining part of the Chapter woes are denounced against false prophetesses who practised vain rites and divinations, with the view of promoting their own gain by deceiving the people, 17—23.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto [a] them [b] that prophesy out of their own [c] hearts, Hear ye the word of the LORD;

3 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Woe unto the foolish prophets, that [d] follow their own spirit, [e] and have seen nothing!

4 O Israel, thy prophets are [f] like the foxes in the deserts.

5 Ye [g] have not gone up into the [h] gaps, neither [i] made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle in the day of the LORD.

6 [k] They have seen vanity and lying divination, saying, The LORD saith: and the LORD hath not sent them: and they have made others to hope that they would confirm the word.

7 Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination, whereas ye say, The LORD saith it; albeit I have not spoken?

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord GOD.

9 And mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies: they shall not be in the [l] assembly of my people, [m] neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel, [n] neither shall they enter into the land of Israel; [o] and ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

10 Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, [p] Peace; and there was no peace; and one built up [q] a wall, and, lo,

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIII.

Verse 2. That prophesy out of their own hearts] Who are neither inspired nor sent by ME. Who either go of themselves, or are sent by man. Such prophets, ministers, preachers, and clergy, have been a curse to the church and to the world for some thousands of years.

Verse 4. Thy prophets are like the foxes in the deserts.] The cunning of the fox in obtaining his prey has been long proverbial. These false prophets are represented as the foxes who, having got their prey by great subtilty, run to the desert to hide both themselves and it. So, the false prophets, when the event did not answer to their prediction, got out of the way, that they might not be overwhelmed with the reproaches and indignation of the people.

Verse 5. Ye have not gone up into the gaps] Far from opposing sinners, who are bringing down the wrath of God upon the place, you prevent their repentance by your flattering promises and false predictions. Ye have neither by prayers, example, nor advice, contributed any thing for the preservation of the place, or the salvation of the peoples' souls.

Verse 9. They shall not be in the assembly of my people] They shall not be reputed members of my church. They shall not be reckoned in the genealogy of true Israelites that return from captivity; and they shall never have a possession in the land:—they shall be exhereditated and expatriated. They shall all perish in the siege, by the sword, the famine, and the pestilence.

Verse 10. One built up a wall] A true prophet is as a wall of defence to the people. These false prophets pretend to be a wall of defence: but their wall is bad, and their morter is worse. One gives a lying vision, another pledges himself that it is true; and the people believe what they say, and trust not in God, nor turn from their sins. The city is about to be besieged: it needs stronger fortifications than what it possesses. The prophet should be as a brazen wall for its defence;—and such my prophets would have been, had the people received the word from my mouth.

others [a] daubed it with untempered morter:

11 Say unto them which daub it with untempered morter, that it shall fall: [b] there shall be an overflowing shower; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall; and a stormy wind shall rend it.

12 Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it?

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury; and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and great hailstones in my fury to consume it.

14 So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered morter, and bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

15 Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon them that have daubed it with untempered morter, and will say unto you, The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it;

16 To wit, the prophets of Israel which prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which [d] see visions of peace for her, and there is no peace, saith the Lord GOD.

17 Likewise, thou son of man, [e] set thy face against the daughters of thy people, [f] which prophesy out of their own heart; and prophesy thou against them.

18 And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Woe to the women that sew pillows to all [g] armholes, and make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature to hunt souls! Will ye [h] hunt the souls of my people, and will ye save the souls alive that come unto you?

19 And will ye pollute me among my people [i] for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by

But ye have prevented this by your lying vanities;—and, when you have perverted the people, you pretend to raise up a rampart of specious prophecy, full of fine promises, for their defence. What one false prophet says, another confirms: and this is like daubing over a bad wall with bad morter, to prevent its blemishes and weaknesses being discovered.

Verse 11. There shall be an overflowing shower] That shall wash off this bad morter; sweep away the ground on which the wall stands, and level it with the earth. In the eastern countries, where the walls are built with unbaked bricks, desolations of this kind are often occasioned by tempestuous rains. Of this sort of materials were the walls of ancient cities made; and hence the reason why no vestige of them remains. Witness Babylon, which was thus built.

Verse 17. Set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophesy] From this it appears that there were prophetesses in the land of Israel, that were really inspired by the Lord: for, as a false religion necessarily implies a true one, of which it is the ape! so false prophetesses necessarily imply true ones, whom they endeavoured to imitate.

That there were true prophetesses among the Jews is evident enough from such being mentioned in the Sacred Writings. Miriam, the sister of Moses, Exod. xv, 20. Numb. xii, 2;—Deborah, Judg. iv, 4;—Huldah, 2 Kings xxii, 14;—Anna, the daughter of Phanuel, Luke ii, 36;—the four daughters of Philip the deacon, Acts xxi, 9.

Calmet observes, that there was scarcely a heresy in the primitive church that was not supported and fomented by seducing women.

Verse 18. That sew pillows to all armholes] I believe this refers to those cushions which are so copiously provided in the eastern countries for the apartments of women; on which they sit, lean, rest their heads, and prop up their arms. I have several drawings of Eastern ladies, who are represented on sofas; and often with their arm thrown over a pillow, which is thereby pressed close to their side, and against which they thus recline. The prophet's discourse seems to point out that state of softness and effeminacy to which the predictions of those false prophetesses allured the inhabitants of Jerusalem. A careless voluptuous life is that which is here particularly reprehended.

And make kerchiefs] The word kerchief is French; couvre chef, that which covers the head: hence, handkerchief and neck handkerchief, and pocket handkerchief, are pitifully improper; because none of them is used to COVER the HEAD, from which alone that article of dress has its name. But what are we to understand by kerchiefs here? Probably some kind of ornamental dress which rendered women more enticing, so that they could the more successfully hunt or inveigle souls, (men) into the worship of their false gods. These they put on heads of every stature, women of all ages, קומה komah, of every woman that rose up to inveigle men to idolatry.

The word מספחות mispechoth, translated here kerchiefs, and by the Vulgate cervicalia, bolsters, Calmet contends, your lying to my people that hear your lies?

20 Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against your pillows, wherewith ye there hunt the souls [a] to make them fly, and I will tear them from your arms, and will let the souls go, even the souls that ye hunt to make them fly.

21 Your kerchiefs also will I tear, and deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; [b] and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

22 Because with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and [c] strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, [d] by [e] promising him life:

23 Therefore [f] ye shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations: for I will deliver my people out of your hand: [g] and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

[a] Or, into gardens.——[b] Ver. 9.——[c] Jer. 23. 14.——[d] Or, that I should save his life.

means a sort of nets used in hunting, and in every place where it occurs it will bear this meaning; and hence the use to which it is here said to be applied, to hunt souls.

Verse 20. The souls that ye hunt to make them fly.] לפרחות le-porechoth, into the flower gardens, says Parkhurst. These false prophetesses decoyed men into these gardens, where probably some impure rites of worship were performed, as in that of אשרה Asherah or Venus. See Parkhurst under פרח.

Verse 21. Your kerchiefs] Nets, or amulets, as some.

Verse 22. With lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad] Here is the ministry of these false prophetesses, and its effects. They told lies: they would speak, and they had no truth to tell: and therefore spoke falsities. They saddened the souls of the righteous, and strengthened the hands of the wicked. They promised them life, and prevented them from repenting and turning from their sins.

Verse 23. Ye shall see no more vanity] They pretended visions: but they were empty of reality.

Nor divine divinations] As GOD would not speak to them, they employed dæmons. Where God is not, because of the iniquity of the people, the devil is, to strengthen and support that iniquity. And if he cannot have his priests, he will have his priestesses; and these will have a church like themselves, full of lying doctrines, and bad works.

CHAPTER XIV.

Here God threatens those hypocrites who pretended to worship Him, while they loved and practised idolatry, 1—11. He declares His irreversible purpose of punishing so guilty a nation, in behalf of which no intercession of the people of God shall be of any avail. The gross idolaters of Jerusalem and Judah, shall be visited with God's four sore judgments,—famine, 12—14; wild beasts, 15, 16; the sword, 17, 18; and pestilence, 19—21. A remnant shall be delivered from the wrath coming upon the whole land, 22, 23.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIV.

Verse 1. Then came certain of the elders of Israel unto me] These probably came to tempt him, or get him to say something that would embroil him with the government. They were bad men, as we shall see in the third verse.

Verse 3. These men have set up their idols in their heart] Not only in their houses,—in the streets;—but they had them in their hearts. These were stumbling-blocks of iniquity; they fell over them, and broke the neck of their souls. And should God be enquired of by such miscreants as these?

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

4 Therefore speak unto them, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet; I the LORD will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his idols:

5 That I may take the house of Israel in their own heart, because they are all estranged from me through their idols.

6 Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Repent, and turn [a] yourselves from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations.

7 For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to a prophet to enquire of him concerning me; I the LORD will answer him by myself:

8 And [b] I will set my face against that man, and will make him a [c] sign and a proverb, and I will cut him off from the midst of my people; [d] and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

9 And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I the LORD [e] have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel.

10 And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity: the punishment of the prophet shall be even as the punishment of him that seeketh unto him;

11 That the house of Israel may [f] go no more astray from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; [g] but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the Lord GOD.

12 The word of the LORD came again to me, saying,

13 Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the [h] staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast from it:

Verse 4. According to the multitude of his idols] I will treat him as an idolater; as a flagrant idolater.

Verse 7. And cometh to a prophet] Generally supposed to mean a false prophet.

I the LORD will answer him by myself] I shall discover to him, by my own true prophet, what shall be the fruit of his ways. So, while their false prophets were assuring them of peace and prosperity, God's prophets were predicting the calamities that afterwards fell upon them. Yet they believed the false prophets, in preference to the true. Ahab, about to engage with the Syrians, who had possession of Ramoth-Gilead, asked Micaiah, the prophet of the Lord, concerning the event; who told him he should lose the battle. He then enquired of Zedekiah a false prophet, who promised him a glorious victory. Ahab believed the latter, marched against the enemy, was routed, and slain in the battle, 1 Kings xxii, 10, &c.

Verse 9. I the LORD have deceived that prophet] That is, he ran before he was sent; he willingly became the servant of Satan's illusions; and I suffered this to take place, because he and his followers refused to consult and serve me. I have often had occasion to remark that it is common, in the Hebrew language, to state a thing as done by the Lord, which He only suffers or permits to be done: for so absolute and universal is the government of God, that the smallest occurrence cannot take place without His will or permission.

Verse 10. The punishment of the prophet] They are both equally guilty; both have left the Lord, and both shall be equally punished.

Verse 13. By trespassing grievously] Having been frequently warned, and refused to leave their sin, and so filled up the measure of their iniquity.

Verse 14. Though—Noah, Daniel, and Job] The intercession even of the holiest of men shall not avert my judgments. Noah, though a righteous man, could not by his intercession preserve the old world from being drowned. Job, though a righteous man, could not preserve his children from being killed by the fall of their house. Daniel, though a righteous man, could not prevent the captivity of his country. Daniel must have been contemporary with Ezekiel. He was taken captive in the third year of Jehoiakim, Dan. i, 1. After this Jehoiakim reigned eight years, 2 Kings xxiii, 36. And this prophecy, as appears from chap. viii, 1, was uttered in the sixth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, who succeeded Jehoiakim, and reigned only three months, 2 Kings xxiv, 6, 8. Therefore, at this time, Daniel had been fourteen years in captivity.—See Newcome. Even at this time he and Job, were in it, they should deliver but their own souls [a] by their righteousness, saith the Lord GOD.

15 If I cause [b] noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they [c] spoil it, so that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts:

16 [d] Though these three men were [e] in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only shall be delivered, but the land shall be desolate.

17 Or if [f] I bring a sword upon that land, and say, Sword, go through the land; so that I [g] cut off man and beast from it.

18 [h] Though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, but they only shall be delivered themselves.

19 Or if I send [i] a pestilence into that land, and [k] pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast:

20 [l] Though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall but deliver their own souls by their righteousness.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

21 For thus saith the Lord GOD; [m] How much more when [n] I send my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast?

22 [o] Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters: behold, they shall come forth unto you, and [p] ye shall see their way and their doings: and ye shall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it.

23 And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings: and ye shall know that I have not done [q] without cause all that I have done in it, saith the Lord GOD.

had gained much public celebrity. From this account we may infer, that Job was as real a person as Noah or Daniel; and of their identity no man has pretended to doubt. When God, as above, has determined to punish a nation, no intercession shall avail. Personal holiness alone can prevent these evils: but the holiness of any man can only avail for himself.

Verse 21. My four sore judgments] SWORD, war. FAMINE, occasioned by drought. PESTILENCE, epidemic diseases which sweep off a great part of the inhabitants of a land. The NOISOME BEAST, the multiplication of wild beasts in consequence of the general destruction of the inhabitants.

Verse 22. Behold they shall come forth unto you] Though there shall be great desolations in the land of Judea, yet a remnant shall be left that shall come here also as captives; and their account of the abominations of the people shall prove to you, with what propriety I have acted in abandoning them to such general destruction. This speech is addressed to those who were already in captivity; i. e. those who had been led to Babylon with their king Jeconiah.

Verse 23. Ye shall know that I have not done without cause] There is no part of the conduct of God towards man, that is not dictated by the purest principles of justice, equity, and truth. He does nothing but what is right; and whatever is right to be done, that ought to be done. In God's justice, there is no severity; in God's mercy, there is no caprice. He alone doth all things well; for He is the Fountain of justice and mercy.

CHAPTER XV.

The Jewish nation, about to be destroyed by the Chaldeans, compared to a barren vine which is fit for nothing but to be cast into the fire, 1—8.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, What is the vine tree more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest?

3 Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon?

4 Behold, [a] it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. [b] Is it meet for any work?

5 Behold, when it was whole, it was [c] meet for no work: how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned?

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; As the vine tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

7 And [d] I will set my face against them: [e] they shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them; [f] and ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I set my face against them.

8 And I will make the land desolate, because they have [g] committed a trespass, saith the Lord GOD.

[e] Isa. 24. 18.——[f] Ch. 6. 7. & 7. 4. & 11. 10. & 20. 38, 42, 44.——[g] Heb. trespassed a trespass.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XV.

Verse 2. What is the vine tree more than any tree] It is certain that the vine is esteemed only on account of its fruit. In some countries, it is true, it grows to a considerable size and thickness: but, even then, it is not of a sufficient density to work into furniture. But whatever may be said of the stock of the vine, it is the branch that the prophet speaks of here; and I scarcely know the branch of any tree in the forest more useless than is the branch of the vine. Out of it who can even make a pin to drive into a mud wall, to hang any vessel on? A vine would never be cultivated for the sake of its wood; it is really worthless, but as it bears fruit. What is Israel? Good for nothing, but as God influenced them to bring forth fruit to His glory. But now that they have ceased to be fruitful, they are good for nothing, but like a withered branch of the vine, to be burnt.

Verse 4. The fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned] Judea is like a vine branch thrown into the fire, which seizes on both the ends, and scorches the middle: so both the extremities of the land is wasted; and the middle, Jerusalem, is now threatened with a siege, and by and by will be totally destroyed.

Verse 6. Therefore thus saith the Lord] As surely as I have allotted such a vine branch, or vine branches, for fuel; so surely have I appointed the inhabitants of Jerusalem to be consumed.

The design of this parable is to abate the pride of the Jews; to shew them that, in their best estate, they had nothing but what they had received, and therefore deserved nothing; and now, having fallen from all righteousness, they can have no expectation of any thing but judgment unmixed with mercy.

Verse 7. They shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them] If they escape the sword, they shall perish by the famine; if they escape the famine, they shall be led away captives. To escape will be impossible. It will be to them according to the proverb:—

Incidit in Scyllam, cupiens vitare Charybdim.

"Out of the scald, into the flame."

Verse 8. They have committed a trespass] They have prevaricated; they are the worst of sinners, and shall have the heaviest of punishments. Can men suppose that it is possible to hide even their dark hearts from God?

CHAPTER XVI.

In this Chapter the mercy of God to Jerusalem (or the Jewish church and nation) is set forth by the emblem of a person that should take up an exposed infant, bring her up with great tenderness, and afterwards marry her, 1—14. She is then upbraided with her monstrous ingratitude in departing from the worship of God, and polluting herself with the idolatries of the nations around her, under the figure of a woman that proves false to a tender and indulgent husband, 15—52. But, notwithstanding these her heinous provocations, God promises, after she should suffer due correction, to restore her again to His favour, 53—63. The mode of describing apostasy from the true religion to the worship of idols, under the emblem of adultery, a figure very frequent in the Sacred Canon, is pursued with great force, and at considerable length, both in this and the twenty-third Chapter; and is excellently calculated to excite in the church of God the highest detestation of all false worship.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVI.

Verse 2. Cause Jerusalem to know her abominations] And such a revelation of impurity never was seen before or since. Surely the state of the Jews, before the Babylonish captivity, was the most profligate and corrupt of all the nations of the earth. This Chapter contains God's manifesto against this most abominable people; and although there are many metaphors here, yet all is not metaphorical. Where there was so much idolatry, there must have been adulteries, fornications, prostitutions, and lewdness, of every description. The description of the prophet is sufficiently clear, except where there is a reference to ancient and obsolete customs. What a description of crimes! The sixth satire of Juvenal is its counterpart. General remarks are all that a Commentator is justified in bestowing on this very long, very circumstantial, and caustic invective. For its key, see on the thirteenth and sixty-third verses.

Verse 3. Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan] It would dishonour Abraham to say that you sprung from him: ye are rather Canaanites than Israelites. The Canaanites were accursed;—so are ye.

Thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother a Hittite.] These tribes were the most famous, and probably the most corrupt of all the Canaanites. So Isaiah calls the princes of Judah rulers of Sodom, chap. i, 10; and John the Baptist calls the Pharisees a generation, or brood, of vipers, Matt. iii, 7. There is a fine specimen of this kind of catachresis in Dido's invective against Æneas:—

Nec tibi Diva parens, generis nec Dardanus auctor,
Perfide; sed duris genuit te cautibus horrens
Caucasus, Hyrcanæque admôrunt ubera tigres.
Æn. lib. iv, 365.

False as thou art, and more than false, forsworn;
Not sprung from noble blood, nor goddess born:
But hewn from hardened entrails of a rock,—
And rough Hyrcanian tigers gave thee suck.
DRYDEN.

This is strong: but the invective of the prophet exceeds it far. It is an essence of degradation to its subject; and shews the Jews to be as base and contemptible as they were abominable and disgusting.

Verse 4. As for thy nativity, &c.] This verse refers to what is ordinarily done for every infant on its birth. The umbilical cord, by which it received all its nourishment while in the womb, being no longer necessary, is cut at a certain distance from the abdomen: on this part a knot is tied, which firmly uniting the sides of the tubes, they coalesce, and incarnate together. The extra part of the cord on the outside of the ligature being cut off from the circulation by which it was originally fed, soon drops off, and the part where the ligature was is called the navel. In many places, when this was done, the infant was plunged into cold water; in all cases washed: and sometimes with a mixture of salt and water in order to give a greater firmness to the skin, and constringe the pores. The last process was swathing the body, to support mechanically the tender muscles till they should acquire sufficient strength to support the body. But among savages this latter process is either wholly neglected, or done very slightly: and the less it is done, the better for the infant; as this kind of unnatural compression greatly impedes the circulation of the blood, the pulsation of the heart, and the due inflation of the lungs; respiration, in many cases, being rendered oppressive by the tightness of these bandages.

Verse 5. Thou wast cast out in the open field] This is an allusion to the custom of some heathen and barbarous nations, who exposed those children in the open fields to be devoured by wild beasts who had any kind of deformity, or whom they could not support.

Verse 6. I said—Live] I received the exposed child from the death that awaited it, while in such a state as rendered it at once an object of horror, and also of compassion.

7 [b] I have [c] caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field, and thou hast increased and waxen great, and thou art come to [d] excellent ornaments: thy breasts are fashioned, and thine hair is grown, whereas thou wast naked and bare.

8 Now when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee, behold, thy time was the time of love; [e] and I spread my skirt over thee, and covered thy nakedness: yea, I sware unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee, saith the Lord GOD, and [f] thou becamest mine.

9 Then washed I thee with water; yea, I throughly washed away thy [g] blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil.

10 I clothed thee also with broidered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk.

11 I decked thee also with ornaments, and I [h] put bracelets upon thy hands, [i] and a chain on thy neck.

12 And I put a jewel on thy [k] forehead, and ear-rings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown upon thine head.

13 Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and broidered work; [l] thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil: and thou wast exceeding [m] beautiful, and thou didst prosper into a kingdom.

14 And [n] thy renown went forth among the Verse 8. Was the time of love] Thou wert marriageable.

I spread my skirt over thee] I espoused thee. This was one of their initiatory marriage ceremonies. See Ruth iii, 9.

I—entered into a covenant with thee] Married thee. Espousing, preceded marriage.

Verse 10. I clothed thee also with broidered work] Cloth on which various figures, in various colours, were wrought by the needle.

With badgers' skin] See Exod. xxv, 5. The same kind of skins with which the tabernacle was covered.

Fine linen] בשש beshesh, with cotton. I have seen cloth of this kind enveloping the finest mummies.

I covered thee with silk.] משי meshi. Very probably the produce of the silk-worm.

Verse 12. I put a jewel on thy forehead] על אפך âl aphec, upon thy nose. This is one of the most common ornaments among ladies in the East. European translators, not knowing what to make of a ring in the nose, have rendered it, a jewel on thy forehead, or mouth. I have already spoken of this Asiatic custom, so often referred to in the Sacred Writings:—see Gen. xxiv, 22, 42; Exod. xxxii, 2; Job xlii, 11; Prov. xi, 22; Isa. iii, 21; Hos. ii, 13.

Verse 13. Thus wast thou decked, &c.] The Targum understands all this of the tabernacle service, the book of the law, the sacerdotal vestments, &c.

Thou didst prosper into a kingdom] Here the figure explains itself:—by this wretched infant, the low estate of the Jewish nation, in its origin, is pointed out; by the growing up of this child into woman's estate,—the increase and multiplication of the people;—by her being decked out and ornamented,—her tabernacle service, and religious ordinances;—by her betrothing, and consequent marriage,—the covenant which God made with the Jews;—by her fornication and adulteries,—their apostasy from God, and the establishment of idolatrous worship, with all its abominable rites;—by her fornication and whoredoms with the Egyptians and Assyrians,—the sinful alliances which the Jews made with those nations, and the incorporation of their idolatrous worship with that of Jehovah;—by her lovers being brought against her, and stripping her naked,—the delivery of the Jews into the hands of the Egyptians, Assyrians, and Chaldeans, who stripped them of all their excellencies, and at last carried them into captivity.

This is the key to the whole of this long Chapter of metaphors: and the Reader will do well to forget the figures, and look at the facts. The language and figures may in many places appear to us exceptionable: but these are quite in conformity to those times and places, and to every reader and hearer would appear perfectly appropriate, nor would engender either a thought or passion of an irregular or improper kind. Custom sanctions the mode, and prevents the abuse. Among naked savages irregular passions and propensities are not known to predominate above those in civilized life. And why? Because such sights are customary; and, therefore, in themselves innocent. And the same may be said of the language by which such states and circumstances of life are described. Had Ezekiel spoken in such language as would have been called chaste and unexceptionable among us, it would have appeared to his auditors as a strange dialect; and would have lost at least one half of its power and effect. Let this be the prophet's apology for the apparent indelicacy of his metaphors; and mine, for not entering into any particular discussion concerning them. See also on ver. 63.

heathen for thy beauty: for it was perfect through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord GOD.

15 [a] But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, [b] and playedst the harlot because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by; his it was.

16 [c] And of thy garments thou didst take, and deckedst thy high places with divers colours, and playedst the harlot thereupon: the like things shall not come, neither shall it be so.

17 Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels of my gold and of my silver, which I had given thee, and madest to thyself images [d] of men, and didst commit whoredom with them,

18 And tookest thy broidered garments, and coveredst them: and thou hast set mine oil and mine incense before them.

19 [e] My meat also which I gave thee, fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee, thou hast even set it before them for [f] a sweet savour: and thus it was, saith the Lord GOD.

20 [g] Moreover thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters, whom thou hast borne unto me, and these hast thou sacrificed unto them [h] to be devoured. Is this of thy whoredoms a small matter.

Verse 15. Thou didst trust in thine own beauty] Riches, strength, alliances, &c.; never considering that all they possessed came from God; therefore it was his comeliness which he had put upon them. Witness their original abject state, and the degree of eminence to which they had arrived afterwards through the protecting power of God.

Verse 17. And madest to thyself images of men] צלמי זכר tsalmey zacor, male images. Priapi are here meant, which were carried about in the ceremonies of Osiris, Bacchus, and Adonis; and were something like the lingam among the Hindoos. Herodotus, lib. ii, c. 48, 49, gives us an account of these male images:—Πηχυαια αγαλματα νευροπαστα, τα περιφορεσουσι κατα κωμας ται γυναικες νευον το αιδοιον, ου πολλω τεω ελασσαν εον του αλλου σωματος. This was done at the worship of Bacchus in Egypt: and they who wish to see more may consult Herodotus as above. In this phallic worship the women were principally concerned.

Verse 18. Hast set mine oil and mine incense before them.] It appears that they had made use of the holy vestments, and the different kinds of offerings which belonged to the Lord, to honour their idols.

Verse 21. To cause them to pass through the fire] Bp. Newcome quotes a very apposite passage from Dionysius Halicarnass. Ant. Rom. lib. i, s. 88, p. 72, and marg. p. 75. Edit. Hudson. Μετα δε τουτο πορκαϊας προ των σκηνων γενεσθαι κελευσας, εξαγει τον λεων τας φλογας ὑπερθροσκοντα, της δσιωσεως των μιασματων ενεκα. "And after this, having ordered that fires should be made before the tents, he brings out the people to leap over the flames, for the purifying of their pollutions." This example shews that we are not always to take passing through the fire for being entirely consumed by it. Among the Israelites this appears to have been used as a rite of consecration.

Verse 24. Thou hast also built unto thee an eminent place] גב gab, a stew, or brothel; Vulg. lupanar; Septuag. οικημα πορνικον. So my old MS. Bible, a bordel house. "Thou hast builded thy stewes and bordell houses in every place." Coverdale's Bible, 1535. Bordel is an Italian word: how it got so early into our language I know not. Our modern word brothel is a corruption of it. Diodati translates, Tu hai edificato un bordello, "Thou hast built a brothel." Houses of this kind were of a very ancient date.

hand over thee, and have diminished thine ordinary food, and delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee, [a] the [b] daughters of the Philistines, which are ashamed of thy lewd way.

28 [c] Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast unsatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldest not be satisfied.

29 Thou hast moreover multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan [d] unto Chaldea; and yet thou wast not satisfied herewith.

30 How weak is thine heart, saith the Lord GOD, seeing thou doest all these things, the work of an imperious whorish woman;

31 [e] In that [f] thou buildest thine eminent place in the head of every way, and makest thine high place in every street; and hast not been as an harlot, in that thou scornest hire;

32 But as a wife that committeth adultery, which taketh strangers instead of her husband!

33 They give gifts to all whores: but [g] thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and [h] hirest them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom.

34 And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms: and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee, therefore thou art contrary.

35 Wherefore, O harlot, hear the word of the LORD:

36 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thy filthiness was poured out, and thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers, and with all the idols of thy abominations, and by [i] the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them;

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

37 Behold, therefore [k] I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated; I will even gather them round about against thee, and will discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness.

38 And I will judge thee, [l] as [m] women that break wedlock and [n] shed blood are judged; and I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy.

39 And I will also give thee into their hand, and they shall throw down [o] thine eminent place, and shall break down thy high places: [p] they shall strip thee also of thy clothes, and shall take [q] thy fair jewels, and leave thee naked and bare.

40 [r] They shall also bring up a company against thee, [s] and they shall stone thee with stones, and thrust thee through with their swords.

41 And they shall [t] burn thine houses with fire, and [u] execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women: and I will cause thee to [x] cease from playing the harlot, and thou also shalt give no hire any more.

42 So [y] will I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry.

43 Because [z] thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast fretted me in all these things; behold, therefore [a] I also will means here the household provision made for a wife,—food, clothes, and money.

Verse 36. Thy filthiness was poured out] נחשתך nechushtek. As this word signifies a sort of metal, (brass) it is generally supposed to mean money. They had given money literally to these Heathen nations to procure their friendship and assistance: but the word also means verdigris, the poisonous rust of copper, or brass. It is properly translated in our Version, filthiness, poisonous filth. Does it not refer to that venereal virus which is engendered by promiscuous connexions?

Verse 39. They shall strip thee also of thy clothes—thy fair jewels] Alluding to a lot common enough to prostitutes; their maintainers in the end stripping them of all they had given them.

Verse 42. I will be quiet, and will be no more angry.] I will completely abandon thee;—have nothing more to do with thee;—think no more of thee. When God in judgment ceases to reprehend, this is the severest judgment.

Verse 43. Thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth] Thy former low beginning, when God made thee a people, who were no people. He who maintains not a proper recollection of past mercies is not likely to abide steadfast in the faith. Ingratitude to God is the commencement, if not the parent, of many crimes.

recompense thy way upon thine head, saith the Lord GOD: and thou shalt not commit this lewdness above all thine abominations.

44 Behold every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, As is the mother, so is her daughter.

45 Thou art thy mother's daughter, that loatheth her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which loathed their husbands and their children: [a] your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite.

46 And thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand: and [b] thy [c] younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand, is Sodom and her daughters.

47 Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, nor done after their abominations: but [d] as if that were a very little thing, [e] thou wast corrupted more than they in all thy ways.

48 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, [f] Sodom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done, thou and thy daughters.

49 Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, [g] fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness, was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy.

50 And they were haughty, and [h] committed abomination before me: therefore [i] I took them away as I saw good.

51 Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy sins; but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and [k] hast justified thy sisters in all thine abominations which thou hast done.

52 Thou also, which hast judged thy sisters, bear thine own shame for thy sins that thou hast committed more abominable than they: they are more righteous than thou: yea, be thou confounded also, and bear thy shame, in that thou hast justified thy sisters.

53 [l] When I shall bring again their captivity, [m] the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them:

54 That thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded in all that thou hast done, in that thou art [n] a comfort unto them.

55 When thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate.

56 For thy sister Sodom was not [o] mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy [p] pride.

Verse 44. As is the mother, so is her daughter] כאמה בתה ke-immah bittah, "As the mother, her daughter." As is the cause, so is the effect. As is the breeding, so is the practice. A silken purse cannot be made out of a swine's ear. What is bred in the bone seldom comes out of the flesh. All such proverbs shew the necessity of early holy precepts, supported by suitable example.

Verse 46. Thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left] It is supposed that the prophet by Sodom in this place, means the Israelites that dwelt beyond Jordan, in the land of the Moabites and Ammonites; or, rather, of the Moabites and Ammonites themselves. Literally, Sodom could not be called the younger sister of Jerusalem, as it existed before Jerusalem had a name. In looking east from Jerusalem Samaria was on the left, and Sodom on the right hand; that is, the first was on the north, the second on the south of Jerusalem.

Verse 49. This was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom] If we are to take this place literally, Sodom was guilty of other crimes besides that for which she appears to have been especially punished: in addition to her unnatural crime,—pride, luxury, idleness, and uncharitableness. Neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy;—and these were sufficient to sink any city to the bottomless pit.

Verse 52. They are more righteous than thou] תצדקנה ממך titsadeknah mimmek, they shall be justified more than thou. They are less guilty in the sight of God; for their crimes were not accompanied with so many aggravations. This phrase casts light on Luke xviii, 14, This man went down to his house justified rather than the other. Less blame in the sight of God was attached to him. He always had fewer advantages, and now he was a true penitent; while the other was boasting of what he had done, and what he had not done.

Verse 60. I will remember my covenant] This was the covenant made with Abraham in the day of thy youth,—when in him thou didst begin to be a nation.

Verse 61. Thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger] The Gentiles, who were before the Jews were called, and after the Jews were cast off, are here termed the elder and younger sister. These were to be given to Jerusalem for daughters; the latter should be converted to God by the ministry of men who should spring out of the Jewish church. The former who were patriarchs, &c., profited by the Lamb who was slain from the foundation of the world. Among the latter the gospel was preached, first by Christ and his apostles; and since, by persons raised up from among themselves.

But not by thy covenant—this was the ancient covenant, the conditions of which they brake, and the blessings of which they forfeited:—but by that new covenant, or renewal to the Gentiles of that covenant that was made originally with Abraham, while he was a Gentile, promising that in his Seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed; that covenant which respected the incarnation of Christ, and was ratified by the blood of His cross.

Verse 63. When I am pacified toward thee] This intimates that the Jews shall certainly share in the blessings of the gospel covenant; and that they shall be restored to the favour and image of God. And when shall this be? Whenever they please. They might have enjoyed them eighteen hundred years ago: but they would not come, though all things were then ready. They may enjoy them now: but they still choose to shut their eyes against the light, and contradict and blaspheme. As they do not turn to the Lord, the veil still continues on their hearts. Let their elder brethren pray for them.

For a key to the principal metaphors in this Chapter the Reader is referred to the note on the thirteenth verse, which, if he regard not, he will neither do justice to himself nor to the prophet. The whole Chapter is a tissue of invective; sharp, cutting, and confounding; every where well sustained, in every respect richly merited; and, in no case, leaving any room to the delinquent for justification or response.

CHAPTER XVII.

This Chapter begins with a new allegory or parable, 1—10, to which an explanation is immediately subjoined, 11—21. In the remaining verses the Prophet, by a beautiful metaphor, makes an easy and natural transition to the Messiah; and predicts the security, increasing prosperity, and ultimate universality, of His kingdom, 22—24. From the beauty of its images, the elegance of its composition, the perspicuity of its language, the rich variety of its matter, and the easy transition from one part of the subject to another, this Chapter forms one of the most beautiful and perfect pieces of its kind that can possibly be conceived in so small a compass: and then the unexpected change from objects that presented nothing to the view but gloom and horror, to a prospect of ineffable glory and beauty, has a most happy effect. Every lowering cloud is dispelled, and the fields again smile in the beams of mid-day. The traveller, who this moment trembled as he looked around for shelter, now proceeds on his way rejoicing.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel;

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; [a] A great eagle with great wings, long-winged, full of feathers, which had [b] divers colours, came unto Lebanon, and [c] took the highest branch of the cedar:

4 He cropped off the top of his young twigs, and carried it into a land of traffic: he set it in a city of merchants.

5 He took also of the seed of the land, and [d] planted it in [e] a fruitful field; he placed it by great waters, and set it [f] as a willow tree.

6 And it grew, and became a spreading vine [g] of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him: so it became a vine, and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

7 There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers: and, behold, [h] this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation.

8 It was planted in a good [i] soil by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine.

9 Say thou, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Shall it prosper? [k] shall he not pull up the roots thereof, and cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither? it shall wither in all the leaves of her spring, even without great power or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVII.

Verse 2. Son of man, put forth a riddle] Riddle, ræðrel or ræðelr Anglo-Saxon, from aneaðan, to divine; a thing that must be curiously investigated and sifted, to find out the meaning; and hence, riddle, a sort of coarse sieve to clean corn; to separate coarse chaff and straws from the pure grain. An instrument formerly used for divination. This is not far removed from the Hebrew חידה chidah, from חד chad, to penetrate; not that which penetrates the mind, but which we must penetrate to find out the sense.

Verse 3. A great eagle] Nebuchadnezzar. See Jer. xlviii, 40; xlix, 22. Dan. vii, 4. And see here, ver. 12, where it is so applied.

Great wings] Extensive empire.

Long winged] Rapid in his conquests.

Full of feathers] Multitudes of subjects.

Divers colours] People of various nations.

Came unto Lebanon] Came against Judea.

The highest branch] King Jehoiachin he took captive to Babylon.

The cedar] The Jewish state and king.

Verse 4. The top of his young twigs] The princes of Judah.

A land of traffic] Chaldea.

A city of merchants.] Babylon; for which this city was the most celebrated of all the cities of the East. Its situation procured it innumerable advantages: its two rivers the Tigris and Euphrates, and the Persian Gulf, gave it communication with the richest and most distant nations.

Verse 5. The seed of the land] Zedekiah, brother of Jehoiachin.

Planted it in a fruitful field] Made him king of Judea in place of his brother.

Placed it by great waters] Put him under the protection of Babylon, situated on the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates.

And set it as a willow tree] Made him dependant on this city of great waters, as the willow is on humidity.

Verse 6. A spreading vine of low stature] The Jewish state having then no height of dominion, it must abide under the wings, or branches, of the Chaldean king.

Whose branches turned toward him, and the roots—under him] Zedekiah was wholly dependant on Nebuchadnezzar, both for his elevation to the throne, and his support on it.

Verse 7. Another great eagle] Pharaoh-hophra, or Apries, king of Egypt.

With great wings] Extensive dominion.

And many feathers] Numerous subjects.

Did bend her roots] Looked to him for support in her intended rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 8. It was planted in a good soil] Though he depended on Babylon, he lived and reigned Nebuchadnezzar's vicegerent in the land of Judea.

Verse 9. Shall it prosper?] Shall Zedekiah succeed in casting off the yoke of the king of Babylon, to whom he had sworn fealty?

Shall he not pull up the roots] Nebuchadnezzar will come and dethrone him.

And cut off the fruit] The children of Zedekiah.

The leaves] All the nobles; all shall perish with Zedekiah.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

10 Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper? [a] shall it not utterly wither, when the east wind toucheth it? it shall wither in the furrows where it grew.

11 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Say now to [b] the rebellious house, Know ye not what these things mean? tell them, Behold, [c] the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon;

13 [d] And hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, [e] and hath [f] taken an oath of him: he hath also taken the mighty of the land:

14 That the kingdom might be [g] base, that it might not lift itself up, [h] but that by keeping of his covenant it might stand.

15 But [i] he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, [k] that they might give him horses and much people. [l] Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?

16 As I live, saith the Lord GOD; surely [m] in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die.

17 [n] Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war, [o] by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons:

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

18 Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant, when, lo, he had [p] given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; As I live, surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head.

20 And I will [q] spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to Babylon, and [r] will plead with him there for his trespass that he hath trespassed against me.

21 And [s] all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds: and ye shall know that I the LORD have spoken it.

22 Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will also take of the highest [t] branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs [u] a tender one, and will [x] plant it upon a high mountain and eminent:

23 [y] In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it: and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and Verse 10. Shall—utterly wither] The regal government shall be no more restored. Zedekiah shall be the last king, and the monarchy shall finally terminate with him.

Verse 12. Know ye not what these things mean?] They are explained in the following verses.

Verse 14. That the kingdom might be base] Have no political consequence; and at last sink into a miserable government under Gedaliah.

Verse 15. Sending his ambassadors into Egypt] Zedekiah must have sent his ambassadors into Egypt, between the sixth month of his sixth year, and the fifth month of his seventh year. Compare chap. viii, 1, with chap. xx, 1. See Newcome.

Verse 16. In the midst of Babylon he shall die.] His eyes were put out; he was carried to Babylon, and never returned.

Verse 18. Seeing he despised the oath] This God particularly resents. He had bound himself by oath, in the presence of Jehovah, to be faithful to the covenant that he made with Nebuchadnezzar, and he took the first opportunity to break it; therefore, he shall not escape.

Verse 20. I will spread my net upon him] See the note on chap. xii, 13.

Verse 21. All his fugitives] All who attempted to escape with him, and all that ran to Egypt, &c., shall all fall by the sword.

Verse 22. I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar] I will raise up another monarchy, which shall come in the line of David, namely, the Messiah; who shall appear as a tender plant, as to His incarnation: but he shall be high and eminent. His church, the royal city; the highest and purest ever seen on the face of the earth.

shall make His appearance at the temple, and found His church at Jerusalem.

Shall bring forth boughs] Apostles, evangelists, and their successors in the gospel ministry.

And bear fruit] Multitudes of souls shall be converted by their preaching.

And under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing] All the nations of the earth shall receive His gospel.

In the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell.] Trust in Him alone for salvation, and be saved in their trusting.

Verse 24. All the trees of the field shall know] All the people of Israel and of Chaldea.

I the LORD have brought down the high tree] Have dethroned Jehoiachin.

Have exalted the low tree] Put Zedekiah, brother of Jehoiachin, in his place.

Have dried up the green tree] Zedekiah, who had numerous children, but were all slain before his eyes at Riblah.

And have made the dry tree to flourish] Have raised up a rod out of the stem of Jesse, the family of David being then apparently dried up and extinct. This was the promised Messiah, of the increase and government of whose kingdom and peace there shall be no end: upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order and establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth, even for ever.

THE ZEAL OF THE LORD OF HOSTS WILL PERFORM THIS.

The high and green tree, says Newcome, refer to Nebuchadnezzar; the low and the dry tree, to the Jews.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Jews, in Ezekiel's time, complained of God's dealing hardly with them in punishing them for the sins of their forefathers, 1, 2, their temporal calamities having been long threatened as the consequence of the national guilt (Jer. xv, 4, &c.); and, from the general complexion of this Chapter, it appears that the Jews so interpreted the second commandment of the Decalogue, and other passages of like import, as if the sins of the forefathers were visited upon the children, independently of the moral conduct of the latter, not only in this world, but in that which is to come. To remove every foundation for such an unworthy idea of the Divine government, God assures them, with an oath, that He had no respect of persons, 3, 4; strongly intimating that the great mysteries in Providence (mysterious only on account of the limited capacity of man) are results of the most impartial administration of justice; and that this would be particularly manifested in the rewards and punishments of another life; when every ligament that at present connects societies and nations together shall be dissolved, and each person receive according to his work, and bear his own burden. This is illustrated by a variety of examples; such as that of a just or righteous man, 5—9; his wicked son, 10—13; and again the just son of this wicked person, 14—20. Then a wicked man repenting, and finding mercy, whose former wickedness shall be no impediment to his salvation, 21—23; and a righteous man revolting, and dying in his sins, whose former righteousness shall be of no avail, 24. The conduct of the Divine Providence is then vindicated, 25—29; and all persons, without any exception, most earnestly exhorted to repentance, 30, 31, because the Lord hath no pleasure in the death of the sinner, 32. As the whole of this Chapter is taken up with the illustrating of a doctrine nearly connected with the comfort of man, and the honour of the Divine government, the Prophet, with great propriety, lays aside his usual mode of figure and allegory, and treats his subject with the utmost plainness and perspicuity.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XVIII.

Verse 2. The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge?] We have seen this proverb already, Jer. xxxi, 29, &c., and have considered its general meaning. But the subject is here proposed in greater detail, with a variety of circumstances, to adapt it to all those cases to which it should apply. It refers simply to these questions,—How far can the moral evil of the parent be extended to his offspring? And, are the faults and evil propensities of the parents, not only transferred to the children, but punished in them? Do parents transfer their evil nature, and are their children punished for their offences?

Verse 3. As I live, saith the Lord GOD, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel.] I will now, by this present declaration, settle this question for ever. And hence God has sworn to what follows. After this, who will dare to doubt the judgment pronounced?

Verse 4. All souls are mine] Equally so; I am the Father of the spirits of all flesh, and shall deal impartially with the whole.

The soul that sinneth, it shall die.] None shall die for another's crimes; none shall be saved by another's righteousness. Here is the general judgment relative to the righteousness and unrighteousness of men, and the influence of one man's state on that of another; particularly in respect to their moral conduct.

Verse 5. If a man be just, and do that which is lawful and right] If he be just or holy within, and do what is according to law and equity. What is meant by this, is immediately specified.

Verse 6. 1. Hath not eaten upon the mountains] Idolatrous worship was generally performed on mountains and hills; and those who offered sacrifices, feasted on the sacrifice, and thus held communion with the idol.

2. Neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols.—Has paid them no religious adoration; has trusted in them for nothing, and has not made prayer nor supplication before them.

3. Neither hath defiled his neighbour's wife] Has had no adulterous connexion with any woman; to which idolatrous feasts and worship particularly led.

4. Neither hath come nigh to a menstruous woman—Has abstained from the use of the marriage bed, during the monthly indisposition of his wife. This was absolutely forbidden by the law; and both the man and the woman who disobeyed the command were to be put to death, Lev. xx, 18. For which Calmet gives this reason:—"It has been believed, and experience confirms it, that the children conceived at such times are either leprous, or monsters, or deformed by their diminutiveness, or by the disproportion of their members." There are other reasons for this law, should those of the learned commentator be found invalid.

Verse 7. 5. Hath not oppressed any] Has not used his power or influence to oppress, pain, or injure another.

6. Hath restored to the debtor his pledge] Has carefully surrendered the pawn or pledge, when its owner came to redeem it. As the pledge is generally of more worth than that for which it is pledged, an unprincipled man will make some pretence to keep it; which is highly abominable in the sight of God.

7. Hath spoiled none by violence] Either by robbery or personal insult. For a man may be spoiled both ways.

8. Hath given his bread to the hungry—Has been kind-hearted and charitable; especially to them that are in the deepest want.

9. Hath covered the naked with a garment—Has divided both his bread and his clothing with the necessitous. These are two branches of the same root.

Verse 8. 10. Hath not given forth upon usury] בנשך לא יתן benesek lo yitten. נשך nesek, signifies to bite: usury is properly so termed, because it bites into and devours the principal. Usury signifies, with us, exacting unlawful interest true judgment between man and man,

9 Hath walked in my statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly; he is just, he shall surely [a] live, saith the Lord GOD.

10 If he beget a son that is a [b] robber, [c] a shedder of blood, and [d] that doeth the like to any one of these things,

11 And that doeth not any of those duties, but even hath eaten upon the mountains, and defiled his neighbour's wife,

12 Hath oppressed the poor and needy, hath spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, and hath lifted up his eyes to the idols, hath [e] committed abomination,

13 Hath given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase: shall he then live? he shall not live: he hath done all these abominations; he shall surely die; [f] his [g] blood shall be upon him.

14 Now, lo, if he beget a son, that seeth all his father's sins which he hath done, and considereth, and doeth not such like,

15 [h] That hath not eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, hath not defiled his neighbour's wife,

18 As for his father, because he cruelly oppressed, spoiled his brother by violence, and did that which is not good among his people, lo, even [k] he shall die in his iniquity.

19 Yet say ye, Why? [l] doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live.

11. Neither hath taken any increase—In lending has not required more than was lent; and has not taken that product of the cash lent, which was more than the value for its use. This may be a part of the tenth article.

12. That hath withdrawn his hand from iniquity—Never associates with those who act contrary to justice and equity; his hand or influence being never found among evil workers.

13. Hath executed true judgment between man and man—Being neither swayed by prejudice, fear, nor favour.

These thirteen points concern his social and civil relations.

Verse 9. Hath walked in my statutes] Not only acknowledging them to be right, but acting according to them. Especially in every thing that relates to my worship, changing nothing; neglecting nothing.

And hath kept my judgments to deal truly] Has attended to my Divine direction, both with respect to things forbidden, and things commanded. These concern men in their religious conduct.

He is just] צדיק הוא tsadik hu. He is a righteous man; he has given to all their due; he has abstained from every appearance of evil, and done that which was lawful and right in the sight of God.

He shall surely live] He has lived to me, and he shall live with me.

Verse 10. If he beget a son] Who is the reverse of the above righteous character, according to the thirteen articles already specified and explained.

Verse 13. Shall he then live?] Because his father was a righteous man,—shall the father's holiness be imputed to him? No!

He shall surely die; his blood shall be upon him.] He shall suffer for his own crimes.

Verse 14. Now, lo, if he beget a son, that seeth all his father's sins—and considereth] Lays to heart the evil of his father's life, and the dreadful consequences of a life of rebellion against God.

And doeth not such like] Is quite a different man in moral feeling and character; and acts up to the thirteen points already laid down.

Verse 17. He shall not die for the iniquity of his father] He shall no more be affected by his father's crimes, than his father was benefited by his grandfather's righteousness.

Verse 20. The soul that sinneth, it shall die.] Hitherto we have had to do with the simple cases of the righteous

21 But [b] if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

22 [c] All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned unto him: in his righteousness that he hath done he shall live.

23 [d] Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord GOD: and not that he should return from his ways, and live?

24 But [e] when the righteous turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he live? [f] All his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned: in his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die.

and the wicked; of him who lived and died a holy man, and of him who lived and died a wicked man. But there are two cases behind:—1. That of the wicked man, who repents and turns to God. 2. That of the righteous man, who backslides, and does not return to God by repentance. On both these cases, God decides thus:

Verse 21. But if the wicked will turn from all his sins] And afterward walk according to the character of the righteous already specified:—shall he find mercy, and be for ever saved? YES.

Verse 22. All his transgressions] Shall be so completely forgiven by God's mercy, that they shall not be even mentioned to him; and if he live and die in this recovered state, he shall live with God to all eternity. And why? Hear the reason.

Verse 23. Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die?] No! That is foreign to Him whose name is love, and whose nature is mercy. On the contrary, He wills that he should return from his evil ways and live.

And if God can have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, He cannot have made a decree to abandon him to the evil of his nature, and then damn him for what he could not avoid: for, as God can do nothing with which He is not pleased, so he can decree nothing with which He is not pleased. But He is not pleased with the death of a sinner; therefore, He cannot have made a decree to bring him to this death.

Verse 24. When the righteous turneth away from his righteousness] Here is the second case. Can a man, who was once holy and pure, fall away so as to perish everlastingly? YES. For God says, if he turn away from his righteousness; not his self-righteousness, "the gloss of theologians:" for God never speaks of turning away from that; for, in His eyes, that is a nonentity. There is no righteousness or holiness but what Himself infuses in the soul of man; and as to self-righteousness, i. e. a man's supposing himself to be righteous, when he has not the life of God in his soul, it is the delusion of a dark and hardened heart; therefore, it is the real righteous principle and righteous practice that God speaks of here. And He tells us, that he may so turn away from this, and so commit iniquity, and act as the wicked man, that his righteousness shall be no more mentioned to his account, than the sins of the penitent backslider should be mentioned to his condemnation; and in the sin that he, this once righteous man, hath sinned, and in the trespass that he hath trespassed, in them shall he die. O! how awful a termination of a life once distinguished for righteousness and true holiness! So, then, God Himself informs us that a righteous man may not only fall foully, but fall finally. But to such righteous persons the Devil will ever preach,—"Ye shall not surely die: ye shall be as God." Touch, taste, and handle; ye cannot ultimately fall. Thus we find, by the manner of treating these two cases, that God's way is equal, ver. 25, just, merciful, and impartial. And to prove this, he sums up His conduct in the above cases, in the following verses, 26, 27, 28, 29. And then that the wicked may not die in his sins, and that the backslider may return and find mercy, He thus exhorts:—

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

30 [a] Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord GOD. [b] Repent, and turn [c] yourselves from all your transgressions: so iniquity shall not be your ruin.

31 [d] Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a [e] new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

32 For [f] I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord GOD: wherefore turn [g] yourselves, and live ye.

[a] Ch. 7. 3. & 33. 20.——[b] Matt. 3. 2. Rev. 2. 5.——[c] Or, others.——[d] Eph. 4. 22, 23.

[e] Jer. 32. 39. ch. 11. 19. & 36. 26.——[f] Lam. 3. 33. ver. 23. ch. 33. 11. 2 Pet. 3. 9.——[g] Or, others.

Verse 30. Repent, and turn yourselves from all your transgressions] There is still life; still a God that has no pleasure in the death of a sinner, One who is ever ready to give His Holy Spirit to all them that ask Him; therefore, repent and turn; so iniquity shall not be your ruin.

Verse 31. Cast away] With a holy violence, dash away every transgression, and incentive to it.

Make you a new heart] Call upon God for it, and He will give it: for as sure as you earnestly call on God through Christ to save you, so surely you shall be saved; and the effect will so speedily follow, that God is pleased to attribute that in some sort to yourselves, which is done by His grace alone; because ye earnestly call upon Him for it, come in the right way to receive it, and are determined never to rest till you have it.

For why will you die] Why should you go to hell, while the kingdom of God is open to receive you? Why should you be the devil's slaves, when ye may be Christ's freedmen?—WHY WILL YE DIE.—Every word is emphatic. Why—shew God or man one reason. Will—obstinacy alone,—a determination not to be saved, or a voluntary listlessness about salvation,—can prevent you. Ye—children of so many mercies, fed and supported by a kind God all your life; ye, who are redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ; ye, who have made many promises to give up yourselves to God; ye, who have been dedicated to the ever-blessed Trinity, and promised to renounce the devil and all his works, the pomps and vanities of this wicked world, and all the sinful lusts of the flesh. Why will ye DIE? DIE! what is this? A separation from God and the glory of His power for ever! Die,—forfeiting all the purposes for which your immortal souls were made. DIE,—to know what the worm is that never dieth; and what that fire is, that is never quenched! Why then will ye die?

Verse 32. For I have no pleasure] God repeats what He had so solemnly declared before. Can ye doubt His sincerity?—His ability?—His willingness?—the efficacy of the blood of His covenant?

Wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye.] Reader! now give God thy heart.

Though every man comes into the world with a fallen nature, a soul infected with sin: yet no man is damned on that account. He who refuses that grace which pardons sin and heals infected nature,—who permits the evil principle to break out into transgression, and continues and dies in his iniquity and sin, and will not come unto Christ that he may have life; he, and he only, goes to perdition. Nor will the righteousness of a parent or relation help his sinful soul: no man can have more grace than is necessary to save himself; and none can have that, who does not receive it through Christ Jesus. It is the mercy of God in Christ which renders the salvation of a sinner possible; and it is that mercy alone which can heal the backslider. The atoning blood blots out all that is past; the same blood cleanses from all unrighteousness. Who believes so, as to apply for this redemption?—Who properly thanks God for having provided such a Saviour?

CHAPTER XIX.

This Chapter contains two beautiful examples of the parabolic kind of writing; the one lamenting the sad catastrophe of Jehoahaz and Jehoiakim, 1—9, and the other describing the desolation and captivity of the whole people, 10—14. In the first parable, the lioness is Jerusalem. The first of the young lions is Jehoahaz, deposed by the king of Egypt; and the second lion is Jehoiakim, whose rebellion drew on himself the vengeance of the king of Babylon. In the second parable the vine is the Jewish nation, which long prospered, its land being fertile, its princes powerful, and its people flourishing: but the judgments of God, in consequence of their guilt, had now destroyed a great part of the people, and doomed the rest to captivity.

MOREOVER [a] take thou up a lamentation for the princes of Israel,

2 And say, What is thy mother? A lioness: she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions.

3 And she brought up one of her whelps: [b] it became a young lion, and it learned to catch the prey; it devoured men.

4 The nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit, and they brought him with chains unto the land of [c] Egypt.

5 Now when she saw that she had waited, and her hope was lost, then she [d] took another of her whelps, and made him a young lion.

9 [k] And they put him in ward [l] in chains, and brought him to the king of Babylon: they brought him into holds, that his voice should no more be heard upon [m] the mountains of Israel.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIX.

Verse 1. Moreover take thou up a lamentation] Declare what is the great subject of sorrow in Israel. Compose a funeral dirge. Shew the melancholy fate of the kings who proceeded from Josiah. The prophet deplores the misfortune of Jehoahaz and Jehoiakim, under the figure of two lion whelps which were taken by hunters and confined in cages. Next he shews the desolation of Jerusalem under Zedekiah, which he compares to a beautiful vine pulled up by the roots, withered, and at last burnt. Calmet justly observes, that the style of this song is beautiful, and the allegory well supported throughout.

Verse 2. What is thy mother? A lioness] Judea may here be the mother;—the lioness, Jerusalem. Her lying down among lions,—her having confederacy with the neighbouring kings; for lion here, means king.

Verse 3. She brought up one of her whelps] Jehoahaz, son of Josiah, whose father was conquered and slain by Pharaoh-Necho, king of Egypt.

It learned to catch the prey] His reign was a reign of oppression and cruelty. He made his subjects his prey, and devoured their substance.

Verse 4. The nations also heard of him] The king of Egypt, whose subjects were of divers nations, marched against Jerusalem, took Jehoahaz prisoner, and brought him to Egypt. Thus—

He was taken in their pit] Here is an allusion to those trap-pits digged in forests, into which the wild beasts fall, when the huntsmen, surrounding a given portion of the forest, drive the beasts in; by degrees narrowing the enclosure till the animals come to the place where the pits are, which being lightly covered over with branches and turf, are not perceived, and the beasts tread on them and fall in. Jehoahaz reigned only three months before he was dethroned by the king of Egypt, against whom it is apparent some craft was used, here signified by the pit, into which he fell.

Verse 5. When she saw that she had waited] Being very weak, the Jews found that they could not resist with any hope of success; so the king of Egypt was permitted to do as he pleased.

She took another of her whelps] Jehoiakim,—

And made him a young lion.] King of Judea.

Verse 6. And he went up and down among the lions] He became a perfect Heathen, and made Judea as idolatrous as any of the surrounding nations. He reigned eleven years, a monster of iniquity, 2 Kings xxiii, 30, &c.

Verse 8. The nations set against him] The Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, and the king of Babylon —king of many nations.

He was taken] The city was taken by Nebuchadnezzar; and Jehoiakim was taken prisoner, and sent in chains to Babylon.

Verse 9. That his voice should no more be heard] He continued in prison many years, till the reign of Evil-merodach, who set him at liberty, but never suffered him to return to the mountains of Israel. "The unhappy fate of these princes, mentioned ver. 4, 8, 9, is a just subject of lamentation." Newcome.

Verse 10. Thy mother (Jerusalem) is like a vine in thy blood] Of this expression I know not what to make. Some think the meaning is "A vine planted by the waters to produce the blood of the grape." See Deut. xxxii, 14. Others, for בדמך be-dameca, in thy blood, would read ברמון be-rimmon, in, or at a pomegranate;—like a vine planted by or beside a pomegranate tree, by which it was to be supported. And so the Septuagint and Arabic appear to have read. Calmet reads כרמך karmeca, thy vineyard, instead of בדמך planted by the waters: she was [a] fruitful and full of branches by reason of many waters.

11 And she had strong rods for the sceptres of them that bear rule, and her [b] stature was exalted among the thick branches, and she appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches.

12 But she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the [c] east wind dried up her fruit: her strong rods were broken and withered; the fire consumed them.

A. M. 3410. B. C. 594. Ol. XLVI. 3. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 23.

13 And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground.

14 [d] And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit, so that he hath no strong rod to be a sceptre to rule. [e] This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation.

bedameca, in thy blood. Here is no change, but a ר resh for a ד daleth. This reading is supported by one of Kennicott's and one of De Rossi's MSS.—Thy mother is like a vine in thy vineyard, planted by the waters. Though this is rather an unusual construction, yet it seems the best emendation. Of the textual reading no sense can be made. There is a corruption somewhere.

Full of branches] Many princes. See next verse.

Verse 11. She had strong rods] Zedekiah, and his many sons.

Her stature was exalted] Zedekiah grew proud of his numerous offspring and prosperity; and although he copied the example of Jehoiakim, yet he thought he might safely rebel against the king of Babylon.

Verse 12. But she was plucked up in fury] Jerusalem—taken after a violent and most destructive siege; Nebuchadnezzar being violently enraged against Zedekiah for breaking his oath to him.

She was cast down to the ground] Jerusalem was totally ruined, by being burnt to the ground.

Her strong rods were broken] The children of Zedekiah were slain before his eyes, and after that, his own eyes pulled out; and he was laden with chains, and carried into Babylon.

Verse 13. And now she is planted in the wilderness] In the land of Chaldea, whither the people have been carried captives; and which, compared with their own land, was to them a dreary wilderness.

Verse 14. Fire is gone out] A vindictive and murderous disposition has taken hold—

Of a rod of her branches] Ishmael, son of Nethaniah, who was of the blood-royal of Judah,—

Hath devoured her fruit] Hath assassinated Gedaliah, slain many people, and carried off others into the country of the Ammonites. But he was pursued by Jonathan, the son of Kareah, who slew many of his adherents, and delivered much of the people.

She hath no strong rod] None of the blood-royal of Judah left. And from that time not one of her own royal race ever sat upon the throne of Israel.

This is a lamentation] This is a most lamentable business,—

And shall be for a lamentation.] These predictions shall be so punctually fulfilled, and the catastrophe shall be so complete, that it shall ever remain as a lamentation; as this state of Jerusalem shall never be restored. Even to the present day this, to a Jew, is a subject of mourning.

CHAPTER XX.

A deputation of the elders of Israel as usual, in their distress, came to request Ezekiel to ask counsel of God, 1. In reply to this, God commands the Prophet to put them in mind of their rebellion and idolatry—in Egypt, 2—9, in the wilderness, 10—27, and in Canaan, 28—32. Notwithstanding which the Lord most graciously promises to restore them to their own land, after they should be purged from their dross, 33—44. The five last verses of this Chapter ought to begin the next, as they are connected with the subject of that Chapter, being a prophesy against Jerusalem, which lay to the south of Chaldea, where the Prophet then was, and which here and elsewhere is represented under the emblem of a forest doomed to be destroyed by fire, 45—49.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 24.

AND it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that [a] certain of the elders of Israel came to enquire of the LORD, and sat before me.

2 Then came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Are ye come to enquire of me? As I live, saith the Lord GOD, [b] I will not be enquired of by you.

4 Wilt thou [c] judge [d] them, son of man, wilt thou judge them? [e] cause them to know the abominations of their fathers:

5 And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the day when [f] I chose Israel, and [g] lifted up mine hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob, and made myself [h] known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, [i] I am the LORD your God;

NOTES ON CHAPTER XX.

Verse 1. In the seventh year] Of the captivity of Jeconiah, see chap. viii, 1, and the seventh of the reign of Zedekiah.

The fifth month, the tenth day] That is, according to Abp. Ussher, Monday, August 27, A. M. 3411.

Certain of the elders of Israel] What these came to enquire about is not known. They were doubtless hypocrites and deceivers, from the manner in which God commands the prophet to treat them. It seems to have been such a deputation of elders as those mentioned chap. viii, 1, and xiv, 1.

Verse 3. I will not be enquired of by you.] I will not hear you. I will have nothing to do with you.

Verse 4. Wilt thou judge them] If thou wilt enter into any discussion with them, shew them the abomination of their fathers. The whole Chapter is a consecutive history of the unfaithfulness, ingratitude, rebellion, and idolatry, of the Jews, from the earliest times to that day; and vindicates the sentence which God had pronounced against them, and which He was about to execute more fully in delivering them and the city into the hands of the Chaldeans.

Verse 5. I chose Israel] They did not choose me for their God, till I had chosen them to be my people.

I lifted up mine hand] I bound myself in a covenant to them to continue to be their God, if they should be faithful, and continue to be my people. Among the Jews the juror lifted up his right hand to heaven; which explains Psa. cxliv, 8, Their right hand is a right hand of falsehood. This is a form used in England, Scotland, and Ireland.

Verse 6. To bring them forth of the land of Egypt] When they had been long in a very disgraceful and oppressive bondage.

A land that I had espied for them] God represents Himself as having gone over different countries in order to find a comfortable residence for these people, whom He considered as His children.

Flowing with milk and honey] These were the characteristics of a happy and fruitful country, producing without intense labour all the necessaries and comforts of life. Of the happiest state, and happiest place, a fine poet gives the following description:—

Ver erat æternum, placidique tepentibus auris
Mulcebant Zephyri, natos sine semine flores.
Mox etiam fruges tellus inarata ferebat:
Nec renovatus ager gravidis canebat aristis.
Flumina jam lactis, jam flumina nectaris ibant;
Flavaque de viridi stillabant ilice mella.

OVID'S Metam. lib. i, 107.

On flowers unsown soft Zephyr spreads his wing,
And time itself was one eternal spring;
Ensuing years the yellow harvest crown'd,
The bearded blade sprang from the untill'd ground,
And laden, unrenewed, the fields were found.
Floods were with milk, and floods with nectar fill'd,
And honey from the sweating oaks distill'd.

In the flourishing state of Judea every mountain was cultivated as well as the vallies. Among the very rocks the vines grew luxuriantly.

Verse 7. Cast ye away—the abominations] Put away all your idols;—those incentives to idolatry that ye have looked on with delight.

Verse 8. They did not—cast away] They continued attached to the idolatry of Egypt; so that, had I consulted my justice only, I should have consumed them even in Egypt hearken unto me: they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt: then I said, I will [a] pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rem. 24.

9 [b] But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were, in whose sight I made myself known unto them, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt.

10 Wherefore I [c] caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness.

11 [d] And I gave them my statutes, and [e] shewed them my judgments, [f] which if a man do, he shall even live in them.

12 Moreover also I gave them my [g] sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the LORD that sanctify them.

13 But the house of Israel [h] rebelled against me in the wilderness: they walked not in my statutes, and they [i] despised my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; and my sabbaths they greatly [k] polluted: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them in the [l] wilderness, to consume them.

14 [m] But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 24.

15 Yet also [n] I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, [o] which is the glory of all lands;

16 Because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths: for [q] their heart went after their idols.

17 [r] Nevertheless mine eye spared them from destroying them, neither did I make an end of them in the wilderness.

18 But I said unto their children in the wilderness, Walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers, neither observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols:

19 I am the LORD your God; [s] walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them;

20 [t] And hallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God.

21 Notwithstanding [u] the children rebelled against me: they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, [x] which if a man do, he shall even live in them; they polluted my sabbaths: then I said, [y] I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness.

itself. This is a circumstance that Moses has not mentioned, namely, their provoking God by their idolatry, after He had sent Moses and Aaron to them in Egypt.

Verse 9. But I wrought for my name's sake] I bare with them and did not punish them, lest the Heathens, who had known my promises made to them, might suppose that I had either broken them through some caprice, or was not able to fulfil them.

Verse 10. I caused them to go forth] Though greatly oppressed and degraded, they were not willing to leave their house of bondage. I was obliged to force them away.

Verse 11. I gave them my statutes] I shewed them what they should do in order to be safe, comfortable, wise, and happy; and what they should avoid in order to be uninjured in body, mind, and possessions. Had they attended to these things, they should have lived by them. They would have been holy, healthy, and happy.

Verse 12. I gave them my sabbaths] The religious observance of the sabbath, was the first statute or command of God to men. This institution was a sign between God and them, to keep them in remembrance of the creation of the world,—of the rest that He designed them in Canaan,—and of the eternal inheritance among the saints in light. Of these things the sabbath was a type and pledge.

Verse 13. But the house of Israel rebelled] They acted in the wilderness just as they had done in Egypt; and he spared them there for the same reason. See ver. 9.

Verse 15. I lifted up my hand] Their provocations in the wilderness were so great, that I vowed never to bring them into the Promised Land. I did not consume them, but I disinherited them. See Note on ver. 5.

Verse 18. But I said unto their children] These I chose in their fathers' stead; and to them I purposed to give the inheritance which their fathers, by disobedience, lost;

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 24.

22 [a] Nevertheless I withdrew mine hand, and [b] wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth.

23 I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that [c] I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries;

24 [d] Because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and [e] their eyes were after their fathers' idols.

25 Wherefore [f] I gave them also statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live;

26 And I polluted them in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass [g] through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they [h] might know that I am the LORD.

27 Therefore, son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Yet in this your fathers have [i] blasphemed me, in that they have [k] committed a trespass against me.

28 For when I had brought them into the land, for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then [l] they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering: there also they made their [m] sweet savour, and poured out there their drink offerings.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 24.

29 Then [n] I said unto them, What is the high place whereunto ye go? And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day.

30 Wherefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations?

31 For when ye offer [o] your gifts, when ye make your sons to [p] pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day: and [q] shall I be enquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will not be enquired of by you.

32 And that [r] which cometh into your mind shall not be at all, that ye say, We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.

Verse 22. I withdrew mine hand] I had just lifted it up to crush them as in a moment; for they also were idolatrous, and walked in the steps of their fathers.

Verse 25. I gave them also statutes that were not good] What a foolish noise has been made about this verse by critics, believers, and infidels! How is it that God can be said to give a people statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they could not live? I answer, in their sense of the words, God never gave any such, at any time, to any people. Let any man produce an example of this kind, if he can; or shew even the fragment of such a law, sanctioned by the Most High! The simple meaning of this place and all such places is, that when they had rebelled against the Lord, despised His statutes, and polluted His sabbaths;—in effect, cast Him off, and given themselves wholly to their idols,—then He abandoned them, and they abandoned themselves to the customs and ordinances of the Heathen. That this is the meaning of the words, requires no proof to them who are the least acquainted with the genius and idioms of the Hebrew language, in which God is a thousand times said to do, what in the course of His providence, or justice, He only permits to be done.

Verse 26. I polluted them in their own gifts] I permitted them to pollute themselves by the offerings which they made to their idols. Causing their children to pass through the fire was one of those pollutions:—but, did God ever give them a statute, or judgment, of this kind? No. He ever inveighs against such things, and they have His heaviest displeasure and curse. See on ver. 31.

Verse 29. What is the high place] מה הבמה mah ha-bamah, what is the high place? What is it good for? Its being a high place, shews it to be a place of idolatry. I called it במה bamah, to mark it with infamy: but ye continue to frequent it, even while it is called במה bamah,—to the present day.

Verse 31. Ye pollute yourselves] This shews the sense in which God says, (ver. 26,) I polluted them in their own gifts. They chose to pollute themselves, and I permitted them to do so. See on verses 25, 26.

Verse 32. And that which cometh into your mind] Ye wish to be naturalized among idolaters, and make a part of such nations. But this shall not be at all; you shall be preserved as a distinct people. Ye shall not be permitted to mingle yourselves with the people of those countries:—even they, idolaters as they are, will despise and reject you. Besides, I will change your place, restore your captivity;—yet not in mercy, but in fury poured out; and reserve you for sorer evils, ver. 34.

Verse 35. I will bring you into the wilderness of the people] I will bring you out of your captivity, and bring you into your own land, which you will find to be a wilderness, the consequence of your crimes.

There will I plead with you] There I will be your King, and rule you with a sovereign rule; and the dispensations of my justice and mercy shall either end you, or mend you.

Verse 37. I will cause you to pass under the rod] This alludes to the custom of tithing the sheep: I take it from the Rabbins. The sheep were all penned; and the shepherd stood at the door of the fold, where only one sheep could come out at once. He had in his hand a rod dipped in vermillion; and as they came out, he counted one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine;—and as the tenth came out, he marked it with the rod, and said, "This is the tenth;"—and that was set apart for the Lord.

I will bring you into the bond of the covenant] You shall be placed under the same obligations as before, and acknowledge yourselves bound; ye shall feel your obligation, and live according to its nature.

Verse 38. I will purge out from among you the rebels] The incorrigibly wicked I will destroy;—those who will not receive Him whom I have appointed for this purpose, as the Saviour of Israel. And I will gather you who believe, out of all the countries where you sojourn, and bring you into your own land: but those of you who will not believe,—will not receive the Son of David to reign over you,—shall never enter into the land of Israel, but die in your dispersions. This is what the contradicting and blaspheming Jews of the present day have to expect. And thus, both of you shall know that he is Jehovah, fulfilling His threatenings against the one, and His promises to the other.

Verse 39. Go ye, serve ye every one his idols] Thus, God gave them statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they could not live, by thus permitting them to take their own way, serve their gods, and follow the maxims and rites of that abominable worship.

Verse 40. For in mine holy mountain] The days shall come in which all true ISRAELITES shall receive HIM whom I have sent to be the true Sacrifice for the life of the world; and shall bring to Jerusalem (the pure Christian church) their offerings, which I will there accept, for they will give me thanks for my unspeakable gift.

Verse 42. And ye shall know] Shall acknowledge that I am Jehovah.

Verse 43. And there shall ye remember your ways] Ye and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled; and [a] ye shall lothe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 24.

44 [b] And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have wrought with you [c] for my name's sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD.

45 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

46 [d] Son of man, set thy face toward the south, and drop thy word toward the south, and prophesy against the forest of the south field;

47 And say to the forest of the south, Hear the word of the LORD; Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, [e] I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour [f] every green tree in thee, and every dry tree: the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces [g] from the south to the north shall be burned therein.

48 And all flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it: it shall not be quenched.

49 Then said I, Ah Lord GOD! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables?

[a] Lev. 26. 39. ch. 6. 9. Hos. 5. 15. — [b] Ver. 38. ch. 24. 24. — [c] Ch. 36. 22.

[d] Ch. 6. 2. & 21. 2. — [e] Jer. 21. 14. — [f] Deut. 12. 2. Luke 23. 31. — [g] Ch. 21. 4.

shall be ashamed of your past conduct, and of your long opposition to the gospel of your salvation.

These promises may, in a certain sense, be limitedly applied to the restoration from the Babylonish captivity: but they must have their proper fulfilment when the Jews shall accept Jesus as their Saviour; and, in consequence, be brought back from all their dispersions to their own land.

Verse 46. Set thy face toward the south] Towards Judea, which lay south from Babylon, or Mesopotamia, where the prophet then dwelt.

The forest of the south field] The city of Jerusalem, as full of inhabitants as the forest is of trees.

Verse 47. I will kindle a fire] I will send war and it shall devour every green tree,—the most eminent and substantial of the inhabitants; and every dry tree,—the lowest and meanest also.

The flaming flame shall not be quenched] The fierce ravages of Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans shall not be stopped till the whole land is ruined.

All faces from the south to the north shall be burned] From the one end of the land to the other there shall be nothing but fear, dismay, terror, and confusion, occasioned by the wide-wasting violence of the Chaldeans. Judea lay in length, from north to south.

Verse 48. All flesh] All the people shall see that this war is a judgment of the Lord.

It shall not be quenched.] Till the whole land shall be utterly ruined.

Verse 49. Ah Lord GOD!] O my God, consider my situation: who will believe what I shall say! They put the evil day far from them.

Doth he not speak parables?] הלא ממשל משלים הוא halo mimashel meshalim hu, Is he not a maker of parables? Is it not his usual custom to deal in enigmas? His figures are not to be understood; we should not trouble ourselves with them. We are not obliged to fathom his meaning: and perhaps after all, it does not refer to us, or will not be accomplished in our time, if it even respect the land. Thus they turned aside what might have done them good; and rejected the counsel of God against themselves.

By dividing the word with our neighbour, we often lose the benefit both of threatenings and promises. They voluntarily shut their own eyes; and then God, in judgment, sealed them up in darkness.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Prophet goes on to denounce the fate of Jerusalem and Judea; using signs of vehement grief, to denote the greatness of the calamity, 2—7. He then changes the emblem to that of a sharp and bright sword still denoting the same sad event, 8—17; and, becoming yet more explicit, he represents the king of Babylon, who was to be employed by God in this work, as setting out to take vengeance on both the Jews and the Ammonites, for joining with Egypt in a confederacy against him. He is described as standing at the parting of the roads leading to the respective capitals of the Jews and Ammonites; and, doubting which to attack first, he commits the decision of the matter to his arts of divination, performed by mingling arrows inscribed with the names of the different nations or cities, and then marching against that whose name was written on the arrow first drawn from the quiver. In this case the name Jerusalem comes forward; and, therefore, he proceeds against it, 18—24. History itself could scarcely be more explicit than this prophecy. The profane prince Zedekiah is then declared to be given up by God, and his kingdom devoted to utter destruction, for that breach of oath which the Prophet foretels he should be guilty of, 25—27. The remaining verses form a distinct prophecy relating to the destruction of the Ammonites, which was fulfilled about five years after the destruction of Jerusalem, 28—32.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXI.

Verse 2. Set thy face toward Jerusalem] This is a continuation of the preceding prophecy; and in this Chapter the prophet sets before them, in the plainest language, what the foregoing metaphors meant, so that they could not complain of his parables.

Verse 3. Behold, I am against thee] Dismal news! When God is against us, who can be for us!

And will draw forth my sword] War.

And will cut off from thee] The land of Judea.

The righteous and the wicked.] All shall be removed from thee. Some shall be cut off,—removed, by the sword; shall be slain in battle, or by the pestilence;—and some shall be cut off,—die by the famine; and some shall be cut off,—removed from the land by captivity. Now, among the two latter classes there might be many righteous as well as wicked. And when all the provisions were consumed, so that there was no more bread in the city, during the siege by Nebuchadnezzar, the righteous must have suffered as well as the wicked; for they could not be preserved alive, but by miracle, when there was no bread: nor was their perishing for want any loss to them, because the Lord would take them straight to His glory. And however men in general are unwilling to die; yet there is no instance, nor can there be, of any man's complaint that he got to heaven too soon. Again, if God had permitted none to be carried off captive but the wicked, the case of these would be utterly hopeless, as there would be none to set a good example, to preach repentance, to reprove sin, or to shew God's willingness to forgive sinners. But God, in His mercy, permitted many of the righteous to be carried off also, that the wicked might not be totally abandoned, or put beyond the reach of being saved. Hence, both Ezekiel and Daniel, and indeed several others, prophets and righteous men, were thus cut off from the land, and carried into captivity. And how much was God's glory and the good of men promoted by this! What a seed of salvation was sown, even in the Heathen countries, by thus cutting off the righteous with the wicked! To this we owe, under God, many of the Psalms; the whole of the Book of Ezekiel; all the prophecies of Daniel; the bright example of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; the decrees passed in favour of the religion of the true God by Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Darius, &c. And to this dispensation of God's merciful providence we owe the Books and example of Ezra and Nehemiah. Where then is the injustice so loudly declaimed against, of God's thus cutting off from the land of Judea the righteous with the wicked! The righteous were not cut off for the crimes of the wicked, see chap. xviii, nor were these crimes visited upon them;—yet several of them shared in the common calamity, but none perished. Those that were removed by a violent death, and I believe we shall find few such, got a speedier entrance into eternal glory.

Verse 4. From the south to the north] The whole land shall be ravaged from one end to the other.

Verse 5. It shall not return any more.] That is, till all the work I have designed for it is done. Nor did it; for Nebuchadnezzar never rested till he had subdued all the lands from the south to the north, from the Euphrates to the Nile.

Verse 6. Sigh—with the breaking of thy loins] Let thy mourning for this sore calamity be like that of a woman in the pains of travail.

7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For the tidings; because it cometh: and every heart shall melt, and [a] all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees [b] shall be weak as water: behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord GOD.

8 Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the LORD; Say, [c] A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furbished:

10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter; it is furbished that it may glitter: should we then make mirth? [d] it contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree.

13 [h] Because it is [i] a trial, and what if the sword contemn even the rod? [k] it shall be no more, saith the Lord GOD.

14 Thou, therefore, son of man, prophesy, and [l] smite thine [m] hands together, and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain: it is the sword of the great men that are slain, which entereth into their [n] privy chambers.

15 I have set the [o] point of the sword against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied: ah! [p] it is made bright, it is [q] wrapped up for the slaughter.

16 [r] Go thee one way or other, either on the right hand, [s] or on the left, whithersoever thy face is set.

17 I will also [t] smite mine hands together, and [u] I will cause my fury to rest: I the LORD have said it.

Verse 10. It contemneth the rod of my son] It, the sword of Nebuchadnezzar, contemneth the rod,—despises the power and influence of my son Israel,—the Jewish people:—out of Egypt have I called MY SON.

As every tree.] As all the stocks, kindreds, and nations, over which I have already given him commission. Can the rod of Israel be spared, when the tree of Assyria, Egypt, &c., have been cut down.

Verse 11. This sword is sharpened] It is prepared for the slaughter, it is furbished; from the French, fourbir, to polish, brighten. He shall have splendid victories every where.—Some complain of corruption in the original in this place: but I think without sufficient reason.

Verse 12. Smite—upon thy thigh] See on Jer. xxxi, 19. So HOMER, Il. xv, ver. 113.

Ὡς εφατ'· αυταρ Αρης θαλερω πεπληγετο μηρω
Χερσι καταπρηνεσσ' ολοφυρομενος δε προσηυδα.

"She spake; and, with expanded arms his thighs Smiting, thus sorrowful the god exclaimed."

COWPER.

Verse 13. Because it is a trial] This will be a trial of strength and skill between the Chaldeans and the Jews; and a trial of faith and patience to the righteous.

And what if the sword (Nebuchadnezzar) contemn the rod?] Overthrow Zedekiah! It will do so; for the regal government of Judea shall be no more. Or, it is tried; that is, the sword. Nebuchadnezzar has already shewn himself strong and skilful.

Verse 14. Let the sword be doubled the third time] The sword has been doubled, and it shall come the third time. Nebuchadnezzar came against Judea THRICE. First, against Jehoiakim. Secondly, against Jeconiah. Thirdly, against Zedekiah. The sword had already been doubled; it is to come now the third time,—i. e. against Zedekiah.

The sword of the slain] חרב חללים cherub chalalim—"the sword of the soldiers,"—of the Chaldeans. So in the next clause—היא חרב חלל הגדול hi chereb chalal ha-gadol—"it is the sword of that great soldier,—that eminent king and conqueror." This is the meaning of the word חלל chalal, that is so ill rendered in almost every place of its occurrence, in our Version. See Dr. Kennicott.

Verse 15. Wrapped up] It is not a blunt sword, it is carefully sharpened and preserved for the slaughter.

Verse 16. Go thee one way or other] Thou shalt prosper, O sword, whithersoever thou turnest; against Ammon, or Judea, or Egypt.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 24.

19 Also, thou son of man, appoint thee two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come: both twain shall come forth out of one land: and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city.

20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to [a] Rabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jersusalem the defenced.

21 For the king of Babylon stood at the [b] parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination: he made his [c] arrows bright, he consulted with [d] images, he looked in the liver.

22 At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint [e] captains, [f] to open the mouth in the slaughter, to [g] lift up the voice with shouting, [h] to appoint battering rams against the gates, to cast a mount, and to build a fort.

A. M. 3411. B. C. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 24.

23 And it shall be unto them as a false divination in their sight, [i] to them that [k] have sworn oaths: but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, that they may be taken.

24 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand.

25 And thou [l] profane wicked prince of Israel, [m] whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end,

Verse 19. Appoint thee two ways] Set off from Babylon, and lay down two ways, either of which thou mayest take; that to the right, which leads to Jerusalem; or, that to the left, which leads to Rabbath of the Ammonites, ver. 20.—But why against the Ammonites? Because both they and the Moabites were united with Zedekiah against the Chaldeans, see Jer. chap. xxvii, 3; though they afterwards fought against Judea, chap. xii, 6.

Verse 21. For the king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way] He was in doubt which way he should first take; whether to humble the Ammonites by taking their metropolis Riblath, or go at once against Jerusalem. In his case of uncertainty, he made use of divination. And this was of three kinds:—1. By arrows. 2. By images or talismans. 3. By inspecting the entrails of a sacrifice offered on the occasion.

1. He made bright his arrows.—This might be after the manner in which the divination is still practised among the Arabs. These arrows were without head or wing. They took three. On one they wrote, Command me, Lord. On the second, Forbid me, Lord. The third, was blank. These were put in a bag, and the querist put in his hand, and took one out. If it was command me, he set about the business immediately; if it was forbid me, he rested for a whole year; if it was the blank one, he drew again. On all occasions the Arabs consulted futurity by such arrows. See D'Herbelot, under the word ACDAH.

2. As to the images, the Hebrew calls them תרפים teraphim. See the note on Gen. xxxi, 19.

3. And as to the liver, I believe it was only inspected to see whether the animal offered in sacrifice were sound and healthy, of which the state of the liver is the most especial indication. When the liver is sound, the animal is healthy; and it would have been a bad omen to any who offered sacrifice, to find that the animal they had offered to their gods was diseased; as, in that case, they would have taken for granted that the sacrifice was not accepted.

Verse 22. At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem] He had probably written on two arrows;—one, Jerusalem; the other, Riblath; the third, left blank. He drew, and that on which Jerusal was written came to his hand; in consequence f which he marched immediately against that city. It was ripe for destruction; and had he marched before or after, it would have fallen: but he never considered himself as sure of the conquest till now.

Verse 23. To them that have sworn oaths] To Zedekiah and his ministers, who had bound themselves by the oath of the Lord to be faithful to the Chaldeans, and to pay them the promised tribute. The oaths may refer farther, to the alliances formed with the Egyptians, Ammonites, and others. They will not believe that Nebuchadnezzar shall succeed against them, while they expect the powerful assistance of the Egyptians.

Verse 25. And thou profane wicked prince of Israel] Zedekiah, called here profane, because he had broken his oath; and wicked, because of his opposition to God, and His prophet.

Whose day is come] Who in a short time shall be delivered into the hands of your enemies.

Verse 26. Exalt him that is low] Give Gedaliah the government of Judea.

27 [b] I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: [c] and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

28 And thou, son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD [d] concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; even say thou, [e] The sword, the sword is drawn: for the slaughter it is furbished, to consume because of the glittering:

29 Whiles they [f] see vanity unto thee, whiles they divine a lie unto thee, to bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain, of the wicked, [g] whose day is come, when their iniquity shall have an end.

Verse 27. I will overturn] I will utterly destroy the Jewish government.

Until he come whose—is] משפט mishpat, the judgment; i. e. till the coming of the Son of David, the Lord Jesus; who, in a mystic and spiritual sense, shall have the throne of Israel, and whose right it is. See the famous prophecy, Gen. xlix, 10, and Luke i, 32. The עוה âvah, which we translate overturn, is thrice repeated here; to point out, say the Rabbins, the three conquests of Jerusalem, in which Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, and Zedekiah, were overthrown.

Verse 28. Concerning the Ammonites] They had reproached and insulted Judea in its low estate, see chap. xxv. This prophecy against them was fulfilled about five years after the taking of Jerusalem. See Joseph. Ant. l. x, c. 11; and Jer. chap. xxvii, xlviii, xlix; Ezek. xxv.

Verse 30. I will judge thee] This seems to refer to Nebuchadnezzar, who, after his return from Jerusalem, became insane, and lived like a beast for seven years: but was afterwards restored, and acknowledged the Lord.

Verse 32. Thou shalt be no more remembered] The empire of the Chaldeans was destroyed, and the power transferred to the Persians; the Persian empire was destroyed, and given to the Greeks; the Greek empire was destroyed, and given to the Mohammedans; and the destruction of the Mohammedans is at no great distance.

CHAPTER XXII.

This Chapter contains a recital of the sins of Jerusalem, 1—12; for which God threatens it with severe judgments, 13—16, in order to purify it from the dross, 17—22. And as the corruption is general, pervading prophets, priests, princes, and people; so, it is declared, shall be the punishment, 23—31.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXII.

Verse 2. Wilt thou judge the bloody city] Pronounce the sentence of death against the murderess.

Shew her all her abominations.] And a most revolting and dreadful catalogue of these is in consequence exhibited.

Verse 3. Her time may come] Till now, it was my longin the midst of it, that her time may come, and maketh idols against herself to defile herself.

4 Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou hast [a] shed; and hast defiled thyself in thine idols which thou hast made; and thou hast caused thy days to draw near, and art come even unto thy years: [b] therefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen, and a mocking to all countries.

5 Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee, which art [c] infamous and much vexed.

6 Behold, [d] the princes of Israel, every one were in thee to their [e] power to shed blood.

7 In thee have they [f] set light by father and mother: in the midst of thee have they [g] dealt by [h] oppression with the stranger: in thee have they vexed the fatherless and the widow.

8 Thou hast [i] despised mine holy things, and hast [k] profaned my sabbaths.

9 In thee are [l] men [m] that carry tales to shed blood: [n] and in thee they eat upon the mountains: in the midst of thee they commit lewdness.

10 In thee have they [o] discovered their fathers' nakedness: in thee have they humbled her that was [p] set apart for pollution.

11 And [q] one hath committed abomination [r] with his neighbour's wife; and [s] another [t] hath [u] lewdly defiled his daughter in law; and another in thee hath humbled his [x] sister, his father's daughter.

12 In thee [y] have they taken gifts to shed blood; [z] thou hast taken usury and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion, and [a] hast forgotten me, saith the Lord GOD.

13 Behold, therefore, I have [b] smitten mine hand at thy dishonest gain which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee.

14 [c] Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with thee? [d] I the LORD have spoken it, and will do it.

15 And [e] I will scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and [f] will consume thy filthiness out of thee.

16 And thou [g] shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen, and [h] thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

suffering; she has fulfilled her days,—completed the time of her probation,—has not mended, but is daily worse; therefore, her judgment can linger no longer.

Verse 4. Thou art become guilty in thy blood] Thou art guilty of blood.

Verse 5. Those that be near] Both distant as well as neighbouring provinces consider thee the most abandoned of characters; and through thee, many have been involved in distress and ruin.

Verse 6. Behold, the princes] Ye are a vile and murderous people, and your princes have been of the same character. Like people like prince.

Verse 7. In thee have they set light] The children do not reverence their parents. Parental affection and filial respect do not exist among you. The stranger is not only not succoured, but he is oppressed. The widows and fatherless are vexed by wrongs and exactions.

Verse 8. Thou hast despised] All my ordinances are not only neglected, but treated with contempt; and my sabbaths profaned. There is not only no power of godliness among you, but there is no form.

Verse 9. In thee are men that carry tales] Witnesses that will swear any thing, even where life is concerned.

They eat upon the mountains] Sacrifice to idols, and celebrate their festivals.

Verse 10. In thee have they discovered] They are guilty of the most abominable incest.

In thee have they humbled] In their unholy and unnatural connexions, they have not abstained from those set apart, because of their infirmities. The catalogue of crimes that follow is too plain to require comment.

Verse 16. Thou shalt know that I am the LORD.] I shall so deal with and punish thee, that thou shalt be obliged to own the vindictive hand of a sin-avenging God.

Verse 18. The house of Israel is to me become dross] They are all like base metal; brass, tin, iron, and lead, alloyed together with silver. Ye must be put in the furnace, subjected to the most intense fire, till your impurities are become dross: all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are even the [a] dross of silver.

A. M. cir. 3411. B. C. cir. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 24.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem.

20 [b] As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you.

21 Yea, I will gather you, and [c] blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.

22 As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I the LORD have [d] poured out my fury upon you.

23 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, say unto her, Thou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation.

25 [e] There is a conspiracy of her prophets in the midst thereof, like a roaring lion ravening the prey; they [f] have devoured souls; [g] they have taken the treasure and precious things; they have made her many widows in the midst thereof.

26 [h] Her priests have [i] violated my law, and have [k] profaned mine holy things; they have put no [l] difference between the holy and profane, neither have they shewed difference between the unclean and the clean, and have hid their eyes from my sabbaths, and I am profaned among them.

A. M. cir. 3411. B. C. cir. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 24.

27 Her [m] princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, and to destroy souls, to get dishonest gain.

28 And [n] her prophets have daubed them with untempered morter, [o] seeing vanity, and divining lies unto them, saying, Thus saith the Lord GOD, when the LORD hath not spoken.

29 [p] The people of the land have used [q] oppression, and exercised robbery, and have vexed the poor and needy: yea, they have [r] oppressed the stranger [s] wrongfully.

30 [t] And I sought for a man among them, that should [u] make up the hedge, and [x] stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none.

31 Therefore have I [y] poured out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath: [z] their own way have I recompensed upon their heads, saith the Lord GOD.

consumed away. No ordinary means will avail any thing; the most violent must be resorted to.

Verse 19. I will gather you] Jerusalem is represented here as the fining pot; all the people are to be gathered together in it, and the Chaldean fire is to melt the whole. And God will increase thy sufferings: as the refiner blows the fire with his bellows; so God will blow upon you with the fire of his wrath, ver. 21.

Verse 24. Thou art the land that is not cleansed] Thou art like a country where there is no rain, either to cleanse the garments, or fertilize the ground.

Verse 25. There is a conspiracy] The false prophets have united together to say, and support, the same things; and have been the cause of the destruction of souls, and the death of many; so that widows, through their means, are multiplied in thee.

Verse 26. Her priests] Even they whose lips should preserve knowledge, have not instructed the people: they have violated my law; not only in their private conduct, but in their careless and corrupt manner of serving in my temple.

Verse 27. Her princes] Are as bad as her priests; they are rapacious, and grievously oppress the people by unjust impositions in order to increase their revenues.

Verse 28. Her prophets] Even those who profess themselves to be my prophets, have been unfaithful in the discharge of their office; have soothed the people in their sins, and pretended to have oracles of peace and safety when I had not spoken to them.

Verse 29. The people] All that have power or authority have abused it; vexed and oppressed the poor, the needy, and the stranger.

Verse 30. I sought for a man] I saw that there was a grievous breach made in the moral state and feeling of the people: and I sought for a man that would stand in the gap;—that would faithfully exhort, reprove, and counsel, with all long suffering and doctrine. But none was to be found!

Verse 31. Therefore] Because of the profligacies already mentioned;—because of the false worship so generally practised;—because of the false prophets tolerated;—because of the unholy and profane priesthood;—because of the oppressive princes;—because of the unfaithful and deceiving prophets;—because of the oppressions of petty officers;—and because of the total corruption of manners in all ranks, places, offices, &c.

Have I poured out my indignation—consumed them with the fire of my wrath] Considering the above, has there not been sufficient reason why I should abandon such a people, and pour out upon them such a destructive storm of calamities?

CHAPTER XXIII.

The idolatries of Samaria and Jerusalem are represented in this Chapter by the bad practices of two common harlots, for which God denounces severe judgments against them, 1—49. See the sixteenth Chapter, where the same metaphor is enlarged upon as here, it being the Prophet's view to excite the utmost detestation of the crime against which he inveighs.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIII.

Verse 2. Son of man, there were two women] All the Hebrews were derived from one source, Abraham and Sarah; and, till the schism under Rehoboam, formed but one people: but as these ten tribes and a half separated from Judah and Benjamin, they became two distinct people under different kings; called the kingdom of Judah, and the kingdom of Israel. They are called here, because of their consanguinity, two sisters. The elder, Samaria, (for there was the seat of government for the kingdom of Israel,) was called אהלה aholah, "a tent." The younger, Judah, was called אהליבה aholibah, "my tent is in her," because the Temple of God was in Jerusalem, the seat of the government of the kingdom of Judah.

Verse 5. And Aholah played the harlot] Without entering into detail here, or following the figures, they both became idolatrous, and received the impure rites of the Egyptians, Assyrians, and Chaldeans; of which connexion the prophet speaks here as he did in chap. xvi, which see.

In this Chapter there are many of what we would call indelicate expressions, because a parallel is run between idolatry and prostitution; and the circumstances of the latter illustrate the peculiarities of the former. In such cases, perhaps, the matter alone was given to the prophet; and he was left to use his own language, and amplify, as he saw good. Ezekiel was among the Jews, what Juvenal was among the Romans; a rough reprover of the most abominable vices. They both spoke of things as they found them; stripped vice naked, and scourged it publicly. The original is still more rough than the translation; and surely there is no need of a comment to explain imagery that is but too generally understood. I have said enough on chap. xvi, and to that I must refer the reader. It is true, that there are a few things here in the shade, that might be illustrated by anatomy; and it would not be difficult to do it: but they are not necessary to salvation, and I shall not take off the covering. They were sufficiently understood by those for whose use they were originally designed.

Verse 6. Clothed with blue] The purple dye was highly valued among the ancients, and at first was only used by kings; at last it was used among the military, particularly by officers of high rank in the country.

with all their idols she defiled herself.

8 Neither left she her whoredoms brought [a] from Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.

9 Wherefore I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the [b] Assyrians, upon whom she doted.

10 These [c] discovered her nakedness: they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword: and she became [d] famous among women: for they had executed judgment upon her.

11 And [e] when her sister Aholibah saw this, [f] she [g] was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms [h] more than her sister in her whoredoms.

12 She doted upon the [i] Assyrians her neighbours, [k] captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men.

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, that they took both one way,

14 And that she increased her whoredoms: for when she saw men pourtrayed upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermilion,

15 Girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity:

16 [l] And [m] as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, and sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.

17 And the [n] Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and [o] her mind was [p] alienated from them.

A. M. cir. 3411. B. C. cir. 593. Ol. XLVI. 4. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 24.

18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness: then [q] my mind was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister.

19 Yet she multiplied her whoredoms in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, [r] wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.

20 For she doted upon their paramours, [s] whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses.

21 Thus thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.

22 Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord GOD; [t] Behold, I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on every side;

23 The Babylonians, and all the Chaldeans, [u] Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them: [x] all of them desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

24 And they shall come against thee with chariots, waggons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, which shall set against thee buckler and shield and helmet round about; and I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments.

25 And I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall deal furiously with thee: they shall take away thy nose and thine ears; and thy remnant shall fall by the sword: they shall Verse 14. Men pourtrayed upon the wall] See on chap. viii, 10.

Verse 20. She doted upon their paramours] פלגשיהם pilgasheyhem, their harlots or concubines. Anciently, harlot meant in our language either the male or female prostitute.

Verse 23. Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa] פקוד ושוע וקוע. These names have been thought to designate certain people bordering on the Chaldeans: but no geographer has ever been able to find them out.

In our old translations these names were considered appellatives, rulers, mighty men, and tirantes. Others, following the literal import of the words, have translated, visiting, shouting and retreating. Others have applied them to the habits of the Chaldean soldiers. Pekod, signifying the muster or review of armies; Shoa, the magnificence of their uniform and arms; and Koa, the marks or embroidery of the clothes of the captains and generals. Grotius thought that they might be names of contiguous nations: Pekod, the Bactrians; Shoa, a people of Armenia; and Koa, the Medes. I have nothing to add that would satisfy myself, or be edifying to my readers.

Verse 25. Shall take away thy nose] A punishment take thy sons and thy daughters; and thy residue shall be devoured by the fire.

26 [a] They shall also strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy [b] fair jewels.

27 Thus [c] will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and [d] thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt: so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more.

28 For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will deliver thee into the hand of them [e] whom thou hatest, into the hand of them [f] from whom thy mind is alienated:

29 And they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and [g] shall leave thee naked and bare: and the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

30 I will do these things unto thee, because thou hast [h] gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

31 Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give her [i] cup into thine hand.

32 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Thou shalt drink of thy sister's cup deep and large; [k] thou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much.

33 Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow, with the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria.

34 Thou shalt [l] even drink it and suck it out, and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, and pluck off thine own breasts: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

35 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou [m] hast forgotten me, and [n] cast me behind thy back, therefore bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

36 The LORD said moreover unto me; Son of man, wilt thou [o] judge [p] Aholah and Aholibah? yea, [q] declare unto them their abominations;

37 That they have committed adultery, and [r] blood is in their hands, and with their idols have they committed adultery, and have also caused their sons, [s] whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire, to devour them.

38 Moreover this they have done unto me: they have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and [t] have profaned my sabbaths.

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and, lo, [u] thus have they done in the midst of mine house.

40 And furthermore, that ye have sent for men [x] to come from far, [y] unto whom a messenger was sent; and, lo, they came: for whom thou didst [z] wash thyself, [a] paintedst thy eyes, and deckedst thyself with ornaments, frequent among the Persians and Chaldeans, as ancient authors tell. Adulteries were punished in this way; and to this Martial refers,— OVID'S Ep. 5.

Verse 38. They have defiled my sanctuary] By placing idols there.

Verse 41. And satest upon a stately bed] Hast raised a stately altar to thy idols; probably alluding to that which Ahaz ordered to be made, after the similitude of that which he saw at Damascus. The bed here is in allusion to the sofas on which the ancients were accustomed to recline at their meals; or to the couches on which they place Asiatic brides, with incense pots and sweet meats on a table before them.

Verse 42. And a voice of a multitude] This seems to be an account of an idolatrous festival, where a riotous mul-was with her: and with the men [a] of the common sort were brought [b] Sabeans from the wilderness, which put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads.

43 Then said I unto her that was old in adulteries, Will they now commit [c] whoredoms with her, and she with them?

44 Yet they went in unto her, as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot: so went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women.

45 And the righteous men, they shall [d] judge them after the manner of adulteresses, and after the manner of women that shed blood; because they are adulteresses, and [e] blood is in their hands.

47 [h] And the company shall stone them with stones, and [i] dispatch them with their swords; they [k] shall slay their sons and their daughters, and burn up their houses with fire.

48 Thus [l] will I cause lewdness to cease out of the land, [m] that all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Prophet now informs those of the captivity of the very day on which Nebuchadnezzar lays siege to Jerusalem, (compare Jer. lii, 4,) and describes the fate of that city and its inhabitants by a very apt similitude, 1—14. As another sign of the greatness of those calamities, the Prophet is forbidden to mourn for his wife, of whom he is to be deprived; intimating thereby that the sufferings of the Jews should be so astonishing as to surpass all expressions of grief; and that private sorrow, however affectionate and tender the object, ought to be absorbed in the public calamities, 15—18. The Prophet, having farther expressed his prediction in plain terms, intimates that he was to speak to them no more till they should have the news of these prophecies having been fulfilled, 19—27.

Verse 3. Set on a pot] The pot was Jerusalem; the flesh,

3 [a] And utter a parable unto the rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; [b] Set on a pot, set it on, and also pour water into it:

4 Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder; fill it with the choice bones.

5 Take the choice of the flock, and [c] burn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein.

6 Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Woe to [d] the bloody city, to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! bring it out piece by piece; let no [e] lot fall upon it.

7 For her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; [f] she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

8 That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; [g] I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

9 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; [h] Woe to the bloody city! I will even make the pile for fire great.

the inhabitants in general; every good piece, the thigh and the shoulder, king Zedekiah and his family; the bones, the soldiers; and the setting on the pot, the commencement of the siege. The prophet was then in Mesopotamia; and he was told particularly to mark the day, &c., that it might be seen how precisely the spirit of prophecy had shewn the very day in which the siege took place. Under the same image of a boiling pot, Jeremiah had represented the siege of Jerusalem, chap. i, 13. Ezekiel was a priest; the action of boiling pots was familiar to him, as these things were much in use in the temple service.

Verse 5. Make it boil well] Let it boil over, that its own scum may augment the fire, that the bones, the soldiers, may be seethed therein. Let its contentions, divided counsels, and disunion, be the means of increasing its miseries. רתח רלחיה ratach relachiah, let it bubble its bubbling; something like that of the poet,—

> "Bubble, bubble, toil and trouble:
> Fire burn, and cauldron bubble."

Very like the noise made by ebullition, when a pot of thick broth, "sleek and slab," is set over a fierce fire. Such was that here represented, in which all the flesh, the fat, and the bones, were to be boiled, and generally dissolved together.

Verse 6. Let no lot fall upon it.] Pull out the flesh indiscriminately, let no piece be chosen for king or priest; thus shewing that all should be involved in one indiscriminate ruin.

Verse 7. For her blood is in the midst of her] She gloried in her idol sacrifices; she offered them upon a rock, where the blood should remain evident; and she poured none upon the ground to cover it with dust, in horror of that moral evil that required the blood of an innocent creature to be shed, in order to the atonement of the offender's guilt. To cover the blood of the victim, was a command of the Law, Lev. xvii, 13. Deut. xii, 24.

Verse 8. That it might cause fury] This very blood shall be against them, as the blood of Abel was against Cain.

Verse 10. Heap on wood] Let the siege be severe, the carnage great, and the ruin and catastrophe complete.

Verse 13. In thy filthiness is lewdness] זמה zimmah, a word that denominates the worst kinds of impurity; adultery, incest, &c., and the purpose, wish, design, and ardent desire, to do these things. Her's were not accidental sins, they were abominations by design; and they were the worse in her, because God had cleansed her, had separated the Israelites from idolatry, idolatrous nations, and by His institutions removed from them all idolatrous incentives. But they formed alliances with the heathens, and adopted all their abominations; therefore, God would not spare them. See ver. 14.

16 Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke: yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears [a] run down.

17 [b] Forbear to cry, [c] make no mourning for the dead, [d] bind the tire of thine head upon thee, and [e] put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and [f] cover not thy [g] lips, and eat not the bread of men.

19 And the people said unto me, [h] Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so?

20 Then I answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

21 Speak unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, [i] I will profane my sanctuary, the excellency of your strength, [k] the desire of your eyes, and [l] that which your soul pitieth; [m] and your sons and your daughters whom ye have left, shall fall by the sword.

24 Thus [q] Ezekiel is unto you a sign: according to all that he hath done shall ye do: [r] and when this cometh, [s] ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

25 Also, thou son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them [t] their strength, the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and [u] that whereupon they set their minds, their sons and their daughters, 26 That [x] he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it with thine ears?

Verse 16. Behold I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes] Here is an intimation, that the stroke he was to suffer was to be above all grief; that it would be so great, as to prevent the relief of tears.

Curæ leves loquuntur, graviores silent, is a well accredited maxim in such cases. Superficial griefs affect the easier moved passions; great ones affect the soul itself, in its powers of reasoning, reflecting, comparing, recollecting, &c., when the sufferer feels all the weight of woe.

Verse 17. Make no mourning] As a priest, he could make no public mourning, Lev. xxi, 1, &c.

Bind the tire of thine head] This seems to refer to the high priest's bonnet; or, perhaps, one worn by the ordinary priests: it might have been a black veil to cover the head.

Put on thy shoes upon thy feet] Walking barefoot was a sign of grief.

Cover not thy lips] Mourners covered the under part of the face, from the nose to the bottom of the chin.

Eat not the bread of men.] לחם אנשים lechem enoshim, the bread of miserable men, i. e. mourners; probably, the funeral banquet.

Verse 18. At even my wife died] The prophet's wife was a type of the city, which was to him exceedingly dear. The death of his wife represented the destruction of the city by the Chaldeans, see ver. 21, where the temple is represented to be the desire of his eyes, as his wife was, ver. 16.

Verse. 19. Wilt thou not tell us] In the following verses, he explains and applies the whole of what he had done and said.

Verse 27. In that day shall thy mouth be opened] That is, when some one who shall have escaped from Jerusalem, having arrived among the captives, shall inform them of the destruction of the city, the temple, the royal family, and the people at large; till then he might suppress his tears and lamentations. And we find from chap. xxxiii, 21, that one did actually escape from the city, and informed the prophet and his brethren in captivity, that the city was smitten.

Thus he was not only a prophet to foretel such things, but he was also a sign or portent, shadowing them out by circumstances in his own person and family; and thus the prediction, agreeing so perfectly with the event, proved that the previous information was from the Lord.

CHAPTER XXV.

This Chapter contains threatenings of the heavy judgments of God against the Ammonites, 1—7; Moabites, 8—11; Edomites, 12—14; and Philistines, 15—17; on account of their hatred to His people, and their insulting them in the time of their distress. These prophecies were fulfilled by the instrumentality of Nebuchadnezzar about five years after the destruction of Jerusalem. The same events were predicted by several of the other prophets, as may be seen from the citation of parallel texts in the Margin.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXV.

Verse 1. The word of the LORD] The chronological order of this Chapter is after chap. xxxiii, 21, &c. See Abp. Newcome.

Verse 2. Set thy face against the Ammonites] We have already seen, chap. xxi, 19, &c., that when Nebuchadnezzar left Babylon, he was in doubt whether he should besiege Riblath, the capital of the Ammonites, or Jerusalem, the capital of the Jews, first; and, having used his divination he was determined, by the result, to attack Jerusalem the first. He did so; and the Ammonites, seeing the success of his arms, made friends with him, and exulted in the ruin of the Jews. God resents this; and predicts their downfal with that of Edom, Moab, and the Philistines. The fulfilment of this prediction is not noted in Scripture: but Josephus tells us, that about five years after the taking of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar turned his arms against the Ammonites and Moabites, and afterwards against Egypt; and having subdued those nations, he returned to Babylon. Joseph. Antiq. l. x, c. ii. Berosus states, as quoted by Josephus, contra App. that Nebuchadnezzar subdued Syria, Arabia, Phœnicia, and Egypt: and, consequently, that he had brought under his dominion the Ammonites, Moabites, and Idumeans, who were included among the Philistines. See Calmet.

Verse 4. Will deliver thee to the men of the east] Probably the Scenite Arabs, Ishmaelites, and people of Kedar, who seized upon the provinces of the vanquished Ammonites, &c. The following description suits this people only, living on fruits, the milk of their flocks, using camels, &c. Some think the people of the east mean the Chaldeans.

Verse 7. I will cause thee to perish] Except in history, the name of the Ammonites does not exist.

Verse 8. Moab and Seir do say] Seir means the Idumeans. It appears that both these, with the Ammonites, had made a league with Zedekiah, Jer. xxvii, 3, which they did not keep; and it is supposed that they even joined with the Chaldeans.

Verse 9. I will open the side] קתף ketheph, the shoulder, the strongest frontier place. Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim, were strong frontier towns of Moab.

11 And I will execute judgments upon Moab; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

12 Thus saith the Lord God; [d] Because that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah [e] by taking vengeance, and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them;

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it; and I will make it desolate from Teman; and [f] they of Dedan shall fall by the sword.

14 And [g] I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel: and they shall do in Edom according to mine anger and according to my fury; and they shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord God.

15 Thus saith the Lord God; [h] Because [i] the Philistines have dealt by revenge, and have taken vengeance with a despiteful heart, to destroy it [k] for the old hatred;

16 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, [l] I will stretch out mine hand upon the Philistines, and I will cut off the [m] Cherethims, [n] and destroy the remnant of the [o] sea coasts.

17 And I will [p] execute great [q] vengeance upon them with furious [r] rebukes; [s] and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall lay my vengeance upon them.

Verse 10. That the Ammonites] The Syriac has, That Rabbah of the sons of Ammon be not remembered.

Verse 12. Because that Edom hath dealt] The Edomites were the most inveterate enemies of the Jews from the very earliest times, and ever did all that they could to annoy them.

Verse 13. I will make it desolate from Teman] Teman and Dedan were both cities of the Moabites, and apparently at each extremity of the land.

Verse 14. I will lay my vengeance upon Edom] God will not allow men to insult those whom He has cast down. His judgment is sufficient; to add more is an insult to God.

By the hand of my people Israel] This was fulfilled by the Maccabees, who not only defeated them, and brought them under complete subjection, but obliged them to receive circumcision, Joseph. Antiq. l. xiii, c. 17. 1 Macc. v, 65. 2 Macc. x, 16.

Verse 15. Because the Philistines] They were as inimical to the Jews as the Ammonites, &c., were. Nebuchadnezzar punished them because they had assisted the Tyrians during the time he was besieging their city.

I will cut off the Cherethims] See the Note on 2 Sam. viii, 18.

The remnant of the sea coasts.] The different seignories of the Philistines inhabited the coast of the Mediterranean sea, from Judea to Egypt. For other matters relative to these prophecies, see the passages in the Margin.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The prophecy beginning here, and ending at the twentieth verse of the twenty-eighth Chapter, is a declaration of the judgments of God against Tyre, a very famous commercial city of antiquity, which was taken by Nebuchadnezzar after an arduous siege of thirteen years. The Prophet begins with introducing Tyre insulting Jerusalem, and congratulating herself on the prospect of accession to her commerce now that this city was no more, 1, 2. Upon which God denounces utter destruction to Tyre, and the cities depending on her, 3—6. We have then a particular account of the person raised up in the course of the Divine providence to accomplish this work. We, as it were, see his mighty hosts (which are likened to the waves of the sea for their multitude) raising the mounds, setting the engines, and shaking the walls; we hear the noise of the horsemen, and the sound of their cars; we see the clouds of smoke and dust; we see the sword bathed in blood, and hear the groans of the dying. Tyre (whose buildings were very splendid and magnificent, and whose walls were one hundred and fifty feet in height with a proportionable breadth,) immediately disappears; her strong, (and as she thought impregnable,) towers are thrown down; and her very dust is buried in the sea. Nothing remains but the bare rock, 7—14. The scene is then varied. The isles and adjacent regions, by a very strong and beautiful figure, are represented to be shaken, as with a mighty earthquake, by the violent concussion occasioned by the fall of Tyre. The groans of the dying reach the ears of the people inhabiting those regions. Their princes, alarmed for themselves, and grieved for Tyre, descend from their thrones, lay aside their robes, and clothe themselves with—sackcloth?—no, but with trembling! Arrayed in this astonishing attire, the Prophet introduces them as a chorus of mourners, lamenting Tyre in a funeral song or dirge, as customary on the death of renowned personages. And pursuing the same image still farther, in the person of God, he performs the last sad office for her. She is brought forth from her place in solemn pomp; the pit is dug for her; and she is buried, to rise no more, 15—21. Such is the prophecy concerning Tyre, comprehending both the city on the continent and that on the island, and most punctually fulfilled in regard to both. That on the continent was razed to the ground by Nebuchadnezzar, B. C. 572, and that on the island by Alexander the Great, B. C. 332. And at present, and for ages back, this ancient and renowned city, once the emporium of the world, and by her great naval superiority the centre of a powerful monarchy, is literally what the Prophet has repeatedly foretold it should be, and what in his time was, humanly speaking, so highly improbable: a BARE rock; a place to spread nets on!

AND it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, [a] because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem, [b] Aha, she is broken that was the gates of the people: she is turned unto me: I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste:

3 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD: Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up.

4 And they shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers: I will also scrape her dust from her, and [c] make her like the top of a rock.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVI.

Verse 1. The eleventh year] This was the year in which Jerusalem was taken; the eleventh of the captivity of Jeconiah, and the eleventh of the reign of Zedekiah.—What month we are not told, though the day is mentioned. There have been many conjectures about this, which are not of sufficient consequence to be detailed.

Verse 2. Tyrus hath said] From this it would appear that Jerusalem had been taken, which was on the fourth month of this year: but it is possible that the prophet speaks of the event before-hand.

She is broken that was the gates of the people] Jerusalem, a general emporium.

I shall be replenished] The merchandise that went to Jerusalem will come to me (to Tyre.)

Verse 3. Will cause many nations to come up against thee] We have already seen that the empire of the Chaldeans was composed of many different provinces, and that Nebuchadnezzar's army was composed of soldiers from different nations; these may be the people meant: but I doubt whether this may not refer to the different nations which in successive ages fought against Tyre. It was at last finally destroyed in the sixteenth century of the Christian æra.

Verse 4. I will also scrape her dust from her] I will totally destroy her fortifications; and leave her nothing but a barren rock, as she was before. This cannot refer to the capture of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar. It flourished long after his time.

Verse 5. A place for the spreading of nets] A place for the habitation of some poor fishermen, who spent the fishing season there, and were accustomed to dry their nets upon the rocks. See on ver. 11.

9 And he shall set engines of war against thy walls, and with his axes he shall break down thy towers.

10 By reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall cover thee: thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots, when he shall enter into thy gates, [d] as men enter into a city wherein is made a breach.

11 With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets: he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall go down to the ground.

12 And they shall make a spoil of thy riches, and make a prey of thy merchandise: and they shall break down thy walls, and destroy [e] thy pleasant houses: and they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water.

main land, and the other on a rock in the sea, opposite to that on the main land; sometimes the one seems to be spoken of, and sometimes the other. That on the land, Palætyre, was soon taken: but that in the sea cost Nebuchadnezzar thirteen years of siege and blockade. The two formed only one city, and one state.

Verse 7. Nebuchadrezzar—a king of kings] An ancient title among those proud Asiatic despots پادشاه شاهنشاه shahinshah and padshah, titles still in use.

Verse 8. Thy daughters in the field] This seems to be spoken of Palætyre, or Tyre on the main land; for forts, mounts, engines of war, horses, and chariots, could not be brought to act against the other.

Verse 12. And they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water.] This answers to the taking of Tyre by Alexander: he actually took the timbers, stones, rubbish, &c., of old Tyre, and filled up the space between it and new Tyre, and thus connected the latter with the main land; and this he was obliged to do before he could take it.

Verse 14. Thou shalt be built no more] If this refer to Nebuchadrezzar's capture of the city, old Tyre must be intended: that was destroyed by him, and never rebuilt. But I doubt whether the whole of this prophecy do not refer to the taking of Tyre by Alexander, nearly three hundred years after its capture by Nebuchadnezzar. Indeed it may include more recent conquests of this important city. It went through a variety of vicissitudes till 1289, when it and the neighbouring towns were sacked and ravaged by the Mamelukes. Mr. Maundrel, who visited this place, says, "it is a Babel of broken walls, pillars, vaults, &c., there being not so much as one entire house left! Its present inhabitants are only a few poor wretches, harbouring themselves in the vaults, and subsisting chiefly upon fishing: who seem to be preserved in this place by Divine Providence, as a visible argument how God has fulfilled His word concerning Tyre, that it should be the top of a rock, a place for fishers to dry their nets on."

Verse 15. The isles shake at the sound of thy fall] All those which had traded with this city, which was the grand mart, and on which they all depended. Her ruin involved them all, and caused general wailing.

Verse 16. The princes of the sea] The chief maritime states, such as Leptis, Utica, Carthage, Gades, &c. See Calmet.

that wast inhabited [a] of seafaring men, the renowned city, which wast [b] strong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it!

18 Now shall [c] the isles tremble in the day of thy fall; yea, the isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy departure.

19 For thus saith the Lord GOD; When I shall make thee a desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; when I shall bring up the deep upon thee, and great waters shall cover thee;

20 When I shall bring thee down [d] with them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts of the earth, in [e] places desolate of old, with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; and I shall set glory [f] in the land of the living; was so great, that Alexander despaired of being able to reduce it, unless he could fill up that arm of the sea that ran between it and the main land. And this work cost his army seven months of labour.

Verse 20. And I shall set glory in the land of the living.] Judea so called, the land of the living God.

Verse 21. Yet shalt thou never be found again] This is literally true: there is not the smallest vestige of the ancient Tyre, that which was erected on the main land. Even the ground seems to have been washed away: and the new Tyre is in nearly a similar state. I think this prophecy must be extended to the whole of the duration of Tyre. If it now be found to be in the state here described, it is sufficient to shew the truth of the prophecy. And now it is found precisely in the state which the above prophetic declarations, taken according to the letter, point out! No word of God can ever fall to the ground.

Notwithstanding the former destructions, Tyre was a place of some consequence in the time of St. Paul. There was then a church there, see Acts xxi, 3, 4, &c., and which afterwards became famous. Calmet observes, it afforded a great number of martyrs for the Christian church.

CHAPTER XXVII.

This Chapter may be considered as the second part of the prophecy concerning Tyre. The Prophet pursues his subject in the manner of those ancient lamentations or funeral songs, in which the præficæ, or mourning women, first recounted whatever was great or praiseworthy in the deceased, and then mourned his fall. Here the riches, glory, and extensive commerce, of Tyre are enlarged upon, 1—25. Her downfal is then described in a beautiful allegory, executed in a few words, with astonishing brevity, propriety, and perspicuity, 26; upon which all the maritime and commercial world are represented as grieved and astonished at her fate, and greatly alarmed for their own, 27—36. Besides the view which this Chapter gives of the conduct of Providence, and the example with which it furnishes the critic and man of taste of a very elegant and highly finished piece of composition, it likewise affords the antiquary a very curious and interesting account of the wealth and commerce of ancient times. And to the mind that looks for "a city that hath foundations," what a picture does the whole present of the mutability and inanity of all earthly things! Many of the places mentioned in ancient history have, like Tyre, long ago lost their political consequence; the geographical situation of others cannot be traced; they have sunk in the deep waters of oblivion; the east wind hath carried them away.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVII.

Verse 2. Take up a lamentation for Tyrus] This is a singular and curious Chapter. It gives a very circumstantial account of the trade of Tyre with different parts of the world, and the different sorts of merchandise in which she trafficked. The places and the imports are as regularly entered here as they could have been in a European custom-house.

Verse 3. The entry of the sea] Tyre was a small island, or rather rock, in the sea, at a short distance from the main land. We have already seen that there was another Tyre on the main land: but they are both considered as one city.

Verse 4. Thy builders have perfected thy beauty.] Under the allegory of a beautiful ship the prophet, here and in the following verses, paints the glory of this ancient city. Horace describes the commonwealth of Rome by the same allegory, and is as minute in his description, Lib. Odar, lib. I. Od. xiv,—

O navis, referent in mare te novi
Fluctus? O quid agis? Fortiter occupa
Portum. Nonne vides, ut
Nudum remigio latus,
Et malus celeri saucius Africo,
Antennæque gemant? ac sine funibus
Vix durare carinæ
Possint imperiosius
Æquor? non tibi sunt integra lintea;
Non Dî, quos iterum pressa voces malo:
Quamvis Pontica pinus,
Sylvæ filia nobilis,
Jactes et genus, et nomen inutile.
Nil pictis timidus navita puppibus
Fidit. Tu, nisi ventis
Debes ludibrium, cave.

Unhappy vessel, shall the waves again
Tumultuous bear thee to the faithless main?
What, would thy madness thus with storms to sport?
Cast firm your anchor in the friendly port.
Behold thy naked decks, the wounded mast,
And sail-yards groan beneath the southern blast.
Nor, without ropes, thy keel can longer brave
The rushing fury of th' imperious wave:
Torn are thy sails; thy guardian gods are lost,
Whom you might call, in future tempests tost.
What, though majestic in your pride you stood,
A noble daughter of the Pontic wood,
You now may vainly boast an empty name,
Of birth conspicuous in the rolls of fame.
The mariner, when storms around him rise,
No longer on a painted stern relies.
Ah! yet take heed, lest these new tempests sweep,
In sportive rage, thy glories to the deep. FRANCIS.

I give this as a striking parallel to many passages in this Chapter.

Verse 5. Fir trees of Senir] Senir is a mountain which the Sidonians called Sarion, and the Hebrews Hermon, Deut. iii, 9. It was beyond Jordan, and extended from Libanus to the mountains of Gilead.

Verse 6. Of the oaks of Bashan] Some translate alder; others, the pine.

The company of the Ashurites] The word אשרים asherim is by several translated box-wood. The seats or benches being made of this wood, inlaid with ivory.

Isles of Chittim] The Italian islands;—the islands of Greece;—Cyprus. Calmet says Macedonia is meant.

Verse 7. Fine linen] שש shesh, cotton cloth. In this sense the word is generally to be understood.

To be thy sail] Probably the flag,—ensign, or pennant, is meant.

Blue and purple from the isles of Elishah] Elis, a part of the Peloponnesus.

Verse 8. Zidon and Arvad] Or, Arad. Two powerful cities on the Phœnician coast, in the neighbourhood of Tyre, from which Tyre had her sailors; and the best instructed of her own inhabitants were her pilots or steersmen.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

thy mariners: thy wise men, O Tyrus, that were in thee, were thy pilots.

9 The ancients of [a] Gebal and the wise men thereof were in thee thy [b] calkers: [c] all the ships of the sea with their mariners were in thee to occupy thy merchandise.

10 They of Persia and of Lud and of [d] Phut were in thine army, thy men of war: they hanged the shield and helmet in thee; they set forth thy comeliness.

11 The men of Arvad with thine army were upon thy walls round about, and the Gammadims were in thy towers: they hanged their shields upon thy walls round about; they have made [e] thy beauty perfect.

12 [f] Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs.

13 [g] Javan, Tubal, and Meshech, they were thy merchants: they traded [h] the persons of men and vessels of brass in thy [i] market.

14 They of the house of [k] Togarmah traded in thy fairs with horses and horsemen and mules.

15 The men of [l] Dedan were thy merchants; many isles were the merchandise of thine hand: they brought thee for a present horns of ivory and ebony.

16 Syria was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of [m] the wares of thy making: they occupied in thy fairs with emeralds, purple, and broidered work, and fine linen, and coral, and [n] agate.

17 Judah, and the land of Israel, they were thy merchants: they traded in thy market [o] wheat of [p] Minnith, and Pannag, and honey, and oil, and [q] balm. [r]

Verse 9. The ancients of Gebal] This was a city of Phœnicia, near mount Libanus, Josh. xiii, 5. It was called Biblos by the Greeks.

Thy calkers] Those who repaired their vessels; paying, as it is termed, pitched hemp into the seams, to prevent the water from oozing through.

To occupy thy merchandise.] That is, to be thy agents, or factors.

Verse 10. They of Persia] Lud, the Lydians; Phut, a people of Africa, see Gen. x, 6. From these places they had auxiliary troops; for, as they traded with the then known world, were rich, and could afford to give good pay, they no doubt had soldiers and sailors from every part. Skilful and desperate men will go any where after their price.

Verse 11. The Gammadims were in thy towers] Some think these were a people of Phœnicia; others, that tutelar images are meant; others, that the word expresses strong men, who acted as guards. The Vulgate reads Pygmæi, the pygmies, who were fabled to be little people of a cubit in height, from גמד gamad, a cubit: and we are told that this little people were celebrated for their wars with the cranes: but nothing of this kind can enter into this description. Probably a people inhabiting the promontories of Phœnicia are here intended; and their hanging their shields upon the walls is a proof that soldiers are meant, and persons of skill and prowess too.

Verse 12. Tarshish was thy merchant] After having given an account of the naval and military equipment of this city, he now speaks of the various places and peoples with whom the Tyrians traded, and the different kinds of merchandise imported from those places.

By Tarshish, some understand the Carthaginians: some think Tartessus, near the straits of Gibraltar, is meant;—others, Tharsis, in Cilicia. The place was famous for all the useful metals,—silver, iron, tin, and lead. All these they might have had from Britain.

Verse 13. Javan, Tubal, and Meshech] The Ionians, the Tybarenians, and the Cappadocians, or Moscovites.

They traded the persons of men] That is, they trafficked in slaves. The bodies and souls of men were bought and sold in those days, as in our degenerate age. With these also they traded in brazen vessels.

Verse 14. Togarmah] The Sarmatians. Some think Cappadocia. With these they dealt in horses, mules, and horsemen: or, probably, draught horses and war horses are intended.

Verse 15. The men of Dedan] Dedan was one of the descendants of Abraham, by Keturah; and dwelt in Arabia, Gen. xxv, 3. Ivory and ebony might come from that quarter. By way of distinction ivory is called both in Hebrew שן shen and in Arabic شن shen, the TOOTH; as that beautiful substance is the tooth of the elephant.

Verse 16. Syria] These were always a mercantile people. For the precious stones mentioned here see the Notes on Exod. xxviii, 17.

Verse 17. Judah, and the land of Israel—traded in thy market wheat] These words have been understood as articles of merchandise, not names of places. So the Jews traded with the Tyrians in wheat, stacté, balsam, honey, oil, and resin.

19 Dan also and Javan [a] going to and fro occupied in thy fairs: bright iron, cassia, and calamus, were in thy market.

20 [b] Dedan was thy merchant in [c] precious clothes for chariots.

21 Arabia, and all the princes of [d] Kedar, [e] they occupied with thee in lambs, and rams, and goats: in these were they thy merchants.

22 The merchants of [f] Sheba and Raamah, they were thy merchants: they occupied in thy fairs with chief of all spices, and with all precious stones, and gold.

23 [g] Haran, and Canneh, and Eden, the merchants of [h] Sheba, Asshur, and Chilmad, were thy merchants.

24 These were thy merchants in [i] all sorts of things, in blue [k] clothes, and broidered work, and in chests of rich apparel, bound with cords, and made of cedar, among thy merchandise.

White wool.] Very fine wool: wool of a fine quality. Some think Milesian wool is meant.

Verse 19. Dan also and Javan] It is probable that both these words mean some of the Grecian islands.

Going to and fro] They both took and brought,—imported and exported:—but מאוזל meuzal, from uzal, may be a proper name. What place is signified I cannot tell, unless it be Azal, a name, according to Kamoos, of the capital of Arabia Felix.

Verse 20. Dedan] Possibly the descendants of Dedan, son of Raamah, see Gen. x, 7.

In precious clothes for chariots.] Either fine carpets, or rich housing for horses, camels, &c., used for riding.

Verse 21. Arabia, and all the princes of Kedar] Arabia Deserta, on the confines of the Dead sea. The Kedarenes inhabited the same country. These brought lambs, rams, and goats, for the consumption of the city.

Verse 22. Sheba and Raamah] Inhabitants of Arabia Felix, at the entrance of the Persian Gulf, who were famous for their riches and spices.

Verse 23. Haran] In Mesopotamia:—well known in Scripture.

Canneh] Or, Chalané; see Gen. x, 10. It is supposed to be a cape, or port, of Arabia Felix, on the Indian sea.

Eden] Equally famous:—supposed to have been situated near the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates.

Sheba] Different from that in ver. 22. This was probably near the country of the Edomites.

Asshur] Perhaps the Assyrians.

Chilmad] Possibly Cholmadora, on the Euphrates. Ptol. lib. v, cap. 15. For several of these places, and the persons from whom they derived their names, see Gen. x, and the Notes there; and see Calmet.

Verse 24. These were thy merchants in all sorts of things] The above people traded with the Tyrians in a great variety of the most valuable merchandise:—blue, or purple cloth; boxes of cedar, covered with skins, and bound with silken cords, and sealed with an engraved seal, finely cut, &c. See the Chaldee.

Verse 25. The ships of Tarshish] The ships of Tharsis, in Cilicia, were the chief of those which traded with thee.

Verse 26. Thy rowers have brought thee into great waters] Tyre is still considered under the allegory of a ship; and all the vessels of different nations trading with her are represented as towing her into deep waters,—bringing her into great affluence. But, while in this state, a stormy east wind, or a destructive wind, meaning the Chaldeans, arises, and dashes her to pieces! See the ode from Horace already quoted on ver. 4.

Verse 27. Thy riches] This vast ship, laden with all kinds of valuable wares, and manned in the best manner, being wrecked, all her valuables, sailors, officers, &c., went to the bottom.

dashed against the rocks by the violence of the winds and the waves, and all hope of life was taken away, then a universal cry was set up by all on board.

Verse 30. Shall cry bitterly] All that were on the land seeing this dreadful sight, a gallant ship perishing with all her men and goods, are represented as setting up a dismal cry at this heart-rending sight. But what must they have felt who were on board? Reader, wert thou ever ship-wrecked? Wert thou ever in a hurricane on a lee rocky shore, where the helm had lost its power, and the sails were rendered useless? Dost thou remember that apparently last moment, when the ship drove up to the tremendous rocks, riding on the back of a mountainous surge? Then, what was the universal cry! Hast thou ever heard any thing so terrific! so appalling! so death and judgment-like! No!!! It is impossible. These are the circumstances,—this is the cry, that the prophet describes;—disorder, confusion, dismay, and ruin. And this is a scene which the present Writer has witnessed, himself a part of the wretched, when all hope of life was taken away, the yawning gulf opened, and nothing presented itself to support body or soul but that God who gave to both their being; and ultimately rescued him and his forlorn companions from one of the worst of deaths, by heaving the ship from the rocks by the agency of a tremendous receding wave. My soul hath these things still in remembrance, and therefore is humbled within me.

Verse 32. What city is like Tyrus] This, to the end of the Chapter, is the lamentation.

Verse 36. Shall hiss at thee] שרקו sharekoo, shall shriek for thee. This powerfully expresses the sensation made on the feelings of the spectators on the shore when they saw the vessel swallowed up.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The first part of this Chapter relates to a king of Tyre, probably the same who is called in the Phœnician annals Ithobalus. He seems to have been a vain man, who affected Divine honours. The Prophet treats his foolish pretensions with severe irony, and predicts his doom, 1—10. He then takes up a funeral dirge and lamentation over him in which his former pomp and splendour are finely contrasted with his fall, in terms that seem frequently to allude to the fall of Lucifer from heaven, (Isa. xiv,) 11—19. The overthrow of Sidon, the mother city of Tyre, is next announced, 20—23; and the Chapter concludes with a promise to the Jews of deliverance from all their enemies, and particularly of their restoration from the Babylonish captivity, 24—26.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thine heart is lifted up, and [a] thou hast said, I am a god, I sit in the seat of God, [b] in the [c] midst of the seas; [d] yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart as the heart of God:

3 Behold, [e] thou art wiser than Daniel; there is no secret that they can hide from thee:

4 With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures:

5 [f] By [g] thy great wisdom and by thy traffic hast thou increased thy riches, and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches:

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou hast set thine heart as the heart of God;

7 Behold, therefore I will bring strangers upon thee, [h] the terrible of the nations: and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy brightness.

8 They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas.

9 Wilt thou yet [i] say before him that slayeth thee, I am God; but thou shalt be a man, and no God, in the hand of him that [k] slayeth thee.

11 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Son of man, [m] take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord GOD; [n] Thou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty.

13 Thou hast been in [o] Eden the garden of God; every precious stone was thy covering, the [p] sardius, topaz, and the diamond, the [q] beryl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the [r] emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold: the workmanship of [s] thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created.

14 Thou art the anointed [t] cherub that covereth; and I have set thee so: thou wast upon [u] the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXVIII.

Verse 2. Say unto the prince of Tyrus] But who was this prince of Tyrus? Some think Hiram; some, Sin; some, the devil; others, Ithobaal, with whom the chronology and circumstances best agree. Origen thought the guardian angel of the city was intended.

I am a god] That is, I am absolute, independent, and accountable to none. He was a man of great pride and arrogance.

Verse 3. Thou art wiser than Daniel] Daniel was at this time living, and was reputable for his great wisdom. This is said ironically. See chap. xiv, 14, xxvi, 1.

Verse 5. By thy great wisdom] He attributed every thing to himself;—he did not acknowledge a Divine Providence. As he got all by himself; so he believed he could keep all by himself, and had no need of any foreign help.

Verse 7. I will bring strangers upon thee] The Chaldeans.

Verse 9. Wilt thou yet say before him that slayeth thee] Wilt thou continue thy pride and arrogance when the sword is sheathed in thee, and still imagine that thou art self-sufficient and independent?

Verse 10. The deaths of the uncircumcised] Two deaths, —temporal and eternal. Ithobaal was taken and killed by Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 12. Thou sealest up] This has been translated,—"Thou drawest thy own likeness."—"Thou formest a portrait of thyself; and hast represented thyself the perfection of wisdom and beauty." I believe this to be the meaning of the place.

Verse 13. Thou hast been in Eden] This also is a strong irony. Thou art like Adam, when, in his innocence and excellence, he was in the garden of Eden!

Every precious stone was thy covering] For a description of these stones see the Note on Exod. xxviii, 17.

Verse 14. Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth] The irony is continued:—and here he is likened to the CHERUB that guarded the gate of Paradise, and kept the way of the tree of life; or, to one of the cherubs whose wings, spread out, covered the mercy-seat.

Thou wast upon the holy mountain of God] The irony is still continued: and now he is compared to Moses; and afterwards to one of the chief angels, who has walked up and down among the stones of fire; that is, thy floors have been paved with precious stones, that shone and sparkled like fire.

15 Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till iniquity was found in thee.

16 By the multitude of thy merchandise they have filled the midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned: therefore I will cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God: and I will destroy thee, [a] O covering cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire.

17 [b] Thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty, thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness: I will cast thee to the ground, I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee.

18 Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries by the multitude of thine iniquities, by the iniquity of thy traffick; therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee.

19 All they that know thee among the people shall be astonished at thee: [c] thou shalt be [d] a terror, and never shalt thou be any more.

Lucan, describing the splendour of the apartments of Cleopatra, queen of Egypt, speaks in nearly a similar language:—

Nec summis crustata domus, sectisque nitebat
Marmoribus, stabatque sibi non segnis achates,
Purpureusque lapis, totusque effusus in aulâ
Calcabatur onyx— Pharsal. lib. x.

Rich as some fane by slavish zealots reared,
For the proud banquet stood the hall prepared:
Thick golden plates the latent beams infold,
And the high roof was fretted o'er with gold.
Of solid marble all the walls were made,
And onyx e'en the meaner floor inlaid;
While porphyry and agate round the court
In massy columns rose, a proud support.
Of solid ebony each post was wrought,
From swarthy Meroë profusely brought.
With ivory was the entrance crusted o'er,
And polished tortoise hid each shining door:
While on the cloudy spots enchased was seen
The trusty emerald's never-fading green.
Within the royal beds and couches shone,
Beamy and bright with many a costly stone,
The glowing purple rich. ROWE.

Verse 15. Thou wast perfect in thy ways] The irony seems still to be kept up. Thou hast been like the angels,—like Moses,—like the cherubs,—like Adam,—like God; till thy iniquity was found out.

Verse 16. I will cast thee as profane] Thou shalt be cast down from thine eminence.

From the midst of the stones of fire.] Some, supposing that stones of fire mean the stars, have thought that the whole refers to the fall of Satan.

Verse 18. Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries] Irony continued. As God, as the angels, as the cherubim,—thou must have had thy sanctuaries; but thou hast defiled them: and as Adam, thou hast polluted thy Eden, and hast been expelled from Paradise.

Verse 19. Thou shalt be a terror] Instead of being an object of adoration thou shalt be a subject of horror, and at last be destroyed with thy city; so that nothing but thy name shall remain. It was entirely burnt by Alexander the Great, as it had been before by Nebuchadnezzar.

Verse 22. I am against thee, O Zidon] Sidon for a long time had possessed the empire of the sea and of all Phœnicia, and Tyre was one of its colonies: but, in process of time, the daughter became greater than the mother. It seems to have been an independent place at the time in which Tyre was taken; but it is likely that it was taken by the Chaldeans soon after the former.

Verse 23. And the wounded] חלל chalal, the soldiery. All its supports shall be taken away, and its defenders destroyed.

Verse 24. There shall be no more a pricking brier] Nothing to excite Israel to idolatry when restored from their captivity. Perhaps there is an allusion to Jezebel, daughter of Ethbaal, king of Sidon, and wife to Ahab, king of Israel, who was the greatest curse to Israel, and the universal brier unto the house of Israel, nor any grieving thorn of all that are round about them, that despised them; and they shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

25 Thus saith the Lord GOD; When I shall have [a] gathered the house of Israel from the people among whom they are scattered, and shall be [b] sanctified in them in the sight of the heathen, then shall they dwell in their land that I have given to my servant Jacob.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

26 And they shall [c] dwell [d] safely therein, and shall [e] build houses, and [f] plant vineyards; yea, they shall dwell with confidence, when I have executed judgments upon all those that [g] despise them round about them; and they shall know that I am the LORD their God.

restorer of idolatry in the land; see 1 Kings xvi, 31. Sidon being destroyed, there would come no encourager of idolatry from that quarter.

Verse 25. When I shall have gathered the house of Israel] In their long captivity, God had been preparing the land for them so as to make it a safe dwelling: and hence He executed judgments on all the Heathen nations round about by means of the Chaldeans. Thus Tyre and Sidon were destroyed, as were the Ammonites, and others who had been the inveterate enemies of the Jews. Judgment first began at his own house,—then proceeded to the Heathen nations; and when they were brought down, then He visited and redeemed His people. Thus, God's ways are proved to be all equal: partialities and caprices belong not to Him.

CHAPTER XXIX.

This and the three following Chapters foretel the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, which he accomplished in the twenty-seventh year of Jehoiachin's captivity. The same event is foretold by Jeremiah, chap. xlvi, 13, &c. The prophecy opens with God's charging the king of Egypt (Pharaoh-hophra) with the same extravagant pride and profanity which were in the preceding Chapter laid to the charge of the prince of Tyre. He appears, like him, to have affected divine honours; and boasted so much of the strength of his kingdom, that, as an ancient historian (Herodotus) tells us, he impiously declared that God Himself could not dispossess him. Wherefore the Prophet, with great majesty, addresses him under the image of one of those crocodiles or monsters which inhabited that river, of whose riches and revenue he vaunted; and assures him that, with as much ease as a fisherman drags the fish he has hooked, God would drag him and his people into captivity, and that their carcasses should fall a prey to the beasts of the field and to the fowls of heaven, 1—7. The figure is then dropped; and God is introduced denouncing, in plain terms, the most awful judgments against him and his nation, and declaring that the Egyptians should be subjected to the Babylonians till the fall of the Chaldean empire, 8—12. The Prophet then foretels that Egypt, which was about to be devastated by the Babylonians, and many of the people carried into captivity, should again become a kingdom: but that it should never regain its ancient political importance; for, in the lapse of time, it should be even the BASEST of the kingdoms, a circumstance in the prophecy most literally fulfilled under the Christian dispensation, 13—16. The prophecy, beginning at the seventeenth verse, is connected with the foregoing, as it relates to the same subject, though delivered about seventeen years later. Nebuchadnezzar and his army, after the long siege of Tyre, which made every head bald by constantly wearing their helmets, and wore the skin off every shoulder by carrying burdens to raise the fortifications, were disappointed of the spoil which they expected, by the retiring of the inhabitants to Carthage. God, therefore, promises him Egypt for his reward, 17—20. The Chapter concludes with a prediction of the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, 21.

IN the tenth year, in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, [a] set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and [b] against all Egypt:

3 Speak, and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; [c] Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great [d] dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, [e] which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself.

4 But [f] I will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will cause the fish of thy rivers to stick unto thy scales, and I will bring thee up out of the midst of thy rivers, and all the fish of thy rivers shall stick unto thy scales.

5 And I will leave thee thrown into the wilderness, thee and all the fish of thy rivers: thou shalt fall upon the [g] open fields; [h] thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered: [i] I have given thee for meat to the beasts of the field and to the fowls of the heaven.

6 And all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know that I am the LORD, because they have been a [k] staff of reed to the house of Israel.

A. M. 3415. B. C. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 28.

7 [l] When they took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder: and when they leaned upon thee, thou brakest, and madest all their loins to be at a stand.

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will bring [m] a sword upon thee, and cut off man and beast out of thee.

9 And the land of Egypt shall be desolate and waste; and they shall know that I am the LORD: because he hath said, The river is mine, and I have made it.

10 Behold, therefore I am against thee, and against thy rivers, [n] and I will make the land of Egypt [o] utterly waste and desolate, [p] from [q] the tower of [r] Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia.

11 [s] No foot of man shall pass through it, nor foot of beast shall pass through it, neither shall it be inhabited forty years.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXIX.

Verse 1. In the tenth year] Of Zedekiah; and tenth of the captivity of Jeconiah.

The tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month] Answering to Monday, the first of February, A. M. 3415.

Verse 2. Set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt] This was Pharaoh Hophra, or Apries, whom we have so frequently met with in the prophecies of Jeremiah, and much of whose history has been given in the Notes.

Verse 3. The great dragon] התנים ha-tannim should here be translated crocodile, as that is a real animal, and numerous in the Nile; whereas the dragon is wholly fabulous. The original signifies any large animal.

The midst of his rivers] This refers to the several branches of the Nile, by which this river empties itself into the Mediterranean. The ancients termed them septem ostia Nili, "the seven mouths of the Nile." The crocodile was the emblem of Egypt.

Verse 4. I will put hooks in thy jaws] Amasis, one of this king's generals, being proclaimed king by an insurrection of the people, dethroned Apries, and seized upon the kingdom; and Apries was obliged to flee to Upper Egypt for safety.

I will cause the fish—to stick unto thy scales] Most fish are sorely troubled with a species of insect which bury their heads in their flesh, under their scales, and suck out the vital juices. The allusion seems to be to this. Pharaoh was the crocodile;—the fish, the common people;—and the sticking to his scales, the insurrection by which he was wasted and despoiled of his kingdom.

Verse 5. I will leave thee thrown into the wilderness] Referring to his being obliged to take refuge in Upper Egypt. But he was afterwards taken prisoner, and strangled by Amasis.—Herod. lib. ii, s. 169.

Verse 6. They have been a staff of reed] An inefficient and faithless ally. The Israelites expected assistance from them when Nebuchadnezzar came against Jerusalem; and they made a feint to help them, but retired when Nebuchadnezzar went against them. Thus were the Jews deceived, and ultimately ruined, see ver. 7.

Verse 10. From the tower of Syene] ממגדל סונה mimmigdol saveneh, from Migdol to Syene. Syene, now called Essuan, was the last city in Egypt, going towards Æthiopia. It was famous for a well into which the rays of the sun fell perpendicularly at mid-day.

Verse 12. Shall be desolate forty years] The country from Migdol, or Magdolan, which was on the isthmus between the Mediterranean and the Red sea, was so completely in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be desolate forty years: and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries.

A. M. 3415. B. C. 589. Ol. XLVII. 4. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 28.

13 Yet thus saith the Lord GOD; At the [a] end of forty years will I gather the Egyptians from the people whither they were scattered:

14 And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt, and will cause them to return into the land of Pathros, into the land of their [b] habitation; and they shall be there a [c] base [d] kingdom.

15 It shall be the basest of the kingdoms; neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations: for I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations.

16 And it shall be no more [e] the confidence of the house of Israel, which bringeth their iniquity to remembrance, when they shall look after them: but they shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

17 And it came to pass in the seven and twentieth year, in the first month, in the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

A. M. 3432. B. C. 572. Ol. LII. 1. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 7.

18 Son of man, [f] Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: yet had he no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it:

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall take her multitude, and [g] take her spoil, and take her prey; and it shall be the wages for his army.

20 I have given him the land of Egypt [h] for his labour wherewith he [i] served against it, because they wrought for me, saith the Lord GOD.

21 In that day [k] will I cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth, and I will give thee [l] the opening of the mouth in the midst of them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

ruined that it might well be called desert; and it is probable that this desolation continued during the whole of the reign of Amasis, which was just forty years. See Herod. lib. iii, c. 10; and see Calmet[1].

Verse 13. Will I gather the Egyptians] It is probable that Cyrus gave permission to the Egyptians brought to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, to return to their own country. And if we reckon from the commencement of the war against Pharaoh-hophra by Nebuchadnezzar, to the third or fourth year of Cyrus, the term will be about forty years.

Verse 14. Into the land of Pathros] Supposed to mean the Delta, a country included between the branches of the Nile; called Δ delta, from its being in the form of the Greek letter of that name. It may mean the Pathrusim, in Upper Egypt, near to the Thebaid. This is most likely.

Shall be there a base kingdom.] That is, it shall continue to be tributary. It is upwards of two thousand years since this prophecy was delivered, and it has been uninterruptedly fulfilling to the present hour. 1. Egypt became tributary to the Babylonians, under Amasis. 2. After the ruin of the Babylonish empire, it became subject to the Persians. 3. After the Persians, it came into the hands of the Macedonians. 4. After the Macedonians it fell into the hands of the Romans. 5. After the division of the Roman empire it was subdued by the Saracens. 6. About A. D. 1250, it came into the hands of the Mameluke slaves. 7. Selim, the ninth emperor of the Turks, conquered the Mamelukes, A. D. 1517, and annexed Egypt to the Othman empire, of which it still continues to be a province, governed by a pacha and twenty-four beys, who are always advanced from servitude to the administration of public affairs. So true is it that Egypt, once so glorious, is the basest of kingdoms. See Newton on the Prophecies.

Verse 17. The seven and twentieth year] That is, of the captivity of Jeconiah, fifteen years after the taking of Jerusalem; about April 20, 3432. The preceding prophecy was delivered one year before the taking of Jerusalem; this, sixteen years after; and it is supposed to be the last which this prophet wrote.

Verse 18. Caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus] He was thirteen years employed in the siege. See Joseph. Antiq. lib. x, c. 11. In this siege his soldiers endured great hardships. Being continually on duty, their heads became bald by wearing their helmets; and their shoulders bruised and peeled by carrying baskets of earth to the fortifications, wood, &c., to build towers, &c.

Yet had he no wages, nor his army] The Tyrians, finding it at last impossible to defend their city, put all their wealth aboard their vessels, sailed out of the port, and escaped for Carthage; and thus Nebuchadnezzar lost all the spoil of one of the richest cities in the world.

Verse 20. I have given him the land of Egypt for his labour] Because he fulfilled the designs of God against Tyre, God promises to reward him with the spoil of Egypt.

Verse 21. Will I cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud] This may refer generally to the restoration; but particularly to Zerubbabel, who became one of the leaders of the people from Babylon. Or it may respect Daniel,—or Mordecai,—or Jeconiah,—who, about this time, was brought out of prison by Evil-merodach, and afterwards kindly treated.

CHAPTER XXX.

This Chapter describes, with great force and elegance, the ruin of Egypt and all her allies by the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, 1—11; with an amplification of the distress of the principal cities of Egypt on that occasion, 12—19. The remaining verses are a short prophecy relating to the same event, and therefore annexed to the longer one preceding, although this was predicted sooner, 20—26.

4 And the sword shall come upon Egypt, and great [c] pain shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt, and they [d] shall take away her multitude, and [e] her foundations shall be broken down.

5 Ethiopia, and [f] Libya, and Lydia, and [g] all the mingled people, and Chub, and the [h] men of the land that is in league, shall fall with them by the sword.

9 In that day [n] shall messengers go forth from me in ships to make the careless Ethiopians afraid, and great pain shall come upon them, as in the day of Egypt: for, lo, it cometh.

10 Thus saith the Lord GOD: [o] I will also make the multitude of Egypt to cease by the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.

11 He and his people with him, [p] the terrible of the nations, shall be brought to destroy the land: and they shall draw their swords against Egypt, and fill the land with the slain.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXX.

Verse 2. Howl ye, woe worth the day.] My old MS. Bible, —Goule gee, woo woo to the day! הילילו הה ליום heyliloo, hah laiyom! Howl ye, Alas for the day! The reading in our present Text is taken from Coverdale's Bible, 1535. The expressions signify that a most dreadful calamity was about to fall on Egypt and the neighbouring countries, called here the time of the heathen, or of the nations;—the day of calamity to them. They are afterwards specified,—Æthiopia, Libya, Lydia, and Chub, and the mingled people,—probably persons from different nations, who had followed the ill fortune of Pharaoh-hophra, or Apries, when he fled from Amasis, and settled in Upper Egypt.

Verse 5. Lydia] This place is not well known. The Ludim were contiguous to Egypt, Gen. xi, 13.

Chub] The Cubians, placed by Ptolemy in the Mareotis. But probably instead of וכוב ve-cub, and Chub, we should read וכל ve-col, and ALL the men of the land, &c. The Septuagint adds—the Persians and the Cretans.

Verse 7. Shall be desolate] All these countries shall be desolated, and the places named shall be chief in these desolations.

Verse 9. Messengers go forth from me in ships] Ships can ascend the Nile up to Syene or Essuan, by the cataracts; and when Nebuchadnezzar's vessels went up, they struck terror into the Ethiopians. They are represented here as the messengers of God.

13 Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will also [e] destroy the idols, and I will cause their images to cease out of Noph; [f] and there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt: [g] and I will put a fear in the land of Egypt.

14 And I will make [h] Pathros desolate, and will set fire in [i] Zoan,[k] [l] and will execute judgments in No.

17 The young men of [p] Aven and of [q] Pibeseth shall fall by the sword: and these cities shall go into captivity.

18 [r] At Tehaphnehes also the day shall be [s] darkened, when I shall break there the yokes of Egypt: and the pomp of her strength shall cease in her: as for her, a cloud shall cover her, and her daughters shall go into captivity.

Verse 12. I will make the rivers dry] As the overflowing of the Nile was the [illegible] and cause of fertility to Egypt, the drying it up, or preventing that annual inundation, must be the cause of dearth, famine, &c. By rivers, we may understand the various canals cut from the Nile to carry water into the different parts of the land. When the Nile did not rise to its usual height, these canals were quite dry.

Verse 20. In the eleventh year, in the first month, in the seventh day] This was the eleventh year of the captivity of Jeconiah; and the date here answers to April 26, A. M. 3416: a prophecy anterior by several years to that already delivered. In collecting the writings of Ezekiel, more care was taken to put all that related to one subject together, than to attend to chronological arrangement.

Verse 21. I have broken the arm of Pharaoh] Perhaps this may refer to his defeat by Nebuchadnezzar, when he was coming with the Egyptian army to succour Jerusalem.

Verse 22. I will cause the sword to fall out of his hand.] When the arm is broken, the sword will naturally fall. But these expressions shew that the Egyptians would be rendered wholly useless to Zedekiah, and should never more recover their political strength. This was the case from the time of the rebellion of Amasis.

CHAPTER XXXI.

This very beautiful Chapter relates also to Egypt. The Prophet describes to Pharaoh the fall of the king of Nineveh (see the books of Nahum, Jonah, and Zephaniah,) under the image of a fair cedar of Lebanon, once exceedingly tall, flourishing, and majestic, but now cut down and withered, with its broken branches strewed around, 1—17. He then concludes with bringing the matter home to the king of Egypt, by telling him that this was a picture of his approaching fate, 18. The beautiful cedar of Lebanon, remarkable for its loftiness, and in the most flourishing condition, but afterwards cut down and deserted, gives a very lively painting of the great glory and dreadful catastrophe of both the Assyrian and Egyptian monarchies. The manner in which the Prophet has embellished his subject is deeply interesting; the colouring is of that kind which the mind will always contemplate with pleasure.

AND it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the third month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXI.

Verse 1. In the eleventh year] On Sunday, June 19, A. M. 3416, according to Abp. Ussher; a month before Jerusalem was taken by the Chaldeans.

Verse 3. Behold, the Assyrian was a cedar] Why is the Assyrian introduced here, when the whole Chapter concerns Egypt? Bp. Lowth has shewn that אשור ארז ashur araz, should be translated the tall cedar, the very stately cedar; hence there is reference to his lofty top; and all the following description belongs to Egypt, not to Assyria. But see on ver. 11.

Verse 4. The waters made him great] Alluding to the fertility of Egypt by the overflowing of the Nile. But waters often mean peoples. By means of the different nations under the Egyptians, that government became very opulent. These nations are represented as fowls and beasts, taking shelter under the protection of this great political Egyptian tree, ver. 6.

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

cause of the multitude of waters, [a] when he shot forth.

6 All the [b] fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs, and under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young, and under his shadow dwelt all great nations.

7 Thus was he fair in his greatness, in the length of his branches: for his root was by great waters.

8 The cedars in the [c] garden of God could not hide him: the fir trees were not like his boughs, and the chesnut trees were not like his branches; nor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty.

9 I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches: so that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him.

10 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height, and he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs, and [d] his heart is lifted up in its height;

11 I have therefore delivered him into the hand of the mighty one of the heathen; [e] he shall surely deal with him: I have driven him out for his wickedness.

12 And strangers, [f] the terrible of the nations, have cut him off, and have left him: [g] upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen, and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land; and all the people of the earth are gone down from his shadow, and have left him.

13 [h] Upon his ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain, and all the beasts of the field shall be upon his branches:

A. M. 3416. B. C. 588. Ol. XLVIII. 1. Anno Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. 29.

14 To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height, neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs, neither their trees [i] stand up in their height, all that drink water: for [k] they are all delivered unto death, [l] to the nether parts of the earth, in the midst of the children of men, with them that go down to the pit.

15 Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the day when he went down to the grave I caused a mourning: I covered the deep for him, and I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed: and I caused Lebanon [m] to mourn for him, and all the trees of the field fainted for him.

16 I made the nations to [n] shake at the sound of his fall, when I [o] cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit: and [p] all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, [q] shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth.

17 They also went down into hell with him unto them that be slain with the sword; and they that were his arm, that [r] dwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen.

18 [s] To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth: [t] thou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword. This is Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord GOD.

Verse 8. The cedars in the garden of God] Egypt was one of the most eminent and affluent of all the neighbouring nations.

Verse 11. The mighty one of the heathen] Nebuchadnezzar. It is worthy of notice that Nebuchadnezzar, in the first year of his reign, rendered himself master of Nineveh, the capital of the Assyrian empire. See Sedar Olam. This happened about twenty years before Ezekiel delivered this prophecy; on this account, Asshur, ver. 3, may relate to the Assyrians, to whom it is possible the prophet here compares the Egyptians. But see on ver. 3.

Verse 13. Upon his ruin shall all the fowls] The fall of Egypt is likened to the fall of a great tree; and as the fowls and beasts sheltered under its branches before, ver. 6, so they now feed upon its ruins.

Verse 14. To the end that none of all the trees] Let this ruin fallen upon Egypt teach all the nations that shall hear of it to be humble, because, however elevated, God can soon bring them down; and pride and arrogance, either in states or individuals, have the peculiar abhorrence of God. Pride does not suit the sons of men; it made devils of angels, and makes fiends of men.

Verse 15. I caused Lebanon to mourn for him] All the confederates of Pharaoh are represented as deploring his fall, ver. 16, 17.

Verse 17. They also went down into hell with him] Into remediless destruction.

Verse 18. This is Pharaoh] All that I have spoken in this allegory of the lofty cedar refers to Pharaoh, king of Egypt, his princes, confederates, and people. Calmet understands the whole Chapter of the king of Assyria, under which he allows that Egypt is adumbrated; and hence on this verse he quotes,—

Mutato nomine, de te fabula narratur.

What is said of Assyria belongs to thee, O Egypt.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Prophet goes on to predict the fall of the king of Egypt, under the figure of an animal of prey, such as a lion or crocodile, caught, slain, and his carcas left a prey to the fowls and wild beasts, 1—6. The figure is then changed; and the greatness of his fall (described by the darkening of the sun, moon, and stars,) strikes terror into all the surrounding nations, 7—10. The Prophet adds that the overthrow of the then reigning Egyptian dynasty was to be effected by the instrumentality of the king of Babylon, who should leave Egypt so desolate that its waters (alluding to the metaphor used in the second verse) should run as pure and smooth as oil, without the foot of man, or the hoof of a beast, to disturb them, 11—16. A beautiful, nervous, and concise description of a land ruined, and left uttterly desolate. In the remaining part of the Chapter the same event is pourtrayed by one of the boldest figures ever attempted in any composition, and which at the same time is executed with astonishing perspicuity and force. God is introduced ordering a place in the lower regions for the king of Egypt and his host, 17, 18. The prophet delivers his message, pronounces their fate, and commands those who buried the slain, to drag him and his multitudes to the subterraneous mansions, 19, 20. At the tumult and commotion which this mighty work occasions, the infernal shades are represented as roused from their couches to learn the cause. They see and congratulate the king of Egypt, on his arrival among them, 21. Pharaoh being now introduced into this immense subterraneous cavern, (see the fourteenth chapter of Isaiah, where a similar imagery is employed,) the Prophet leads him all around the sides of the pit; shews him the gloomy mansions of former tyrants; tells their names as he goes along; beautifully contrasts their former pomp and destructive ambition, when they were a terror to the surrounding states, with their present most abject and helpless condition; declares that all these oppressors of mankind have not only been cut off out of the land of the living, but have gone down into the grave uncircumcised, that is, they have died in their sins, and therefore shall have no resurrection to eternal life; and concludes with shewing Pharaoh the place destined for him in the midst of the uncircumcised, and of them that have been slain by the sword, 22—32. This prophetic ode may be considered as a finished model in that species of writing which is appropriated to the exciting of terror. The imagery throughout is sublime and terrible; and no reader of sensibility and taste can accompany the Prophet in this funeral procession, and visit the mansions of Hades, without being impressed with a degree of awe nearly approaching to horror.

3 Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will therefore [b] spread out my net over thee with a company of many people; and they shall bring thee up in my net.

4 Then [c] will I leave thee upon the land, I will cast thee forth upon the open field, and [d] will cause all the fowls of the heaven to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee.

5 And I will lay thy flesh [e] upon the mountains, and fill the valleys with thy height.

6 I will also water with thy blood [f] the land wherein thou swimmest, even to the mountains; and the rivers shall be full of thee.

7 And when I shall [g] put thee out, [h] I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light.

8 All the [i] bright lights of heaven will I make [k] dark over thee, and set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord GOD.

9 I will also [l] vex the hearts of many people, when I shall bring thy destruction among the nations, into the countries which thou hast not known.

10 Yea, I will make many people [m] amazed at thee, and their kings shall be horribly afraid for thee, when I shall brandish my sword before them; and [n] they shall tremble at every moment, every man for his own life, in the day of thy fall.

13 I will destroy also all the beasts thereof from beside the great waters; [r] neither shall the foot of man trouble them any more, nor the hoofs of beasts trouble them.

14 Then will I make their waters deep, and cause their rivers to run like oil, saith the Lord GOD.

15 When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the country shall be [s] destitute of that whereof it was full, when I shall smite all them that dwell therein, [t] then shall they know that I am the LORD.

16 This is the [u] lamentation wherewith they shall lament her: the daughters of the nations shall lament her: they shall lament for her, even for Egypt, and for all her multitude, saith the Lord GOD.

Verse 26. There is Meshech, Tubal] See on chap. xxvii, 13.

Verse 27. Gone down to hell with their weapons of war] Are buried in their armour, and with their weapons lying by their sides. It was a very ancient practice, in different nations, to bury a warrior's weapons in the same grave with himself.

Verse 29. There is Edom] All the glory and pomp of the Idumean kings,—who also helped to oppress the Israelites,—are gone down into the grave. Their kings, princes, and all their mighty men, lie mingled with the uncircumcised, not distinguished from the common dead:—

30 [a] There be the princes of the north, all of them, and all the [b] Zidonians, which are gone down with the slain; with their terror they are ashamed of their might; and they lie uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword, and bear their shame with them that go down to the pit.

31 Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be [c] comforted over all his multitude, even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword, saith the Lord GOD.

"Where they an equal honour share,
Who buried or unburied are.
Where Agamemnon knows no more
Than Irus, he condemn'd before.
Where fair Achilles and Thersites lie,
Equally naked, poor, and dry."

Verse 30. There be the princes of the north] The kings of Media and Assyria, and all the Zidonians; the kings of Tyre, Sidon, and Damascus. See Calmet.

Verse 31. Pharaoh shall see them] Pharaoh also, who said he was a god, shall be found among the vulgar dead.

And shall be comforted] Shall console himself, on finding that all other proud boasters are in the same circumstances with himself. Here is a reference to a consciousness after death.

Verse 32. I have caused my terror in the land of the living] I have spread dismay through Judea, the land of the living God, where the living oracles were delivered, and where the upright live by faith. When Pharaoh-necho came against Josiah, defeated, and slew him at Megiddo, fear and terror were spread through all the land of Judea; and the allusion here is probably to that circumstance. But even he is now laid with the uncircumcised; and is no more to be distinguished from the common dead.

Much of the phraseology of this Chapter may be illustrated by comparing it with Isa. xiv, where see the Notes, which the intelligent reader will do well to consult.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The Prophet, after having addressed several other nations, returns now to his own; previously to which he is told, as on a former occasion, the duty of a watchman, the salvation or ruin of whose soul depends on the manner in which he discharges it. An awful passage indeed! full of important instruction both to such as speak, and to such as hear, the word of God, 1—9. The Prophet is then directed what answer to make to the cavils of infidelity and impiety; and to vindicate the equity of the Divine government by declaring the general terms of acceptance with God to be (as told before, chap. xviii,) without respect of persons; so that the ruin of the finally impenitent must be entirely owing to themselves, 10—20. The Prophet receives the news of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans; about a year and four months after it happened, according to the opinion of some; who have been led to this conjecture by the date given to this prophecy in the twenty-first verse, as it stands in our common Version: but some of the manuscripts of this Prophet consulted by Dr. Kennicott have in this place the ELEVENTH year, which is probably the genuine reading. To check the vain confidence of those who expected to hold out by possessing themselves of its other fastnesses, the utter desolation of all Judea is foretold, 21—29. Ezekiel is informed that among those that attended his instructions were a great number of hypocrites; against whom he delivers a most awful message. When the Lord is destroying these hypocrites, then shall they know that there hath been a prophet among them, 30—33.

AGAIN the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, speak [a] to the children of thy people, and say unto them, [b] When [c] I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their [d] watchman:

3 If when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet, and warn the people;

4 Then [e] whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come, and take him away, [f] his blood shall be upon his own head.

5 He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul.

6 But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, [g] he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.

7 [h] So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

8 When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

9 Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul.

10 Therefore, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israel; Thus ye speak, saying, If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we [i] pine away in them, [k] how should we then live?

11 Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord GOD, [l] I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for [m] why will ye die, O house of Israel?

12 Therefore, thou son of man, say unto the children of thy people, [n] The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression: as for the wickedness of the wicked, [o] he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth.

13 When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; [p] if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousnesses shall not be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it.

14 Again, [q] when I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; if he turn from his sin, and do [r] that which is lawful and right;

15 If the wicked [s] restore the pledge, [t] give again that he had robbed, walk in [u] the statutes of life, without committing iniquity; he shall surely live, he shall not die.

16 [x] None of his sins that he hath committed shall be mentioned unto him: he hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely live.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIII.

Verse 2. Son of man—if the people of the land take a man] The first ten verses of this Chapter are the same with chap. iii, 17—22; and to what is said there on this most important and awful subject I must refer the Reader. Here, the PEOPLE choose the watchman; there, the LORD appoints him. When God chooses, the people should approve.

Verse 10. If our transgressions and our sins be upon us] They are upon us, as a grievous burthen, too weighty for us to bear:—how then can we live under such a load?

We pine away in them] In such circumstances how sweet is that word,—"Come unto me, all ye who are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Verse 11. As I live, saith the Lord GOD, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked] From this to the twentieth verse inclusive is nearly the same with chap. xviii, on which I wish the Reader to consult the Notes.

Verse 13. If he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity] If he trust in his acting according to the statutes and ordinances of religion, and according to the laws relative to rights and wrongs among men, and in other respects commit iniquity, he shall die for it.

righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby.

19 But if the wicked turn from his wickedness, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby.

20 Yet ye say, [a] The way of the Lord is not equal. O ye house of Israel, I will judge you every one after his ways.

21 And it came to pass in the twelfth year [b] of our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month, [c] that one that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, saying, [d] The city is smitten.

22 Now [e] the hand of the Lord was upon me in the evening, afore he that was escaped came; and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning; [f] and my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb.

23 Then the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, [g] they that inhabit those [h] wastes of the land of Israel speak, saying, [i] Abraham was one, and he inherited the land: [k] but we are many; the land is given us for inheritance.

25 Wherefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; [l] Ye eat with the blood, and [m] lift up your eyes toward your idols, and [n] shed blood: and shall ye possess the land?

26 [o] Ye stand upon your sword, ye work abomination, and ye [p] defile every one his neighbour's wife: and shall ye possess the land?

27 Say thou thus unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; As I live, surely [q] they that are in the wastes shall fall by the sword, and him that is in the open field [r] will I give to the beasts [s] to be devoured, and they that be in the forts and [t] in the caves shall die of the pestilence.

28 [u] For I will lay the land [x] most desolate, and the [y] pomp of her strength shall cease; and the [z] mountains of Israel shall be desolate, that none shall pass through.

29 Then shall they know that I am the Lord, when I have laid the land most desolate because of all their abominations which they have committed.

30 Also, thou son of man, the children of thy people still are talking [a] against thee by the walls and in the doors of the houses, and [b] speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying,

Verse 19. He shall live thereby] "The wages of sin is death;" the "gift of God is eternal life." It is a miserable trade by which a man cannot live; such a trade is sin.

Verse 21. In the twelfth year of our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month] Instead of the twelfth year, the eleventh is the reading of seven of Kennicott's MSS., one of De Rossi's, and the Syriac. My own, mentioned in the preceding Chapter, reads with the present Text. This was on Wednesday, Jan. 25, A. M. 3416 or 3417.

One that had escaped out of Jerusalem] After it had been taken by the Chaldeans.

Came unto me, saying, THE CITY IS SMITTEN.] This very message God had promised to the prophet, chap. xxiv, 26.

Verse 22. My mouth was opened] They had now the fullest evidence that I had spoken from the Lord. I therefore spoke freely and fully what God delivered to me, see chap. xxiv, 27.

Verse 24. Abraham was one] If he was called to inherit the land when he was alone, and had the whole to himself,—why may we not expect to be established here, who are his posterity, and we are many? They wished to remain in the land, and be happy, after the Chaldeans had carried the rest away captives.

Verse 25. Ye eat with the blood] Abraham was righteous, ye are unrighteous. Eating of blood in any way dressed, or of flesh from which the blood had not been extracted, was, and is, in the sight of God abominable. All such practices He has absolutely and for ever forbidden. Let the vile blood-eaters hear and tremble. See the note Acts xv, 20, and the passages in the Margin.

Verse 26. Ye stand upon your sword] Ye live by plunder, rapine, and murder. Ye are every way impure;—and shall ye possess the land? No.

Verse 27. They that are in the wastes] He seems to speak of those Jews who had fled to rocks, caves, and fortresses, in the mountains; whose death he predicts, partly by the sword, partly by wild beasts, and partly by famine.

Verse 30. Thy people still are talking against thee] בך bac should rather be translated, concerning thee, than against thee: for the following verses shew that the prophet was much respected. The Vulgate translates, de te—the Septuagint, περι σου, concerning thee;—both right.

Verse 31. As the people cometh] As they are accustomed to come on public days, sabbaths, &c.

With their mouth they shew much love] They respected the prophet, but would not bend themselves to follow his precepts. They loved earthly things; and did not relish those of heaven.

Verse 32. As a very lovely song] They admired the fine voice, and the correct delivery, of the prophet: this was their religion; and this is the whole of the religion of thousands to the present day: for never were itching ears so multiplied as now.

Verse 33. When this cometh to pass—then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.] What I have predicted—and it is even now at the doors—then they will be convinced that there was a prophet among them, by whose ministry they did not profit as they ought.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The Prophet is commanded to declare the dreadful judgments of God against the covetous shepherds of Israel, who fed themselves, and not their flocks; by which emblem the priests and Levites are intended, who, in Ezekiel's time, were very corrupt, and the chief cause of Israel's apostasy and ruin. 1—10. From this gloomy subject the Prophet passes to the blessedness of the true Israel of God under the reign of DAVID, the Great Shepherd of the sheep, our Lord Jesus Christ being named after this prince by a figure exceedingly frequent in the Sacred Oracles, of putting the type for the Antitype, 11—31.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXIV.

Verse 2. Prophesy against the shepherds of Israel] The shepherds include, first, the priests and Levites; secondly, the kings, princes, and magistrates. The flock means the whole of the people. The fat and the wool, the tithes and offerings—the taxes and imposts. The reprehensible feeding and clothing with these,—as to the priests and Levites,—the using these tithes and offerings not to enable them the better to fulfil the work of the ministry, but to pamper their own bodies, and support them in an idle voluptuous life;—and in reference to the state,—the employing the taxes and imposts not for the support and administration of justice and good government, but to subsidize heathen powers, and maintain their own luxury and idolatrous prodigality.

Verse 3. Ye eat the fat] I think החלב ha-cheleb, should be translated the milk; and so most of the Versions understand it. Or they lived on the fat sheep, and took the wool of all.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

wool, [a] ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock.

4 [b] The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye [c] sought that which was lost; but with [d] force and with cruelty have ye ruled them.

5 [e] And they were [f] scattered, [g] because there is no shepherd: [h] and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered.

6 My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth,

[f] 1 Kings 22. 17. Matt. 9. 36.——[g] Or, without a shepherd: And so ver. 8. [h] Isa. 56. 9. Jer. 12. 9. ver. 8.

"The priests," says Calmet, "ate the tithes, the first fruits, and the offerings of the people; the princes received the tributes and imposts: and instead of instructing and protecting them, the latter took away their lives by the cruelties they practised against them; the former destroyed their souls by the poison of their doctrine, and by their bad example. The fat sheep point out the rich, to whom these pastors often disguised the truth, by a cruel condescension and complaisance."

Verse 4. The diseased have ye not strengthened] No person is fit for the office of a shepherd, who does not well understand the diseases to which sheep are incident, and the mode of cure. And is any man fit for the pastoral office, or to be a shepherd of souls, who is not well acquainted with the disease of sin in all its varieties, and the remedy for this disease, and the proper mode of administering it, in those various cases? He who does not know Jesus Christ as his own Saviour, never can recommend Him to others. He who is not saved, will not save.

Neither have ye healed that which was sick] The prophet first speaks of the general disease; next, of the different kinds of spiritual infirmity.

Neither have ye bound up that which was broken] If a sheep have broken a leg, a proper shepherd knows how to set the bones, and splint and bind it till the bones knit and become strong. And the skilful spiritual pastor knows, if one of the flock be overtaken in a fault, how to restore such. Those sudden falls, where there was not a strong propensity to sin, are to the soul, as a broken bone to the body.

Neither have ye brought again] A proper shepherd loves his sheep: he feels interested for their welfare; he acquaints himself with them all, so that he knows and can distinguish each. He knows also their number, and frequently counts to see that none is missing: if one be lost or strayed, he goes immediately and seeks it; and as he is constantly on the watch, it cannot have strayed far before he is apprized of its absence from the flock; and the less it has strayed, the sooner it is found and brought back to the fold.

The shepherds of Israel knew nothing about their flock: they might have been diseased,—infirm,—bruised,—maimed, their limbs broken,—strayed,—and lost; for they watched not over them. When they got fat sheep and wool for their table and their clothing, they regarded nothing else; as they considered the flock given them for their own use, and scarcely ever supposed that they were to give any thing in return for the milk and the wool.

But with force and with cruelty] Exacting tithes and dues by the strong arm of the law, with the most ungodly feelings; and with a cruelty of disposition that proved it was the fat and the wool they sought, and not the safety or comfort of the flock.

Verse 5. And they were scattered] There was no discipline kept up; and the flock, (the church,) became disorganized, and separated from each other, both in affection and fellowship. And the consequence was, the grievous wolves, (false and worldly interested teachers,) seized on and made a prey of them.

Verse 6. My sheep wandered through all the mountains] They all became idolaters, and lost the knowledge of the true God. And could it be otherwise while they had such pastors!

> "Himself a wanderer from the narrow way;
> His silly sheep, no wonder that they stray!"

Reader, if thou be a minister, a preacher, or a person in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, or art one pretending to holy orders, look at the qualifications of a good shepherd as laid down by the prophet.

1. He professes to be a shepherd, and to be qualified for the office.

2. In consequence he undertakes the care of a flock. This supposes that he believes the great Bishop of souls has called him to the pastoral office; and that office implies that he is to give all diligence to save the souls of them that hear him.

His Qualifications.

1. He is skilful: he knows the disease of sin, and its consequences; for the Eternal Spirit by whom he is called has convinced him of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment.

2. He knows well the great remedy for this disease, the passion and sacrificial death of the Lord Jesus Christ.

3. He is skilful, and knows how to apply this remedy.

4. The flock over which he watches is, in its individuals, either,—1. Healthy and sound. 2. Or, in a state of convalescence, returning to health. 3. Or, still under the whole and none did search or seek after them.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

7 Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

8 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock [a] became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, [b] but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock;

9 Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

10 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against the shepherds; and [c] I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds [d] feed themselves any more: for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

11 For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out.

12 [e] As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in [f] the cloudy and dark day.

13 And [g] I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, [f] Ch. 30. 3. Joel 2. 2.——[g] Isa. 65. 9, 10. Jer. 23. 3. ch. 28. 25. & 36. 24. & 37. 21, 22.

power of the general disease. 4. Or, some are dying in a state of spiritual weakness. 5. Or, some are fallen into sin, and sorely bruised and broken in their souls by that fall. 6. Or, some have been driven away by some sore temptation or cruel usage. 7. Or, some have wandered from the flock, are got into strange pastures, and are perverted by erroneous doctrines. Or, 8. Some wolf has got among them, and scattered the whole flock. Now, the true shepherd, the pastor of God's choosing, knows:—

1. How to keep the healthy in health; and cause them to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ.

2. How to nourish, feed, and care, for the convalescent, that they may be brought into a state of spiritual soundness.

3. How to reprove, instruct, and awaken, those who are still under the full power of the disease of sin.

4. How to find out and remove the cause of that spiritual weakness of which he sees some slowly dying.

5. How to deal with those who have fallen into some scandalous sin, and restore them from their fall.

6. How to find out and turn aside the sore temptation or cruel usage by which some have been driven away.

7. How to seek and bring back to the fold those who have strayed into strange pastures, and have had their souls perverted by erroneous doctrines; and knows also how, by a godly discipline, to preserve him in the flock, and keep the flock honourably together.

8. How to oppose, confound, and expel, the grievous wolf, who has got among the flock, and is scattering them from each other, and from God. He knows how to preach, explain, and defend, the truth. He is well acquainted with the weapons he is to use, and the spirit in which he is to employ them.

In a word, the true shepherd gives up his life to the sheep; spends and is spent for the glory of God; and gives up his life for the sheep, in defence of them, and in labouring for their welfare. And while he is thus employed, it is the duty of the flock to feed and clothe him; and see that neither he nor his family lack the necessaries and conveniences of life. The labourer is worthy of his meat. He who does not labour, or, because of his ignorance of God and salvation, cannot labour, in the word and doctrine, deserves neither meat nor drink; and if he exact that by law, which he has not honestly earned by a proper discharge of the pastoral function, let him read this Chapter, and learn from it what a fearful account he shall have to give to the chief Shepherd on the great day; and what a dreadful punishment shall be inflicted on him, when the blood of the souls lost through his neglect or inefficiency is visited upon him! See the Notes on chap. iii, 17, &c.

Verse 7. Therefore, ye shepherds, (ye bad and wicked shepherds,) hear the word of the LORD] In the preceding character of the good shepherd the Reader will find, by reversing the particulars, the character of a bad shepherd; and therefore I may be excused from entering into farther detail.

Verse 10. I will—cause them to cease from feeding the flock] God, in this country, unpriested a whole hierarchy, who fed not the flock, but ruled them with force and cruelty; and he raised up a new set of shepherds better qualified, both by sound doctrine and learning, to feed the flock. Let these be faithful, lest God cause them to cease, and raise up other feeders.

Verse 12. Cloudy and dark day.] Times of general distress and persecution; in such times the shepherd should be especially watchful.

Verse 13. I will—feed them upon the mountains] When I bring back the people from their captivity, I will raise up to them a holy and diligent priesthood, who shall in all places give them sound instruction: but this, and some of

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

and in all the inhabited places of the country.

14 [a] I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: [b] there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel.

15 I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord GOD.

16 [c] I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy [d] the fat and the strong; I will feed them [e] with judgment.

17 And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord GOD: [f] Behold, I judge between [g] cattle and cattle, between the rams and the [h] he goats.

18 Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet?

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

19 And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet; and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet.

20 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD unto them; [i] Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.

21 Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad;

22 Therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and [k] I will judge between cattle and cattle.

23 And I will set up one [l] Shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, [m] even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their Shepherd.

24 And [n] I the LORD will be their God, the following promises, belong to the Christian church, as we shall find below.

Verse 16. I will destroy the fat and the strong] I will destroy those cruel and imperious shepherds, who abuse their authority, and tyrannize over the flock.

Verse 17. And as for you, O my flock] After having spoken to the shepherds, he now addresses the flock.

I judge between cattle and cattle] Between false and true professors; between them that have only the form, and them that have the power, of godliness; between the backslider in heart, and the upright man.

Verse 18. Have eaten up the good pasture] Arrogate to yourselves all the promises of God; and will hardly permit the simple believer to claim or possess any token of God's favour.

Ye must foul the residue with your feet] Ye abuse God's mercies; you consume much upon yourselves, and ye spoil more; on which the poor would have been glad to feed. There are some who would rather give that food to their sporting dogs, than to the poor around them, who are ready to starve! and who would be glad of the crumbs that fall from the table of those masters.

Verse 20. I will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.] Between the rich and the poor; those who fare sumptuously every day, and those who have not the necessaries of life.

Verse 23. I will set up one Shepherd—my servant David] DAVID, king of Israel, had been dead upwards of four hundred years; and from that time till now, there never was a ruler of any kind, either in the Jewish church or state, of the name of David. This then must be some typical person; and, from the texts marked in the Margin, we understand that Jesus Christ alone is meant, as both Old and New TESTAMENTS agree in this. And from this one Shepherd, all Christian ministers must derive their authority to teach, and their grace to teach effectually.

By the kind providence of God, it appears that He has not permitted any apostolic succession to be preserved; lest the members of His church should seek that in an uninterrupted succession, which must be found in the HEAD alone. The Papists or Roman Catholics, who boast of an uninterrupted succession, which is a mere fable, that never was and never can be proved, have raised up another head, the POPE. And I appeal to themselves, in the fear of God, whether they do not in heart and in speech trace up all their authority to him; and only compliment Christ as having appointed Peter to be the first bishop of Rome: (which is an utter falsity; for he was never appointed to such an office there, nor ever held such an office in that city; nor, in their sense, any where else;) and they hold also that the popes of Rome are not so much Peter's successors, as God's vicars; and thus both God and Peter are nearly lost sight of in their papal enumerations. With them the authority of the church is all in all; the authority of Christ is seldom mentioned.

Verse 24. I the LORD will be their God, and my Servant

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

and my Servant David [a] a Prince among them; I the LORD have spoken it.

25 And [b] I will make with them a covenant of peace, and [c] will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land; and they [d] shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods.

26 And I will make them and the places round about [e] my hill [f] a blessing: and I will [g] cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be [h] showers of blessing.

27 And [i] the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD, when I have [k] broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that [l] served themselves of them.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

28 And they shall no more [m] be a prey to the heathen, neither shall the beast of the land devour them; but [n] they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid.

29 And I will raise up for them a [o] plant [p] of renown, and they shall be no more [q] consumed with hunger in the land, [r] neither bear the shame of the heathen any more.

30 Thus shall they know that [s] I the LORD their God am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are my people, saith the Lord GOD.

31 And ye my [t] flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord GOD.

David a Prince] Here we find God and His Christ are all in all, in His church; and Jesus is still PRINCE among them; and to Him the call and qualifications of all genuine pastors belong, and from Him they must be derived. And He has blotted out what is called uninterrupted succession, that every Christian minister may seek and receive credentials from Himself. Here is the grand reason why the uninterrupted succession cannot be made out. And here is the proof also, that the church that pretends to it, and builds upon it, must be a false church: for it is founded on a falsity; an uninterrupted succession which does not exist either in history or in fact.

Verse 25. I will make with them a covenant of peace] The original is emphatic; וכרתי להם ברית שלום ve-karati lahem berith shalom, "And I will cut with them the peace covenant;" that is, a covenant sacrifice, procuring and establishing peace between God and man, and between man and his fellows. I need not tell the Reader, that the cutting refers to the ancient mode of making covenants. The blood was poured out; the animal was divided from mouth to tail, exactly in two; the divisions placed opposite to each other; the contracting parties entered into the space, going in at each end, and met in the middle; and there took the covenant oath. He is the Prince of peace; and through Him come glory to God in the highest, and peace and good will to men upon earth.

And will cause the evil beasts to cease] These false and ravenous pastors. Christ purges them out of His church, and destroys that power by which they lorded it over God's heritage.

Verse 26. The shower to come down] The Holy Spirit's influence.

There shall be showers of blessing.] Light, life, joy, peace, and power, shall be manifest in all the assemblies of Christ's people.

Verse 29. I will raise up—a plant of renown] מטע לשם mattâ leshem, "a plantation to the name;" to the name of CHRIST. A Christian church, composed of men who are Christians, who have the spirit of Christ in them; and do not bear His name in vain. I believe the words might be applied to the Christian church; but that Christ may be called a plant or plantation here, as he is elsewhere called a branch and a rod, Isa. iv, 2; xi, 1; so Jer. xxiii, 5; xxxv, 15, is most probable. He is the Person of name, לשם le-shem, JESUS; the Saviour, CHRIST; the Anointer long spoken of before He was manifested in the flesh; and since, the daily theme in the church militant. It is He who hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood; no name being given under heaven among men by which we can be saved; who has a name above every name, and at whose name every knee shall bow; through whose name, by faith in His name, the diseased are healed; and in whose name all our prayers and supplications must be presented to God to make them acceptable. This is the Person of NAME!

They shall be no more consumed with hunger] For this glorious plant of name is the Bread of life; and this is broken in all the assemblies of His people, where His name is properly proclaimed.

Verse 31. And ye my flock] That is, under the allegory of a flock of sheep, I point out men; and under that of a pasture, my Church; and under that of a shepherd, the Messiah, through whom I am become your God. And He who is your God, is אדני יהוה adonai yehovah, the self-existing Being; the Governor and Director, as well as the Saviour and Judge, of men.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Prophet having formerly predicted the ruin of Edom, the same with Seir (chap. xxv, 12,) now resumes, and pursues the subject at greater length; intimating, as did also Isaiah (chap. xxi, 11, 12,) that though other nations should recover their liberty after the fall of the Babylonian monarchy, the Edomites should continue in bondage for their very despiteful behaviour towards the children of Israel in the day of their calamity, 1—15.

4 [f] I will lay thy cities waste, and thou shalt be desolate, and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXV.

Verse 2. Set thy face against mount Seir] That is, against the Edomites. This prophecy was probably delivered about the time of the preceding; and before the destruction of Idumea by Nebuchadnezzar, which took place about five years after.

Calmet supposes that two destructions of Idumea are here foretold; one by Nebuchadnezzar, and the other by the Jews after their return from their captivity.

Verse 3. Most desolate.] Literally, a desolation and a wilderness.

Verse 5. A perpetual hatred] The Edomites were the descendants of Esau; the Israelites the descendants of Jacob. Both these were brothers, and between them there was contention even in the womb, and they lived generally in a state of enmity. Their descendants kept up the ancient feud: but the Edomites were implacable, and had not only a rooted, but perpetual enmity to the Israelites; and harassed and distressed them by all possible means. And they seized the opportunity, when the Israelites were most harassed by other enemies, to make inroads upon them, and cut them off wherever they found them.

To afflict the afflicted is cruel. This is scarcely of man, bad as he is. He must be possessed by the malignant spirit of the devil, when he wounds the wounded, insults over the miseries of the afflicted, and seeks opportunities to add affliction to those who are already under the rod of God.

Verse 6. Blood shall pursue thee.] Thou lovest blood, and thou shalt have blood. It is said, that Cyrus and two hundred thousand men were slain in an ambush by Thamyris, queen of the Scythians; and that she cut off his head, and threw it into a vessel filled with blood, with this severe sarcasm:—

Satia te sanguine quem sitisti, Cyre.

"O Cyrus, now satisfy thyself with blood."

Hence, the figure:—

"Sarcasmus, with this biting taunt, doth kill;
Cyrus, thy thirst was blood; now drink thy fill."

Verse 9. Perpetual desolations] Thou shalt have perpetual desolation for thy perpetual hatred.

Verse 10. These two nations] Israel and Judah. The Idumeans thought of conquering and possessing both: and

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

and these two countries shall be mine, and we will [a] possess it; [b] whereas [c] the LORD was there:

11 Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will even do, [d] according to thine anger, and according to thine envy which thou hast used out of thy hatred against them; and I will make myself known among them, when I have judged thee.

12 [e] And thou shalt know that I am the LORD, and that I have heard all thy blasphemies which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel, saying, They are laid desolate, they are given us [f] to consume.

13 Thus [g] with your mouth ye have [h] boasted against me, and have multiplied your words against me: I have heard them.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

14 Thus saith the Lord GOD; [i] When the whole earth rejoiceth, I will make thee desolate.

15 [k] As thou didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, so will I do unto thee: [l] thou shalt be desolate, O mount Seir, and all Idumea, even all of it: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

[a] Psa. 83. 4, 12. ch. 36. 5. Obad. 13.——[b] Or, though the LORD was there.——[c] Psa. 48 1, 3. & 132. 13, 14. ch. 48. 35.——[d] Matt. 7. 2. Jam. 2. 13.

they would have succeeded, but only the Lord was there; and this spoiled their projects, and blasted their hopes.

Verse 12. They are laid desolate, they are given us to consume.] They exulted in seeing Judea overrun; and they rejoiced in the prospect of completing the ruin, when the Chaldeans had withdrawn from the land.

Verse 13. Thus with your mouth ye have boasted against me] Ye have said you would enter into those lands, and take them for your inheritance; though ye knew that God had promised them to the Israelites, and that you should never have them for your portion.

Verse 14. When the whole earth rejoiceth] When the whole land shall rejoice in the restoration of the Jews, I will make thee desolate. Probably this refers to the time of the Maccabees.

Verse 15. So will I do unto thee] Others shall rejoice in thy downfal, as thou hast rejoiced at their downfal.

This whole Chapter strongly inculcates this maxim:—Do as thou wouldest be done by; and what thou wouldest not have done to thee, do not to others. And from it we learn, that every man may, in some sort, be said to make his own temporal good or evil; for as he does to others, God will take care to do to him, whether it be evil or good, weal or woe. Would you not be slandered or backbitten, then do not slander nor backbite. Wouldst thou wish to live in peace, then do not disturb the peace of others. Be merciful, and thou shalt obtain mercy.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The Edomites, or Idumeans, during the Babylonish captivity, took possession of the mountainous parts of Judea, and the fortresses which command the country, intending to exclude the Jews, if ever they should return from their captivity. The Prophet therefore, by a beautiful personification, addresses the mountains of Israel; and, ascribing to them passions and emotions similar to those of his own breast, consoles them with the prospect of being soon rid of those usurping foes; of being freed from the dishonour of idols under which they groaned; and of flourishing again in their ancient glory under their rightful owners, 1—15. The idolatry and other sins of the Jews are then declared to be the cause of their captivity and dispersion, 16—20; from which, however, they are promised a deliverance in terms of great force and beauty, 21—38. This Chapter contains also, under the type of the happy condition of the Israelites after their restoration from the Babylonish captivity, a glorious prophecy of the rich blessings of the Gospel dispensation.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

ALSO, thou son of man, prophesy unto the [a] mountains of Israel, and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD:

2 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because [b] the enemy hath said against you, Aha, [c] even the ancient high places [d] are ours in possession:

3 Therefore prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; [e] Because they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession unto the residue of the heathen, [f] and [g] ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, and are an infamy of the people:

4 Therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord GOD; Thus saith the Lord GOD to the mountains, and to the hills, to the [h] rivers, and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes, and to the cities that are forsaken, which [i] became a prey and [k] derision to the residue of the heathen that are round about;

5 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; [l] Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken against the residue of the heathen, and against all Idumea, [m] which have appointed my land into their possession with the joy of all their heart, with despiteful minds, to cast it out for a prey.

6 Prophesy therefore concerning the land of Israel, and say unto the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury, because ye have [n] borne the shame of the heathen:

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; I have [o] lifted up mine hand, Surely the heathen that are about you, they shall bear their shame.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

8 But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are at hand to come.

9 For, behold, I am for you, and I will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown:

10 And I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it: and the cities shall be inhabited, and [p] the wastes shall be builded:

11 And [q] I will multiply upon you man and beast: and they shall increase and bring fruit: and I will settle you after your old estates, and will do better unto you than at your beginnings: [r] and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

12 Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; [s] and they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more henceforth [t] bereave them of men.

13 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because they say unto you, [u] Thou land devourest up men, and hast bereaved thy nations;

14 Therefore thou shalt devour men no more, neither [x] bereave thy nations any more, saith the Lord GOD.

15 [y] Neither will I cause men to hear in thee the shame of the heathen any more, neither

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVI.

Verse 1. Prophesy unto the mountains of Israel] This is a part of the preceding prophecy, though it chiefly concerns the Jews. In it they are encouraged to expect a glorious restoration; and that none of the evil wishes of their adversaries should take place against them.

Verse 2. Because the enemy hath said] The Idumeans thought they would shortly be put in possession of all the strong places of Israel; the ancient high places shall be ours.

Verse 4. Therefore—thus saith the Lord GOD to the mountains, &c.] They shall neither possess mountain nor valley, hill nor dale, fountain nor river; for though in my justice I made you desolate, yet they shall not profit by your disasters. See ver. 5, 6, and 7.

Verse 8. For they are at hand to come.] The restoration of the Jews is so absolutely determined, that you may rest assured it will take place; and be as confident relative to it, as if you saw the different families entering into the Israelitish borders. It was near at hand in God's determination, though there were about fifty-eight of the seventy years unelapsed.

Verse 9. Ye shall be tilled and sown] The land shall be cultivated as it formerly was, when best peopled and at peace.

Verse 11. I will multiply upon you man and beast] The agriculturist and the beast of burthen.

And will do better unto you than at your beginnings] I agree with Calmet, that it would be difficult to shew the literal fulfilment of this prophecy, from the days of Zerubbabel to the birth of Christ. The colouring is too high for that period; and the whole falls in better with Gospel, than with Jewish times.

shalt thou bear the reproach of the people any more, neither shalt thou cause thy nations to fall any more, saith the Lord GOD.

16 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

17 Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, [a] they defiled it by their own way and by their doings: their way was before me as [b] the uncleanness of a removed woman.

18 Wherefore I poured my fury upon them [c] for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols wherewith they had polluted it:

19 And I [d] scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries: [e] according to their way and according to their doings I judged them.

20 And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, they [f] profaned my holy name, when they said to them, These are the people of the LORD, and are gone forth out of his land.

21 But I had pity [g] for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went.

22 Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, [h] but for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went.

23 And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, saith the Lord GOD, when I shall be [i] sanctified in you before [k] their eyes.

24 For [l] I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land.

25 [m] Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: [n] from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you.

26 A [o] new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh,

Verse 17. When the house of Israel dwelt in their own land] Had they continued faithful to me, they had never been removed from it: but they polluted it with their crimes; and I abhorred the land on that account, and gave both them and it up to the destroyers.

Verse 20. And when they entered unto the heathen] So bad were they, and so deeply fallen, that they profaned the Lord's name among the heathen; and, on their account, the true God was blasphemed. These, say they, are the people of Jehovah—O what an abominable people are these! and what sort must that God be who can have and own such for His people!

Verse 23. I will sanctify my great name] By changing your hearts and your conduct, I shall shew my hatred to vice, and my love of holiness: but it is not for your sakes, but for my holy name's sake, that I shall do you good in your latter days.

Verse 24. I will take you from among the heathen] This does not relate to the restoration from Babylon merely. The Jews are at this day scattered in all Heathen, Mohammedan, and Christian countries. From these they are to be gathered, and brought to repossess their own land.

Verse 25. Then (at the time of this great restoration) will I sprinkle clean water upon you] The truly cleansing water; the influences of the HOLY SPIRIT typified by water, whose property it is to cleanse, whiten, purify, refresh, render healthy and fruitful.

From all your filthiness] From every sort of external and internal abomination and pollution.

And from all your idols] False gods, false worship, false opinions, and false hopes.

Will I cleanse you.] Entirely separate you.

Verse 26. A new heart also will I give you] I will change the whole of your infected nature; and give you new appetites, new passions; or, at least, the old ones purified and refined. The heart is generally understood to mean, all the affections and passions.

And a new spirit will I put within you] I will renew your minds, also enlighten your understanding, correct your judgment, and refine your will; so that you shall have a new spirit, to actuate your new heart.

I will take away the stony heart] That heart that is hard, impenetrable, and cold; the affections and passions that are unyielding, frozen to good, unaffected by heavenly things; that are slow to credit the words of God. I will entirely remove this heart: it is the opposite to that which I have promised you; and you cannot have the new heart and the old heart at the same time.

And I will give you a heart of flesh] One that can feel, and that can enjoy; that can feel love to God, and and I will give you a heart of flesh.

27 And I will put my [a] Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them.
28 [b] And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; [c] and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.
29 I will also [d] save you from all your uncleannesses: and [e] I will call for the corn, and will increase it, and [f] lay no famine upon you.
30 [g] And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye shall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen.
31 Then [h] shall ye remember your own evil ways, and your doings that were not good, and [i] shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations.

to all men, and be a proper habitation for the living God.

Verse 27. And I will put my Spirit within you] To keep the heart of flesh alive; the feeling heart still sensible; the loving heart still happy. I will put my Spirit, the great principle of light, life, and love, within you; to actuate the new spirit, and to influence the new affections and passions; that the animal spirit may not become brutish; that the mental powers become not foolish. I will put my Spirit within you; so that, as the new spirit may influence the new heart, so will MY SPIRIT influence YOUR new spirit, that each may have a proper mover; and then all will be pure, regular, and harmonious, when passion is influenced by reason, and reason by the Holy Ghost.

And the cause shall be evidenced by the effects:—for I will cause you to walk in my statutes; not only to believe and reverence my appointments, relative to what I command you to perform: but ye shall walk in them; your conduct shall be regulated by them. And ye shall keep my judgments; whatsoever I enjoin you to avoid. And ye shall do them; ye shall not only avoid every appearance of evil, but keep all my ordinances and commandments unblameably.

Here is the salvation that God promises to give to restored Israel; and here is the salvation that is the birthright of every Christian believer: the complete destruction of all sin in the soul, and the complete renewal of the heart; no sin having any place within, and no unrighteousness having any place without.

"But where are they that are thus saved?" Ans. Wherever true Christians are to be found. "But I know many true Christians that have not this salvation, but daily mourn over their evil hearts?" Ans. They may be sincere, but they are not true Christians; i. e. such as are saved from their sins; the true Christians are those who are filled with the nature and Spirit of Christ. But I will ask a question in my turn:—"Do those you mention think it a virtue to be always mourning over their impurities?" Most certainly.—Then it is a pity they were not better instructed. It is right they should mourn while they feel an impure heart:—but why do they not apply to that blood which cleanses from all unrighteousness, and to that Spirit which cleanses the very thoughts of the heart by his inspiration? Many employ that time in brooding and mourning over their impure hearts, which should be spent in prayer and faith before God, that their impurities might be washed away. In what a state of nonage are many members of the Christian church.

Verse 28. Ye shall be my people] Wholly given up to me in body, soul, and spirit.

And I will be your God.] To fill you with love, joy, peace, meekness, gentleness, long-suffering, fidelity, and goodness; to occupy your whole soul, and gratify your every desire.

Verse 29. I will also save you from all your uncleannesses] I repeat it; I WILL save you from all your sins.

Verse 30. Ye shall receive no more reproach of famine] Ye shall be daily and hourly fed with that bread that endures unto eternal life. "But will not those get proud, who are thus saved, if there be any such?—and will they not undervalue the blood of the covenant, for then they shall not need it?" Ans. Hear what the Lord saith,—

Verse 31. Then shall ye remember your own evil ways] Ye shall never forget that ye were once slaves of sin, and sold under sin; children of the wicked one; heirs to all God's curses, with no hope beyond hell. Such cleansed people never forget the horrible pit and the miry clay out of which they have been brought. And can they then be proud? No! they loathe themselves in their own sight. They never forgive themselves for having sinned against so good a God, and so loving a Saviour. And can they undervalue HIM by whose blood they were bought, and by whose blood they were cleansed? No! That is impossible: they now see Jesus as they ought to see Him; they see Him in His splendour, because they feel Him in His victory and triumph over sin. To them that thus believe, He is precious; and He was never so precious as now. As to their not needing Him when thus saved from their sins, we may as well say, as soon may the creation not need the sustaining hand of God, because the works are finished! Learn this, that as it requires the same power to sustain creation as to produce it; so it requires the same Jesus who cleansed, to keep clean. They feel that it is only through his continued indwelling, that they 33 Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, [b] and the wastes shall be builded.

34 And the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by.

35 And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of [c] Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined cities are become fenced, and are inhabited.

36 Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the LORD build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate: [d] I the LORD have spoken it, and I will do it.

37 Thus saith the Lord GOD; [e] I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will [f] increase them with men like a flock.

are kept holy, and happy, and useful. Were He to leave them, the original darkness and kingdom of death would soon be restored.

Verse 35. This land that was desolate (by sin) is become like the garden of Eden] By righteousness. Satan's blast is removed; God's blessing has taken place.

Verse 36. Then the heathen] They shall see how powerful Jehovah is; and how fully he saves those who come unto and worship Him.

Verse 37. Thus saith the Lord GOD] In answer to the question,—"Who shall have such blessings?" we say, they that pray; that seek earnestly; that strive to enter in at the strait gate. Thus saith the Lord, I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel. Neither Jew nor Gentile shall be thus saved who do not earnestly pray to God; and for this thing: for this complete salvation; this setting up of the kingdom of Christ upon earth, and particularly in their own souls.

Verse 38. As the holy flock] The church of Christ, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing.

The flock of Jerusalem] The Jerusalem that is from above, the city of the living God; the place where His majesty dwells. When they came in ancient times to the solemn national feasts; so shall they come when they have fully turned unto the Lord, and received His salvation by Christ Jesus.

I do not ask my Reader's pardon for having considered this most beautiful Chapter, as relating not to the restoration from the Babylonish captivity, but to the redemption under the New Covenant by Jesus the Christ. There is no period of the Jewish history, from that time until now, to which it can be applied. It must belong to the Gospel dispensation; and if the Jews will still refuse, contradict, and blaspheme, let no Christian have any fellowship with them, in their opposition to this Almighty Saviour. Let none be indifferent to his salvation,—let all plead His promises; and let the messengers of the churches proclaim to the Christian world a FREE—a FULL—and a PRESENT SALVATION!—And may great grace rest upon themselves, and upon all their flocks!

CHAPTER XXXVII.

This Chapter treats of the same subject with the preceding in a beautiful and significant vision. Under the emblem of the open valley being thickly strewed with very dry bones is represented the hopeless state of the Jews when dispersed throughout the provinces of the Chaldean empire. But God, contrary to every human probability, restores these bones to life, thereby prefiguring the restoration of that people from the Babylonish captivity, and their resettlement in the land of their forefathers, 1—14. The Prophet then makes an easy and elegant transition to the blessedness of the people of God under the Gospel dispensation, in the plenitude of its manifestation; when the genuine converts to Christianity, the spiritual Israel, shall be no longer under the domination of Heathen and Antichristian rulers, but shall be collected together into one visible kingdom, and constitute but one flock under one Shepherd, 15—28. The vision of the dry bones reviving is considered by some as having a remote view to the general resurrection.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

THE [a] hand of the LORD was upon me, and carried me out [b] in the spirit of the LORD, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones,

2 And caused me to pass by them round about: and, behold, there were very many in the open [c] valley; and, lo, they were very dry.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord GOD, [d] thou knowest.

4 Again he said unto me, Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the LORD.

5 Thus saith the Lord GOD unto these bones; Behold, I will [e] cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live:

6 And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; [f] and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

7 So I prophesied as I was commanded; and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

8 And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above: but there was no breath in them.

9 Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the [g] wind, prophesy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord GOD; [h] Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live.

10 So I prophesied as he commanded me, [i] and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

11 Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, [k] Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts.

12 Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, [l] O my

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVII.

Verse 1. The hand of the LORD was upon me] The prophetic influence was communicated.

And carried me out in the spirit] Or, And the Lord brought me out in the spirit; that is, a spiritual vision, in which all these things were doubtless transacted.

The valley which was full of bones] This vision of the dry bones was designed, first, as an emblem of the then wretched state of the Jews: secondly, of the general resurrection of the body.

Verse 3. Can these bones live?] Is it possible that the persons whose bones these are, can return to life?

Verse 4. Prophesy upon these bones] Declare to your miserable countrymen the gracious designs of the Lord: shew them that their state, however deplorable, is not hopeless.

Verse 5. Behold, I will cause breath] רוח ruach signifies both soul, breath, and wind; and, sometimes, the Spirit of God. Soul is its proper meaning in this vision, where it refers to the bones. I will cause the SOUL to enter into you.

Verse 6. I will lay sinews upon you] Observe the progress:—1. Here are the bones. 2. The ligaments, called here sinews, are to be added in order to unite the bones, that the skeleton might be complete. 3. The flesh (the whole muscular system, the subjacent and superjacent muscles, including the arterial and venous system,) clothes this skeleton. 4. The skin (the dermis and epidermis, or cutis and cuticle,) envelopes the whole of these muscles or flesh; and now these bodies are in the state that the body of Adam was before it received the animal and intellectual principle from God. 5. There was no breath in them: they had not yet received their souls. 6. The wind, רוח ruach, the soul, came into them. They were endued with animal and intellectual life; and they arose and evidenced a complete restoration to life, and began to perform its functions, ver. 10.

Verse 9. Prophesy unto the wind] רוח ruach. Address thyself to the soul; and command it to enter into these well organised bodies, that they may live.

Come from the four winds] SOULS, come from all parts where ye are scattered; and reanimate these bodies from which ye have been so long separated. The four winds signify all parts; in every direction. Literally, it is, "Souls, come from the four souls;" "Breath, come from the four breaths;" or, "Wind, come from the four winds." But here, רוח ruach has both of its most general meanings, wind or breath, and soul.

Verse 11. These bones are the whole house of Israel] That is, their state is represented by these bones; and their restoration to their own land is represented by the revivification of these bones.

Verse 12. I will open your graves] Here is a pointed allusion to the general resurrection; a doctrine properly credited and understood by the Jews, and to which our Lord refers, John v, 25, 28, 29, The hour is coming when people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and [a] bring you into the land of Israel.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

13 And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, 14 And [b] shall put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the LORD have spoken it, and performed it, saith the LORD.

15 The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

16 Moreover, thou son of man, [c] take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for [d] the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions:

17 And [e] join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand.

18 And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, [f] Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these?

19 [g] Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take [h] the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of they that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and come forth.

And cause you to come up out of your graves] I am determined that ye shall be restored; so that were ye even in your graves, as mankind at the general resurrection, yet my all powerful voice shall call you forth.

Verse 13. When I have opened your graves] When I shall have done for you what was beyond your hope, and deemed impossible, then shall ye know that I am Jehovah.

Verse 14. And shall put my Spirit] רוחי ruchi. Here רוח ruach is taken for the Holy Ghost. They were living souls, animal and intellectual beings, when they had received their souls, as mentioned above: but they could only become spiritual, holy, and obedient creatures by the Spirit of God actuating their spirits. See the Notes on chap. xxxvi, 25, 26, 27.

THREE degrees, or processes, have been remarked in this mystic vision. When the prophet was commanded to prophesy,—to foretel, on the authority of God, that there should be a restoration to their own land,—

1. There was a noise, which was followed by a general shaking, during which the bones became arranged and united.

2. The flesh and skin came upon them, so that the dry bones were no longer seen.

3. The spirit, or soul, came into them, and they stood up perfectly vivified.

Perhaps these might be illustrated by three periods of time, which marked the regeneration of the Jewish polity.

1. The publication of the edict of Cyrus in behalf of the Jews, which caused a general shaking, or stir, among the people, so that the several families began to approach each other, and prepare for their return to Judea, Ezra i, 2, 3. But, though partially restored, they were obliged to discontinue the rebuilding of their temple.

2. The edict published by Darius, in the second year of his reign, Ezra iv, 23, 24, which removed the impediments thrown in the way of the Jews. Ezra vi, 6, 7, &c.

3. The mission of Nehemiah, with orders from Artaxerxes to complete the building of the temple and the city, Neh. ii, 7, &c. Then the Jews became a great army, and found themselves in sufficient force to defend themselves and city against all their enemies.

As to the spiritual uses of this curious vision, I must leave them to preachers. I have given the literal meaning, and what the different parts refer to; and if they found their observations on these, they may profit their hearers.

Verse 16. Son of man, take thee one stick] The two sticks mentioned in this symbolical transaction represented, as the Text declares, the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah, which were formed in the days of Rehoboam, and continued distinct till the time of the captivity. The kingdom of Judah was composed of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, with the Levites; all the rest went off in the schism with Jeroboam, and formed the kingdom of Israel. Though some out of those tribes did rejoin themselves to Judah; yet no whole tribe ever returned to that kingdom. Common sufferings in their captivity became the means of reviving a kinder feeling; and to encourage this, God promises that He will reunite them, and restore them to their own land; and that there shall no more be any divisions or feuds among them. To represent this in such a way as would make it a subject of thought, reflection, and enquiry, the prophet is ordered to take the two sticks mentioned above,—to write on them the distinguishing names of the divided kingdoms,—and then by a notch, dovetail, glue, or some such method, to unite them both before the people. He did so;—and, on their enquiry, shewed them the full meaning of this symbolical action.

Verse 19. The stick of Joseph which is in the hand of Ephraim] Jeroboam, the first king of the ten tribes, was an Ephraimite. Joseph represents the ten tribes in general:

Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.

20 And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand [a] before their eyes.

21 And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, [b] I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land:

22 And I [c] will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and [d] one King shall be King to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all:

23 [e] Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions: but [f] I will save them out of all their dwelling-places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God.

24 And [g] David my Servant shall be King over them; and [h] they all shall have one Shepherd: [i] they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them.

26 Moreover I will make a [n] covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them: and I will place them, and [o] multiply them, and will set my [p] sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore.

27 [q] My tabernacle also shall be with them: yea, I will be [r] their God, and they shall be my people.

28 [s] And the heathen shall know that I the LORD do [t] sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore.

Verse 22. I will make them one nation] There was no distinction after the return from Babylon.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

The sublime prophecy contained in this and the following Chapter relates to Israel's victory over Gog, and is very obscure. It begins with representing a prodigious armament of many nations combined together, under the conduct of Gog, with the intention of overwhelming the Jews after having been for some time resettled in their land subsequent to their return from the Babylonish captivity, 1—9. These enemies are farther represented as making themselves sure of the spoil, 10—13. But in this critical conjuncture, when Israel, to all human appearance, was about to be swallowed up by her enemies, God most graciously appears, to execute by terrible judgments the vengeance threatened against these formidable adversaries of His people, 14—16. The Prophet, in terms borrowed from human passions, describes, with awful emphasis, the fury of Jehovah as coming up to His face; and the effects of it so dreadful, as to make all the animate and inanimate creation tremble, and even to convulse with terror the whole frame of nature, 17—23.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Verse 2. Son of man, set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog] This is allowed to be the most difficult prophecy in the Old Testament. It is difficult to us, because we know not the king nor people intended by it: but I am satisfied they were well known by these names in the time that the prophet wrote.

I have already remarked in the Introduction to this Book that there are but two opinions on this subject that appear to be at all probable:—1. That which makes GOG Cambyses, king of Persia; and, 2. That which makes him ANTIOCHUS EPIPHANES, king of Syria. And between these two (for one or the other is supposed to be the person intended) men are much divided.

Calmet, one of the most judicious commentators that ever wrote on the Bible, declares for Cambyses; and supports his opinion, in opposition to all others, by many arguments.

Mr. Mede supposes the Americans are meant, who were originally colonies of the Scythians, who were descendants of Magog, son of Japhet. Houbigant declares for the Scythians; whose neighbours were the people of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal, that is, the Russians, Moscovites, and Tybareni, or Cappadocians. Several eminent critics espouse this opinion. Rabbi David Kimchi says the Christians and Turks are meant: and of later opinions there are several, founded in the ocean of conjecture. Calmet says expressly, that GOG is Cambyses, king of Persia, who, on his return from the land of Egypt, died in Judea. The Rev. David Martin, pastor of the Waloon church at Utrecht, concludes, after examining all previous opinions, that Antiochus Epiphanes, the great enemy of the Israelites, is alone intended here; and that Gog, which signifies covered, is an allusion to the well known character of Antiochus, whom historians describe as an artful, cunning, and dissembling man. See Dan. viii, 23, 25; xi, 23, 27, 32. Magog he supposes to mean the country of Syria. Of this opinion the following quotation from Pliny, Hist. Nat. lib. v, c. 23, seems a proof: who, speaking of Cœlo-Syria, says Cœle habet Apamiam Marsyiâ amne divisam à Nazarinorum Tetrarchiâ. Bambycem quam alio nomine Hierapolis vocatur, Syris verò MAGOG. "Cœlo-Syria has Apamia separated from the tetrarchy of the Nazarenes by the river Marsyia and Bambyce, otherwise called Hierapolis; but by the Syrians, MAGOG."

I shall at present examine the Text by this latter opinion.

Chief prince of Meshech and Tubal] These probably mean the auxiliary forces, over whom Antiochus was supreme; they were the Moscovites and Cappadocians.

Verse 4. I will turn thee back] Thy enterprise shall fail.

Verse 5. Persia] That a part of this country was tributary to Antiochus, see 1 Macc. iii, 31.

Ethiopia, and Libya] That these were auxiliaries of Antiochus, is evident from Dan. xi, 43: The Libyans and Ethiopians shall be at his steps.

Verse 6. Gomer, and all his bands; the house of Togarmah] The Cymmerians and Turcomanians, and other northern nations.—Calmet.

Verse 8. In the latter years thou shalt come] This was fulfilled about four hundred years after.—Martin. The ex-the nations, and they shall [a] dwell safely all of them.

9 Thou shalt ascend and come [b] like a storm, thou shalt be [c] like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee.

10 Thus saith the Lord GOD; It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt [d] think an evil thought:

11 And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will [e] go to them that are at rest, [f] that dwell [g] safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates,

12 [h] To take a spoil, and to take a prey, to turn thine hand upon [i] the desolate places that are now inhabited, [k] and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the [l] midst of the land.

13 [m] Sheba, and [n] Dedan, and the merchants [o] of Tarshish, with all [p] the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?

14 Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord GOD; [q] In that day when my people of Israel [r] dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it?

15 [s] And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, [t] and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army:

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587. Ol. XLVIII. 2. Tarquinii Prisci, Reg. Rom. cir. annum 30.

16 [u] And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; [x] it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, [y] that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes.

17 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time [z] by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them?

18 And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord GOD, that my fury shall come up in my face.

19 For [a] in my jealousy [b] and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken, [c] Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel;

20 So that [d] the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, [e] and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the [f] steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground.

21 And I will [g] call for [h] a sword against him pedition of Cambyses against Egypt was about twelve years after the return of the Jews from Babylon.—Calmet.

Verse 9. Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm] It is observable that Antiochus is thus spoken of by Daniel, chap. xi, 40,—The king of the north (Antiochus) shall come against him (the king of the south is the king of Egypt) like a whirlwind.

Verse 10. Shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt think an evil thought] Antiochus purposed to invade and destroy Egypt as well as Judea, see Dan. xi, 31, 32, 36. This Calmet interprets of Cambyses, his cruelties in Egypt, and his evil design to destroy the Israelites.

Verse 12. To take a spoil, and—a prey] When Antiochus took Jerusalem, he gave the pillage of it to his soldiers, and spoiled the Temple of its riches, which were immense. See Joseph. WAR, B. i, c. 1.

Verse 13. Sheba, and Dedan] The Arabians,—anciently great plunderers; and Tarshish,—the inhabitants of the famous isle of Tartessus, the most noted merchants of the time. They are here represented as coming to Antiochus, before he undertook the expedition; and bargaining for the spoils of the Jews. Art thou come to take a spoil, to carry away silver and gold; cattle and goods?

Verse 16. When I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog] By the defeat of his troops under Lysias, his general. 1 Macc. iii, 32, 33, &c., and chap. vi, 6.

Verse 17. Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time] This prophecy, concerning Antiochus and the Jews, was delivered about four hundred years before the events took place.—Martin. Calmet maintains that Cambyses is spoken of; and refers to ancient prophecies, especially Isa. xiv, xv, xvi, 20, 21.

Verse 21. I will call for a sword against him] Meaning Judas Maccabeus, who defeated his army under Lysias, throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord GOD: [a] every man's sword shall be against his brother.

22 And I will [b] plead against him with [c] pestilence and with blood; and [d] I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and [e] great hailstones, fire, and brimstone.

making a horrible carnage.—Martin. Cambyses had no wars in the mountains of Israel.

Verse 22. Great hailstones, fire, and brimstone.] These are probably figurative expressions to signify that the whole tide of the war should be against him; and that his defeat and slaughter should be great. Abp. Newcome supposes all the above prophecy remains yet to be fulfilled. Where such eminent scribes are divided; who shall decide!

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The Prophet goes on to denounce the Divine judgments against Gog and his army, 1—7; and describes their dreadful slaughter, 8—10, and burial, 11—16, in terms so very lofty and comprehensive, as must certainly denote some very extraordinary interposition of Providence in behalf of the Jews. And to amplify the matter still more, the Prophet, with peculiar art and propriety, delays the summoning of all the birds and beasts of prey in nature to feast on the slain, (in allusion to the custom of feasting on the remainder of sacrifices,) till after the greater multitudes are buried; to intimate that even the remainder, and, as it were, the stragglers, of such mighty hosts would be more than sufficient to satisfy their utmost rapacity, 17—20. The remaining verses contain a prediction of the great blessedness of the people of God in Gospel times, and of the stability of the kingdom of Christ, 21—29. It will be proper to remark that the great northern expedition against the natural Israel, described in this and the preceding Chapter, is, from its striking resemblance in the main particulars, put by the writer of the Apocalypse (chap. xx, 7—10,) for a much more formidable armament of a multitude of nations in the four quarters of the earth against the pure Christian church, the MYSTICAL Israel; an event still extremely remote, and which, it is thought, shall immediately precede the destruction of the world by fire, and the general judgment.

Verse 6. I will send a fire on Magog] On Syria. I will destroy the Syrian troops.

And among them that dwell carelessly in the isles] The auxiliary troops that came to Antiochus from the borders of the Euxine sea.—Martin.

Verse 7. In the midst of my people Israel] This defeat of Gog is to be in Israel:—and it was there, according to this prophecy, that the immense army of Antiochus was so completely defeated.

And I will not let them pollute my holy name any more] See on 1 Macc. i, 11, &c., how Antiochus had profaned the temple, insulted Jehovah and his worship, &c. God permitted that as a scourge to His disobedient people: but now the scourger shall be scourged, and he shall pollute the sanctuary no more.

Verse 9. And shall set on fire—the weapons] The Israelites shall make bonefires and fuel of the weapons, tents, &c., which the defeated Syrians shall leave behind them, as expressive of the joy which they shall feel for the destruction of their enemies; and to keep up, in their culinary consumption, the memory of this great event.

They shall burn them with fire seven years] These may be figurative expressions, after the manner of the Asiatics, whose language abounds with such descriptions. They occur every where in the Prophets. As to the number seven, it is only a certain for an indeterminate number. But as the slaughter was great, and the bows, arrows, quivers, shields, bucklers, handstaves, and spears, were in vast multitudes, it must have taken a long time to gather them up in the different parts of the fields of battle, and the roads in which the Syrians had retreated, throwing away their arms as they proceeded; so there might have been a long time employed in collecting and burning them. And as all seem to have been doomed to the fire, there might have been some found at different intervals, and burnt, during the seven years here mentioned. Mariana, in his History of Spain, lib. xi, c. 24, says, that after the Spaniards had given that signal overthrow to the Saracens, A. D. 1212, they found such a vast quantity of lances, javelins, and such like, that they served them for four years for fuel. And probably these instruments obtained by the Israelites were used in general for culinary firewood; and might literally have served them for seven years, so that during that time they should take no wood out of the fields, nor out of the forests for the purpose of fuel, ver. 10.

Verse 11. The valley of the passengers on the east of the sea] That is, of Gennesareth, according to the Targum. The valley near this lake, or sea, is called The Valley of the Passengers, because it was a great road by which the merchants and traders from Syria and other eastern countries went into Egypt; see Gen. xxvii, 17, 25. See Calmet here.

There shall they bury Gog and all his multitude] Some read, "There shall they bury Gog, that is, all his multitude." Not Gog, or Antiochus himself, for he was not in this battle; but his generals, captains, and soldiers, by whom he was represented. As to Hamon-gog, we know no valley of this name but here. But we may understand the words thus:—the place where this great slaughter was, and where the multitudes of the slain were buried, might be better called Hamon-gog, the valley of the multitude of Gog, than the valley of passengers; for so great was the carnage there, that the way of the passengers shall be stopped by it. 12 And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, [a] that they may cleanse the land.

13 Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them; and it shall be to them a renown, the day that [b] I shall be glorified, saith the Lord GOD.

14 And they shall sever out [c] men of continual employment, passing through the land to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth, [d] to cleanse it: after the end of seven months shall they search.

15 And the passengers that pass through the land, when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he [e] set up a sign by it, till the buriers have buried it in the valley of Hamon-gog.

16 And also the name of the city shall be [f] Hamonah. Thus shall they [g] cleanse the land.

17 And, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord GOD; [h] Speak [i] unto every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field, [k] Assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my [l] sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice [m] upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh and drink blood.

18 [n] Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, and of [o] goats, of bullocks, all of them [p] fatlings of Bashan.

20 [q] Thus ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, [r] with mighty men, and with all men of war, saith the Lord GOD.

21 [s] And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and [t] my hand that I have laid upon them.

22 [u] So the house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD their God from that day and forward.

23 [x] And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore [y] hid I my face from them, and [z] gave them into the hand of their enemies: so fell they all by the sword.

Verse 12. And seven months] It shall require a long time to bury the dead. This is another figurative expression; which, however, may admit of a good deal of literal meaning. Many of the Syrian soldiers had secreted themselves in different places during the pursuit, after the battle, where they died of their wounds—of hunger—of fatigue;—so that they were not all found and buried till seven months after the defeat of the Syrian army. This slow process of burying is distinctly related in the three following verses; and extended even to a bone, ver. 15; which, when it was found by a passenger, the place was marked, that the buryers might see and inter it. Seven months was time little enough for all this work.

Verse 17. Gather yourselves—to my sacrifice] This is an allusion to a custom common in the East: when a sacrifice is made, the friends and neighbours of the party sacrificing are invited to come and feast on the sacrifice.

Verse 18. Ye shall—drink the blood of the princes of the earth] I need not mention the custom of the Scandinavians;—they were accustomed to drink the blood of their enemies out of the sculls of the dead. But this is spoken of fowls and beasts here,—rams, lambs, and goats. The feast shall be as grateful and as plenteous to the fowls and beasts, as one made of the above animals, the fattest and best of their kind (because fed in the fertile fields of Bashan) would be to the guests of him who makes a sacrifice.

Verse 19. And ye shall eat fat—and drink blood] Who shall eat and drink, &c.? Not the Jews; though Voltaire says they ate human flesh, and are invited here by the prophet to eat the flesh and drink the blood of their enemies,—which is a most unprincipled falsehood. It is the fowls and the beasts that God invites, ver. 17.—Speak to every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field, assemble yourselves—that ye may eat flesh and drink blood; nor are the persons altered in all these verses, 17, 18, 19, 20: so the assertion of Voltaire is either through brutish ignorance, or Satanic malice.

Verse 25. Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob] Both they and the Heathen shall know that it was for their iniquity that I gave them into the hands of their enemies:—and now I will redeem them from those hands in such a way as to prove that I am a merciful God, as well as a just God.

26 [b] After that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they [c] dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid.

27 [d] When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and [e] am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations;

28 [f] Then shall they know that I am the LORD their GOD, [g] which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there.

29 [h] Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have [i] poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD.

Verse 26. After that they have borne their shame] After they shall have borne the punishment due to a line of conduct which is their shame and reproach, viz. idolatry.

Verse 27. When I have—gathered them] Antiochus had before captured many of the Jews, and sold them for slaves, see Dan. xi, 33.

Verse 28. And have left none of them any more there.] All that chose had liberty to return; but many stayed behind. This promise may therefore refer to a greater restoration, when not a Jew shall be left behind. This, the next verse intimates, will be in the gospel dispensation.

Verse 29. For I have poured out my Spirit] That is, I will pour out my Spirit; see the Notes on chap. xxxvi, 25—29, where this subject is largely considered. This Spirit is to enlighten, quicken, purify, and cleanse, their hearts; so that, being completely changed, they shall become God's people, and be a praise in the earth. Now, they are a proverb of reproach; then, they shall be eminently distinguished.

CHAPTER XL.

The prophecy or vision, which begins here, continues to the end of the Book. The Temple of Jerusalem lying in ruins when Ezekiel had this vision, (for its date is the fourteenth year after the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar,) the Jews needed consolation. If they were not promised a restoration of the Temple, they would not feel so great an interest in returning home. It is thought by some that no model of Solomon's Temple had remained. To direct them, therefore, in the dimensions, parts, order, and rules, of their new Temple might be one reason why Ezekiel is so particular in the description of the old; to which the new was conformable in figure and parts, though inferior in magnificence, on account of the poverty of the nation at the time. Whatever was august or illustrious in the prophetic figures, and not literally fulfilled in or near their own times, the ancient Jews properly considered as belonging to the time of the Messiah. Accordingly, upon finding that the latter Temple fell short of the model of the Temple here described by Ezekiel, they supposed the prophecy to refer, at least in part, to the period now mentioned. And we, who live under the Gospel dispensation, have apostolical authority for the assertion that the Temple and Temple-worship were emblematic of Christ's church, frequently represented in the New Testament under the metaphor of a temple, in allusion to the symmetry, beauty, and firmness, of that of Solomon; to its orderly worship; and to the manifestations it had of the Divine presence. This Chapter commences with the time, manner, and end, of the vision, 1—5. We have next a description of the east gate, 6—19, the north gate, 20—23, and the south gate, 24—31. A further description of the east gate, 32—34, and of the north gate, 35—38. Account of the eight tables, 39—43, of the chambers, 44—47, and of the porch of the Temple, 48, 49.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XL.

Verse 1. In the five and twentieth year of our captivity] According to the date here given, this prophecy was delivered on Tuesday, April 20, A. M. 3430, in the twenty-fifth year of the captivity of Jeconiah, and fourteen years after the taking of Jerusalem.

The Temple here described by Ezekiel is, in all probability, the same which he saw before his captivity, and which had been burned by the Chaldeans fourteen years before this vision. On comparing the Books of Kings and Chronicles with this Prophet, we shall find the same dimensions in the parts described by both; for instance, the Temple, or place which comprehended the sanctuary, the holy place, and the vestibule or porch before the Temple, is found to measure equally the same both in Ezekiel and the Kings. Compare 1 Kings vi, 3, 4—16, with chap. xli, 2, &c. The inside ornaments of the Temple are entirely the same: in both we see two courts; an inner one for the priests, and an outer one for the people. Compare 1 Kings vi, 29, 36, 2 Chron. iv, 9, and Ezek. xli, 16, 17, and xlviii, 7, 10. So that there is room to suppose, that in all the rest, the Temple of Ezekiel resembled the old one; and that God's design in retracing these ideas in the prophet's memory was, to preserve the remembrance of the plan, the dimensions, the ornaments, and whole structure, of this Divine edifice; and that at the return from captivity the people might more easily repair it, agreeably to this model. The prophet's applying himself to describe this edifice was a motive of hope to the Jews of seeing themselves one day delivered from captivity,—the Temple rebuilt,—and their nation restored to its ancient inheritance. Ezekiel touches very slightly upon the description of the Temple, or house of the Lord, which comprehended the holy place and sanctuary, and which are so exactly described in the Books of Kings. He dwells more largely upon the gates, the galleries, and apartments, of the Temple, concerning which the history of the Kings had not spoken, or only just taken notice of by the way.

This is the judgment of Calmet; and although every biblical critic is of the same opinion, yet more labour is spent on rebuilding this Temple of Ezekiel than was spent on that built by Solomon! The Jesuits, Prada and Villalpand, have given three folio volumes on this Temple, with abundance of cuts, where the different parts are exhibited after the finest models of Grecian and Roman architecture! But still the building is incomplete. Now, of what consequence is all this to the Christian, or to any other reader? I confess I see not. While, then, we have the exact dimensions and accurate description in 1 Kings and 2 Chronicles, of that built by Solomon, in imitation of which this plan by Ezekiel was drawn, we need not be very solicitous about the manner of measuring and describing used by the prophet; as, when we have laboured through the whole, we have only the measurements and description of that built by Solomon, and delineated by a hand not less faithful in the First Book of Kings, chap. vi, and 2 Chron. ii, iii, iv, v, and vi.

As the prophet knew that the Chaldeans had utterly destroyed the Temple, he thought it necessary to preserve an exact description of it, that on their restoration the people might build one on the same model. As to allegorical meanings relative to this Temple I can say nothing: God has given no data by which any thing of this kind can be known or applied;—and as to those who have laboured in this way, perhaps "Solomon's Temple Spiritualized, by John Bunyan," is equally good with their well-intended inventions. Those who wish to enter much into the particulars of this Temple must have recourse to the more voluminous expositors; who, on this subject seem to have never thought that they could say enough. See also the accompanying Map.

Verse 2. Set me upon a very high mountain] Mount Moriah, the mount on which Solomon's Temple was built, 2 Chron. iii, 1.

Verse 3. A man, whose appearance was like—brass] Like bright polished brass, which strongly reflected the rays of light. Probably he had what we would term a nimbus, or glory, round his head. This was either an angel; or, as some think, a personal appearance of our blessed Lord.

Verse 4. Declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.] That they may know how to build the second Temple, when they shall be restored from their captivity.

clare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.

5 And behold [a] a wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring reed of six cubits long by the cubit and a hand breadth: so he measured the breadth of the building, one reed; and the height, one reed.

6 Then came he unto the gate [b] which looketh toward the east, and went up the stairs thereof, and measured the threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad; and the other threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad.

7 And every little chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits: and the threshold of the gate by the porch of the gate within was one reed.

8 He measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed.

9 Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits: and the posts thereof, two cubits; and the porch of the gate was inward.

10 And the little chambers of the gate eastward were three on this side, and three on that side; they three were of one measure: and the posts had one measure on this side and on that side.

11 And he measured the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits; and the length of the gate, thirteen cubits.

12 The [c] space also before the little chambers was one cubit on this side, and the space was one cubit on that side: and the little chambers were six cubits on this side, and six cubits on that side.

13 He measured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber to the roof of another: the breadth was five and twenty cubits, door against door.

14 He made also posts of threescore cubits, even unto the post of the court round about the gate.

15 And from the face of the gate of the entrance unto the face of the porch of the inner gate were fifty cubits.

16 And there were [d] narrow [e] windows to the little chambers, and to their posts within the gate round about, and likewise to the [f] arches: and windows were round about [g] inward: and upon each post were palm trees.

17 Then brought he me into [h] the outward court, and, lo, there were [i] chambers, and a pavement made for the court round about: [k] thirty chambers were upon the pavement.

18 And the pavement by the side of the gates over against the length of the gates was the lower pavement.

19 Then he measured the breadth from the forefront of the lower gate unto the forefront of the inner court [l] without, a hundred cubits eastward and northward.

20 And the gate of the outward court [m] that looked toward the north, he measured the length thereof, and the breadth thereof.

21 And the little chambers thereof were three on this side, and three on that side; and the posts thereof and the [n] arches thereof were after Verse 24. According to these measures.] The same measures that had been used at the Eastern court.

Verse 30. And the arches round about were five and twenty cubits long] That the five cubits broad should be read twenty-five is evident from verses 21, 25, 29, 33, and 36. The word עשרים ve-êserim, twenty, has probably been lost out of the Text. Indeed the whole verse is wanting in two of Kennicott's MSS., one of De Rossi's, and one of mine, (Cod. B.) It has been added in the margin of mine by a later hand. It is reported to have been anciently wanting in many MSS.

Verse 39. The porch of the gate] The north gate of the court of the priests. See Q on the Plan.

Two tables] Some say of marble. See dddd in the Plan.

Verse 41. Four tables] These were in the porch of the north gate, in the court of the priests: on them they slew, flayed, and cut up the victims. See dddd in the Plan.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

42 And the four tables were of hewn stone for the burnt offering, of a cubit and a half long, and a cubit and a half broad, and one cubit high: whereupon also they laid the instruments wherewith they slew the burnt offering and the sacrifice.

43 And within were [a] hooks, a hand broad, fastened round about: and upon the tables was the flesh of the offering.

44 And without the inner gate were the chambers of [b] the singers in the inner court, which was at the side of the north gate; and their prospect was toward the south: one at the side of the east gate having the prospect toward the north.

45 And he said unto me, This chamber, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests, [c] the keepers of the [d] charge of the house.

46 And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north is for the priests, [e] the keepers of the charge of the altar: these are the sons of [f] Zadok among the sons of Levi, which come near to the LORD to minister unto him.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

47 So he measured the court, a hundred cubits long, and a hundred cubits broad, four-square; and the altar that was before the house.

48 And he brought me to the porch of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side.

49 [g] The length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits; and he brought me by the steps whereby they went up to it: and there were [h] pillars by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

Verse 47. He measured the court] This was the court of the priests. See FFF in the Plan.

Verse 48. Breadth of the gate] It is evident that the gate was a bivalve, or had folding doors. The length of the porch was twenty cubits. Josephus says the vestibule was twenty cubits long and ten broad. Antiq. lib. viii, 3, 2.

Verse 49. By the steps] This was a flight of steps that led to the Temple; there were eight steps in each flight. See YY in the Plan.

CHAPTER XLI.

In this Chapter the Prophet gives us a circumstantial account of the measures, parts, chambers, and ornaments, of the Temple, 1—26.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

AFTERWARD he brought me to the temple, and measured the posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the tabernacle.

2 And the breadth of the [a] door was ten cubits; and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side: and he measured the length thereof, forty cubits: and the breadth, [b] twenty cubits.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

3 Then went he inward, and measured the post of the door, two cubits; and the door six cubits; and the breadth of the door, seven cubits.

[a] Or, entrance.

[b] 1 Kings 6. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLI.

Verse 1. To the temple] He had first described the courts and the porch. See chap. xl.

Verse 2. The breadth of the door] This was the door, or gate, of the sanctuary, (see gates, 3, in the Plan,) and this doorway was filled up with folding gates. The measurements are exactly the same as those of Solomon's Temple. See 1 Kings vi, 2, 17.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

4 So [a] he measured the length thereof, twenty cubits; and the breadth, twenty cubits, before the temple: and he said unto me, This is the most holy place.

5 After he measured the wall of the house, six cubits; and the breadth of every side chamber, four cubits, round about the house on every side.

6 [b] And the side chambers were three, [c] one over another, and [d] thirty in order; and they entered into the wall which was of the house for the side chambers round about, that they might [e] have hold, but they had not hold in the wall of the house.

7 And [f] there [g] was an enlarging, and a winding about still upward to the side chambers: for the winding about of the house went still upward round about the house: therefore the breadth of the house was still upward, and so increased from the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst.

8 I saw also the height of the house round about: the foundations of the side chambers were [h] a full reed of six great cubits.

9 The thickness of the wall, which was for the side chamber without, was five cubits: and that which was left was the place of the side chambers that were within.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

10 And between the chambers was the wideness of twenty cubits round about the house on every side.

11 And the doors of the side chambers were toward the place that was left, one door toward the north, and another door toward the south: and the breadth of the place that was left was five cubits round about.

12 Now the building that was before the separate place at the end toward the west was seventy cubits broad; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about, and the length thereof ninety cubits.

13 So he measured the house, a hundred cubits long; and the separate place, and the building, with the walls thereof, a hundred cubits long;

14 Also the breadth of the face of the house, and of the separate place toward the east, a hundred cubits.

15 And he measured the length of the building over against the separate place which was behind it, and the [i] galleries thereof on the one side and on the other side, a hundred cubits, with the inner temple, and the porches of the court;

[f] Heb. it was made broader, and went round.——[g] 1 Kings 6. 8.——[h] Ch. 40. 5.——[i] Or, several walks, or, walks with pillars.

Verse 4. The length thereof, twenty cubits] This is the measurement of the sanctuary, or holy of holies. See G in the Plan. This also was the exact measurement of Solomon's Temple, see 1 Kings vi, 20. This, and the other resemblances here, sufficiently prove that Ezekiel's Temple and that of Solomon were on the same plan; and that the latter Temple was intended to be an exact resemblance of the former.

Verse 6. The side chambers were three] We find by Josephus, Antiq. viii, 3, 2, that around Solomon's Temple were chambers three stories high, each story consisting of thirty chambers. It is supposed that twelve were placed to the north of the Temple,—twelve to the south,—and six to the east.

Entered into the wall] The beams were admitted into the outer wall, but they rested on projections of the inner wall.

Verse 7. An enlarging, and a winding about] Perhaps a winding staircase, that widened upward as the inner wall decreased in thickness. This wall being six cubits thick, as high as the first story;—five, from the floor of the second story to that of the third;—and four from the floor to the ceiling of the third story; and thus there was a rest of one cubit in breadth to support the stories.—Newcome.

Verse 9. The thickness of the wall] See LLL on the Plan.

The place of the side chambers] A walk, or gallery of communication along the chambers, five cubits broad, ver. 11.

Verse 11. And the doors] See the Plan, aa. bb.

Verse 12. The length thereof ninety cubits.] The Temple, with the buildings which surrounded it, was eighty-one cubits long; add ten cubits for the vestibule, or five for the breadth of the separate place, and five for its wall;—in all, ninety cubits. See the Plan, LHIL. By the separate place I suppose the Temple itself is meant.

Verse 13. So he measured the house] The Temple, taken from the wall which encompassed it from the western side to the vestibule, was one hundred and one cubits; five for the separate place, nine for the wall and the chambers attached to the Temple, sixty for the sanctuary and the holy place, ten for the vestibule, and twelve for the two great walls on the west and east of the Temple;—in all, one hundred and one cubits. See the Plan, GHI.

Verse 14. The breadth of the face of the house] That is, the front. See the Plan, FRR.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

16 The door posts, and [a] the narrow window, and the galleries round about on their three stories, over against the door, [b] ceiled with wood round about, [c] and from the ground up to the windows, and the windows were covered;

17 To that above the door, even unto the inner house, and without, and by all the wall round about within and without, by [d] measure.

18 And it was made [e] with cherubims and palm trees, so that a palm tree was between a cherub and a cherub; and every cherub had two faces;

19 [f] So that the face of a man was toward the palm tree on the one side, and the face of a young lion toward the palm tree on the other side: it was made through all the house round about.

20 From the ground unto above the door were cherubims and palm trees made, and on the wall of the temple.

21 The [g] posts of the temple were squared, and the face of the sanctuary; the appearance of the one as the appearance of the other.

22 [h] The altar of wood was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits; and the corners thereof, and the length thereof, and the walls thereof, were of wood: and he said unto me, This is [i] the table that is [k] before the LORD.

23 [l] And the temple and the sanctuary had two doors.

24 And the doors had two leaves apiece, two turning leaves; two leaves for the one door, and two leaves for the other door.

25 And there were made on them, on the doors of the temple, cherubims and palm trees, like as were made upon the walls; and there were thick planks upon the face of the porch without.

26 And there were [m] narrow windows and palm trees on the one side and on the other side, on the sides of the porch, and upon the side chambers of the house, and thick planks.

Verse 18. A palm tree was between a cherub and a cherub] That is, the palm trees and the cherubs were alternated; and each cherub had two faces, one of a lion, and the other of a man; one of which was turned to the palm-tree on the right, the other to the palm-tree on the left.

Verse 20. From the ground unto above the door] The Temple was thirty cubits high, 1 Kings vi, 2; the gate was fourteen cubits, chap. xl, 48. The palm-trees and the cherubim were the same height as the gate, or door. The windows were above the door.

Verse 22. The altar of wood] This was the altar of incense, and was covered with plates of gold.

Verse 25. There were thick planks] The wood, or planks, were thick and strong; for the cherubim and palm-trees were carved in relief, out of their substance, and unless they had been of considerable thickness this could not have been done.

CHAPTER XLII.

This Chapter gives us a description of the priests' chambers and their use, with the dimensions of the holy mount on which the Temple stood, 1—20.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLII.

Verse 1. He brought me forth into the utter court] He brought him out from the Temple into the court of the priests. This, in reference to the Temple, was called the outer court: but the court of the people was beyond this.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

cubits was the north door, and the breadth was fifty cubits.

3 Over against the twenty cubits which were for the inner court, and over against the pavement which was for the utter court, was [a] gallery against gallery in three stories.

4 And before the chambers was a walk of ten cubits' breadth inward, a way of one cubit; and their doors toward the north.

5 Now the upper chambers were shorter: for the galleries [b] were higher than these, [c] than the lower, and than the middlemost of the building.

6 For they were in three stories, but had not pillars as the pillars of the courts: therefore the building was straitened more than the lowest and the middlemost from the ground.

7 And the wall that was without over against the chambers, toward the utter court on the forepart of the chambers, the length thereof was fifty cubits.

8 For the length of the chambers that were in the utter court was fifty cubits: and, lo, before the temple were a hundred cubits.

9 And [d] from under these chambers was [e] the entry on the east side, [f] as one goeth into them from the utter court.

10 The chambers were in the thickness of the wall of the court toward the east, over against the separate place, and over against the building.

11 And [g] the way before them was like the appearance of the chambers which were toward the north, as long as they, and as broad as they: and all their goings out were both according to their fashions, and according to their doors.

12 And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the south was a door in the head of the way, even the way directly before the wall toward the east, as one entereth into them.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

13 Then said he unto me, The north chambers and the south chambers, which are before the separate place, they be holy chambers, where the priests that approach unto the LORD [h] shall eat the most holy things: there shall they lay the most holy things, and [i] the meat offering, and the sin offering, and the trespass offering; for the place is holy.

14 [k] When the priests enter therein, then shall they not go out of the holy place into the utter court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy; and shall put on other garments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people.

15 Now when he had made an end of measuring the inner house, he brought me forth toward the gate whose prospect is toward the east, and measured it round about.

16 He measured the east [l] side with the measuring reed, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed round about.

17 He measured the north side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed round about.

18 He measured the south side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed.

19 He turned about to the west side, and measured five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed.

20 He measured it by the four sides: [m] it had a wall round about, [n] five hundred reeds long, and five hundred broad, to make a separation between the sanctuary and the profane place.

Verse 4. A walk of ten cubits' breadth inward] This seems to have been a sort of parapet.

Verse 14. They shall lay their garments wherein they minister] The priests were not permitted to wear their robes in the outer court. These vestments were to be used only when they ministered; and when they had done, they were to deposit them in one of the chambers mentioned in the thirteenth verse.

Verse 16—19. He measured the east—north—south—west side] Each of which was five hundred reeds: and, as the building was square, the area must have been nearly thirteen thousand paces. No wonder this was called a city. See chap. xl, 2.

Verse 20. It had a wall round about—to make a separation between the sanctuary and the profane place.] The holy place was that which was consecrated to the Lord; into which no Heathen, nor stranger, nor any in a state of impurity, might enter. The profane place was that in which men, women, Gentiles,—pure, or impure, might be admitted. Josephus says, War, lib. vi, c. 14, that in his time there was a wall built before the entrance three cubits high, on which there were posts fixed at certain distances, with inscriptions on them in Latin and Greek, containing the laws which enjoined purity on those that entered; and forbidding all strangers to enter, on pain of death. See Calmet.

CHAPTER XLIII.

The glory of the Lord is represented as returning to the Temple, 1—6; where God promises to fix His residence, if the people repent and forsake those sins which caused Him to depart from them, 7—12. Then the measures of the altar, and the ordinances relating to it, are set down, 13—27.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIII.

Verse 2. The glory of the God of Israel came from the way of the east] This was the chariot of cherubim, wheels, &c., which he saw at the river Chebar. And this glory, coming from the east, is going to enter into the eastern gate of the Temple; and thence to shine out upon the whole earth. Is there not a mystery here? All knowledge, all religion, and all arts and sciences, have travelled, according to the course of the sun, FROM EAST TO WEST! From that quarter the Divine glory at first came; and thence the rays of Divine light continue to diffuse themselves over the face of the earth. From thence came the Bible, and through that the New Covenant. From thence came the prophets, the apostles, and the first missionaries, that brought the knowledge of God to Europe, to the isles of the sea, and to the west, first; and afterwards to these northern regions.

Verse 5. The Spirit took me up] And, to follow this thought for a moment, how many men has this heavenly Spirit taken up;—filled them with His own influence,—and sent them to every country, and nation, and tongue, and people; to testify the Gospel of the grace of God, and to preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ! What spiritual temples have been raised, beautified, and filled, with the glory of God. And this light is shining and burning more and more unto the perfect day; when the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of God!

Verse 7. Son of man, the place of my throne] The throne refers to His majesty;—the soles of his feet, to His condescension in dwelling among men.

Where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel] The tabernacle and temple were types of the incarnation of Jesus Christ:—"Destroy THIS TEMPLE, and after three days I will raise it up;—but this he spake of the temple of his body." John ii, 19, 21. And in THAT TEMPLE dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. Into this immaculate humanity did the glory of the Supreme God enter;—and thus, God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. And this Jesus is Immanuel,—GOD with US. In Him we find united the ineffable majesty of God, with the abjectness of man. He humbled Himself in human nature; not only to bear the form of a servant, but to suffer death upon the cross as a malefactor slave!—but, by these means, He has purchased eternal redemption for us. And the spiritual Israel, who find redemption in His blood, shall be raised up wherever His holy name shall be proclaimed; and shall not, like the old apostate Israel, defile that great name by idolatry or a life of wickedness; but they shall shew forth the virtues of Him who has called them from darkness into His marvellous light.

Verse 8. In their setting of their threshold] They had even gone so far as to set up their idol altars by those of Jehovah; so that their abominable idols were found in the very house of God!—therefore, he consumed them in his anger.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

thresholds, and their post by my posts, [a] and the wall between me and them, they have even defiled my holy name by their abominations that they have committed: wherefore I have consumed them in mine anger.

9 Now let them put away their whoredom, and [b] the carcases of their kings, far from me, [c] and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever.

10 Thou son of man, [d] shew the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities: and let them measure the [e] pattern.

11 And if they be ashamed of all that they have done, shew them the form of the house, and the fashion thereof, and the goings out thereof, and the comings in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the laws thereof: and write it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them.

12 This is the law of the house; Upon [f] the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

13 And these are the measures of the altar after the cubits: [g] The cubit is a cubit and a hand breadth; even the [h] bottom shall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit, and the border thereof by the [i] edge thereof round about shall be a span: and this shall be the higher place of the altar.

14 And from the bottom upon the ground even to the lower settle shall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; and from the lesser settle even to the greater settle shall be four cubits, and the breadth one cubit.

15 So [k] the altar shall be four cubits; and from [l] the altar and upward shall be four horns.

16 And the altar shall be twelve cubits long, twelve broad, square in the four squares thereof.

17 And the settle shall be fourteen cubits long and fourteen broad in the four squares thereof; and the border about it shall be half a cubit; and the bottom thereof shall be a cubit about; and [m] his stairs shall look toward the east.

Verse 9. Now let them put away their whoredom] Their idolatry.

And the carcases of their kings] It appears that God was displeased with their bringing their kings so near his Temple. David was buried in the city of David, which was on Mount Zion, near to the Temple; and so were almost all the kings of Judah: but God requires that the place of His Temple and its vicinity shall be kept unpolluted; and when they put away all kinds of defilement, then will He dwell among them.

Verse 10. Shew the house to the house of Israel] Shew them this holy house where the Holy God dwells, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities. Their name, their profession, their Temple, their religious services, all bound them to a holy life; all within them, all without them, should have been holiness unto the Lord. But, alas! they have been bound by no ties, and they have sinned against all their obligations; nevertheless, let them measure the pattern—let them see the rule by which they should have walked;—and let them measure themselves by this standard, and walk accordingly.

Verse 11. And if they be ashamed] If, in a spirit of true repentance, they acknowledge their past transgressions, and purpose in His help never more to offend their God, then teach them every thing that concerns my worship, and their profiting by it.

Verse 12. This is the law of the house] From the top of the mountain on which it stands, to the bottom, all round about, all shall be holy: no buildings shall be erected in any part, nor place nor spot be appropriated to a common use; all shall be considered as being most holy.

Verse 13. The cubit is a cubit and a hand-breadth] It is the same cubit by which all the previous admeasurements were made; and was a hand-breadth, or four inches, longer than the Babylonian cubit.

Verse 15. So the altar] האראל ha-harel, "the mount of God."

And from the altar] ומהאריאל u-mi-ha-ariel, "and from the lion of God." Perhaps the first was a name given to the altar when elevated to the honour of God, and on which the victims were offered to Him; and the second, the lion of God, may mean the hearth which might have been thus called, because it devoured and consumed the burnt-offerings, as a lion does his prey. See on Isa. xxix, 1.

Verse 17. And the settle] The ledge on which the priests walked round the altar, see ver. 14. By these settles or ledges the altar was narrowed towards the top. The ascent shall look toward the east—this ascent was an inclined plane. But these settles, or more properly ledges, as Bp. Newcome translates, may be thus computed. The altar itself was ten feet high, and twenty broad: the same as that of Solomon, 2 Chron. iv, 1.

18 And he said unto me, Son of man, thus saith the Lord GOD; These are the ordinances of the altar in the day when they shall make it, to offer burnt offerings thereon, and to [a] sprinkle blood thereon.

19 And thou shalt give to [b] the priests the Levites that be of the seed of Zadok, which approach unto me, to minister unto me, saith the Lord GOD, [c] a young bullock for a sin offering.

20 And thou shalt take of the blood thereof, and put it on the four horns of it, and on the four corners of the settle, and upon the border round about: thus shalt thou cleanse and purge it.

21 Thou shalt take the bullock also of the sin offering, and he [d] shall burn it in the appointed place of the house, [e] without the sanctuary.

22 And on the second day thou shalt offer a kid of the goats without blemish for a sin offering; and they shall cleanse the altar, as they did cleanse it with the bullock.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

23 When thou hast made an end of cleansing it, thou shalt offer a young bullock without blemish, and a ram out of the flock without blemish.

24 And thou shalt offer them before the LORD, [f] and the priests shall cast salt upon them, and they shall offer them up for a burnt offering unto the LORD.

25 [g] Seven days shalt thou prepare every day a goat for a sin offering: they shall also prepare a young bullock, and a ram out of the flock, without blemish.

26 Seven days shall they purge the altar and purify it; and they shall [h] consecrate themselves.

27 And when these days are expired, it shall be, that upon the eighth day, and so forward, the priests shall make your burnt offerings upon the altar, and your [k] peace offerings; and I will [l] accept you, saith the Lord GOD.

The altar of burnt-offerings, described Exod. xxvii, 1, xxxviii, 1, was smaller than this, because it was to be removed from place to place with the tabernacle. This was designed for a permanent temple. See Bp. Newcome on this Chapter.

Verse 19. The priests—that be of the seed of Zadok] It was this Zadok that was put in the place of Abiathar, by Solomon, 1 Kings ii, 35, in whose family the priesthood had continued ever since.

Verse 25. Seven days shalt thou prepare] These are, in general, ordinances of the LAW: and may be seen by consulting the parallel passages. All these directions are given that they might follow them, when they should be put in possession of their own land. For in several cases the prophet enters into particulars, as if he had supposed that the book of the law had perished.

CHAPTER XLIV.

This Chapter gives an account of the glory of God having returned to the Temple, 1—4. The Jews reproved for suffering idolatrous priests to pollute it with their ministrations, 5—8. Ordinances respecting the conduct of the priests, and the maintenance due to them, 9—31.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

THEN he brought me back the way of the gate of the outward sanctuary [a] which looketh toward the east; and it was shut.

2 Then said the LORD unto me; This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; [b] because the LORD, the GOD of Israel, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut.

3 It is for the prince; the prince, he shall sit in it to [c] eat bread before the LORD; [d] he shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate, and shall go out by the way of the same.

4 Then brought he me the way of the north gate before the house: and I looked, and, [e] behold, the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD: [f] and I fell upon my face.

5 And the LORD said unto me, [g] Son of man, [h] mark well, and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears all that I say unto thee concerning all the ordinances of the house of the LORD, and all the laws thereof; and mark well the entering in of the house, with every going forth of the sanctuary.

6 And thou shalt say to the [i] rebellious, even to the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; O ye house of Israel, [k] let it suffice you of all your abominations.

7 [l] In that ye have brought into my sanctuary [m] strangers, [n] [o] uncircumcised in heart, and uncircumcised in flesh, to be in my sanctuary, to pollute it, even my house, when ye offer [p] my bread, [q] the fat and the blood, and they have broken my covenant because of all your abominations.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

8 And ye have not [r] kept the charge of mine holy things; but ye have set keepers of my [s] charge in my sanctuary for yourselves.

9 Thus saith the Lord GOD; [t] No stranger, uncircumcised in heart, nor uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my sanctuary, of any stranger that is among the children of Israel.

10 [u] And the Levites that are gone away far from me, when Israel went astray, which went astray away from me after their idols; they shall even bear their iniquity.

11 Yet they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, [x] having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering to the house: [y] they shall slay the burnt offering and the sacrifice for the people, and [z] they shall stand before them to minister unto them.

12 Because they ministered unto them before their idols, and [a] caused [b] the house of Israel to fall into iniquity; therefore have I [c] lifted up mine hand against them, saith the Lord GOD, and they shall bear their iniquity.

13 [d] And they shall not come near unto me, to do the office of a priest unto me, nor to come near to any of my holy things, in the most holy place: but they shall [e] bear their shame, and

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIV.

Verse 1. The outward sanctuary] In opposition to the Temple itself, which was the inner sanctuary.

Verse 2. This gate shall be shut] It was not to be opened on ordinary occasions, nor at all on the week days: but only on the sabbaths and the new moons. See the account of the gates (4) in the explanation of the Plan.

This verse has been adduced by the Roman Catholics to prove the perpetual virginity of the mother of our Lord; and it may be allowed to be as much to the purpose as any other that has been brought to prove this very precarious point, on which no stress should ever be laid by any man. Mary was a virgin when she brought forth Jesus.

Verse 5. Mark well, and behold] Take notice of every thing; register all so fully, that thou shalt be able to give the most minute information to the children of Israel.

Verse 7. The fat and the blood] These never went into common use: they were wholly offered to God. The blood was poured out; the fat consumed.

Because of all your abominations.] Several MSS. of Kennicott and De Rossi read THEIR abominations, referring to the strangers mentioned before.

Verse 10. And the Levites that are gone away far from me] This refers to the schism of Jeroboam, who, when he set up a new worship, got as many of the priests and Levites to join him in his idolatry as he could. These, on the return from the captivity, should not be permitted to perform the functions of priests in the New Temple: but they might be continued as keepers of all the charge of the house,—be treasurers, guards of the Temple, porters, &c., see ver. 11—15. The whole of these passages refer to the period of time when the second Temple was built.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

their abominations which they have committed.

14 But I will make them [a] keepers of the charge of the house, for all the service thereof, and for all that shall be done therein.

15 [b] But the priests the Levites, [c] the sons of Zadok, that kept the charge of my sanctuary [d] when the children of Israel went astray from me, they shall come near to me to minister unto me, and they [e] shall stand before me to offer unto me [f] the fat and the blood, saith the Lord GOD:

16 They shall enter into my sanctuary, and they shall come near to [g] my table, to minister unto me, and they shall keep my charge.

17 And it shall come to pass, that when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, [h] they shall be clothed with linen garments; and no wool shall come upon them, whiles they minister in the gates of the inner court, and within.

18 [i] They shall have linen bonnets upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins; they shall not gird themselves [k] with [l] any thing that causeth sweat.

19 And when they go forth into the utter court, even into the utter court to the people, [m] they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered, and lay them in the holy chambers, and they shall put on other garments; and they shall [n] not sanctify the people with their garments.

20 [o] Neither shall they shave their heads, nor suffer their locks to grow long; they shall only poll their heads.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

21 [p] Neither shall any priest drink wine, when they enter into the inner court.

22 Neither shall they take for their wives a [q] widow, nor her that is [r] put away: but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow [s] that had a priest before.

23 And [t] they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean.

24 And [u] in controversy they shall stand in judgment; and they shall judge it according to my judgments; and they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies; [x] and they shall hallow my sabbaths.

25 And they shall come at no [y] dead person to defile themselves: but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, for brother, or for sister that hath had no husband, they may defile themselves.

26 And [z] after he is cleansed, they shall reckon unto him seven days.

27 And in the day that he goeth into the sanctuary, [a] unto the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, [b] he shall offer his sin offering, saith the Lord GOD.

28 And it shall be unto them for an inheritance: I [c] am their inheritance: and ye shall give them no possession in Israel: I am their possession.

Verse 16. Come near to my table] To place the shew-bread there, and to burn incense on the golden altar in the Holy of Holies.

Verse 17. No wool shall come upon them] The reason is plain: wool is more apt than linen to contract dirt and breed insects; linen breeds none: besides, it is a vegetable, and the other an animal substance. It was an ancient maxim, that whatever was taken from a dead body was impure in matters of religion, and should not be permitted to enter into the Temple. The Egyptian priests always wore linen on their bodies, and shoes of matting or rushes on their feet. The Mohammedans never write the Koran upon vellum, or skin of any kind, as they would consider that as a defilement.

Verse 20. Neither shall they shave their heads] The priests of Isis shaved their heads close to the skin; the priests of Budhoo do so still: their ordinances oblige them to shave their heads every tenth day. To let the hair grow long would have been improper; therefore, the Lord commands them to poll,—cut the hair short, but not to shave.

Verse 22. Neither shall they take for their wives a widow] This was prohibited to the high-priest only, by Moses, Lev. xxi, 13, 14.

Verse 28. I am their inheritance] Those who affect to form their ecclesiastical matters on the model of the Jewish church have by one consent left this out of the question. They will not live on the free will offerings of the people: but must have vast revenues, and these secured to them by law. That every minister of God should be supported by the altar, I grant: but I think instead of that method of paying the parochial clergy, which I see is so much objected to, and breeds so much dissension between the pastors and their flocks, it would be better, on these accounts, to assign them a portion of land adequate to their supply, or let the state maintain them as it does its other officers. In Israel, God was their inheritance and their possession: but they had the breast and shoulder of all sin offerings and trespass offerings, and all dedicated things were theirs; and they had a portion of all the dough that was prepared for bread. These were considered as the Lord's property, and these He gave to them; and this is always implied in the Lord's being their inheritance and their possession. They had a plentiful support.

Hitherto tithes have been thought the best mode of paying the clergy, and providing for the poor of each parish: but these matters have undergone such alterations since the time of their institution, that some emendation of the system is at present absolutely necessary.

There should be a public acknowledgment of God in every nation; and this should be provided for by the state in a way the least burthensome to the people, that all may rejoice in the benefit. Happy the nations that have a Bible so correct, and a Liturgy so pure, as those in the British empire! In such cases, a religion established by the state is an unutterable blessing to the nation; only keep it to the Bible, and to the Liturgy, and all (under God) will be well: but when the Sermon is against these, all is bad.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLV.

Verse 1. When ye shall divide by lot] That is, when, on your repossessing your land, every family settles according to the allotment which they formerly had; for it is certain that the land was not divided afresh by lot, after the Babylonish captivity. The allotment mentioned and described here was merely for the service of the Temple, the use of the priests, and the prince or governor of the people. A division of the whole land is not intended.

Verse 2. Of this there shall be for the sanctuary] See the Plan, A.

the priests the ministers of the sanctuary, which shall come near to minister unto the LORD: and it shall be a place for their houses, and a holy place for the sanctuary.

5 [a] And the five and twenty thousand of length, and the ten thousand of breadth, shall also the Levites, the ministers of the house, have for themselves, for a possession for [b] twenty chambers.

6 And [c] ye shall appoint the possession of the city five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long, over against the oblation of the holy portion: it shall be for the whole house of Israel.

7 [d] And a portion shall be for the prince on the one side and on the other side of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the possession of the city, before the oblation of the holy portion, and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward, and from the east side eastward: and the length shall be over against one of the portions, from the west border unto the east border.

8 In the land shall be his possession in Israel: and [e] my princes shall no more oppress my people; and the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes.

9 Thus saith the Lord GOD; [f] Let it suffice you, O princes of Israel: [g] remove violence and spoil, and execute judgment and justice, take away your [h] exactions from my people, saith the Lord GOD.

10 Ye shall have just [i] balances, and a just ephah, and a just bath.

11 The ephah and the bath shall be of one measure, that the bath may contain the tenth part of an homer, and the ephah the tenth part of an homer: the measure thereof shall be after the homer.

12 And the [k] shekel shall be twenty gerahs: twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels, shall be your maneh.

13 This is the oblation that ye shall offer; the sixth part of an ephah of an homer of wheat, and ye shall give the sixth part of an ephah of an homer of barley:

14 Concerning the ordinance of oil, the bath of oil, ye shall offer the tenth part of a bath out of the cor, which is an homer of ten baths; for ten baths are an homer:

15 And one [l] lamb out of the flock, out of two hundred, out of the fat pastures of Israel; for a meat offering, and for a burnt offering, and for [m] peace offerings, [n] to make reconciliation for them, saith the Lord GOD.

16 All the people of the land [o] shall give this oblation [p] for the prince in Israel.

17 And it shall be the prince's part to give burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and drink offerings, in the feasts, and in the new moons, and in the sabbaths, in all solemnities of the house of Israel: he shall prepare the sin offering, and the meat offering, and the burnt offering, and the [q] peace offerings, to make reconciliation for the house of Israel.

18 Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the first month, in the first day of the month, thou shalt take a young bullock without blemish, and [r] cleanse the sanctuary.

Verse 8. My princes shall no more oppress my people] By exorbitant taxes to maintain profligate courts, or subsidize other powers to help to keep up a system of tyranny in the earth. The former princes even robbed the Temple of God, to give subsidies to other states.

Verse 9. Take away your exactions from my people] This is the voice of God to all the rulers of the earth. Take away your exactions;—do not oppress the people;—they are mine. Abolish all oppressive taxes.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVI.

Verse 4. The burnt offering that the prince shall offer] The chief magistrate was always obliged to attend the public worship of God, as well as the priest, to shew that the civil and ecclesiastical states were both under the same government of the Lord; and that no one was capable of being prince or priest, who did not acknowledge God in all his ways. It is no wonder that those lands mourn, where neither the established priest nor the civil magistrate either fear or love God. Ungodly priests and profligate magistrates are a curse to any land. In no country have I found both so exemplary for uprightness, as in Britain.

for a ram, and the meat offering for the lambs [a] as he shall be able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

6 And in the day of the new moon it shall be a young bullock without blemish, and six lambs, and a ram: they shall be without blemish.

7 And he shall prepare a meat offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

8 [b] And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof.

9 But when the people of the land [c] shall come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it.

10 And the prince in the midst of them, when they go in, shall go in; and when they go forth, shall go forth.

11 And in the feasts and in the solemnities [d] the meat offering shall be an ephah to a bullock, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambs as he is able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

12 Now when the prince shall prepare a voluntary burnt offering or peace offerings voluntarily unto the LORD, [e] one shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and he shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, as he did on the sabbath day: then he shall go forth; and after his going forth one shall shut the gate.

15 Thus shall they prepare the lamb, and the meat offering, and the oil, every morning for a continual burnt offering.

16 Thus saith the Lord GOD; If the prince give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be their possession by inheritance.

17 But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to [i] the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince; but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them.

Verse 9. He that entereth in by the way of the north, &c.] As the north and the south gates were opposite to each other, he that came in at the north, must go out at the south: he that came in at the south, must go out at the north. No person was to come in at the east gate, because there was no gate at the west; and people were not permitted to turn round and go out at the same place by which they came in, for this was like turning their backs on God; and the decorum and reverence with which public worship was to be conducted would not admit of this. Besides, returning by the same way must have occasioned a great deal of confusion, where so many people must have jostled each other, in their meetings in different parts of this space.

Verse 10. And the prince in the midst of them] Even he shall act in the same way: he also must go straight forward, and never turn his back to go out at the same gate by which he entered. The prince and the people were to begin and end their worship at the same time.

Verse 13. Thou shalt prepare it every morning.] The evening offering is entirely omitted, which makes an important difference between this and the old laws. See Exod. xxix, 38—46.

Verse 17. To the year of liberty] That is, to the year of jubilee, called the year of liberty, because there was then a general release. All servants had their liberty, and all alienated estates returned to their former owners.

21 Then he brought me forth into the utter court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and, behold, [d] in every corner of the court there was a court.

22 In the four corners of the court there were courts [e] joined of forty cubits long and thirty broad: these four [f] corners were of one measure.

phet had entered by the north gate of the court of the priests, where he had seen a little before the glory of the Lord; and where he had received all those directions from chap. xliv, ver. 4, 5, to this Chapter. From that gate (see Plan, Q,) he entered the vestibule by a gate which was by the side of the apartments of the priests, which were along this aisle (see S,) to the right of the vestibule towards the west. At the extremity of that row of chambers, he remarked, at the west, the place where they boiled the flesh of the sin-offerings. (See T.) They did not boil there the flesh of all sorts of victims, there were other kitchens appointed for that: (see PP,) but that only which could not be eaten but in the outer court, and by the priests which were sanctified; such were the parts of the offerings for sins of commission and ignorance, and the offerings of flour with which they were accompanied.

Verse 20. The trespass-offering] Part of this, and of the sin-offering, and the flour-offering, was the portion of the priests. See Numb. xviii, 9, 10.

Verse 23. It was made with boiling-places] These were uncovered apartments, where they kept fires for dressing those parts of the peace-offerings, which were made in the Temple by individuals through a principle of devotion. On these their families, their friends, feasted; and portions were sent to the poor, the widows, and the orphans. And thus the spirit of devotion was the means of preserving the spirit of mercy, charity, and benevolence, in the land. How true is that word,—Godliness is profitable for all things.

CHAPTER XLVII.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVII.

Verse 1. Behold, waters issued out from under the threshold] Ezekiel, after having made the whole compass of the court of the people, is brought back by the north gate into the courts of the priests; and, having reached the gate of the Temple, he saw waters which had their spring under house, at the south side of the altar.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

2 Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way without unto the utter gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

3 And when [a] the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters; the [b] waters were to the ancles.

4 Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins.

5 Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, [c] waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over.

6 And he said unto me, Son of man hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me the threshold of that gate, that looked towards the east; and which passing to the south of the altar of burnt-offerings, on the right of the Temple, ran from the west to the east, that they might fall into the brook Kidron, and thence be carried into the Dead sea. Literally, no such waters were ever in the Temple; and, because there were none, Solomon had what is called the brazen sea made, which held water for the use of the Temple. It is true that the water which supplied this sea might have been brought by pipes to the place: but a fountain producing abundance of water was not there, and could not be there, on the top of such a hill; and consequently these waters, as well as those spoken of in Joel iii, 18, and in Zech. xiv, 8, are to be understood spiritually or typically; and indeed the whole complexion of the place here shews, that they are thus to be understood. Taken in this view, I shall proceed to apply the whole of this vision to the effusion of light and salvation, by the outpouring of the Spirit of God, under the gospel dispensation, by which the knowledge of the true God was multiplied in the earth; and have only one previous remark to make, that the farther the waters flowed from the Temple, the deeper they grew.

[a] Ch. 40. 3.——[b] Heb. waters of the ancles.

With respect to the phraseology of this Chapter, it may be said that St. John had it particularly in view, while he wrote his celebrated description of the paradise of God, Rev. xxii. The prophet may therefore be referring to the same thing which the apostle describes; viz. the grace of the gospel, and its effects in the world.

Verse 2. There ran out waters] מים מפכים mayim mephakim, the waters seem to have been at first in small quantity; for the words imply, that they oozed or dropped out. They were at first so small that they came guttatim, drop by drop: but they increased so, that they became a river in which one could swim.

Verses 3—5. He measured a thousand cubits,—the waters were to the ANCLES; a thousand more,—the waters were to the KNEES; a thousand more,—they became a RIVER that could not be forded. The waters were risen, and they were waters to SWIM in.

I. This may be applied to the gradual discoveries of the plan of salvation,—1. In the patriarchal ages. 2. In the giving of the law. 3. In the ministry of John the Baptist. And, 4. In the full manifestation of Christ by the communication of the Holy Ghost.

II. This Vision may be applied also to the growth of a believer in the grace and knowledge of God. There is—1. The seed of the kingdom. 2. The blade from that seed. 3. The ear out of that blade. And, 4. The full corn in that ear.

III. It may be applied to the discoveries a penitent believer receives of the mercy of God in his salvation. He is,—1. A little child, born of God, born from above; and begins to taste the bread of life, and live on the heavenly food. 2. He grows up and increases in stature and strength, and becomes a young man. 3. He becomes matured in the Divine life, and has his spiritual senses exercised so as to become a father in Christ. In other words, the grace of God appears to come drop by drop: it is given as it can be used; it is a seed of light, and multiplies itself. The penitent at first can scarcely credit the infinite goodness of his Maker. He however ventures to follow on with the conducting angel, the minister of the gospel, in his descriptions of the plenitude of that salvation, provided in that living Temple, in which alone the well-spring of life is to be found. 4. In thus following on to know the Lord, he finds a continual increase of light and life, till at last he is carried by the streams of grace to the ocean of eternal mercy, then—

> "Plunged in the Godhead's deepest sea,
> And lost in his immensity."

IV. These waters may be considered as a type of the progress which Christianity shall make in the world. 1. There were only a few poor fishermen. 2. Afterwards many Jews. 3. Then the Gentiles of Asia Minor and Greece. 4. The continent and isles of Europe. And, 5. Now spreading through Africa, Asia, and America, at present these waters are no longer a river, but an immense sea; and the gospel fishers are daily bringing multitude of souls to Christ.

to return to the brink of the river.

7 Now when I had returned, behold, at the [a] bank of the river were very many [b] trees on the one side and on the other.

8 Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down into the [c] desert, and go into the sea: which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed.

9 And it shall come to pass, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the [d] rivers shall come, shall live: and there shall be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters shall come thither: for they shall be healed; and every thing shall live whither the river cometh.

10 And it shall come to pass, that the fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi even unto En-eglaim; they shall be a place to spread forth nets; their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish [e] of the great sea, exceeding many.

11 But the miry places thereof and the marishes thereof [f] shall not be healed; they shall be given to salt.

13 Thus saith the Lord GOD; This shall be the border, whereby ye shall inherit the land according to the twelve tribes of Israel; [n] Joseph shall have two portions.

Verse 9. Every thing—whithersoever the rivers shall come, shall live] Life and salvation shall continually accompany the preaching of the gospel; the death of sin being removed, the life of righteousness shall be brought in.

There shall be a very great multitude of fish] On the above plan, this must refer to genuine converts to the Christian faith; true believers who have got life and salvation by the streams of God's grace. The apostles were fishers of men,—converts were the fish caught. See below. As the waters flow into the DEAD sea, where no fish, it is said, can live, its waters must be healed, that is, made capable of preserving life; and so its nature be thus far most surprisingly altered.

Verse 10. The fishers shall stand upon it] On the above plan of interpretation, these must mean:—1. The apostles of our Lord Jesus. 2. The preachers of the everlasting gospel. See Matt. iv, 19.

From En-gedi] At the southern extremity of the Dead sea.

Unto En-eglaim] At the northern extremity of the same.

Their fish shall be according to their kinds] Every kind of fish; and the fish all excellent of their kinds. All nations, and kindreds, and people, shall be called by the gospel; it shall not be an excluding system, like that of Judaism. For its Author tasted death for every man.

Verse 11. The miry places—Point out, says Calmet,—"the schismatics and heretics who do not live by the Spirit of Jesus Christ, but separate from His church; and the evil Christians who dishonour that church, of which they are corrupt members." A description applicable to the Roman Catholic church, that is both schismatic and heretic from the church of Jesus Christ, which is built on the foundation of the prophets and apostles, Jesus himself being the corner stone; whereas the church of Rome, leaving this foundation, is now built on the foundation of councils and traditions, and lying miracles; the Popes, in their succession, being its only corner stones.

Verse 12. Shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade] A description that suits the righteous, who are still producing,—1. The fruits of faith. 2. The fruits of the Spirit. 3. The fruits of love to God, obedience to His holy will, and love to all men. Benevolence, mercy, charity, kindness, &c.

The leaf thereof for medicine.] See Rev. xxii, 1—5. Even the leaves,—the holy profession of the righteous, is a spiritual medicine. Righteousness is thus encouraged in the world. The profession points out the salvation, as it shews the nature and sufficiency of that salvation; for a just creed contains all the articles of the Christian faith.

Verse 13. Joseph shall have two portions.] i. e. in Ephraim and Manasseh, his two sons; who each had a separate inheritance.

17 And the border from the sea shall be [d] Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus, and the north northward, and the border of Hamath. And this is the north side.

18 And the east side ye shall measure [e] from Hauran, and from Damascus, and from Gilead, and from the land of Israel by Jordan, from the border unto the east sea. And this is the east side.

19 And the south side southward, from Tamar even to [f] the waters of [g] strife in Kadesh, the [h] river to the great sea. And this is the south side [i] southward.

20 The west side also shall be the great sea from the border, till a man come over against [k] Hamath. This is the west side.

21 So shall ye divide this land unto you according to the tribes of Israel.

22 And it shall come to pass, that ye shall divide it by lot for an inheritance unto you, [l] and to the strangers that sojourn among you, which shall beget children among you: [m] and they shall be unto you as born in the country among the children of Israel; they shall have inheritance with you among the tribes of Israel.

23 And it shall come to pass, that in what tribe the stranger sojourneth, there shall ye give him his inheritance, saith the Lord GOD.

between Antioch and Laodicea, according to Antoninus. Some of these places are not known: but see the same kind of division, Numb. xxxiv, 7—12.

Verse 16. Hamath] Emesa or Amesa, in Syria.—Calmet.

Berothah] Berytus, now Baruth or Beeroth, which David took from Hadarezar, king of Syria, 2 Sam. viii, 8: but these things are very uncertain.

Sibraim] Sabarim or Sepharvaim, according to the Syriac, between Hamath and Damascus.

Hazar-hatticon] The middle Hazar; or middle village, as the Margin.

Hauran.] The city Aurana, and the district Auranitis, are in the northeast limit of the Holy Land.

Verse 17. The border from the sea] The north border eastward is ascertained ver. 15, 16: here it is shewn how far it extends itself northward.

Hazar-enan] The village of Enan, Numb. xxxiv, 9, placed to the north of Cæsarea Philippi. Ziphron, see Numb. xxxiv, 9, called Zaphion by the Syriac.

Verse 18. The east sea] The same as the Dead sea.

Verse 19. Tamar] Called Hazazon Tamar, or En-gedi, 2 Chron. xx, 2.

The river] Besor, which runs into the sea near Gaza.

Verse 20. The great sea] The Mediterranean.

From the border] The southern border, mentioned ver. 19.

Verse 22. And to the strangers that sojourn] In former divisions of the land, no place was given to strangers: but in this division (which seems to have no other reference than to the gospel, for literally such a division never took place,) the strangers are to have an inheritance; intimating the calling of the Gentiles into the church of Christ, to an inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away. Glory be to God for His unspeakable gift. Amen! Amen!

CHAPTER XLVIII.

This Chapter contains a description of the several portions of the land belonging to each tribe, together with the portion allotted to the sanctuary, city, suburb, and prince, 1—29; as also the measure and gates of the new city, 30—35.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

NOW these are the names of the tribes. [a] From the north end to the coast of the way of Hethlon, as one goeth to Hamath, Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus northward, to the coast of Hamath; for these are his sides east and west; [b] a portion for Dan.

2 And by the border of Dan, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Asher.

3 And by the border of Asher, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Naphtali.

4 And by the border of Naphtali, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Manasseh.

5 And by the border of Manasseh, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Ephraim.

6 And by the border of Ephraim, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Reuben.

7 And by the border of Reuben, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Judah.

8 And by the border of Judah, from the east side unto the west side, shall be [c] the offering which ye shall offer of five and twenty thousand reeds in breadth, and in length as one of the other parts, from the east side unto the west side: and the sanctuary shall be in the midst of it.

9 The oblation that ye shall offer unto the LORD shall be of five and twenty thousand in length, and of ten thousand in breadth.

10 And for them, even for the priests, shall be this holy oblation; toward the north five and twenty thousand in length, and toward the west ten thousand in breadth, and toward the east ten thousand in breadth, and toward the south five and twenty thousand in length: and the sanctuary of the LORD shall be in the midst thereof.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. Olymp. LI. 3. Anno Servii Tullii, Reg. Rom. 5.

11 [d] It [e] shall be for the priests that are sanctified of the sons of Zadok; which have kept my [f] charge, which went not astray when the children of Israel went astray, [g] as the Levites went astray.

12 And this oblation of the land that is offered shall be unto them a thing most holy by the border of the Levites.

13 And over against the border of the priests the Levites shall have five and twenty thousand in length, and ten thousand in breadth: all the length shall be five and twenty thousand, and the breadth ten thousand.

14 [h] And they shall not sell of it, neither exchange nor alienate the firstfruits of the land: for it is holy unto the LORD.

15 [i] And the five thousand that are left in the breadth over against the five and twenty thousand, shall be [k] a profane place for the city, for dwelling, and for suburbs: and the city shall be in the midst thereof.

16 And these shall be the measures thereof: the north side four thousand and five hundred, and the south side four thousand and five hundred, and on the east side four thousand and five hundred, and the west side four thousand and five hundred.

17 And the suburbs of the city shall be toward the north two hundred and fifty, and toward the
